AUSTRIAN ACCOUNTS.—The following are Austrian accounts by way of Vienna. The information is meagre and unsatisfactory. The official Austrian correspondence of Sunday, the 5th, contained the following authentic communication: "The details and results of the battle of Magenta are still expected. The Austrian army had been transferred during the night from the 4th to the 5th inst. to Abbiate Grasso. The same news states that the combat was undecided, and that a further fight was expected on next day."

VIENNA, June 6—11½ A. M.—A desperate conflict took place on Saturday between the first and third, Count Glaize and Prince Lichtenstein's corps d' armee, and the enemy who had passed the Ticino in very considerable force. The result of the contest was undecided. The combat was continued on Sunday. Our troops threw themselves upon the enemy's ranks with ardor, and showed a valor and perseverance worthy of the most glorious feats of arms of the imperial army. Milan is perfectly tranquil; the head-quarters yesterday were still at Abbeatte Grasso.

An Austrian telegram from Verona gives a similar view, but adds that the authorities and garrison of Milan, with exception of the Castle garrison, have withdrawn at the command of Count Gyulai. The town is quiet.

The following message from Vienna had been published by the Frankfort papers without any guarantee as to its authenticity:

VIENNA, Monday.—Through the opportune arrival of the corps d'armee of Field Marshal Clam Gallas on the battle field, the Austrians were victorious after a hot fight, and the French were thrown back over the Ticino.

LONDON, Wednesday, June 8.—The Times this morning published a summary of the official news received at Vienna up to midnight of Monday. It is as follows: There was a fierce battle at Turbigo and Buffalora on the 4th. At first only two brigades of the first corps were engaged, but they were subsequently reinforced and in the afternoon of the same day the third Austrian corps took part in the action. There was very hard fighting at Buffalora, sometimes to the advantage of the French, and sometimes to that of the Austrians. The battle lasted till late in the night, and on the 5th it was continued at Magenta. The allies made no progress. On this day two fresh Austrian corps were engaged, and in the afternoon the Austrians took up a flank position between Abbeatte Grasso and Binasco.

The Austrians have taken many prisoners. The loss on both sides was very great. The Austrians had four generals and five staff officers wounded. One Major was killed. The movements which preceded the battle of Magenta is not clearly stated, but it was previously announced that allies were about to cross the Ticino to the number of 100,000 men, and it is presumed the rapid movement of the allies prevented the Austrians from completing the retreat, which they had commenced, and compelled them to accept battle on the banks of the river.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post says, that the Emperor was present at the battle, but did not command in person.

SANDY HOOK, June 22.—The steamship "Kangaroo" is coming up, she brings advices from London and Liverpool one day later by telegraph to Queenstown. Her day of sailing from Liverpool was the 8th inst., the same as the Anglo-Saxon at Quebec.

LIVERPOOL, June 9.—The cotton market closed quiet with the quotations, barely maintained. The sales to-day, are estimated at 5,500 bales. Breadstuffs continue dull.

LONDON, June 9.—Consols are quoted at 93¼ @93½. The bullion in bank of England has increased £160,000 during the week. The dispatches received from the Kangaroo are as follows:

The steamship Vigo had arrived out.

The Emperor Napoleon and the King of Sardinia had entered Milan, and were enthusiastically received by the population.

The Austrians have also evacuated Pavia.

The Austrians left Milan on the 5th inst. the municipal functionaries retiring to Verona.

There was a partial decline of consols in London occasioned by a rumor that the allies had received a severe check in Italy.

The absence of news from Paris caused considerable agitation on the London Exchange. The Paris Bourse declined 1 per cent.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The steamship Kangaroo has arrived. She left Liverpool on the 8th inst., and Queenstown on the afternoon of the 9th, bringing London dates by telegraph to noon on the 9th. She passed Cape Race on the 16th in a dense fog.

Further details of the battle of Magenta had been received at London by telegraph. A Vienna dispatch says among the wounded of the battle of Magenta are Baron Reischach, three generals, three staff-officers, two staff-officers missing, and one Major killed.

A Turin dispatch of June 7th says there were 120,000 Austrians in the battle, of whom 20,000 were placed hors de combat, and 7,000 prisoners. The French lost only 5,000 killed and wounded. Among the killed are Generals Espinasse and Clere.

The government of the King of Sardinia was already established at Como and Laudrio.

The municipality of Milan, in their address to Victor Emanuel, delivered in the presence of the Emperor Napoleon, says the municipality of Milan are proud of being able to use its precious privilege of interpreting for their fellow-citizens at this grave crisis. They are willing to renew the compact of 1848, and to proclaim again before the Italian nation the great fact which has required eleven years for full development to the intelligence and heart of the people. The annexation of Lombardy to Piedmont is the first step in the new way of public right, which allows nations to be free to dispose of their own destinies. The heroic Sardinian army and our own brave allies, who [illegible] upon Italy being free as far as the Adriatic, will soon achieve their magnanimous enterprise. Receive, sire, the homage of the town of Milan at our hands, and believe that our hearts belong entirely to you. Our cry is the "King of Italy for ever."

A dispatch from Trieste says: "An Austrian war steamer had captured the French ship Paol, from Cuba, bound to Trieste."

It is reported that Gen. Canrobert has died of his wounds.

Gen. Dangely, Commander of the Imperial Guards, had been created Marshal.

Napoleon, is said to have been in the midst of the Imperial Guard during the stand of two hours made against the Austrians, who it appears were aware of the fact. The real loss of the Austrians is estimated at from 12,000 to 14,000.

A Turin dispatch dated June 7th, says: "A French private letter from the battle field of Magenta has been received. The Imperial and the Sardinian Guards were alone opposed to the Austrian masses. They were attacked by the Austrians and were unable to advance, but nevertheless finally resisted the enemy. The Zouaves and Guards lost and retook their position, and at last Gen. Neil's army assumed the offensive, which was irresistable. The enemy endeavored to surprise the right wing of our army, but the movement of Gen. McMahon rendered the attempt ineffective. So the efforts of the enemy relaxed somewhat for a moment, and the conflict was then resumed with renewed fury. Gen. McMahon was triumphant and the battle was won."

TURIN, Wednesday, June 8.—The official bulletin of the Sardinians reads as follows: "That part of Upper Lombardy which has been freed from the Austrians has proclaimed Victor Emanuel King. Volunteers are rapidly arriving to join Garribaldi's corps, which is pursuing the enemy beyond Monza. Gen. Urbans' army, after a precipitate retreat from Hares, has been dispersed, and is scattered, and with a number of soldiers have been taken prisoners and disarmed."

BERNE, June 7th there are still 800 Austrians at Lavino.

A detachment of Garribaldi's corps has sailed along the shore of Lake Maggiore disarming the Austrian Custom House Guards and everywhere carrying off the public treasure.

The Neapolitan Ministry has been modified. An official declaration of neutrality has been made, and a levy of 2,500 men for the Navy ordered.

LONDON, June 9th.—The Daily News' city article of last Evening says: "Funds this morning showed increased strength and a fresh rise of an eighth to a quarter was attained.—The news of a decline on the Paris Bourse occasioned a partial re-action, which was strengthened by the rumor that the French had received a severe check. The market finally closed nearly ⅛ lower than yesterday. Mr. D'Israeli's alluding to a measure of finance, which is to be brought forth, attracted a good deal of notice, being interpreted as showing that a Government loan for the war armaments, is now on foot."

The Times' city article says: "The absence of news from France has facilitated the circulation to-day of a multitude of reports of a severe check to the French armies; and the defeat of the King of Sardinia has been currently asserted. It is certain, however, that to the close of business, nothing had transpired to establish these statements—still they had the effect of keeping the Stock Market in a state of excitement, especially as the prices from the Paris Bourse showed a decline of 1 per cent. The supply of money has not experienced any diminution. Some persons are disposed to anticipate a further downward movement in the Bank of England rate, which has been reduced to 3 per cent.

According to the opposition statement to both Houses of Parliament £1,000,000 must be provided by the Government to bring the revenue up to the present rate of expenditure.

The account will not probably prove quite so bad, but the Chancellor of the Exchequer seems to wish to prepare the public for the consideration of the subject, by announcing that financial measures are in preparation of the gravest character.

The accounts from Lancashire to-day show that the last advices from India have given a great check to activity in cotton goods.—In consequence of the successful laying of the Red Sea Telegraph Cable, further telegraph dispatches from India may be expected to be transmitted in about seven days. The subscriptions at Berlin for the loan of 4,500,000 roubles in likely to be soon filled.

GREAT BRITAIN.—A meeting of the Atlantic Telegraph Co was held yesterday. A new board of eight members was appointed, with authority to add four to their number and to early carry into affect the agreement with the government and the issue of new £5 shares to the extent of £600,000 was sanctioned.

The London Advertiser says there will be a majority against the ministers of from eight to eighteen.

The London Star thinks there will be a deposition early on Friday morning. The London Times explains the necessity on the ministry side.

On Tuesday night it appears that at the commencement of the debate there remained seventeen members on the Ministerial side who had not yet been sworn, and who therefore could not vote.

Mr. D'Israeli conceived the idea of pressing a division while the liberals were short of their muster roll, and accordingly spoke but once, and passed a word to his own side not to open their mouths.

The channel fleet will anchor at Spithead on the 24th, and will consist of 30 pennants including 16 sail of the line.

The London Daily News remarks, that all cavil respecting the battle of Magenta is silenced by the fact that the Austrian army had retreated from the field and that the capital of Lombardy is now in the hands of the allies.

The London Post remarks, that since Monday morning the public has been panting to and from the metropolis with its mouth open ready to swallow any canard that came in its way and after censuring the mystification of its cotemporaries indicates the clear and marked progress of the allies as follows: "They are now in Milan, Pavia is evacuated, Gen. Urbans' corps is disposed, Garibaldi is everywhere successful, and the main body of the Austrian army is falling back.

The Advertiser accuses the French dispatches of misrepresentations, because they do not tally with the Austrian bulletins.

The Times devotes a leader to the French position in Italy, and though it does not regard Napoleon III. as having yet covered himself with glory, says, that hitherto he has made good his advance and worked a steady success.

VIENNA, June 8.—The official Austrian correspondence contains the following: "After our troops had, according to orders, evacuated Milan, on Sunday, the public functionaries also relinquished their charge, providing for the security of the town, which was transferred to the municipality. The Imperial Austrian functionaries have withdrawn to Verona but it is possible they may resume their posts and functions on Mantua."

The Times' Paris correspondent says, that two of the most influential powers had agreed on proposing an arrangement after the first great battle, and, if necessary, insisting upon its adoption by the belligerents.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The proposals for the five millions treasury note loan were opened to-day by the secretary of the treasury and about thirteen millions and half a [illegible] bid for. $3,700,000 was awarded at rates under six per centum, viz, from 5¼@5⅞ per cent and $100,000 at 5 per cent. All the other bidders proposed six per cent. Among them the remainder of the loans will be proportioned pro rata.

NORFOLK, June 20.—The U. S. steamer Lancaster arrived here yesterday morning from Philadelphia. She has been on a trial trip of a week at sea, during which the machinery built by Messrs. Reaney, Neafie, & Co., of Philadelphia, performed to the satisfaction of all on board. Her sea going qualities have been severely tested and she remains in perfect order to take her position as flag ship of the Pacific squadron.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The bank statement for the week ending Saturday, shows a decrease in loans of $1,159,000; decrease in circulation $110,000; increase of specie $1,060,000; increase in net deposits $844,000.

TORONTO, June 20.—Accounts from the Huron District state that the greatest distress prevails there from the want of food, and unless immediate relief is afforded actual starvation will ensue.

Markets.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Flour has again declined 5@10c; sales of 55,000 bbls this morning at $6 90@6 20 for state and $6 75@7 15 for Ohio. Wheat is heavy; sales of 3,500 bu at $1 42 for new, $1 50 for Georgia and $1 60 for good white Michigan. Corn has a declining tendency; mixed is quoted at 81@82½c. Oats are dull at 42@53c. Pork is heavy and unsettled; sales of mess at $16 50 and prime at $14 25. Lard is steady at 10¾@11¼c. Whisky dull at 28@28½c.

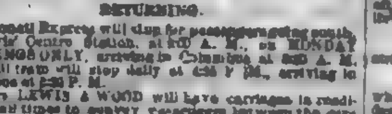
Stocks dull.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—Breadstuffs are dull but supplies come forward very slowly, and prices remain without change. In flour there is no shipping or speculative demand, and the sales are only to the trade at $6 87½@7 12½ for superfine, $7 25@7 37½ for extra, and $7 50@8 for extra family and fancy. Rye flour sells slowly at $4 50 and Cornmeal at $4. Buckwheat has again advanced to $1 75@1 80.—Wheat sells only to supply the immediate wants of local millers at $1 65@1 75 for red and $1 75@1 85 for white. 1,000 bush Rye sold at 95c. Corn is plenty and dull; 5,000 bush yellow sold at 81c. Oats have advanced one cent per bush; sales of 3,000 bush at 50c for Pennsylvania and 47c for Delaware. Whisky steady at 28c.

BALTIMORE, June 20.—Flour dull; sales unimportant; Howard street is quoted at $7. Wheat is dull at $1 60@1 65 for white, and $1 50@1 60 for red. Corn is firm at 82@85c for white and 81@84c for yellow. Provisions steady; sides at 9¼c; shoulders 7½c. Whisky dull and nominal.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier, break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

DIED.



June 22, in New Orleans, of congestion of the brain, JAMES KUHN, the only son of JAMES KUHN and SARAH LYDIA PERRY, of Quackenost, (formerly of Columbus,) Ohio, aged 10 years, 3 months and 20 days, a native of London, England. Deeply regretted by his fellow-workmen of the [illegible] and a numerous acquaintance.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs

VIA THE

CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.

To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 4:30 A. M., and 1:20 P. M., daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis' Centre Station, which is sixteen miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the Springs. For the accommodation of persons wishing to spend the Sabbath at the Springs, the night freight leaving Columbus at 6:30 P. M. on Saturday, will leave passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.

RETURNING.

Cincinnati Express will stop for passengers going south, at Lewis' Centre Station, at 8:00 A. M., on MONDAY MORNINGS ONLY, arriving in Columbus at 9:00 A. M. The Mail train will stop daily at 4:36 P. M., arriving in Columbus at 5:35 P. M.

Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages in readiness at all times to convey passengers between the cars and Springs. Passengers can rely upon being taken to the Springs promptly on arrival of trains.

The citizens of Columbus will find this the most convenient way to go to the Springs.

Tickets for the round trip to the Station and back during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

For further information and tickets, inquire at the ticket office in the Depot.

JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.

Columbus, June 22, 1859—3m.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT,

In the Basement of "the Goodale House."

By JOHN O'HARA,

High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Every luxury brought to this market, constantly received, and prepared in the most acceptable manner.

He has a French Cook,

Who has had long experience, and the best instruction in his business.

The Capitol Saloon,

Connected with the Restaurant, is a favorite resort, and where every variety of wines and liquors are kept of the very best quality.

The cigars have been selected with great care, and are of the choicest most expensive varieties.

June 22.

COLUMBUS

Machine Manufacturing Company,

MANUFACTURERS OF

STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,

CASTINGS,

MILL GEARING,

MACHINERY,

—ALSO—

RAILROAD WORK.

P. AMBOS, Treas. CHAS. AMBOS, Supt.

June 22-ly

BUCKEYE HOUSE,

By A. W. DOLSON,

Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.

A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Saloon and Restaurant supplied with the best of everything.

June 22.

CITY NOTICES.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

Hats are of various patterns and fashions.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at BURSELL's if you want a superior article.

FAIRCHILD's Shoe establishment on the corner of Highland Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made cuts for the last two or three years.

"If music be the food of love, play on.
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He possesses skill from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an able and agreeable gentleman.

C. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which [illegible] closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be procured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition." No. 21 East State Street.

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who want a stock of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. CHITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city: and the prices such as will suit the times.

ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's, celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, if equaled.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every eatable. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the cards do. MOHAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

E. P. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

CHARLEY BREYFOGLE is selling out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look to it.

FRANK HERRMANN, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES [illegible]

[illegible]

DESHLER ICE.

Charles G. Deshler is serving his numerous customers with superior ice. He intends to be faithful to the end and the sun is not more punctual. His carriages will run throughout the season.

June 22.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and think, [illegible]

Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which [illegible]

Eye Witnesses.

[illegible]

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

[illegible]

Liver Complaint,

[illegible]

Sick Females,

[illegible]

Shattered Constitutions,

[illegible]

Lengthen Life;

[illegible]

Cause soon to Heal,

[illegible]

Recruit the Debilitated,

[illegible]

FOR SALE IN COLUMBUS BY

[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1859.

ROOT HOG OR DIE.

Come Yankees lend an ear,
And a story I'll relate,
'Bout our struggle for Freedom,
Which you've heard I calculate:
John Bull tried to enslave us
But soon was heard the cry
Of liberty for Yankee boys
"Root Hog or Die."

Chorus—Hurrah! three cheers,
The Yankees are the boys,
For singing or for fighting,
Or for kicking up a noise.
The [illegible]
Are keeping up the cry
"Big pig little pig root hog or die.

He first commenced at Boston
His acts of Tyranny,
By compelling us to pay,
Heavy taxes on our tea.
The Yankees wouldn't stand it
But quickly they did fly,
Then pitched it in the sea,
Singing "Root hog or die."

Chorus—Hurrah! Three cheers, &c.

[illegible]
[illegible]
But soon we sent 'em flying,
From the top of Bunker Hill,
We drove 'em off so quick,
[illegible]
But the Yankee boys kept singing out,
[illegible]

At Yorktown, some time after,
With an army good and strong,
He thought that he would conquer,
But Johnny Bull was wrong,
For the Father of our country,
George Washington did cry,
Cornwallis give me up your sword,
"Root hog or die."

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
To capture New Orleans,
Our fort was made of Cotton,
[illegible]
[illegible]
"Root hog or die."

He tried to take our vessels,
[illegible]
For Perry on Lake Erie,
[illegible]
[illegible]
For quarter they did cry,
The Yankee lads made 'em sing,
"Root hog or die."

Now the wars are over,
Peace reigns throughout the land,
Across the broad Atlantic,
We extend to them our hand.
[illegible]
[illegible]
Way out here in Kansas,
Where they "Root hog or die."

A Romance of the Lost Island Calamity.

A story, strange and romantic enough to seem the invention of an imaginative mind, became known recently to a few persons in this city; yet, however romantic or strange it may sound, the gentleman who communicated it to us assured us of its absolute truth, and gave us the names of the parties connected with the affair. At the time when that terrible catastrophe occurred at Lost Island, off the southern coast of Louisiana, by which so many unfortunate people were swept bodily [illegible] by the raging tempest, or overtaken and drowned by the rising flood that overwhelmed the low, sandy key, a middle-aged gentleman and his family, consisting of a wife and two or three children, were involved in the calamity.

In the midst of the thick gloom, the storm, the confusion and terror of the scene, the gentleman became separated from his little family and barely escaped with his life. The horror and distress of the poor man at the sudden loss of his dear ones may be imagined by those who love their own wives and children. For several days his friends feared that his mental sufferings would deprive him of reason, and one of them kindly invited him to make his home at his house in New Orleans, for a time, hoping that he would gradually come to look more calmly upon the misfortune that had befallen him.

It happened that with the family in which he thus became domesticated was living a young and accomplished lady, of fine person and manners, who, having compassion upon the afflicted stranger, took upon herself the pious duty of doing everything in her power to alleviate his sorrows and make him forget the past. She played and sang for him, read to him, rode with him, and finally laughed and joked with him—so fleeting and transitory are the greatest of human griefs when brought under the influence of the enjoyments and delights of life.

In brief, she carried her consolations so far that the gentleman became enamored, infatuated, and offered her his hand and fortune. Whether she reciprocated his passion, or whether the fact that she was a poor school-teacher and he a wealthy planter influenced her decision upon his proposition, is not a question proper to be considered here. Suffice it to say that she accepted his offer, stipulating that, out of due respect to public opinion, a year must elapse before their union should be consummated. As time passed on preparations for a magnificent wedding proceeded. The gentleman purchased a splendid trousseau, laid out his plans for a bridal tour and for their subsequent domestic settlement, and, in fact, everything went on swimmingly until near the close of his term of probation. The event of a single day in this case, as in thousands of others, served to destroy in an instant his matrimonial schemes, though whether his subsequent peace of mind and happiness were not promoted thereby is a question. A short time previous to the day assigned for his wedding he received a letter from his wife—still in the flesh—dated from Rio de Janeiro, informing him that she and one of their children were alive and well, and would probably be in his arms within a very short period.

It appears that amidst the destruction and chaos of the terrible storm in which it had been supposed she and her little ones were lost, Madame —— clung to her youngest child, and when the waves submerged the island and swept away everything upon it, she floated out into the gulf upon certain fragments of the general wreck. Drifting, finally, after much suffering, into the track of sea-going vessels, to and from this port, she was picked up by an outward-bound ship and carried to Rio, no opportunity occurring, in the meantime, to send her back to the States. The voyage was a long one, and sickness had prevented her from taking passage in the first vessel that sailed for her native land, and by some fatality the letter which had thus apprised him of her existence, reached his hands but a few hours previous to her own arrival. What followed can readily be imagined—how the sober, staid, middle-aged gentleman, doubtful whether to be disappointed or happy, broke the astounding news to his unsuspecting fiancee; how she, poor girl, went into tears and then into hysterics, and was finally consoled by his pecuniary liberality, and how all parties ultimately resumed their original position and were happy, the wife not being permitted to know how narrowly her husband had escaped slipping his neck into a second matrimonial halter.—Cor. St. Louis Rep.

☞ The Grand-Duchess Catharine of Russia, and her husband, the Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, have arrived in Paris, where they propose to stay a few days before returning to St. Petersburg. The Empress Eugenie gave a grand dinner to the Duchess at the Tuileries on the 19th of May.

S. O. M. Installation at Fremont.

The grand dignitaries with some thirty members detailed from the several corps of the Toledo Lodge of Sons of Malta, visited Fremont on Thursday evening, by invitation of numerous brethren in that beautiful and flourishing town, for the purpose of instituting a Lodge of the Order there. Arriving at that favorite and excellently conducted "traveler's rest," the Croghan House, where the head-quarters of the commissariat had been established, they found a number of visitors from Sandusky, Bellevue, and elsewhere, already enjoying the hospitalities of the enterprising and attentive host, Smith Ferris—a single glance at whose benignant visage and substantial physique, by the way, furnishes the most expressive and satisfactory commentary on the quality and quantity of his bills of fare. After a brief season of refreshment, the "Sons" proceeded at the appointed hour to the spacious and handsome hall prepared for the occasion, where in a convocation of those only who had been advanced through the sublime arcana of the Degree of Ten, the Lodge was duly consecrated in accordance with the ancient forms and rites.—The candidates—an unusually large number, embracing a full representation of the earnest, energetic, patriotic young men of Fremont and the vicinity—were then inducted, and duly initiated into the sublime mysteries of the Malta Order. And, subsequently, the officers named below were installed in their respective chairs, with all the imposing and impressive ceremonies prescribed for the occasion:

Wm. E. Haynes, Grand Commander; Joseph R. Bartlett, Vice Grand Commander; John McGee, Grand Chancellor; A. J. Hale, Grand Treasurer; M. St. Clair, Grand Secretary; James H. Hafford, Grand Conductor; Lewis Ward, Grand Sergeant of the Guard.

At the close of the ceremonies, the newly inaugurated Lodge, with their visitors, adjourned to the Croghan House, where an elegant supper was served up, under the supervision of "mine host" Ferris, and the festivities prolonged to a late hour in the night. The whole affair passed off most agreeably; and we are confident will be long held in pleasant remembrance by the delegation from Toledo.—Toledo Herald, June 4th.

TAKING IT COOLY.—A traveler relates the following:

Mr. Barnes, wife and two children, his niece and another young lady, formed a party leaving Memphis, for Clarksville, Tennessee, in the beginning of the summer of 1827. Arriving at Smithland we were compelled to take a smaller boat on account of the extreme lowness of the Cumberland River. Such was found in the Nettie Miller, a very nice little stern wheeler. We were proceeding on our way rejoicing, when suddenly we were thrown out of our nests and brought all standing in the middle of the state-room. All the gentlemen rushed out in dishabille to learn the trouble, and were frankly told by the captain that the boat was badly snagged, and would sink in a few minutes! Mr. Barnes flew with alarm to his wife and the young ladies—seized his children, deposited them safe in a wood-boat the Nettie had in tow, and ran back. Surprised not to see any of the ladies out yet, he rushed to his wife's room, and found her quietly washing her face and hands.

"Why, my dear, the boat will sink in less than three minutes."

"Well," she replied, "I think I can be out before that time."

Dragging her along, he rushed almost frantic with excitement, to the young ladies' room, and found them very quietly combing their hair!

"For heaven's sake!" says he, "young ladies, what do you mean? The boat will sink in two minutes, and here you are combing your hair!

"Why, uncle," says the neice, "you didn't expect us to go out before all those young men with our hair in this fix—did you?"

THE FEMALE VOLUNTEERS OF AUSTRIA.—It must be well understood that the reserve army which is now being formed in Istria, &c., will be composed of men who have been eight years in the regular army. After having served eight years, an Austrian soldier enters the reserve corps for two years, but he is not liable to be called on to render military service unless the country is at war. The Austrian "reserves" probably consist of some 150,000 men. Such numbers of volunteers have presented themselves that the municipalities in several of the provincial capitals have been obliged to declare that they cannot undertake to clothe and equip any more men. The men now raised in this city join the regular army, and will, as a matter of course, be paid by the government. Two or three days ago several of the gamekeepers of the Princes Lichtenstein and Swarzenburg went to the military authorities, and offered their service to the State, but they expressed a wish not to be put into the volunteer corps. These last will probably behave well in the field, but they played strange tricks while here. On Friday morning the third battalion was completed, and at noon one of its companies was parading the principal streets of the city, with false beards and lampshades instead of headpieces. At the head of the procession marched half a dozen sturdy fellows, blowing clarionets with might and main, and in its rear was a tremendous crowd, composed of persons of both sexes and of all classes of society.—Vienna Cor. London Times.

ALLIGATORS IN WATER PIPES.—On Saturday last the stream of water which supplies the Crescent Iron Works became so weak as to cause an investigation of the main pipe leading to that establishment. An investigation discovered the trail of a dead alligator, which had followed the course of the pipes until it could go no farther, and then stuck fast and died. A pair of blacksmith's tongs were applied to the rotten monster, and it was dragged forth to the length of two feet, causing a sickening sensation in the respective stomachs of those who had just quaffed at the fountain.

It was suggested to us that strainers should be placed on the mouths of the pipes to keep out everything that could have a tendency to taint the water. Upon inquiring of the Superintendent of Water Works, we find that such necessary precaution was taken some time ago, and that all pipes are supplied with strainers, except one, which cannot be conveniently got at until the reservoir is cleansed again. Alligators seem to have a fondness for close quarters. Every time the basin is cleansed twenty or thirty of these frightful reptiles are found wallowing in the mud. We hope that nothing we have said will affect the state of the water.—Wheeling (Va.) Intelligencer, May 24.

We presume what are here styled "alligators" are the very unsightly species of lizard common to the Ohio river and all the Western streams, termed "mud puppies" or "water dogs," and are found in all the reservoirs, which they aid in purifying of much offensive sediment.

"Accept a lock of my hair," said an old bachelor to a widow, handing her a large curl.—"Sir, you had better give me the whole wig." "Madam, you bite hard, but pray don't risk breaking your beautiful porcelain teeth."

Fruit of Liberal Advertising.

The energetic proprietor of the Antiphlogistic Salt, the past year, has advertised in 1,250 papers, (one-fourth of all published in the United States,) and sold 40,000 packages of the medicine. Dr. Coggswell appreciates the press, and avails himself of its power. Let others profit by his extraordinary success.

We learn that the above papers took this popular medicine in payment for advertising, and, with a few exceptions, immediately turned it into cash. We received $100 worth, and have sold every box for cash. The Antiphlogistic Salt is now universally acknowledged to be the greatest discovery in medical science, since the introduction of vaccination by Dr. Jenner.—Boston Saturday Evening Mirror.

From the Boston Traveller.

HE CAN AFFORD TO BE LIBERAL.—It is currently reported and believed that Dr. F. Coggswell is on the high road to a splendid fortune. We learn from an authentic source, that he is now employing thirty operatives in manufacturing one million boxes of his Medicated Salt, to meet the orders pouring in from his agents and the public, since his liberal reduction in the price. The Dr., it is said, has recently made an improvement in the mode of preparing it, by which its cost is greatly diminished—and we commend him for his wisdom in reducing the price, as he will doubtless reap a richer harvest. The acknowledgment and advice of Mr. Hood, (referred to below) a gentleman of the highest integrity and philanthropy, afford a sufficient guarantee that this extraordinary medicine is worthy of public confidence. The following sentiment is from the Kingston (Canada) Advertiser:

"When we recollect the virulent opposition to the introduction of vaccination, and the fatuous manner in which even the most eminent medical men shut their eyes to his wonderful life-saving operation, we ought to be careful how we reject Dr. C.'s New Discovery."

For the Traveller.

TO THE PUBLIC.—Editors of the Traveller:—Will you allow me through your columns to make an announcement which I trust will interest the community, especially the invalid portion of it. It is made at the suggestion of my venerable and judicious friend, the Hon. Chas. Hood, of this city. Having proved the unequaled efficacy of my Antiphlogistic Salt, in subduing a painful and chronic inflammatory disease in his own person, he kindly hinted to me his belief that "its high cost deters thousands from using it, who would avail themselves of it, were its price reduced." Although in the constant receipt of orders by mail and express from my agent and the public at its present price, yet having made an important improvement in my Chemical Apparatus for manufacturing it, by which its cost is materially lessened, I am resolved to put it within the reach of all—even the poorest of the poor. My agents are now authorised to sell it at the following reduced rates: Acute packages, $1; and Chronic do, $2.50. They will send it (post paid) to any address within their respective limits. Invalids in those States and countries yet without agents, can obtain it of me, through the post office, box 822, Boston, Mass., and at my new office, No. 2 Cherry, corner Washington street, from 10 to 12 and 3 to 5. My concentrated Salt, (a scruple equaling a drachm,) is for foreign countries and distant places, where postage runs high.

☞ Descriptive circulars sent gratis, by enclosing a stamp to pay postage.

F. COGGSWELL, M. D.

THE FANNY DEAN HALSEY AFFAIR.—The Trenton Daily True American contains the following in connection with the Fanny Dean Halsey affair:

"A very distressing case has occurred in New York, the particulars of which may be found in our news columns. It appears from the evidence of Mrs. Dean, the mother of Mrs. Halsey, that the parties resided in Trenton some eight months ago. We believe that the name given out was Hargrave, and the family resided in a house belonging to Richard Thomas, east of the depot. Our readers will remember that a fire broke out in the house in a very mysterious manner, and through the efforts of Officer Dean some facts were brought to light which induced the insurance office in Philadelphia to refuse the payment of the amount of the insurance which was quite high. The house was well furnished, and the family had a rented piano from one of our music stores.—Mr. Dean found in his examinations that pretty much all the clothing in the house was marked "Fanny Dean." The family left this city soon after the fire, and have not been heard of since they turned up in New York under the name of Halsey, in the tragical affair alluded to. There is a very great mystery hanging about the affair in New York. Mr. Wells of Brooklyn, who is charged with illicit intercourse with the deceased, denies the charge most emphatically, and others aver that the letters said to have been written by her to Mr. Wells are not her hand-writing. In this city the whole family may be said to have lived incog. No persons knew them—they had no acquaintances, and lived a very retired and secluded life. Mr. Halsey or Hargrave is said to be related to some aristocratic families in England, and while he lived principally upon remittances from them, he is said to have frequently pawned his wife's dresses. His passion seems to have been gambling."

☞ A brochure by George Sand, entitled "Les Greene," is about to be published in Paris. It is an effusion of the politico-poetical lady whose name it bears—a dream from which she is awakened by the sound of the clarion of a regiment starting for Italy. The warlike sentiments inspired by the incident threw the author into a prophetic state, in which she beholds the future happiness of Europe, the triumph of the French arms over Austria, the spreading of liberty emanating from the revolutionary spirit which governs the French nation under cover of the despotism by which it is apparently enslaved, and predicts one universal round hand-in-hand of all nations to the Marseillaise ere long. The work is beautifully written, and, although not rhymed, is full of the most exquisitely poetical images. It is said that Madame was stimulated to do her best in order to efface the impression produced by Paul de Musset's "Lui et Elle," in response to her "Elle et Lui," the history of which is well known.

CONCLUSION OF THE BANK ROBBERY CASE.—Last fall, it will be remembered, Brown & Keep's bank in Buffalo was mysteriously robbed of several thousand dollars. After a time three young men were arrested for the crime—Alexander R. Allen, who was a clerk in the bank, Charles L. Burns and Robert Deveraux. Allen was tried twice and the jury failed to agree. On his third trial Burns made a confession in which he protested the innocence of Allen and declared his own and Deveraux's guilt. Allen has been acquitted, but Burns and Deveraux were found guilty, and sentenced in the Superior Court by Judge Masten. Burns, who is 19 years of age and one of the finest looking young men in Buffalo, was sentenced to the State Prison at Auburn for three years and four months. Deveraux, who is of the same age and a job printer by trade, was sentenced to the State Prison for three years.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

A Farmer's Song.

We envy not the princely man,
In city or in town;
Who wonders whether pumpkin vines
Run up the hill or down;
We care not for his marble halls,
Nor yet his heaps of gold,
We would not own his sordid heart
For all his wealth thrice told.

We are the favored ones of earth,
We breathe pure air each morn,
We sow—we reap the golden grain—
We gather in the corn;
We toil—we live on what we earn,
And more than this we do,
We hear of starving millions round
And gladly feed them, too.

The lawyer lives on griefs, &c.
Yet drags a weary life,
He never knows a peaceful hour—
His atmosphere is strife,
The merchant thumbs his yard stick o'er—
Grows haggard at his bill,
He's not the man God meant him for—
Why don't he till the soil?

The doctor plods through storm and cold,
[illegible]
When [illegible]
To get his lengthy bill.
The printer (bless his noble soul)
He grasps the mighty earth;
And stamps it on our [illegible]
To cheer the farmer's hearth.

We sing the honor of the plow,
And honor of the press—
Two noble instruments of toil,
With such a power to bless.
The [illegible], the nerve of this fast age,
True wealth of human kind—
One tills the ever generous earth,
The other tills the mind.

The Great June Frost.

The frost on Sunday morning, the 5th inst., has been the principal topic of conversation since its occurrence. We find in the Marietta Home News an article from the pen of Dr. Hildreth, of that place, giving an account of the late frosts which have occurred there since 1798, and their effects upon the growing crops. The first occurred May 3, 1805. It was an early spring, and apples were as large as musket balls. All the fruit was destroyed.

The year 1816 was noted for its low temperature, there being more or less frost every month during the Spring and Summer. The crops were very short.

But the most remarkable year for severe frosts was that of 1834. The month of April had been uncommonly warm—the mean for the month being 55°41. By the 25th the forest trees were in full leaf. After a cold rain in the night, on the morning of the 27th the mercury fell to 30°, killing all tender plants and the leaves of many trees. From this time to the 12th of May the weather was mild.—On the 12th, it sunk to 32°, the 13th to 31°, 14th to 29°, 15th to 28°, 17th to 30° and 18th to 32°. On the 19th it rose to 47° at sunrise. This continued series of frosts destroyed all kinds of fruit and vegetation in the fields of the farmers and the gardens in town. There were no apples in this county, and but a few on Hutchinson's island, two miles below Marietta. The wheat was nearly as forward as it was this year, but mostly in the blossom. The head turned white like a plant dried in the sun. A general consternation pervaded the community, thinking a famine must follow. Many farmers plowed their fields and planted them with corn; others let them alone and were rewarded for their forbearance by a tolerable yield of grain. The stool left unharmed in the ground threw up fresh shoots, more numerous, but not so tall as the first, and perfected the seed; but a month or two later than usual. The cornfields were replanted; and the warm weather and timely rains of June produced a fair crop of all such things as were committed to the earth.

Severe frosts often come in April, and early in May, destroying the fruit crops, but this is a small affair compared with the staples of life, such as wheat, corn and potatoes—when these are taken away, or very materially lessened in quantity, they have caused man to feel anxiety, if not alarm.

On the 2d of June, 1843, the mercury fell to 34° in the morning, with a smart frost in the country, and making ice on a bowl of water, near half an inch thick—killing beans, corn, potatoes, &c.,—but not materially injuring the wheat. Melons had to be replanted, and many other things. Indian corn is endowed with a vitality, when young, above that of all other grains. Even when the foliage is destroyed, if the root is uninjured, it springs up again with apparently new vigor, and perfects its seed in due season.

On the 30th and 31st of May, in the year 1845, the mercury fell to 34°, on each morning; cutting down all the corn, potatoes, &c., but not materially damaging the wheat.

The temperature at Marietta on the morning of the 5th of June, 1859, was 38°—the freezing point is 32°; but being sheltered by buildings and town air, it was 4 or 5° above the temperature of the country out of the influence of the fog, which covered all the low grounds near to streams of water, and protects vegetation like a garment.

It is a well established rule that from 9 P. M. to sunrise next morning, in a clear, calm night, the temperature sinks 10°—at 9 o'clock last Saturday night, the thermometer was at 87°, and it should have been, but for the fog, at 29° instead of 38°.

These are the most destructive frosts of which we have any authentic records—what will be the results of the terrible frost of June 5, 1859, remains to be seen. It is possible that the fields of wheat that were only in blossom, and had not formed the grains, may throw up new stems, as it did in 1834 and produce a crop worth the care and attention of the farmer.

S. P. H.

THE DUTY OF FARMERS.—We hear many regrets and murmurs on account of the loss of tobacco plants during the severe frost of Saturday night. We confess we cannot join in these lamentations, but rather rejoice that while useful vegetables have been injured, the plant which is of no real benefit to humanity, shared the same fate. Tobacco this year will be a drug in the market, owing to the war in Europe. Breadstuffs, on the contrary, will be in demand at home and abroad, and he who makes a blade of corn thrive where one of tobacco grew, will be conferring a double service upon humanity. He will not only be doing good, but will prevent the growth of that which is of no earthly use. This year we want bread for our own country and Europe.

The late frost, it is supposed, has somewhat injured the wheat crop. But whether this is so or not, there will be a demand for all the corn, wheat, rye or other grains that may be raised. Europe is in arms; thousands of men have unhappily been forced to leave the tillage of the soil for the trade of death. It will be evident, then, that we want necessaries and not luxuries. Instead, therefore, of regretting the loss of tobacco plants, our farmers should go to work and mend their fortune by planting the necessaries of life. It is not yet too late to sow buckwheat, or plant corn. These will be excellent substitutes for wheat. Every field intended for tobacco—every foot of tillable ground—every old lot—every new clearing—the cow yard and the stable yard, should be plowed and planted. Not an acre should be left uncultivated, and no hand be idle. By this means we may brighten the lowering prospect, and lessen the evils of a year which does not promise to be a most propitious.—Barnesville Intelligencer.

PRUNING PEACH TREES.—The Cultivator favors summer pruning. It says:

Pruning should be done in May and June, but not in the winter, as is the opinion of some fruit growers. We will give some reasons for spring and summer pruning. If you cut off a limb of any size in the winter, the bark dies around the stump from which the limb was cut, and does not for a long time, if ever, cover the stump; whereas, on the contrary, if cut off in May or June, when the sap is in full flow, it will go on to grow, and if not too large, cover the stump the first year. The tree should be trimmed well out of the middle, so as to give the tree and fruit air; limbs that incline to grow strait out should be cropped or shortened, so as to give the tree an upward tendency. Trees should be trimmed up, so that a team of horses can work under them without barking the limbs; swingletrees should be muffled, so as to prevent barking the tree.

The Great Upper Mississippi Flood.

The North-west is literally under water, and the damage along the Mississippi at and above St. Paul is immense. A succession of rain and hailstorms commenced on the 1st, accompanied by gales of wind, which were truly terrific. At St. Cloud the windows were generally demolished, and small buildings and forest trees were prostrated. The hail and rain poured down in billowy torrents. The St. Anthony News learns sad results of the storm from all parts of the State. At St. Anthony and vicinity, houses were removed from their foundations, roofs taken off, and fences and trees prostrated. At St. Augusta, a large Catholic Church was blown down, and a large storehouse, three stories high, filled with grain and goods, was leveled to the ground.

The Mississippi rose rapidly, and flooded St. Paul about the Levee, the water being twenty-one feet above low water mark, by measurement. Much damage was sustained.

The Falls of St. Anthony presented a fearful and sublime appearance. Portions of the rocks gave way to the rushing torrents, and Spirit Island just below the cataract, was mostly swept away. The turn-table of the drawbridge above the Falls was moved down stream some thirty feet, and another pier near shore was swept away, taking about 100 feet of the bridge with it. The Suspension Bridge stood the test, though the water rose to within three feet of it. The great log boom of the St. Anthony Water Power Company gave way under the tremendous pressure, and about 5,000,000 ft. of logs, valued at $40,000, went over the Falls. This was followed by the breaking up of the immense Coon Creek boom, letting out some 10,000,000 feet of logs in a body. For full half an hour the river was completely black with them. They made a great crashing among the mills upon the St. Anthony dam, sweeping out the machinery, and in some cases making a clear breach through the building. Two single mills were carried away, and at least $130,000 worth of logs and lumber passed over the Falls within three days. The damage by the floods in the State is estimated at several hundred thousand dollars.—Leader.

THE WAR FEELING IN GERMANY.—THE SPEECH OF THE KING OF SAXONY.—The following is the full text of the King of Saxony's speech on opening the Chambers on the 25th of May:

Gentlemen: Events of the highest importance have determined me to assemble you again around me after a short vacation. After a more than forty years' peace war has broken out in the heart of Europe, and threatens to jeopardize the treaties upon which its legal condition essentially rests.

The German Confederation has not been able to remain an indifferent spectator. It has resolved to arm, to guard its safety and its honor, and Saxony, as a faithful member of the Confederation, has immediately placed an army on a war footing. However painful it may be to my paternal heart to impose new burdens upon my people, I find myself, nevertheless, obliged, under the circumstances, to ask you for the necessary supplies, and I am firmly convinced that you will lose no time in voting them with patriotic zeal.

The projects of law relating thereto shall be communicated to you, as well as many urgent legislative measures, rendered imperious by the actual state of things, and for which your supplementary approbation is requisite.

However serious may be coming events, I have the internal satisfaction of having always raised my voice in favor of every measure which appeared to me in accordance with the honor of Germany and the defense of the legal principle upon which the pact of the German Confederation is based, and I am fully convinced that the Saxon people share my sentiments in this respect.

The soldiers called to arms have eagerly responded to my voice, and have cheerfully rallied round the flag of Saxony. This time of trial will tend to strengthen still more the bond which unites the Sovereign with his people—a bond which has recently displayed itself so evidently in the midst of joys and trials.

Under all circumstances, if it becomes necessary to fight for right, I hope, in all confidence, that God will be with us and the whole of Germany.

A GREAT COUNTRY.—The Rev. Bishop Pierce, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, gives the following picture of the State of Texas:

Texas is a curious country—a paradox. Everything is in the superlative, or contradictory or marvellous. It is the richest and the poorest—has the best lands the meanest water; is the hardest country to live in, and has the most to live on; the days are the hottest, and the nights the coolest; here are the most rivers, and the least water; the best roads, and the slowest travel; the finest building material, and the least use made of it; there are more clouds, and less rain; more plains, and less timber; more ropes to tie horses, and yet more estray; a poor country for farming, and yet the most productive; the least work, and the largest yield; the horses are small and the cattle big; the frogs have horns, and the rabbits have ears like mules; the people are intelligent without general education—inventive without being tricky—refined without mannerism—rich without money—hospitable without houses—bold, generous and brave. In fine, here is an empire in extent and resources, but in the slowest process of evolution, and yet destined to population, wealth and power. There is much to admire, but little to deplore; many things to enchant, but few to offend; and for the people and their institutions there is a splendid future.

CROPS IN ILLINOIS.—A correspondent, writing to the Chicago Times from Prosper City, Ford county, under date of 11th inst., says:

"Yesterday it was remarkably cold for this season of the year. This morning we had a slight frost, not enough, however, to injure the vines.

"This cold weather will check vegetation generally, but it is considered favorable for spring wheat. I examined large fields of spring wheat to-day, which I think promise an abundant harvest. They look better than they did two years ago, when we harvested twenty bushels to the acre. Barley and oats also look well. The farmers are very much encouraged about the corn crop, which generally looks promising. On the low grounds the corn which was damaged by the frost one week ago, is now shooting up very strong and shedding off the frosted tops, that have the appearance of a blister."

SPECULATING IN FLOUR.—One day after the frost of the 4th inst., when excitement was at its highest pitch, and it was supposed by some that the wheat crop was entirely destroyed, a farmer visited one of our city merchants and purchased flour from him amounting to a little under $300 for which he paid the cash. The flour was to be stored by the merchant, and drawn by the purchaser at pleasure. Yesterday the purchaser again visited the city, called upon the merchant, and offered to sell out his stock in trade, stating that he should not want it, as his wheat was not as badly killed as he expected. The merchant bought back at the price originally paid, giving his check, payable in thirty days. In an hour afterwards the merchant again sold the same flour at an advance of 25 cents per barrel.—[Fact.

☞ "Have the crockery book any pictures?" inquired Miss C., of a bookseller the other day.

"No, madame, none," was the reply.

"Why," exclaimed the witty and beautiful young lady, "what's the use of telling us how to make a good dinner if they give us no plates?"

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers.
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially Tiles; including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse Keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

LATEST BOOKS—
Mosaics. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Trenck.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Caird's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

PROPOSED
AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.
RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly.
Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October State election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of this State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."
WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.
April 7, 1859.
SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
COLUMBUS, O., April 7, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.
A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.
AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO.
COLUMBUS, April 18, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.
JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.
June 16-td

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Poplins, Lawns, Robes, Challis, Bareges, Calicoes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles, Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the cheap and one price Store, on the corner of High and Broad Streets.
may 12. J. C. CRITTENDEN.

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS.
BLANK BOOKS
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices,
supplied with any article, in the line of Stationery, on the best terms, and all Works warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
[illegible]
[illegible] of Valuable Standard Works [illegible] Editions.
[illegible] Medical and Scientific Works [illegible]. All the new Books received direct.
French, English and American Stationery
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.
Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors, from 3 to 8ft.; French Plate, Oil Paintings and Engravings, Portrait and Picture Frames always on hand and made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens, Work Boxes and Dressing Cases, Card Cases and Porte Monnaies; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes; Pocket Books, Wallets, Bill Holders, &c., &c. june16

New Books.
FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
VIEWS and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA, or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederick S. Cozzens.
SEACLIFF, or the Mystery of the Westervelts. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Asia, Africa and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland, (7 vols., cloth $ co.)
The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novelette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Gentlewoman Novel. By Mrs. Sallie Rochester Ford.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Works of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt, 4 vols.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.
June 16, 1859—tf J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.
DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law, from 7th London Edition.
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, New Ed. with additions.
Spain: By Wm. Cullen Bryant.
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Orwore?
Sixty Years' Gleanings.
The Foster Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Freedom and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Arago's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store.
june16 J. H. RILEY & Co.

Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Agnel's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Kitney's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West, State Street, Columbus, O.
CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10½ a. m., to 12 m.
One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make the Saloon one of the best in the city. may26-7m.

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $204,000.
Offices 397 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N. Y.
This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes, in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent.
mayttf Columbus Ohio.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.
THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practised upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.
The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.
The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.
An admirable Report on Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation, or Self-Abuse and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.
Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
may1ly.

1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs
Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.
The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County 23 miles North of Columbus, (the Capital of Ohio) on the Scioto River, 12 miles from Delaware, 5 miles from the White Sulphur Station, on the Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburgh Railroad, and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad.
The medical qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States. For Room or other information, address
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio.
june8

E. CORNELISON,
TUNER
AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
PIANO AND MELODEON KEYS WHITENED, AND ALL SHARPS ARRANGED.
☞ Orders left at Seltzer & Webster's Music Store, will receive prompt attention. 1y16

C. A. WAGNER,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN [illegible] FIRE WORKS, FIRE BALLOONS, FLAGS, [illegible]
☞ Exhibition Fire Works for Cities Towns and Villages, prepared at any prices from $50 to $500, and the necessary directions given for burning the same.
State Street, Columbus, Ohio.
je16-tf

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,
The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.
The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing
Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of Confirmed Consumption.
A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhœa proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.
These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.
In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.
mar18

Fever and Ague,
from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if by another effort to expel the irritating poison through that other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.
We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,
Ayer's Ague Cure,
which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.
This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.
PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.
FOR COSTIVENESS;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA;
FOR JAUNDICE;
FOR THE CURE OF INDIGESTION;
FOR HEADACHE;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSENTERY;
FOR A FOUL STOMACH;
FOR THE CURE OF ERYSIPELAS;
FOR THE PILES;
FOR THE CURE OF SCROFULA;
FOR ALL SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS;
FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM;
FOR DISEASES OF THE SKIN;
FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT;
FOR DROPSY;
FOR THE CURE OF TETTER, TUMORS, AND SALT RHEUM; FOR WORMS;
FOR THE CURE OF GOUT;
FOR A DINNER PILL;
FOR THE CURE OF NEURALGIA;
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.
They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.
Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.
Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.
Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.
All our Remedies are for sale by
Roberts & Samuels, No. 34 N. High St., Columbus O., Suire Eckstine & Co., Cincinnati O., Mr. Fisher Cleveland O., W. A. Graham, Zanesville, O., and by all druggists, and dealers in medicines.

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.
Great Northern & Eastern Route,
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati
RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
Connecting at Cleveland, with the
Lake Shore Railroad.
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.
THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.
FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 2.20 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of Galion stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and all stations North of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7.00 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 2.30 p. m. Also with same road at Crestline, [illegible] for Chicago, arriving at [illegible]. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for [illegible]. Arrives at Cleveland at 10.00 a. m.
SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] stopping only at Delaware, [illegible], Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Grafton, connecting at Crestline with the 12.30 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 2.30 p. m. arriving at Cleveland 2.10 p. m., connecting at 2.30 p. m. with the fast Express on Lake Shore road for the East arriving at Buffalo 9.00 p. m. Dunkirk 8.30 p. m. Boston [illegible] New York 1.30 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of any other line, Boston 3.00 p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.
THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] p. m., stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7.20 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline, for Chicago arriving at Chicago at 6.00 a. m. at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston, arriving at Erie 10.00 p. m., Dunkirk at [illegible], Buffalo 4.20 a. m.
☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.
RETURNING
Night Express, arrives at Columbus 1.20 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 2.30 p. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 8.00 p. m.
Fare as low as by any other Route.
For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty, Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and C. & X. R. R. Railroads.
E. S. FLINT,
Superintendent, Cleveland, Ohio.
H. C. MARSHALL,
Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent,
Columbus, Ohio.
Columbus, May 12, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads,
To the South and West.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.
FIRST TRAIN.
(DAILY.)
NIGHT EXPRESS—At 2:15 A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between [illegible] Cincinnati [illegible], connecting [illegible] for Dayton, Indianapolis, [illegible], Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland with [illegible] for all points on M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with [illegible] on Ohio & Mississippi Railroad for [illegible], St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all [illegible] West, and [illegible] for Louisville.
SECOND TRAIN.
NO. 1 EXPRESS—[illegible] A. M. stopping at Way Jefferson, London, [illegible], Morrow, Deerfield, [illegible], Loveland and [illegible] Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. [illegible] for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c., &c.
THIRD TRAIN.
[illegible]
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At [illegible] P. M., stopping at [illegible], London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Foster's Crossing, Milford, and Plainville arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M., connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., and at Cincinnati with evening trains on O. & M. R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.
FOURTH TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY.)
MAIL—At 2.00 P. M., stopping at all [illegible] Jefferson, London, Charleston, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, or Freeport, Waynesville, Loveland and [illegible] Cincinnati at 10:00 P. M. This train connects at Xenia with Yellow Springs, &c., &c.
RETURNING.
Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 3:20 A. M.; No. 1 Express 12:20 p.m., No. 2 Express 8:00 p. m. Accommodation 7:00 p. m.
☞ For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.
J. DURAND,
Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER,
General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY,
Agent, Columbus, O.
Columbus, May 18, 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.
Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.
Two Trains Daily.
(Sundays excepted.)
Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:
FIRST TRAIN,
Leaves at 6:30 a. m., on the arrival of trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Arrives at Indianapolis at 5:20 p. m.
This train connects at Milford with trains for Marysville, [illegible], Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati, without change of Cars.
Also connects at Urbana with trains north on the [illegible] & C. R. R. for Bellefontaine, Forest, Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. Connects at Union for Greenville, at Anderson for Kokomo and Peru.
At Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette & Chicago, also, with trains for Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis, connecting at St. Louis with Trains and Steamboat lines to KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.
Also, connects at Indianapolis for Jeffersonville, Louisville, Madison and Peru.
SECOND TRAIN.
Leaves Columbus at 2:30 p. m., on the arrival of Trains from Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Arrives at Indianapolis at 11:00 p. m.
This Train connects at Milford for Mechanicsburg and Springfield; at Urbana with trains north on S. D. & C. R. R. for Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. At Piqua with trains north on D. & M. R. R. for Sidney, Lima, Delphos, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and at Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette, Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis.
FOR WAY FREIGHT.
Leaving Columbus at 5:30 a. m., will carry a Passenger Train for the Accommodation of Way Travel.
☞ Be sure to get that your Tickets read VIA COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE, and see that you do not have Tickets sold you by other and Inferior Routes.
☞ Tickets for all Western Routes for sale at all the Principal Rail Road Stations in the East.
B. WALKUP, General Ticket Agent.
W. F. GLAISER, Superintendent.
Columbus, Ohio, May 18, 1859.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!

A Democratic Newspaper,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.

By J. Birney Marshall,

At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic truths and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statement relied on for their undeviating veracity. Nor shall it be used for disguise or factions, but consistently pursue the object for which it is established; that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disruption—whilst it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the duty, it must know that it is Democratic and not a false light held up to Slide, perhaps to betray—while it will support, the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and save every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year..................................$2 00

A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; 20 per cent on clubs of twenty; 25 per cent on clubs of thirty, and 30 per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 29, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Received for six months at One Dollar in advance.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Will be sent for the campaign, to subscribers, at Fifty Cents for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS

May be formed for the Press at the following rates:

Five Copies	$2 00
Ten	3 50
Twenty	6 00
Fifty	14 00
One hundred copies	25 00

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1859. NUMBER 8.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion ... $ 1,00

Each additional insertion ... [illegible]

One square 3 months ... 5,00

[illegible] ... 8,00

[illegible] ... 15,00

One fourth of a column per year ... 40,00

" half " ... 60,00

" column ... 100,00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $10,00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular sovereignty.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences, and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1792, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories, and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure leading in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and law-abiding citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have, in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

THE FREE NEGROES OF MARYLAND.—The fact brought to notice by the recent Slaveholders' Convention, that the free blacks constitute more than one-eighth of the entire population in Maryland, excites no little surprise. Few at the North were prepared to hear that they were so numerous, though an examination of the census returns of 1850, would have revealed the state of the case. The Albany Evening Journal, sharing the general misapprehension, speaks of the free negroes of Maryland as "a few hundred."—Mr. Pearce, on the other hand, states their present number at 80,000. A Baltimore journal says that more than half the free blacks of the State reside in that city. Slavery in Maryland exists mainly in the country, on large farms.

☞ Senator Green lately made an elaborate speech at Jefferson City, Missouri, discussing political questions of national interest. He said he had been asked whether he would vote for Stephen A. Douglas if nominated for the Presidency—and he answered without hesitation, yes. Of couse he would, why not? And we do not doubt that if the same question should be put to every Democratic voter, individually, in Missouri, the response would be the same in each instance.—The masses who do the voting—who must do it in 1850—are right on the great question of Popular Sovereignty.—Toledo Herald.

☞ "Occasional" writes to the Philadelphia Press:

Since the return of Hon. John Appleton, from Maine, the Portland Argus, of which he is the largest owner, has been placing itself more and more upon the Douglas platform, whether by his dictation I cannot say; but this is a significant fact, as showing the united sentiment of that State. No party there assumes to defend the Administration's Territorial policy, and the Democrats are against it to a man, all over New England.

Naturalized Citizens—Dangerous Assaults upon their Rights.

[From the Chicago Times, June 21.]

In another column, we publish two letters from General Cass—one addressed to Felix Le Clerc, Esq., and the other to A. V. Hofer, Esq., of Cincinnati—both upon the question of the degree of protection which a naturalized citizen may expect from the United States, while sojourning in the land of his nativity. The doctrine declared by General Cass, in behalf of the government of which he is a member, cannot fail to be startling to the entire people of the American Union, and particularly appalling to all men of foreign birth who may, either for pleasure or upon business, return temporarily, to the home of their childhood. Though willing at all times to render all the support that is possible to the administration, for whose elevation to office we, with our Democratic friends of Illinois labored so hard, we cannot permit this broad infraction of what has long been deemed the policy of the American government, to pass without expressing our own humble dissent, and also to express the hope that it may never receive the approval of any considerable portion of the American people—at least of those who have heretofore claimed an attachment to the great principles of Democracy. In the agitation and discussion of the question of African slavery in the territories of the Union—an agitation and discussion which has continued uninterruptedly since the commencement of the war with Mexico in 1846—the public mind has been withdrawn to a great extent from the consideration of other topics of far greater practical importance; and a new generation of voters and active business men have grown up in the land to whom the question of African slavery has been rendered far more familiar than other questions of greater magnitude.—This very question of the rights conferred by naturalization has, we fear, been sadly neglected, during this overshadowing agitation of the negro matter, and it behooves the Democratic press of the country to proclaim the great truths, upon which the long established American policy rests, in all their force and power.

What is naturalization? It is, under the Constitution of the United States, an act of national authority. It cannot be exercised by any local, or municipal, or State authority. It is the act of conferring upon the alien the right and privileges of a native citizen; it is the formal adoption by the act of the nation, of an alien into the American political family, and the placing of such alien, thus naturalized, in the same political condition that he would have occupied, had he been a native born citizen of the country. It involves the previous complete and total denationalization of the alien from all and every possible description of allegiance which he may have owed to any and every foreign power, particularly to the government, prince or sovereign of his native land. No man can become a naturalized citizen without a renunciation, upon oath, of all allegiance to foreign governments, and in consideration of this renunciation, the United States as a nation, accepts and adopts him as a citizen of the United States, and confers upon him all the rights and privileges, which, as a nation, it recognizes or admits to be the rights and privileges of a native born citizen.—To this act of naturalization is attached a condition, and the party accepting the act of naturalization accepts it with that condition, that such naturalized citizen shall not be eligible to the office of President or Vice President of the United States; and shall have been before becoming a Representative in Congress, a citizen of the United States for seven years, and before becoming a Senator of the United States, shall have been a citizen for the period of nine years. These are the only limitations placed by the Constitution or by the laws of the United States upon the absolute political equality of naturalized with native born citizens. No other limitation, expressed or implied, can be found in the Constitution or laws of the United States; on the contrary, the recital of these limitations was designed to exclude, and under all rules of legal construction does exclude the possibility of any other or further distinction between the political equality of the two classes of citizens. We think that there can be no intelligent man at this day who will for a moment dispute that under the Constitution and laws of the United States, naturalized citizens are, with the particular exceptions we have noted, politically the equals of the native born citizen.

The next question is, to what rights and privileges does naturalization admit an alien? It admits him to all the protection which the government is bound to afford to any American citizen who may be lawfully engaged in any part of the globe. It protects him in California, in the enjoyment of those privileges and immunities, which, under the laws of California, citizens of the United States in his condition are entitled to enjoy. It protects him in Liverpool and St. Petersburg in all those rights, privileges and immunities which a native born American citizen may claim in those places. It secures to him at home and abroad all those national attributes which justly belong to any other citizen. It renders him secure in his person and his property, it secures to him all the immunities which other citizens enjoy, and entitles him to wear the proud title of a citizen of the Republic. Naturalization does not confer upon an alien the right of voting—that is a matter exclusively within the jurisdiction of the respective States, and may be conferred or withheld by the several States, wholly irrespective of naturalization.—With the exception, possibly, of the small territory of the District of Columbia, we do not know of any other part of the Union wherein naturalization gives to an alien any additional rights and privileges in the matter of holding and alienating real estate; if, however, there be any of the States, wherein aliens are under any legal disabilities with respect to rights of property, those disabilities are nevertheless under the control of State laws, and may be removed or modified without the interposition of the United States.

Under our admirable form of government the relations of citizens toward the federal power are such, that an individual rarely has necessity to claim its protection, or appeal to it in any way. It is only when he goes abroad that the importance of his nationality it felt; it is only when he gets beyond the territory of his country that an American realizes the magnitude of the fact that he is entitled to all the rights and privileges of an American citizen! That wherever he may go, so long as he violates no law of other governments, he is beneath the protecting shadow of his country's flag. The measure of protection which an American citizen in foreign lands may expect from his government, was so forcibly and eloquently expressed in the inaugural address of President Pierce, that we produce an extract from that address. It reads:

"The rights belonging to us as a nation are not alone to be regarded, but those which pertain to every citizen in his individual capacity at home or abroad must be sacredly maintained. So long as he can discover every star in its place on that ensign, without wealth to purchase for him preferment, or title to secure for him place it will be his privilege, and his right must be acknowledged, to stand unabashed in the presence of princes, with the proud consciousness that he himself is one of a nation of sovereigns, and that he cannot, in his legitimate pursuits, be a wanderer so far from home that the agent whom he shall leave behind in the place which I now occupy, will not see that no rude hand of power or tyrannical passion is laid upon him with impunity."

The author of this noble sentiment is now in Europe; he has wandered far enough from his native land to learn that his fellow-citizen may be touched by the rude hand of power with impunity, and that the agent left behind him in the executive chair not only looks on with complacency, but applauds the deed and confirms the claim which strips an American citizen of his nationality, and degrades him to the condition of a serf!

General Cass, in behalf of the President, declares that the naturalized citizen who may have come to the United States at an early age, upon returning to his native land is subject once more to the political claims which his former sovereign may have had upon him; in other words that there is a distinction between native and naturalized citizens, under which a naturalized citizen when abroad may be divested of his American nationality, may be taken from the protection of the American flag, may be degraded to the condition of a slave, and that the American government cannot and will not exert in his behalf that protection which a native citizen might expect. He declares that native and naturalized citizens are not equals; he raises a distinction in their political character not raised by the constitution, but positively repelled by the whole theory, principles and practices of the republic.

Does the renunciation of allegiance by a naturalized citizen mean anything? If it means anything, then it must mean that the United States accept the applicant for citizenship because he thenceforth owes no allegiance whatever to any other government. Will any administration at this late day assert that naturalized citizens of the United States all owe allegiance to the land whence they have come; and that senators and representatives in Congress, of foreign birth, governors of States, and officers of the army and navy, are not free men, but fugitives from some royal master, who may, with impunity, and with the entire approval of the American government, if he can catch them in his dominions, strip them of their American citizenship, force them into his army, compel them to run on foot at the side of his horse, coerce them to tend his dogs when upon the hunt, and perform all the other duties of subjects owing feudal service to their lord!

We think not, and we think the administration which publicly informs the sovereigns of Europe that they may seize, capture and coerce American citizens into the performance of duties and services which existed under the allegiance which was renounced at the time of naturalization, is unfit to be intrusted with the protection of American freedom; is a disgrace to the land whose institutions it would make a mockery, and deserves the reprobation of every admirer of the free and liberal institutions of the United States.

We have extended these remarks beyond the limits of a newspaper article, yet we cannot close it without citing a remarkable instance in the history of this country which will illustrate more forcibly than any argument of our own the true American policy, and at the same time exhibit the want of spirit displayed by the authorities in Washington at the present time. In 1812, a body of American citizens "voluntarily" left the United States and went upon the soil of the "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland." In that body of American citizens were a very large number of men of Irish birth; and who, according to the laws of the land of their nativity, owed allegiance to His Majesty. At the battle of Queenston a hundred and more of these American citizens, including the present Lieut. General Scott, were made prisoners. Twenty-three men of Irish birth, naturalized citizens of the United States, were selected from the prisoners, because they owed, "previous to their emigration and naturalization," allegiance to the King of Great Britain and Ireland; they were taken upon the soil of their sovereign, with arms in their hands, and after a deadly conflict with the troops of their royal master. If they owed any allegiance to Great Britain after their American naturalization, then they were traitors, and deserved to be hung up at the first tree. If they, by becoming naturalized, had been freed of their allegiance to Great Britain, then they were to be treated as any other American prisoners of war.—The British commander singled them out at Quebec, placed them on board a frigate to be sent home to England to be tried and hung. General Scott, himself a prisoner, warned the British officer that these men were American citizens; that if they were injured, or otherwise treated than as American prisoners, the American government would retaliate. The Irishmen were sent to England, and Scott presented the facts to Congress, who in March, 1813, passed a law authorizing the President to retaliate upon British prisoners any indignity or outrage to which these Irishmen might be subjected. Under that law, Gen. Scott selected twenty-three Englishmen by birth from his prisoners, and informed the British authorities that he would hold them until the return of the Irishmen, and would retaliate upon these Englishmen any attempt by Great Britain to treat the Irishman not as American citizens but as British subjects. At the close of the war, the naturalized Irishmen were restored to the United States. Here was a case of men who, under the laws of England, owed an allegiance, including military duty, to their king; they voluntarily returned to British soil, were captured fighting against their native country, and, according to the new doctrine asserted by the Secretary of State, the American government, instead of interfering in their behalf, instead of seizing Englishmen and holding them as hostages for the safety of these naturalized citizens, ought to have written a very respectful letter to the British government informing that government that the United States regarded naturalization as nothing more than an absurd farce, which in no way divested the naturalized party of any allegiance he owed his sovereign, but simply protected him from the claims of those governments who never had made claim upon him; that in naturalizing an Englishman the United States only assumed to protect its new citizen against any claim which France, Russia or the Sultan might assert to his allegiance, but never presumed to disturb the political relations which had previously existed between the subject and the British crown.

We think that an administration which has periled the peace, prosperity, and even existence of the Union, in a wild and senseless crusade to enforce the doctrine that an American citizen has the constitutional right to carry his negro slaves into places where the people have unanimously declared they should not go, might, to say the least, have asserted in behalf of the five millions of white naturalized freemen of the United States, the unquestionable truth that an American citizen carries with him, wherever he may go, the right to demand and receive the protection of his government against the political claim, or authority, of any other power; and that once vested with the privileges, and clothed with the character of an American freeman, no power on earth, save his own free will, can deprive him of those privileges, or strip him of that character; and that no American citizen, against his own voluntary consent, can be compelled to yield an allegiance, or perform feudal service to any foreign prince or power however great or however small.

Naturalization and Voting.

There is a strange and very absurd notion in the minds of some men that citizenship, whether on the part of native born or naturalized residents, is the only grand pre-requisite to the exercise of the privilege of voting. Nothing is more erroneous. The power to naturalize foreigners, and to make them citizens, is a power possessed exclusively by the Federal Government, and the exercise of which by any of the States is prohibited. The right or privilege of voting, even for federal offices, is a matter, the regulation of which is particularly and expressly retained by the several States, and over which Congress and the Federal Government have no possible control. Hence it was, that when Massachusetts determined to disfranchise foreign-born residents, the State could in no way disturb the naturalization laws, by extending the term of years preliminary to acquiring the character of citizenship; that was a power and authority not vested in Massachusetts, but in Congress. But Massachusetts having the exclusive right and power to regulate the matter of voting by her own inhabitants, had the power to do what she has done, to require a residence of two years after naturalization as a requisite to the privilege of voting in that State.

The adoption of the Massachusetts amendment has, however, compelled the Republicans of other States to a system of letter-writing, in which they seek to explain or do away with the effect of the action of their Massachusetts brethren.—Among others, Governor Salmon P. Chase, of Ohio, has written a letter in which he makes a proposition to compromise between what is demanded by the Republicans of Massachusetts and by the Republicans of foreign birth; and in his proposition he utters the absurdity that naturalization, under an act of Congress, necessarily governs the privilege of voting in the States. He says:

"Naturalized and native citizens generally agree that the evil chiefly complained of can be satisfactorily remedied by such a change in the law as will provide for naturalization after three instead of five years residence, and for the issue at that time of certificates conferring the rights of citizens, except suffrage, immediately, and that right also after two years longer residence, making five years residence in all, as now."

Gov. Chase, in his anxiety to relieve his Republican friends of the odium which attaches to their illiberal proceedings, falls into the most ridiculous mistake of proposing to confer upon Congress the right now held by the several States, of governing and regulating the exercise of the privilege of voting. Would Massachusetts yield her right of admitting negroes to the privilege of voting? Would Governor Chase give up to the Federal Government the power of regulating the right of suffrage in Ohio? And yet Governor Chase proposes to take from the people of Ohio and Massachusetts the right they now enjoy of regulating the privileges of voting in their respective States, and give it to Congress. A man may be naturalized, and yet, under State laws, be forever denied the privilege of voting; and a man may be allowed that privilege under State laws, and yet never be naturalized.

To carry into practical effect Chase's proposition would require an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and before that can be accomplished the Republican party, its intolerance, and lawlessness, as well as its Chases, its Garrisons, and its Sumners will have been forgotten; or, if remembered at all, will be remembered as a moral plague with which the Republic was infested during the middle of the 19th century. In the meantime, Governor Chase would do well to refresh his reading by going over the Constitution of the United States once or twice.—Chicago Times.

BRANC BY NOSE.—The Toledo Times grows facetious over the "union of hearts and the union of hands" that took place recently in the city of Toledo, Mr. THOS. REYNOLDS, represented as being six feet four, surmounted by a bountiful crop of wool, while the bride was Miss MARY HENDERSON, a descendant of Mother Eve, who had lost none of the original color of her maternal ancestor. The penchant for the scion of the "royal Senne Gambia house," on the part of the fair MARY, has been attributed to a very indifferent appreciation of the historical fact that an attempt to wash the blackamoor white may be a labor of love, but is a thriftless undertaking; and that she has set in upon the task of "whitening out the colored race," and by example as well as precept endeavoring to "eradicate the prejudice against color." The Times says:

"As the whitening out of the colored race, is the only practical mode to adopt to eradicate the prejudice against color, and so long as the doctrine taught in Oberlin, of equality of the races, is considered orthodox—we should be foolish to express regret that such an occurrence has taken place in our city. Many blessings on their pates, and may the crop of wool prove abundant."

REPUBLICAN RELIGION.—Cutting the throat of a Supreme Judge, (politically,) because he would not swear a lie, for the purpose of satisfying a set of scoundrels in their treasonable designs against the government; and then invoking the favor of the Supreme Ruler of the universe upon their proceedings.—Galion Dem.

Douglas or Defeat.

(From the Quincy (Illinois) Herald.)

The conviction that Judge Douglas is the only Democrat who can be elected President, is becoming more deeply seated every day, and growing wider every hour. It was a similar conviction which, taking possession of the Democratic heart of the country in the days of Old Hickory, resulted in the nomination and election of General Jackson to the Presidency. The old patriot-hero was as unacceptable to the nullifying fire-eaters of South Carolina, and their coadjutors in other Southern States, as Judge Douglas is to-day. But that mattered not with the great mass of the people, who act and co-operate with, and in fact really constitute, the Democratic party. They wanted a National Union President—one whose sympathies could embrace the whole people, whose measures of public policy would look to the welfare and prosperity of all interests in every section of the country, and who enjoyed the confidence of the masses in all the States. A statesman that filled the bill they found, in those days, in General Jackson, precisely as they now find him in Stephen A. Douglas. The only opposition there is to Douglas, discarding all mere party names, comes from two classes of fanatics. One class reside chiefly at the North, and insist that Congress shall legislate against slavery in the Territories. The other class, residing chiefly at the South, insist that Congress shall legislate in favor of slavery in the Territories. Douglas insists that Congress shall do neither—that Congress shall legislate neither for nor against slavery in the Territories. The position maintained by Judge Douglas upon this subject has been the position of the Democratic party for years past. It was the position sustained by the people North and South in the election of both Pierce and Buchanan.—It is a position that is entirely acceptable to reasonable men of all parties in all parts of the country. It is the only position upon this subject that is consistent with the Constitution, or that will maintain or perpetuate the peaceful and harmonious existence of the Union. The people of the South, who seek no undue advantage over the people of the North, are content that Congress shall not legislate in favor of slavery, if the people of the North shall remain equally content that Congress shall not legislate against slavery. What more could the people of either section ask or demand? But it is just at this point that the Southern fanatic steps in and asks, "How are we to get slavery into the Territories, unless Congress shall enact laws protecting it there?" And it is also just at this point that the Northern fanatic steps in and asks, "How are we to keep slavery out of the Territories, unless Congress shall enact laws prohibiting it there?" The answer of the true Democrat—one who stands squarely upon the platform of non-intervention—is, If you want slavery in a Territory, move to the Territory and advocate it and vote for it there; or if you do not want slavery to exist in a Territory, move into the Territory, and oppose and vote against its introduction and existence there. In this way, the whole question may be kept out of national politics, and the power for mischief and danger to the peace and integrity of the Union taken out of the hands of those who live upon agitation, and seek to ride into office upon it, both North and South. The question is thus thrown out of the arena of national politics—and who does not desire that this may be done at once?—who is not heartily sick and tired of this perpetual din and humbuggery, and tom-foolery about niggers? Well, this is the position of the Democratic party, and of Judge Douglas, and it is because Judge D. has been the boldest, ablest, and most successful advocate of this cardinal maxim of the Democratic creed—non-intervention by Congress with slavery in State or Territory—that there is a sort of spontaneous feeling throughout the country that he can be, ought to be, and must be, elected the next President of the United States. It is because the mass of the people know Judge Douglas to be a statesman of more than Roman integrity and firmness, upon this great question, that they prefer him for that exalted position; and it is because they entertain doubts whether any other public man, of Presidential stature, possesses equal integrity and firmness, that the impression—conviction, rather—is growing deeper and wider, and gaining ground daily, that he is the only Democrat who can possibly be elected President in 1860. The people want this interminable slavery broil put out of the way, and they see no other way to do it than to make Douglas President. The politicians may possibly cheat Douglas out of the nomination at Charleston, but if they do, the indications now are—though they may possibly change by that time—that the people will cheat the politicians out of the President, by defeating at the polls the man they nominate. No Democrat doubts that Douglas could and would be elected, if nominated. And not one Democrat in a thousand now believes—whatever he may believe a year hence—that any other Democrat in the Union could be elected, though endorsed by forty Charleston Conventions. Why, then, should Democrats hesitate to express their solemn and deliberate convictions upon the subject? Why should they, by holding back, permit the politicians to trick and trap, and plan, and arrange for the nomination of a candidate that cannot be elected, when the voice of the whole country points to Douglas as the man that can be elected! When the choice is, manifestly, Douglas or defeat, what Democrat, or what man worthy of the name of Democrat, will hesitate to choose? The Democrats of the South will be called upon to choose, first between Douglas and defeat, and next between Douglas and Seward. That they will unite with the Democracy of the North in first preferring Douglas to defeat, and afterwards preferring Douglas to Seward, we do not suffer ourselves to doubt for a moment.

POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY.—The Boston Journal, the leading Republican organ in Massachusetts, approved the language of the Pennsylvania Opposition platform on the territorial question, as "a practical assertion of popular sovereignty, and yet in such terms that all who maintain the fullest power of Congress over the Territories may assent to it;" and adds: "we should not be surprised to find this statement, in itself so just and true, recognized as meeting the political exigencies of the times and facilitating the union of the opposition."

POSSIBLE CHANGE IN THE CABINET.—The Secretary of War has returned from Virginia, and is seriously ill. His health has been declining for several months, and unless an improvement soon takes place, his retirement from the Cabinet will become necessary. In that event, it is expected that CHARLES J. FAULKNER, of Va., will be appointed to the vacancy.

Brief Historical Sketch of the Heroes who fought in the Recent Important Battle in Lombardy.

MARSHAL CANROBERT.

France is certain Canrobert is a native of the ancient and war-like province of Brittany, where he was born of a good old family in 1809. Educated at the military school of St. Cyr, he left that institution with the rank of sub-lieutenant of one of the regiments of the line, and in 1832 was advanced to a lieutenancy.

Subsequently, he played a leading part in the campaign of the Crimea, sustaining at the battle of the Alma, the first shock of the Russian attack, and storming the heights with the Zouaves, until Gen. Forey came up to his support. Although badly wounded in the arm, he remained on the field until the close of the day. Two days after that victory, Marshal St. Arnaud, perceiving his death approaching, resigned the chief command of the allied armies into the hands of Gen. Canrobert, in conformity with secret instructions received from the Emperor, March 12, 1854.

GENERAL ESPINASSE.

Esprit Charles Marie Espinasse, who was killed, like Canrobert, was a graduate of the school of St. Cyr. Born in the village of Saissac, April 2, 1815, during the "Hundred Days." He left the school in 1833, and won his first steps in Algeria. In the Crimea he fought gallantly by the side of the Sardinians at Tchernaya, and was one of the first to follow General McMahon into the Malakoff. He served in Italy as a General of Division in the second corps d'armee under the orders of General, now Marshal McMahon.

GEN. MCMAHON, NOW DUKE DE MAGENTA.

Napoleon III. has been sparing in the creation of nobles. In nothing has he shown his intrinsic good sense and his knowledge of the French people more strikingly than in this forbearance. Nevertheless, the bestowment of this honor upon Gen. McMahon was nothing more than an act of justice, for he certainly distinguished himself gloriously. Marie Edme Patrick Maurice de MacMahon is a scion of one of those illustrious Irish families which followed the Stuarts into exile two centuries ago, and have since given so many brave and brilliant names to the history of France, Austria and Spain. The gallantry of the Sarsfields and the Tyrconnels has not faded out of this ancient blood with the lapse of time; and the valor of the Irish Brigade which broke the English squares at Fontenoy, lives in the stormer of the Malakoff and the leader of the desperate battle of Magenta.

GENERAL NEIL.

General Neil, who is reported to have been wounded in the late action at Magenta, is one of the aid-de-camps to the Emperor Napoleon, and a General of the Engineers, and his success has won him the surname of "Polycrate." He has been present at all the regular sieges which have won fortified cities to the French arms, viz: Antwerp, Constantine, Rome, Bomarsund and Sevastopol. Gen. Neil took in the present campaign the command of a corps d'armee.

AUSTRIAN GENERALS.

The following Austrian Generals were engaged in the battle of Magenta:

THE AUSTRIAN COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Baron Henry de Hess, who commands the Austrian army, has grown old in the service of his country, having seen more winters than perhaps any other officer or soldier connected with either army. He was born in Vienna in 1788, and is consequently 71 years old. He is looked upon as a good strategist. Radetzky, whose principal adviser he was for a long time, held him in the greatest esteem, and he shared in the greater part of the old Marshal's successes.

GENERAL GYULAI.

General Gyulai was born at Pesth, in 1799. He entered the military service in 1816, and rapidly, notwithstanding the peace, obtained promotion. He fought under the orders of Radetzky, especially at Custozza, on the 25th of July, 1839; and unless he has forgot the particulars of that battle he should cherish some respect for the Piedmontese troops. The fight lasted from eight o'clock in the morning till four in the afternoon. The Piedmontese performed prodigies of bravery; they defended step by step all their positions, and retired facing the enemy, whom they never allowed for a single instant to break their ranks. Gen. Gyulai commanded the Austrians in person at the late battles of Buffalora, Turbigo and Magenta.

GENERAL CLAM-GALLAS.

Gen. Clam-Gallas, whose presence at the battle of Magenta is reported, was the chief who commanded the Austrian reinforcement of 50,000 men, who effected a march from Bohemia through Bavaria, and entered Lombardy by passes of the Tyrol in time to support the Austrians at Magenta. The Passage of his troops through the neutral territory of Bavaria, it may be remembered, gave raise to much excitement in Germany, and was the cause of some angry debate recently in the Frankfort Diet. Of the antecedents of Clam-Gallas we know little, but the curious fact is related of him, that he brought with him, on his hasty march through the Tyrol, a splendid stud of twenty pure Arabian horses.

HORRIBLE MURDER AND SUICIDE.—About eight miles from Milwaukee, on the Howell and Kilbourn roads, a terrible tragedy occurred on the 9th inst. ADAM RETTIG, a respectable farmer, who had a well stocked farm of 80 acres, and had by his industry accumulated some $12,000, became the murderer of his wife and himself. He was half-brother of MATHIAS STEIN, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Milwaukee, but of late years exhibited much eccentricity on the subject of his wife's fidelity, until it is supposed to have worked him into monomania, for she is said to have been an excellent woman.

In the evening of the 9th, between six and seven o'clock, he sent the two sons away to a neighbor's on some errand, and at the same time directed his daughter to go out in the yard and milk the cows. No sooner had the children got away from the house, than he seized an axe, and while his wife's back was turned, (she attending to some household work at the time,) he dealt her a dreadful blow on the head, breaking in her skull, and knocking her senseless on the floor. While thus prostrate and bleeding before him, he placed the muzzle of a double barrelled pistol against her side and discharged it, the balls glancing against the rib bones passed up under the shoulder blade and came out at the top of her head! Not satisfied with this the wretched man then took a kettle of boiling water and poured it over her from head to foot while she still lived, and shrieked in tortures worse than death. This done, Rettig then went out to a smoke-house in his yard, and taking an old rifle which he had previously left there already loaded, with a long stick tied to the trigger, placed the muzzle under his chin, and blew his own brains out! And thus ended the bloody drama.

THE DEVASTATIONS OF WAR.—A writer near the seat of war in Italy, on the road to Casale, thus describes the scene around him:

The aspect of the country tells at once that the terrible game of war is going on. Not a farm-yard, not an out-house, not a shepherd's cot, not a cabin, is without its garrison. Here one sees a troop, there a company, further on a battalion. The red trowsers show themselves behind the hedges, bayonets glitter in the rice fields, arms stand piled along every pathway, the turbans of the Zouaves appear in the vineyards. Long files of soldiers are carrying sackfulls of rations, while others, with pickaxe and spade, are throwing up embankments. Nearer the town, the spectacle becomes one of heart-rending sadness. The plain is rich and fertile, but no one is there to gather in the harvest, not a farmer or peasant, or shepherd, or living being is at work among the corn, or vines, or crops of any kind. The farm houses are abandoned, and the villas deserted; the furniture of the empty houses has been carried off, and so have often even the doors and windows. Whole rows of enormous mulberry trees (so universal a feature in Piedmont) lie on the ground, cut off three or four feet from the soil, and converted into barricades or chevaux-de-frise. Such is the aspect of war on the actual field of its operations.

In the towns, the churches have been converted into barracks, especially for the cavalry to shelter the horses from the drenching rains. Going to see the Cathedral of Casale, the writer above quoted, found a couple of hundred horses neighing in the nave and aisles.

☞ In Austria, iron is reduced by grinding to a very fine powder and used as a medicine, it being found superior to the carbonates or oxyde of iron, which are much used by our physicians.

Pike's Peak.

Don't believe one word of the marvellous stories that are set afloat again about the vast abundance of gold at Pike's Peak. It was necessary for speculators to produce a reaction. The structures they had reared, villages, towns, and cities, were crumbling under them. The gold fields were being deserted. Death and desolation were reigning among those who were returning to the confines of civilization and plenty. The tide must be turned back. Such may be the basis of the new discoveries. It is an important fact that not a glimpse of all this untold wealth did not [illegible] before. It only manifested itself when despair was at its utmost. The thing looks suspicious. We advise all to wait. If there is the abundance of gold claimed to have been discovered, it will be impossible to remove it all or gather it all in a few months. Have a little patience and wait. There are enough there to ascertain whether there is room for more. Wait until preparations shall have been made to accommodate an army of miners. Make haste to the mines. Do not rush to Pike's Peak, stimulated by a new fever. Remember the hard dreams that have been enacted on the Plains. There is plenty of time, and he who moves considerately and prepared for every or any emergency, is much more likely to profit by the adventure, than the less fortunate who madly take the chances without sufficient preparation for disappointment.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE—ESTIMATED LOSS $30,000.—About twelve o'clock last night a fire was discovered issuing from the Spoke, Hub, Felloe and Wheel Manufactory of ADAM LOCHNACUS, a large brick and frame building situated about one mile east of the Blind Asylum, and west of the National Road. The alarm was given, and a large number of our citizens hurried to the scene, but were unable to be of service, as as the building, filled with seasoned and dressed lumber, was a mass of flame. The hook and ladder companies were on the ground early and assisted in tearing down the frame work, the object of which was to protect from the flames the large brick residence of Mr. LOCHNACUS, near by. The steam fire engine company not knowing where the fire was, drove out to the intersection of Seventh and Friend streets, when it returned, as owing to the scarcity of water in the vicinity of the conflagration it could have been of no benefit. Horses were sent into the city for the "Capital Engine," but when it arrived the flames were fast dying out.

The loss is estimated at $30,000, over which there is not one dollar of insurance. The fire was beyond doubt—in Mr. L's estimation—the work of an incendiary, and the fact that persons going out from the city saw a crowd of river vagrants and thieves emerging from the lane which led to the factory, would tend to show that they had been making it a place of resort.—[Fact, 30th inst.

THE COST OF WAR.—It is estimated that the Austrians, since their entry into Sardinia, have plundered the country and destroyed property to the extent of one hundred millions of dollars. This is, perhaps, an exaggeration, but the expense of the present war to Sardinia will be enormous. France and Austria have each over half a million of men under arms, and if we estimate the cost of each soldier at a dollar a day—and this is much less than the cost of the British army during the Crimean campaign—we have a daily expenditure for the two armies of one million dollars, or yearly expenditure of three hundred and sixty-five millions.

To this must be added the destruction of property by the contending armies, and the loss consequent upon the check given to a state of war imposes on all branches of useful and productive industry. Taking, therefore, everything into account, the cost to Europe of the present war, may reach the enormous sum of one thousand million of dollars. The war in Italy compels every state in Europe to arm, and no one can tell how soon they may all be invaded in the conflict.

The European States have, perhaps, over two thousand millions of dollars invested in war armaments and defenses, and from this investment no profit or benefit is derived. And if the three millions of men who are withdrawn from the fields and workshops of Europe to bear arms, were employed in agriculture and the mechanic arts, the yearly value of their labor would not be less than three hundred millions of dollars. Let those who talk of the glory of war, think of its fearful expenses, and its most fearful destruction of human life.—N. Y. Sun.

SUBSTITUTE FOR BEER WHISKEY.—The Apache Indians have a mode of making whisky which we do not commend as worthy of imitation, but it shows that the inventive genius to make a "big drunk" come is not confined alone to the refinement of civilization. According to the Arizonian:

"The corn is first soaked for twenty-four hours, a hole is then dug in the ground, generally in a wigwam, and some dry grass laid on the bottom; on this grass the corn is placed and a layer of grass over it. Four or five times a day warm water is sprinkled over the corn, and at night the family sleep on it to increase the warmth, and make the corn sprout quick. At the end of four or five days the corn is all sprouted, it is then dried and pounded fine, put in a kettle and boiled for five hours; when cool, it is mixed with sugar and flour, and left to ferment for twelve hours when it is ready for drinking. Although not rank to the taste, and fiery, its intoxicating power is very great, and when an Indian has a quart or two on board, he don't care a copper who is President of the United States."

ACCIDENT TO CAPT. SHERMAN.—The friends of the venerable Captain will regret to learn that a serious mishap befel him and his amiable lady on Sunday afternoon. They were just starting for a drive, and having seated themselves in the buggy the Capt. was about to step in himself when the horse frightened and started at full speed. The Capt. having the reins in his hands maintained his hold and was dragged a considerable distance over the boulders, fracturing and dislocating his hip joint. He was picked up and conveyed into the Montgomery House, where his wounds were properly dressed. Mrs. SHERMAN, although excessively frightened, sustained but little injury.

☞ The Auburn, Placer county, (Cal.) Herald relates that a Chinaman went into the banking house of Wells, Fargo & Co., at that place, one day last week, when the clerk in attendance had occasion to go into the vault, but kept an eye to the banking room at the same time. On looking around, he saw a piece of money moving off of a tray, and bearing a piece fall on the floor, he walked out, and going to the front of the counter, collared the Chinaman, who was carelessly looking around, apparently unconscious that anything had occurred. On examining him, it appeared that he carried a long cane pipe, upon the bowl of which he had stuck some wax, and standing at the counter with it, had no difficulty in reaching the [illegible] end to where the money lay, and applying it to the surface of a double eagle, was "snaking it home," but the wax did not stick tight enough, and the money fell to the floor, and the trick was exposed. Upon examining the fellow, a small bag was found upon him containing wax, such as he had used upon his pipe. He probably has heretofore performed the feat of legerdemain with success.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. SIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
[illegible]
[illegible]
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
ATTORNEY GENERAL,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES [illegible], of Harrison County.

"Popular Sovereignty Defined in the Cincinnati Platform."

The Cleveland "National Democrat" publishes without comment, from the Washington "Constitution," an article entitled "Popular Sovereignty Defined in the Cincinnati Platform," to which we cannot give our assent, because it sets out with a declaration which facts will not warrant. It is not difficult to perceive under the thin veil, an effort to place Mr. DOUGLAS and those who maintain similar views, in a false position. We quote the first sentence, notwithstanding the defiance of the rule laid down by Mr. BUCHANAN for short sentences, in which this very evident misrepresentation of the true principle of the self-styled Democrats is studiously set forth:

"The self-styled Democrats who contend that under and by virtue of the principle of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, the settlers of a Territory, from the moment of its organization, have the right to pass laws hostile to slavery, or to neglect to provide for its protection—in other words, the first handful of squatters may at any time, and no matter what their number, determine definitely the status of the Territory, and arrogate to themselves powers more unjust and more unconstitutional than the Missouri Compromise, without the form of legality—have overlooked or intentionally disregarded that part of the Democratic platform promulgated at Cincinnati in 1856 which refers to popular sovereignty, distorted its meaning, and distinctly points out the time when the inhabitants of a Territory may exercise it so far as concerns the adoption or prohibition of the institution of domestic slavery."

While our hand is in, we may as well make another extract:

"To assume that Congress has the power to prescribe the destinies and duties of future States is not a whit more opposed to popular sovereignty, in its true and legitimate sense, than it is to assume that the first squatters of a Territory can pass laws by which the citizens of every slave State in the Union would be practically excluded from that portion of the common property of all the States."

The "Constitution" begs the question, and shows itself an unworthy exponent of the principles of those to whom it is adverse; nor does it entitle itself to very great respect of those whom it would propitiate, from its manner of stating the proposition. It has not been assumed that "the first handful of squatters"—"the first squatters in a Territory can pass laws by which the citizens of every slave State in the Union would be excluded." Mr. DOUGLAS has asserted no such doctrine; nor is it asserted by those whose views coincide with his.—But what has been asserted, and we re-assert it, is that "although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty," the territories are "justly entitled to the right of self-government and the regulation of their domestic institutions," and that intervention by Congress or any other power, except as provided for by the Constitution, should be as futile and impotent as in the States. No territorial organization is provided for "a handful of squatters." It has not been proposed to invest "a handful of squatters" with legislative rights. When a territory is organized, with power to elect its own legislature, the territory should be held possessed of every power that can be exercised in a State, in the moulding and shaping their domestic institutions, subject alone to the Constitution of the United States, of which an unrepealed territory is one, and only wanting the formal introduction prescribed by the Constitution.

This is our understanding of Popular Sovereignty; and to deny to the people of a territory this power, is to hold them in a provincial condition, to rule and govern them, without representation and without allowing them a voice in the management of their own affairs.

The "Constitution" resorts to a subterfuge in its interpretation of the resolution of the Cincinnati Platform, which is at war with the whole spirit of the Platform, and at war with the rights of the people of Territory. The resolution declares the right of the people—the "actual residents"—"whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it to form a constitution with or without domestic slavery," and the "Constitution" says:

"Language cannot be clearer or more forcible than the above in the assertion of the principle that when the people of a Territory are sufficiently numerous to entitle them to ask admission into the Union as a State, and when they frame their Constitution for that purpose, they have the inalienable right, without any interference or restriction on the part of Congress, to determine, in that instrument whether they will or will not permit slavery."

Of course they can, and we have yet to see the Democrat who contends they have not. It is an "inalienable right," but wherein does this deny to the people of a Territory, after it shall have been duly organized, and elected its Legislature, to pass such laws as they may require for their government, before they undertake to form a Constitution and apply for admission as a State? When Mr. BUCHANAN accepted the Cincinnati Platform as his chart, what did he mean by saying that "the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits?" Why did he contend for the principle that the people of a territory should be left "perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way?" Does this pin the thing down to the single point of time when they are justified in population to make a Constitution and resolve themselves into a State? Does it embrace merely the intervening period between the formation of a Constitution and admission as a State? The proposition is absurd upon its face.

The "Constitution" falls into the solecism that the territorial legislature can have no power over the subject because its power are all derived from Congress, and therefore it cannot exercise a power which the authority by which it was created does not possess.

Then are not the people represented in the territorial legislature. Then are they to have no voice in their own government. Then it is denied that the people of a territory have any rights, but are mere vassals to be controlled by Congress by its enactments, without a word for themselves.

We ask is this Democratic doctrine? Such is the interpretation by the "Constitution"—such we take is the interpretation of the "National Democrat," the northern Ohio organ, because it endorses the interpretation by giving it to its readers without comment, with the prestige of the Administration organ at Washington—and such is the interpretation of the "Statesman," the central Ohio organ, because it [illegible] the insinuation upon the [illegible], and [illegible] the ultimate intent, and says nothing.

We cannot forbear to [illegible] the [illegible] of this proposition, which again disregards President Buchanan's injunction against long sentences. After this, it is not wonderful that the "Constitution" construes the re-assertion of the true principles of Popular Sovereignty and Congressional non-intervention by Mr. DOUGLAS into an attack upon the premises of the Charleston Convention. It says, to those who believe the people of a territory have the right of self-government as have those of the States:

"If these persons [illegible] of Popular Sovereignty [illegible] information they will agree with the masses of the Democratic party who maintain that the inhabitants of a Territory have the power to settle the slavery question at the time of the formation of the incipient State, and not before. But if they have originated their peculiar theory for the mischievous purpose of creating strife in the ranks of the Democratic party, and subserving their own selfish interests, we cannot expect that truth will convert them, nor can we wish them any severer or more ignominious punishment than the contempt with which the intelligent masses of the people will treat them and their odious doctrines, and the devotion with which the great Democratic party will adhere to the constitutional doctrine of Popular Sovereignty, as understood by the people at the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act as defined in the Cincinnati platform, and as interpreted by President Buchanan in his letter of acceptance and inaugural address."

Could human impudence go further? Is it not time for the Democratic press to speak out? Are we to permit such pernicious doctrines that must lead directly into Congressional intervention to be fastened upon our party platform, by indifference, by collusion, by silence? The interpretation of the Cincinnati Platform and the principles of the Democratic party by the Washington "Constitution" would not hold with the Democracy of Ohio an instant. It cannot be viewed in any other light than as a piece of bold and reckless impudence, untenable, without foundation, and at war with "the constitutional doctrine of popular sovereignty, as understood by the people at the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska act, as defined in the Cincinnati Platform, and as interrupted by President BUCHANAN in his letter of acceptance and Inaugural Address."

A Plain Talk to Democrats.

It has not been the wish as has been intimated, but very far from the intention of this paper, to create any division of sentiment, or difference of action, on State or National issues, between the friends of Mr. DOUGLAS, and those who prefer the fortunes of the Administration. We regard all as Democrats who stand upon the Cincinnati Platform, no matter whether they prefer Mr. DOUGLAS or any body else. Every one is entitled to his preference, and every one is entitled to express that preference. It is not a very heinous offense to prefer one individual to another; nor is the expression of such preference inflicting a serious injury, nor can it be construed into an attack, upon the one not preferred. It is particularly Democratic to speak freely, and not keep the tongue tied respecting the merits of men or the policy of measures.—Nor is it necessary that to exalt a man, a presumed rival must be disparaged. To say that we prefer Mr. DOUGLAS for the Presidency does not argue that we are hostile to all other Democrats. It will be time enough to take us to task when we assail either the record or the personnel of distinguished Democrats.

When the "National Democrat" was started a few months since at Cleveland, there was no outcry at the presumption of its founders, although there was a Democratic paper in that place, which probably its editor, who had been turned out of the Post Office for being friendly to Mr. DOUGLAS, thought was enough. There are others cities, (Chicago for one,) where there was already an established Democratic press, and yet it was not deemed a piece of impudence and effrontery to commence another. But circumstances alter cases. We are regarded by some very disinterested individuals, as imprudent, if not impudent, to publish the PEOPLE'S PRESS, because forsooth "another Democratic paper was not wanted at Columbus;" and our "intentions" in commencing the publication have been construed into "petty animosities." We are told, too, that we are no friend to Mr. DOUGLAS, and that our efforts are calculated to do his cause harm! Now, no friend of Mr. DOUGLAS ever thought or said so. They only could arrive at such perverted conclusion, who are content that the name of Mr. DOUGLAS should never be mentioned, but take its chances, against repeated false and uncontradicted reports and rumors relative to his position. We are not [illegible]. We know that such silence is dangerous to any politician, because it augurs him out of the ring, laid on the shelf, passed by as a "dead cock in the pit," as having

"Reach'd the highest point of all his greatness."

To begin to disparage him is the next step, and there are those who would have flung up their caps for Mr. DOUGLAS a year ago, beginning to gnaw like mice at his reputation—yes, here, even in Ohio, where he has so many friends. It was, (if our small voice could do so,) to prevent those very small mice from growing into large ones, and inflicting real injury, that we established the PEOPLE'S PRESS, and looked to the people for support. When we prove derelict to Democracy, it will be when Democracy shall have become so demoralized and denationalized, that it will emit an odor attributed by Wade to the Whig party—what with the Cincinnati Platform for a guide and Mr. DOUGLAS for a champion, it never can be.

We did not expect to please everybody. In fact, we expected to cause some displeasure, because we do not pursue the beaten track of selfishness, or bow the neck in submissive pliancy to those who aspire to control and direct the Democracy of Ohio. We cannot regard them as more than fallible men, some of them not overscrupulous in the means of attaining their selfish ends. If they had the power, they would sell the Democracy of Ohio to-morrow, if thereby they "put money in their purse." They hate us because we are frank and honest, and are not to be intimidated. We speak our opinions, and warn our party of dangers into which it may be unconsciously led. We have always sought the union and harmony of the Democratic party; and seek it now, when we endeavor to show that the principles maintained by Mr DOUGLAS, are those on which the Democratic party can alone harmoniously and successfully stand. We would not have the people in the hands of politicians, but, to take the reins in their own hands. They are with Mr. DOUGLAS, in sentiment and heart, but if they are never to hear of him, unless to his disparagement, might they not be persuaded that he had left them, had gone astray, or was not worth their support?—As strange things have happened; but as long as we can give them an unmuzzled PRESS, it shall not happen through any neglect or acquiescence of ours.

JUDGE GHOLSON.—The Cincinnati Press of last week, in speaking of a recent opinion of Judge Gholson, remarks:

Mr. Gholson's opinion is that of a rigid follower of precedents and literal construction.—He is not remarkable for his power over the spirit of the law; he sticks close to the book where he finds enough to satisfy him. A case cripples his mind, if an authority precludes vigorous investigation. The reason of the rule is hardly ever as sacred to a lawyer's conscience as the rule itself; and Mr. Gholson, although eminent in his profession, master of learning, and familiar with its adjudications, besides being most capable of giving his opinions in a clear and sententious form, is still a lawyer advising his clients and earning his fees. We are not satisfied with that advice, and we think that one effect of restoring him to the Bench will be to shake his confidence in this last professional effort.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—At Cincinnati, the turnkey of the City Prison, detecting a man named Henry Francis in the act of passing liquor to the prisoners, arrested him, and Judge Lowe fined him ten dollars and costs, and committed him to the city prison for three days. It would be well if the example were followed every where.

Democratic Candidate for Supreme Judge

We are told that the matter has been definitely settled, and that Judge WHITMAN remains a candidate, notwithstanding the voluntary declaration of the Cincinnati Enquirer that he would withdraw in favor of Judge SWAN.

We do not perceive how any such arrangement could possibly be made, unless Judge WHITMAN was reluctant to accept the honor intended him by the State Democratic Convention, and the Democratic party were willing to go into the State canvass with a mutilated ticket. We believe that it was the wish of many who are solicitous to reinstate Judge SWAN upon the bench, that the place should have been left open—without a nomination, that they might unite with the Democratic party in the election of Judge, but then there was no certainty of their voting the whole Democratic ticket. If it were merely to reinstate Judge SWAN, unless a bargain could have been consummated, which none were authorized to do, we cannot perceive what advantage would have resulted to the Democratic ticket, however much his friends may have desired the election of the Judge who had been supplanted by the Republicans. It was generally conceded that no nomination could have been made, if Judge WHITMAN had declined, and the placing of Judge SWAN's name upon the ticket would have been merely by tacit consent of the parties—a plan that might have succeeded, but very much in the way of party organization; for it would have been discovered by the opposition that there were conflicting sentiments upon the ticket, upon important and radical questions, which they would not have been slow to point out.

The two parties are now arrayed, like armies in the field, with their own officers in command. There may or may not be a separate ticket for Judge SWAN, as many of his friends wish to vote for him any how. If they really desire to defeat the nomination which supplanted him, they will not so throw their votes as to be useless. But that is their lookout. We should have been gratified to see any honorable arrangement by which Judge SWAN would have been re-elected, but that did not blind us to the difficulties in the way.—[Fact.

We take the foregoing from the "Daily Fact," and may add that the suggestion of Judge WHITMAN's withdrawal was a very nicely executed piece of work, in which neither he nor Judge Swan was consulted. The appearance about the same time, not to say simultaneously, of the same thing in a New York paper, as well as one at Washington, with its appearance in a leading paper at home, had something very striking about it; and it is not astonishing that a number of Democratic papers in the State were ready, if they expressed no anxiety, to fall in with the arrangement.

We are glad that the object was not accomplished. While it would have shown, (what we hope will always be the case,) that the Democratic party have a due respect for an intelligent, firm and upright Judge, who is not to be swerved from his duty by party pressure; and are ready to forego the pleasure of elevating to their highest bench one of their own true, unflinching, tried political friends, in defense of the independence of the Judiciary, the arrangement would have subjected them and all concerned to much animadversion, and a misinterpretation of motive that might have caused disaffection. We do not say it would have been disastrous, because we believe firmly that Judge SWAN would not only have been triumphantly elected, but that the whole ticket would have been elected. But our confidence in the election of the Democratic ticket is not shaken. It is conceded that Judge WHITMAN is a capable jurist, and had an experience on the Common Pleas Bench, where he acquitted himself to the praise of all for the clearness, promptitude and correctness with which he dispatched the business of his Courts, that augurs most favorably for the satisfaction he will give in the more elevated sphere to which he has been named.

When the State Democratic Convention nominated Judge WHITMAN as candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court, he was invested with their full confidence, and to have withdrawn, unless under the most imperative circumstances, would have been an acquiescence and connivance on his part, not very complimentary to the Democratic body from whom he received his nomination. At first sight we did not credit his withdrawal. He had no means of returning the trust to those from whom he received it, and his immediate friends, even if he had consented, were unwilling that he should make the sacrifice. The "Ohio Eagle," published at Lancaster, where Judge WHITMAN resides, has the following article on the subject:

JUDGE WHITMAN.—An article in the Cincinnati "Enquirer," a few days ago, stating that Judge Whitman desired to withdraw from the State ticket, in order that Judge Swan might be taken up by the Democrats and run on their ticket for Supreme Judge, astounded everybody here, and no one more than Judge Whitman himself. Such an announcement was utterly without authority, and did Judge W. great injustice. He never for one moment entertained such a thought.

The Democracy of the State have honored him with a place on their ticket, and there he intends his name to stand until victory or honorable defeat shall be the issue of the contest. If the many friends of Judge Swan, who have bitterly felt the indignity done him, and who would resent the blow struck at an independent judiciary, desire to give expression and effect to their just indignation, it can best be done by assisting in the election of an able, fearless, upright man, such as our candidate, Judge Whitman.

It would be too late to talk of his withdrawal from the canvass, thereby taking a step towards disorganization, and insuring the success of a hitherto respected man, who had dishonored himself by becoming the instrument of bad men and madmen in their shameful attempt to awe and control the judiciary of the State. We do not believe the the friends of Judge Swan have had any idea of bringing him forward as a Democratic candidate, and we are at a loss to understand what mistaken views have governed the minds of the persons who first suggested so futile and incongruous a project. Surely they little understand Judge Whitman, or know what stuff he is made of, to conceive the thought that he would falter in the beginning of a battle to be fiercely fought to the bitter end with a hated and dangerous foe. He has waged a long contest with the enemies of the Democracy, has kept the faith, and in weal or woe has claimed no higher honor than to share the common fate, whether good or bad, of his party.

The Democracy of the State can rest assured that he will be with them and of them, now and henceforth, and that wherever their banner waves in the coming contest, his name will be inscribed upon it, and his hand will sustain it.

The "Eagle" is a staunch, unwavering Democratic paper, (notwithstanding it fell under the displeasure of the "Statesman,") and upholds the true interests of the party. What it says of "a step towards disorganization" is correct; and so will it be viewed by all candid men, who examine the subject in all of its bearings.

And the same may be said of its remarks relative to the course of the friends of Judge SWAN. Their chief objection to the person who superseded him in the Republican nomination, must be in the mode and character and terms of that nomination, and his ready acceptance of it under the circumstances. If they would have voted for Judge SWAN against him, they should not be reluctant to vote for a capable and honorable jurist against him, who having been selected for the important post by his party, could not consistently retire, merely to gratify their wishes.

THE WRONG WADE.—It has been said that B. F. Wade did not make that speech attributed to him, to the ladies of Ashtabula, in which the proposition was made to march to Cleveland and vi et armis liberate the Oberlin rioters; but that it was a hot-headed nephew who has no more discretion than his uncle. The former, it was, who said, "If the Supreme Court of Ohio will not grant the habeas corpus, the people of the Western Reserve must grant it—sword in hand if need be." We make the correction, with the assurance that it was not Senator Wade, but his nephew; but, at the same time, we are very confident Senator Wade has said things equally bad, and thought things a deuced sight worse, if that were possible.

The Interests of White Men.

The Republicans are the only true friends of the free white, laboring man. They want the territories kept free, as Nature and the Constitution designed they should be for the benefit of white men, who, with brave hearts and strong arms, are seeking their fortunes in the West, where free laborers will not have to work side by side with slaves. The Democracy want the territories for the benefit of slaveholders and their "niggers," and they want Cuba, that they may have more room for their "niggers."—They would degrade free labor and exclude it from all the territories, by placing it on a level with slave labor. That the Democratic party is the foe of the poor man is proved by the fact, that they have time and again defeated the Homestead Bill in Congress, which was designed to give free homes to actual settlers—a measure which the Republicans cordially endorse.—[Tiffin Tribune.

Now, if any editor, who ordinarily addresses himself to "clap trap," to gull his readers, can look at that paragraph without blushing up to the ears to think what he has done, and of what he been guilty, it will be because he has none! The man who wrote it must be ready to creep through the smallest kind of hole even at self-contemplation. If any Democrat ever contemplated appearing smart by any such straining after notoriety, or desired to make capital by such shallow device, let him reflect how mean it must make a man feel, if he have feeling, when communing with his own conscience, and scorn such stooping from the high and respectable sphere of an editor to such despicable and contemptible demagoguery.

It would be charity to attribute it to ignorance and so we do, when we hear any one attempt such an argument; but there is that which shows design, and does not shrink from imposition, provided there be a chance of its success.

Let us examine it categorically.

"The Republicans are the only true friends of the free white, laboring man."

Is this true? We shall see by what follows:

"They want the territories kept free, as Nature and the Constitution divined they should be for the benefit of white men, who, with brave hearts and strong arms, are seeking their fortunes in the West, where free laborers will not have to work side by side with slaves."

Do they not want the territories "kept free" for the negro too, as well as the white man, or else why refuse to prevent him from putting his foot upon the soil? Why reject the proposition to keep out the negro altogether? In the free admission of negroes, do they not open the way for him "to work side by side" with the white laborer? What argument was used by northern politicians, Republican politicians, for opposing the admission of free territory, but that negroes were excluded, and that in the States they represented, negroes were recognized as citizens, and they challenged the constitutionality of any such prohibitory principle?

But we are told that "the Democracy want the territories for the benefit of slaveholders and their 'niggers.'" When did the Democracy ever afford ground for such accusation? They avow as a sacred principle, from which they will not swerve, that the domestic institutions of the territories shall be left to the people of the territories, to determine for themselves whether they will have "niggers" or not. They accord the right to the people of the territories to say whether they are willing to permit free negroes to compete with white labor on their soil, or, as is most likely, be a burden and source of annoyance there. To this we understand the Republicans to object decidedly.

And we are told that the Democracy "want Cuba that they may have more room for their 'niggers.'" Was there ever anything more preposterous or absurd? Are we to understand that the Republicans do not want Cuba? Will they make that issue? The Democracy desire the annexation of Cuba, with its untold wealth and resources, to prevent it from falling into the hands of a more powerful nation than Spain—because it lies contiguous to our southern coast, and is the key to the Gulf of Mexico, commanding the avenues to the commerce of the South and Great West—because its people are groaning beneath the heel of despotism and would be free—because it would add to our national wealth and augment our protection of the great staples that are not only luxuries, but have become necessaries of life—because instead of a great rival to our sugar interest, we should add to that interest a productive region greater than all we at present possess—because under the benign laws of our Government, its industry would be increased, its productiveness enhanced, and the amount of human happiness augmented. What has been shown to be untrue and a mere reckless assertion, with regard to other charges, holds good as to "the Homestead bill." That the Democratic party has always been friendly and just to the poor man, is traced in its every act since the formation of the party, which is almost coeval with the government. It was a former boast of its opponents that they had "all the decency," and that the Democratic party was for the most part composed of "the tag-rag-and-bobtail" of community.

The idea of a "Homestead bill" is of Democratic origin. It has been sought to provide a fair and honest measure of which the upright and industrious, however poor, might avail themselves. They have not offered a bribe to the poor man to catch his vote. They have not tempted him with a bait to lure him from allegiance to his own self-respect. They have not promised him what they meant not to perform. They have so conducted the policy of the public lands as to place within the reach of honest industry the securing of a home. They have obeyed the Constitution and laws in their enlightened policy, and what they have done has "stood the test of scrutiny and time."

But when the Republicans had the majority, when power was in their hands, what became of their loud and empty promises? We see no traces of their fulfillment on the statute book. They are valiant in what they will do, but what have they done? We ask the "poor man," (if he must be invoked,) to examine and answer.

They have kept up the constant cry of "nigger," have bent all their energies to advance him to the status of the white man, have stood in the way of useful enactments to prevent the accumulation of a black population in your midst, which the statistics show to be the very worst kind of population [illegible]; and now are making a terrible fuss because the Democracy have said negroes and those of visible African descent, shall not jostle the white man from the polls.

☞ Mr. Douglas is reported to have said at the depot on Saturday evening last, that if he got the Charleston nomination he would carry nearly all the Northern States. He had been told that he could not get his native State, Vermont, but he would not credit it. He had been there; and the people talked differently. He [illegible] despair of Vermont, even. At that time the Little Giant was not aware that the "Douglas men" in that State had succeeded in securing the nominees to the Charleston convention. That indicates that his chances, in event of his nomination for the Presidency, would not be hopeless in Vermont.—[Dayton Empire.

There is a manifest tendency to Mr. DOUGLAS displayed in every mail that reaches us, and which cannot be suppressed. The ball will continue to roll until it acquires the force of an avalanche. He stands upon a principle that cannot be shaken, and his fortress is impregnable.—His chances for the Presidency grow brighter every day, and every Democratic eye must, soon or late, turn to him as the man for the crisis of 1860.

SENSIBLE TALK.—The Hopkinsville (Ky.,) Press, a sensible Democratic paper, holds the following very judicious position, which it were well if it were more considered by those who move in a more extended sphere:

"While we are for protecting the interests of the South by all constitutional means, when the emergency arises, yet, as it has not arisen, the democratic press of Kentucky should cease to wrangle about a mere abstract question, which probably never may be a practical one."

Naturalization—Duty of the Government.

We publish an able and interesting article on Naturalization and the obligations of our Government, from the Chicago "Times," which it will be seen, agrees in every particular with the views we had already expressed upon the subject.

There is one point to which we may advert again with propriety. We allude to the oath of naturalization. How can an applicant for naturalization papers legitimately take that oath, by which, while he declares allegiance to this country, he forswears all allegiance to every king or potentate whatever, and especially to the Government he has left, if he, notwithstanding his oath, still owes allegiance to his own native country, and will be subject to bear arms, should he, as in the case of Rome, return to his native country? Allegiance is defined to be the natural obligation to the country of one's nativity.—But we hold that this natural obligation is cancelled by naturalization, or whence the term?—Naturalization confers upon the foreign-born, the rights, privileges and immunities of a native citizen.—Naturalization, therefore, nullifies, blots out, extinguishes former allegiance. There is no distinction permissible save the specifications of the National Constitution. It is not the mere right to exercise the elective franchise which naturalization confers, but the right to the protection of the Government, wherever he may be, just as if he had been born here. No matter what claim may be raised to his allegiance by a foreign Government, he has parted with it all, for the privilege of the protection of the Government he has adopted.

Say, as is the case of Prussia, all of whose citizens owe allegiance by service in her army, a naturalized American citizen depending upon the protection of his Government, is forced in the army, what is the obligation of our Government? First, last and all the time, we say, to interpose for his liberation just as much as if he were a native of the United States.

Besides, to take the ground which is by some others maintained, as well as by the Secretary of State, that where a man has actually been in the army, or has been called into it, he still owes service, to his native Government, despite his oath of allegiance to this country, would he not be amenable to be shot as a deserter, for not having fulfilled his term of service? It is not certain that martial law would be so lax as to drive him into the army to fulfill that term, owing allegiance to this country and claiming to be a citizen of this country with all the rights of such citizen. The penalty of desertion into which absenteeism would be construed, would be death. Such furloughs are not recognized, without leave, too, so to enable a Prussian or a Frenchman to become a citizen of the United States. The construction, therefore, of the Secretary of State would involve the death penalty.

We hope to see this matter overhauled by the next Congress, and that the solemn guaranty of protection be thrown around all who are found worthy to be admitted to American citizenship—that a different interpretation of the naturalization law will be announced—that the United States will guard the rights of her citizens wherever they may be.

Hon. S. A. Douglas and the Presidency.

The letter of Mr. DOUGLAS, although it contains nothing new, or that was not previously known, (especially to his friends) seems to have somewhat excited the magnates of the eastern press, especially those of New York, who are disposed to consider it of considerable importance, although their co-laborers here manage to let it slip without recognition. Simultaneously the Tribune, Times, Evening Post, Commercial Advertiser—all speak out. The first named, thinks DOUGLAS the strongest man in the ranks, that "his letter is frank, manly and intelligible," but he has no chance! The Post thinks it only looks bold. The Times thinks "the doctrines presented by Mr. DOUGLAS are the last hope of the Democracy for a National triumph," and the Commercial Advertiser thinks "had Mr. DOUGLAS always spoken with the same frankness and firmness, he would ere this have won a popular respect and confidence that would have made his prospects for the Presidency brighter than those of any Democratic competitor."

If our cotemporaries of the Statesman and State Journal do not let their readers know what they think, there may be some danger of their making up their minds that DOUGLAS, as the Cincinnati Commercial and Statesman, and divers other papers, suggested last year, is just the man for the party of progress and the crisis.

The Statesman has hardly had time to read DOUGLAS's letter, its editor having been occupied in ferrying across the Ohio river and quarreling with the Zanesville Aurora, a Democratic paper, against which he owes some grudge; but for the State Journal there is no excuse; for the Statesman charges it with having near half-a-dozen editors, while its own political and grammatical blunders emanate but from one!

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The friends of Judge Douglas here are in possession of the following letter explaining his position on the subject of the Presidency:

"WASHINGTON, June 22, 1859.

"MY DEAR SIR:—I have received your letter inquiring whether my friends are at liberty to present my name to the Charleston Convention for the Presidential nomination. Before this question can be finally determined, it will be necessary to understand distinctly upon what issues the canvass is to be conducted.

"If, as I have full faith they will, the democratic party shall determine in the Presidential election of 1860, to adhere to the principles embodied in the compromise measures of 1850, and ratified by the people in the Presidential election of 1852, and reaffirmed in the Kansas Nebraska act of 1854, and incorporated into the Cincinnati platform in 1856, as expounded by Mr. Buchanan in his letter accepting the nomination and approved by the people in his election—in that event, my friends will be at liberty to present my name to the Convention, if they see proper to do so. If on the contrary, it shall become the policy of the democratic party, which I cannot anticipate, to repudiate these, their time honored principles, on which we have achieved so many patriotic triumphs, in lieu of them the Convention shall interpolate into the creed of the party such new issues as their revival of the African Slave Trade, or a Congressional Slave Code for the territories, or the doctrine that the Constitution of the United States either establishes or prohibits slavery in the territories beyond the power of the people legally to control it, as other property, it is due to candor to say that in such an event I could not accept the nomination if tendered to me.

"Trusting that this answer will be deemed sufficiently explicit, I am, very respectfully, your friend,

[Signed] "S. A. DOUGLAS."

Western Correspondence.

We publish this week a letter from an esteemed friend, who has "seen the elephant" at Pike's Peak, and is steering by the compass and overland route to Oregon and Washington Territory. He was perfectly satisfied with his brief experience at the "diggins," denounces the "speculators" who got up the "bubble," and admonishes his friends against being misled by any further deception. His first letter is dated in June, and comes to us by way of Columbus, N. T., from which place it was forwarded on the 18th inst. We are promised a continuance of his favors as he progresses to the setting sun, and anticipate much entertainment from his observations on the route. He is an intelligent and energetic gentleman, and what he "sets down" may be appreciated as entirely reliable.

☞ The Louisville Courier mentions the organization of a new K. N. Association called "United Sons of America."

Eyes Right!

The Toledo Times, which is a truly independent paper, and cannot properly be classed with the press of either party, but independently "hoeing its own row," has the following article, which is worthy of consideration by those who have their country's welfare at heart:

HAVE WE A DEMOCRATIC PARTY?—Such is the heading of an article in the last State "Journal" that has come to hand—at the present time, a query of considerable importance. It is patent that we have a dyed-in-the-wool Abolition party,—a party that is pushing its lines up to a point which threatens a sundering of the ties of Union which have so long existed between the States of this confederacy.

At such a time it is a question of no small moment whether we have a party among us of sufficient power to resist the encroachments that are being made upon Constitutional liberty. When the point is distinctly made by the dominant party of the State of overslaughing its judiciary, because it will not bend itself to the work of establishing the voting in town meetings on the Western Reserve, that the Constitution of the United States is unconstitutional, erecting the same into law—then it becomes the duty of conservative men and patriots to look well to their ways and treat the emergency of the case like men.

In this country, all such questions of political economy are met by the voters voting their votes. It is the argument of "dernier resort," which the people have always used to effect political reforms whereby the will of the people has passed into law. If the citizens of Ohio are ready to see the darkening cloud of niggerism which is now considerably larger than a "man's hand" sweep the State, they have but to remain supine and indifferent.

For ourselves, speaking but for ourselves, regarding the issue embodied in the present State canvass, we say frankly that we are glad, for once, that we have a "Democratic party" among us, and if conservative men look at the real and true interests of the State, as we aim to do, they too will have reason to feel thankful that on one single point there is a chance to silence fanaticism. We shall vote to elect an unpledged and unbiassed Judge of the Supreme Court, as against the attempted menace of the judiciary, which is the object of the dominant party to effect and sustain.

Western Correspondence—No. I.

FORT KEARNEY, N. T., June 1859.

As the great excitement of the Pike's Peak gold mines has now about worn itself out, and the victims thereof left once more to enjoy the benefit of a sober and tranquil thought, it behooves me in behalf of justice and in defense of my own right, who with thousands of others have been so unfortunate as to be designated a "Pike's Peaker," to lay before the public a few items relative to this, the greatest of all humbugs. That the Pike's Peak gold mines are a humbug no reasonable person for a moment will deny. The thousands, who have been to the mines and returned, unanimously declare that gold does not exist in paying quantities—thus fully corroborating the statement that "the whole thing was premeditated and created for a speculation by the Missouri river traders." Already the lives of some of these base speculators have paid the penalty of their transgression. But notwithstanding the awful death of their fellow-deceivers, we yet find some false and daring demagogues, who declare the mines to be good. Every reader of the "Press" and I may say seven-eighths of the entire grown population of the United States, have in possession satisfactory and adequate proof that the whole affair, is a grand speculating scheme. The man who created and kept up this humbug deserve an appellation indicative of a more degraded act than man has ever yet received. My trip up the Platte was at a time that afforded me an opportunity of seeing the emigration and excitement at its most wild and rabid state.

At this time of writing, the emigration is greatly diminished and the excitement nearly subsided. The emigration to Oregon and California is very great. The weather is cool and very stormy. I shall leave in the morning, bound for the Columbia river, and will write you again when I arrive at Fort Hall. Till then I remain as ever, yours,

R. E. S.

CHARLES W. BLAIR, Esq.—The Lecompton "National Democrat" of the 16th inst., says:

Charles W. Blair, son-in-law of Gov. Medary, arrived in our city last evening, accompanied by his family. Mr. Blair is a lawyer by profession, and has come to this Territory with the intention of making it his home. We wish him prosperity.

Ohio will lose one of her cleverest, most honorable and intelligent sons; but then the young giant of the Far West that is to be, will be the gainer by our loss. We wish "Charley" and his "bonnie Kate" all happiness and prosperity; and that their new home may be as cheerful and delightful as the scene of domestic tranquility and boundless hospitality they left.—Mr. BLAIR will make his mark in Kansas. A gentleman of taste and refined cultivation, he will have to lay aside for the present, many of those literary pleasures which have solaced leisure hours, for the rough-and-tumble of his profession, in which he is bound to take an eminent position. We congratulate Gov. MEDARY upon this choice of his son-in-law, for now home is drawn nearer by the presence of the most affectionate of daughters.

CHASE COUNTY, KANSAS.—We learn from the Kansas "Press," published at Cottonwood Falls, by S. N. Wood, Esq., that the National Democratic ticket for members of the Constitutional Convention did not receive a single vote in Chase county. About one hundred votes were polled, and the "Press" says the census when taken will show two hundred votes in the county.

Our neighbor of the State Journal affects to feel surprise at this result, which is natural enough. People that would so name their county would be very apt to follow the proclivities of him they intended to honor. It is to be presumed, however, that out of the other hundred that did not think it worth while to vote, there were a few national Democrats—otherwise the "stuffing" may have not been all done by the latter, who are charged with putting up the "keerds" at Leavenworth.

OPINION OF A PHILADELPHIA LAWYER.—The Philadelphia Press, in speaking of the letter of Gen. Cass to Mr. LeClerc, of Tennessee, says:

One of the ablest lawyers in Philadelphia, in a private note to the editor of this Journal, says: "I always understood the American political rule to be that all allegiance to foreign potentates and powers would be totally renounced by adopted citizens, and that it always was the boast of our party that we had made that naturalization law, and that we would maintain it and see it respected." He adds: "I say this, of course, not in behalf of naturalized citizens, but in behalf of every American, and especially of those who, if Gen. Cass' doctrine be true, can be re-captured, and kept from their American wives and children, because once on a time they had been subjects of King Bomba, or some other miserable despot in the Old World."

Such is the general expression of opinion from every person who speaks at all. So far as we have seen, the special organs do not dare either to commend or censure this withdrawal of the protection of the government from a large number of American citizens.

PRESSED INTO WAR SERVICE.—The Indianapolis "Journal" says that Mr. Frederick Rusch, of that city, a well known and prosperous produce dealer, who went to Europe some six or eight weeks since, on a visit to his old home and friends, was immediately claimed as a conscript, forced into the army, and is now held there to serve his three years as a Prussian soldier.

Then, according to the rule prescribed by our Government, there is no salvation for him until his term of service shall have expired, but to fight it out. "Well-known and prosperous produce dealers" should be cautious, and take themselves to a better market.

DOUGLAS IN NEW ENGLAND.—It is more than probable that the delegates to the Charleston Convention from the New England States will be in favor of the nomination of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS—first, last and always. Vermont has spoken that way of herself, and Maine and Massachusetts will ere long follow.

A Republican Opinion of Negroes and Foreign-Born Citizens.

We are not astonished that the Massachusetts amendment subjecting naturalized citizens to two years probation, before invested with the right of suffrage, should be acceptable to such politicians as the editor of the Cleveland Herald, to whom the following sentiments are attributed:

"We unhesitatingly aver that seven-tenths of the foreigners in our land, who bow in obedience to the will of the Pope of Rome, are not as intelligent as the full-blooded Africans of our State—we will not include the part bloods.—Yet, should a move be made to curtail the naturalization laws even to extending the residence of the most illiterate, ignorant foreigner that lands on our shores, such a din would be raised by the Democrats as would deafen the State."

Here is an admission that the rights of the foreigners are not only respected by the Democracy, but that they are guarded by them. Why should the naturalization law be extended as to time? Are not five years sufficient for "the most illiterate, ignorant foreigner that lands on our shores," if you please, to acquire a knowledge of our language, our customs, as much as is necessary for him to know of the operation of our government? We are astonished at the Herald's proclivity to "the nigger," but there is no accounting for tastes, you know.

From the Chicago Times.

An Improving Public Sentiment.

We alluded yesterday to the fact that at the South the newspapers are beginning to discuss the question of the next Presidency with a great deal of freedom. We also pointed out the cause of this discussion, and stated its effects as indicated in the changing tone of the Southern press. There is no doubt whatever that it is now evident to the sagacious politicians of that section of the Union—as it has long been to us—that if they persist in the foolish attempt to substitute for the plainest Democratic tenet in our platform the most anti-Democratic dogma that can possibly be conceived, namely, intervention for protection of slavery in the territories, that the Democratic party North will be ruined, and the South left to rely on Abolitionists to protect them in their constitutional rights. Once let this be understood—and a child can understand it—by the masses in the slaveholding States, and we shall have no further trouble on that head. As a matter of sectional interest, the effort to have Congress intervene to establish and protect slavery in the territories would be disastrous. There is no way Congress could do this effectually; and there would be no end to troublesome litigation. As a question of policy, it would be still worse. In case the friends of a slave code should engraft that as a plank (of which there is no danger) upon the Democratic platform—what would be the result? Is any man in the South so insane as to suppose that a Congress could ever be elected that would enact a slave code? The only effect would be to defeat the Democratic party in the nation—for it is as certain, in that case, to be killed at the South as at the North. No; a policy so suicidal will not be insisted on by any party of respectable numbers in any Southern State. On the contrary, it is deemed by the wise and prudent men of the nation their first duty, as it is their chief necessity, to set to work to help the Democracy of the North to redeem some of their lost strength. With the doctrine of non-intervention the people of the North are satisfied,—give us that for a platform in 1860 and victory will be easily won. And the Northern Democratic press should at once cause it to be made known to the ends of the Union that we will accept of nothing less.

One other influence that has been at work in the South, we attribute to the unanswerable speech of Mr. Douglas in reply to Mr Brown, in the Senate, February 23, in opposition to a congressional slave code, and in defence of Popular Sovereignty in the territories—which speech has had a wide circulation in the South, and been extensively read. Of late, too, many leading Southern Democratic newspapers have printed this speech, and as its sentiments come to be rightly apprehended by the people, it is receiving indorsement. We have now before us a Florida paper—the Jacksonville Republican—a very able and influential organ—in which is a notice of intention to commence, the following week, the republication of the speech above alluded to.—We copy the notice:

SENATOR DOUGLAS—HIS POSITION.—Next week we shall commence the publication of the speech of Senator Douglas, delivered in the Senate of the United States, February 23, 1859, in reply to Hon. A. G. Brown, of Mississippi, and others, in opposition to the passage of a code of laws by Congress to protect slavery in the territories, and in favor of banishing from the halls of Congress all questions touching domestic slavery in the territories, and remanding them to the people of her territories, to be disposed of as they may see proper, subject to an appeal to the judicial tribunals, to test the validity of the territorial enactments under the Constitution of the United States, together with an appendix, showing the position of distinguished public men on this question in the great contests of 1854 and 1856.

No one who has not read this speech can understand the position of this great man. We publish the speech and appendix for two reasons: first, because we desire to show that the Senator still occupies the position taken by the Democratic leaders on the question of slavery by the adoption of the Kansas-Nebraska bill; and, secondly, because we want to put our readers in possession of some valuable political information. We hope it will be carefully read and preserved.

RE-UNION OF THE STATE SENATE.—There is to be a re-union of the Ohio State Senate at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs on the Fourth of July next. The invitation is due to the hospitality of Hon. W. P. Reid, Senator from that district, concerning whose liberality and generosity no remarks need be made to those who are acquainted with him.—Dayton Empire.

A more agreeable mode of spending the "glorious Fourth" could not be devised; and it was a happy thought of Hon. W. P. REID, to whom, however, happy thoughts are not infrequent visitors. There never was a body of men, entertaining individual and conflicting opinions, who moved more harmoniously together than the late Ohio Senate. During the whole two years, not more than two or three occasions arose when any bitterness was expressed, and after a day or two, whatever momentary excitement experienced, had been entirely passed by and forgotten in the cordial manner of transacting the public business. The majority made the natural restiveness of the minority under a knowledge of their weakness, sit as lightly as possible, and at the parting-time they all shook hands friends. Such a re-union as proposed by Mr. REID is honorable to him, and will be most agreeable to his late fellow Senators.

☞ H. H. Van Horne, of New Orleans, put a heavily loaded pistol to his head and blew his head to fragments, on Sunday evening, because a young lady, on whom he had placed his affections, saw fit to smile on his more fortunate rival.

Death of Col. Hart.

Col. GIDEON WILLIAMS HART died suddenly at his residence in Blendon tp., Franklin Co., O., on Monday morning, June 20th, in the 64th year of his age.

Col. HART was born in Farmington, Conn., July 21st 1795, being the fourth son of Dr. JOHN HART, an eminent physician of that place. He emigrated to the west in the spring of 1816, and located in Blendon tp., (then Harrison,) in this county, in 1819; married in the fall of the same year Miss NANCY LANGDON, of Vincennes, Ind., by whom he was the father of five children, three of whom, a son and two daughters, with the estimable companion of his life, survive.

Col. HART was gifted by nature with a high order of intellectual endowments, possessing quickness of perception, acuteness of thought, strength and force of mind, with liberal cultivation; a combination of brilliant gems not often witnessed in the same character—and properly directed in an appropriate sphere of action could not have failed to have left a mark, bright and shining, high up in the scale of the achievements of men. He possessed a noble, generous nature, ever actuated by a spirit of benevolence. He had frequently been called to occupy positions of trust and importance by the favor of his fellow-citizens.

Socially, Col. H. was hospitable, genial, pleasant, affable and dignified. In religious sentiment he was of the most liberal school, freely according to others the same freedom of thought he exercised for himself. In politics he was emphatically a whig of the HENRY CLAY school, retaining to the day of his death a lively and ardent regard for that great and noble man and statesman, and for the principles of which he was the noblest champion of them all.

Col. H. was among the early settlers of the township—was the associate, friend and compatriot of our Lee and Washburn, Moore, Phelps, Cooper, Hempstead, Mattoon and Jameson, McDaniel, Gillespie, Wright, Griswold, Osborn, and a host of others, fathers whose memory we cherish, and whom we delight to honor; some of whom have passed from the stage of action, while others remain with us with forms bent and heads whitened all o'er with the toils of years and the battling vicissitudes of life; and whose earthly reward is the greatest glory of man—a virtuous and honorable old age!

It was the privilege of the writer to have enjoyed an intimate acquaintance with, and to be an ardent admirer of the subject of this sketch, and he breathes but the earnest wish of his heart in ardently desiring that while the youth of our community may emulate his many virtues, and draw lessons of wisdom from the teachings of his life, they will not wreck a life of usefulness and renown upon that shoal that has wrought destruction to so many of the greatest minds and noblest souls of men.

C. P. L.

Blendon, June 23d, 1859.

Death of Dr. Bailey

The death of GAMALIEL BAILEY, editor of the National Era, published at Washington City, and devoted to the liberation of the blacks in the United States, has been announced in the papers as having transpired on board the Arago, on its outward voyage, on the 5th inst. Mr. BAILEY found his health undermined by the incessant labors connected with his press, and undertook a voyage to Europe in the hope of improvement. He was at one time associated with the late JAMES G. BIRNEY, and succeeded him as editor of the Philanthropist, published at Cincinnati, which, like the Era, was devoted to the liberation of the blacks. He was a most genial and estimable gentleman, highly respected by all who knew him, however much they differed from him upon the one sentiment to which he gave his best energies. He leaves a family to mourn his loss, one that to them is irreparable.

The Letter of Mr. Douglas.

This is an important document, because Mr. DOUGLAS does and means what he says. It is consistent with his whole political course. He will not permit his name to be used in connection with the Presidency, unless the Democratic Platform, of 1856 shall remain unmutilated in 1860. He cannot accept interpolations that will destroy its unity and symmetry. With a different platform he will not go before the Charleston Convention. What then? Will the Democratic party insist upon another platform, or upon having DOUGLAS, with the Platform of 1856?

THE LATE ELECTION.—We are unable to inform our readers how many delegates the Democratic party has elected to the Constitutional Convention, but sufficient is known to show that they have the power to procure the formation of a white man's Constitution, excluding from the future State free negroes as well as slaves. This will give white men the full benefit of the free labor system. Besides, when it is known that white men will not be compelled to labor side by side with negroes, as they will not, if all are excluded, white laboring men and women will emigrate to the State and fully supply the demand. Only such a Constitution can be ratified by our people.

From the result of the late election, it is clear that nearly, if not quite, every county in the Territory will cast a Democratic majority at our succeeding elections. Let the Democracy of our county perfect their county organizations. Township clubs should be organized, and Democrats induced to subscribe for Democratic papers.

Every territory that has ever entered the Union has done so as a Democratic State, and Kansas is about to enjoy the same honor.—Leavenworth (Kansas) National Democrat, June 16.

☞ In some localities a white man is considered as good as a negro—but in this, as this time, he is no where—a darkey has no trouble in getting a "snort" of liquor at places where a white man can't get a "smell."—[Richmond (Ind.) Broad Axe.

There's an offended individual—who would like to take a "snort," but would put up with a "smell," only that luxury is monopolized by the "colled pusson." He should be very thankful that it is so, for "white man's very uncertin," if he should happen to "snort" too often.

☞ The Democratic papers in Maine are publishing the proceedings of the town caucuses for the choice of delegates to the Bangor State Convention to be holden on the 30th inst. We notice that in many of them resolutions enunciating the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty are passed unanimously and delegates selected who still regard the Democratic party, State and National, as of some account; and who despise the wishes of sundry tide-waiters and postmasters, who receive their political notions from the same source that tenders them their salaries.—Milwaukee News.

JUDGE SWAN.—The Black Republicans of this county are considerably "put out" with their delegation to the State Convention, in consequence of their vote to slaughter Judge Swan. The greater portion of the Republican party are decidedly opposed to the domineering of the Western Reserve clans, and will most undoubtedly exhibit their displeasure at the ballot box in October.—Morrow Co. Dem.

☞ The intelligent correspondent of the Philadelphia Press announces that there is no doubt that Gov. Wise and his friends have commenced an energetic movement in his behalf for the Presidency in 1860. The leading Northern connection of this organization recognizes FERNANDO WOOD, of New York, as its chief, and sympathizes strongly with the friends of Hon. DANIEL S. DICKINSON, of the same State.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1859.

Fourth of July.

Before another number of our paper will be issued, the "Glorious Fourth" will have come and gone. The recurrence of the day ought to bring up all the associations which cluster around memory and make us national. We have always loved to hear of our fathers' bravery and our mothers' fortitude in opening for us this "great country," and it will be an evil hour when the story tires and we cease to feel the glow at the recital which stirred up the warm blood of boyhood.

The celebration at this place promises to be uncommonly imposing. The gentlemen, to whom were entrusted the general arrangements, set about the work in earnest, and our people may prepare themselves for a grand and general jubilee.—Gen. Joseph H. Geiger is the orator of the day, and he will do the subject justice. He is eloquent and vigorous as a speaker, is fortunate in illustration, happy in metaphor, and has the skill of an artist in grouping events and portraying character.

The committee were judicious in their selection. Gen. Geiger will be found equal to the occasion, and a brilliant oration may be anticipated.

If the recurrence of the day revive the national feelings that once swelled and swayed the American heart—it will be glorious indeed. If it can break through the crust of selfishness, and disturb the stagnation of indifference—if it can kindle once more the fires of patriotism, and stimulate that devotion to country and its high destiny, which distinguished our fathers, the "4th of July" will have executed a double mission—that of witnessing the birth of a free and independent nation, and of beholding a return to the national virtue which gave it freedom, by a people who had been fast sinking into such indifference to the memory of the past and obligations in the future, that their nationality was passing away.

Let us all then, give to the day the honor of which it is worthy—let us hallow it and its memories in our hearts, and American must still be free—"one and indivisible."

☞ We will be under special obligations to the Cleveland Plaindealer, if it will give us credit for original articles copied from our paper. A few days since, that paper had the impudence to copy one of our best "local items" into its editorial columns, without as much as "thank you." Does the Plaindealer steal its wit?—Morrow County Democrat.

The Plaindealer should understand the embarrassment in which it places one to encounter cross Rhoades without a sign. Now, for our part, we don't care whether our friends do a "credit business," or not, so that they show their appreciation by using our articles. If they do not give us "credit" in their papers, they do in their hearts, and it's all the same. Besides, it shows a higher appreciation of the merit of the article, to appropriate it without "credit." The Plaindealer don't even let us see whether it considers any of our articles worth stealing, for we have not laid eyes on it in eight weeks that we have been "Sent into this breathing world."

But we do not complain—knowing that we should not make much off of one who has grown Gray in service, and carries a plug of Artemus Ward's tent-pole in his pocket.

P. S.—Since the above was in type we have received the Plaindealer, but do not see in it any of either Rhoades' wit or our own.

Resignation.—Mr. D. L. Holton, one of the County Commissioners, has resigned his office, finding its duties, which he discharged to the satisfaction of every one, incompatible with his private business. Mr. Holton is one of our most intelligent, energetic and substantial farmers, of sterling character, and was conscientious in tendering his resignation, because he felt he could not without great sacrifice, give that attention to the public interests which their importance demanded. The fact is the office of County Commissioner is one of considerable responsibility, and in this county where so much of his attention is necessary, the compensation is very inadequate. In retiring Mr. Holton has the satisfaction of bearing with him the good wishes of his fellow citizens, to whom he was a faithful officer.

Fresh Meats.—There is nothing more desirable in summer than sweet, fresh meats. It will be seen that Mr. Hill is provided with ice chests and his customers may depend upon being properly served. He has had long experience, is a first-rate judge of cattle, and is always on the look-out for such meats as he can recommend to those who deal with him.

Decided Taste.—That Louis Kochler is a man of decided taste, we have reason to know. With razor or scissors he is equally expert. He removes the most stubborn beard with a smoothness that is wonderful, and after passing through his hands a man hardly recognizes his own hair.

Weather.—For two or three days past we have had weather and no mistake, the thermometer ranging between 90° and 94°, but nearer the latter figure.

To Get Clear of Mosquitos.—A correspondent of the Dee (S. C.) Times gives that journal a receipt for clearing a room of mosquitoes. He says, I have tried the following and find that it works like a charm:—Take of gum camphor a piece about one-third the size of an egg, and evaporate it by placing it in a tin vessel and holding it over a tin lamp or candle, taking care that it does not ignite. The smoke will soon fill the room and expel the mosquitos, and every body else.

— We learn from Urbana Citizen that a son of Mr. J. Miller, of West Liberty, aged 7 years, in attempting to get on a train, while in motion, on Monday evening, fell under the cars. The wheels passed over him, mutilating him in so shocking a manner as to cause death in two hours.

— A large portion of the barley crop on the line of the Little Miami Railway, from Xenia down to Cincinnati, is harvested. The crop is very heavy. The corn and wheat crops in that rich valley look superbly.

— The wool crop of Clinton county for 1859 is valued at $100,000. Wool growers are obtaining 35@45c for their crop.

A Day at Ohio White Sulphur Springs.

After three hours' easy drive, we reached White Sulphur Springs on Saturday evening, having by some accident missed the "accommodation train," and contenting ourselves with a horse and buggy as the next best convenience. We found the place lighted up like the long, attenuated street of some village, where for convenience or fancy the houses all front the same way. The location is beautiful, whether seen by day or night, creating a gentle acclivity, undulating in graceful knolls, down to the water-side. The hour was late when we arrived, and the business of the day was over; but we found a number of the guests loitering through the piazzas, or quietly enjoying their cigars, and conversation on such subjects as might occur to those whose greatest labor was the "hurrying up" of Time. A genial breeze floated through the halls, and no noise of rattling wheels, or the rapid footsteps of passengers, broke upon the stillness that reigned around. The courteous and urbane host, Mr. Wilson, himself, was there, with his ever-attentive aids-de-camp, J. A. Shatzer and J. H. McOwen; and after a generous libation of distilled waters from a never-failing fountain, perhaps some might imagine that we donned our night-cap—we were shown to a delightful apartment, and left to

"The weary commingling of our care-tired thoughts" and the luxury of undisturbed slumber—the quiet repose of the country.

Not until the birds had been long singing their matin songs, and the sun had made a good start above the forest that skirts the view "over the river," did we shake off the sweet sleep which had watched beside our pillow. We found about sixty guests seated at the generous board, where plenty, order and neatness prevailed. A richer cup of aromatic mocha we never sipped, more tender, more delicious broiled spring chicken or chop tasted. Rolls as light as the foam on the flowing river, and white as the snow-flake, invited appetite. That we did justice to the best of breakfasts may be readily imagined; for which we were well-prepared by a liberal draught from the gushing fountain, that murmurs all day long from its marble vase, and woos the gentle night with its tinkling song.

A Sabbath at the Springs! For those who prefer, there are churches in the neighborhood, where they may repair and listen to the usual forms and ceremonies of worship; and further on in the season, when guests are more numerous, there are those among them who teach the impromptu congregation the way of life in the grand reception hall or out in the overarching forest that skirts the cottage-row. But there is a worship of the heart, beneath the blue sky, with surrounding objects all speaking of His bounty and providence, which needs no words and no ceremonies. The quietude around, the cessation from labor, the grave demeanor that unconsciously usurps the place where beaming smiles and unrestrained mirth and loud voices were wont to fill the week-day hour, all give unmistakable token that it is Sunday. After a week of toil and confinement in the city, there is nothing like a Sabbath at "the Springs," breathing the salubrious air, and partaking of unsurpassed accommodations.

The weather has been unpropitious at "the Springs" as an early summer resort, having been too frequently damp, chill and forbidding, but those who braved the weather, have been amply repaid in finding a cheerful, delightful summer home. Besides, the liberal proprietor, who fought hard against the open winter (which made the roads almost impassable, and embargoed his lumber and other material,) has been enabled to perfect many of of his contemplated improvements; and present to his visitors a watering place decidedly worthy of their attention.

The handsome row of buildings, at right angles with the entrance end of cottage row, are now complete and will be furnished ready for guests this week. They embrace several suites of apartments as well as retired domiciles for those "Who tread alone

Some banquet hall deserted."

Then, too, the appurtenances of the Steam Laundry will be complete, just the whole washing and mangling business, which is no light job for so extensive an establishment, will be apparently as easy (to use a homely comparison) as "rolling off a log." This will be a novel and interesting sight to those who have never seen the operation of "washing by steam."

The bath houses too are finished and in active operation. Hot or cold, shower, mineral aqua pura, any kind that may be called for, and everything as neat as a new pin.

The "drive" around the grounds has been beautifully graded and leveled, affording a broad, smooth road for two miles, the most of which is through "the woods," completely shaded, and affording a convenience for exhibiting skill in handling the ribbons, or in equestrianism that no other watering place on the continent can equal. Though the extent of this "drive" is two miles, the distance may be increased at pleasure, in proportion to the circles made of the beautiful and picturesque grounds. Attached to the establishment are superb livery stables and sheds where saddle-horses and equipments for ladies and gentlemen are kept in fine order; or carriages, or tete-a-tetes if preferred, ready at any hour when called for.

To accomplish his vast improvements, to beautify and ornament the grounds, to clear the rubbish, erect suitable buildings, &c., Mr. Wilson has not had fewer than two hundred hands daily employed since March; beside numerous teams. His pay list during that period has not fallen short of $1,500 per week, besides large expenditures for materials. Some idea, then, may be formed of the advantage of such an establishment and such a man to the neighborhood. There is nothing that can be raised in the way of poultry or gardening or stock that is not wanted at such an establishment. It is a home market, and a liberal one, for everything. Columbus, is the nearest point of importance to it, and in its prosperity our city should feel a deep interest, and keeping up a lively intercourse and constant communication with "the Springs," cultivate a reciprocal feeling, which would eventuate in the disbursement of considerable money in this place. A growing trade with Columbus from "the Springs," with its merchants, with its markets, with its mechanics, would be found in the course of a season to amount to a considerable item.

The liberality of the "lessee" of White Sulphur Springs, with the superb furniture, the numerous conveniences, the improved roads, the splendid farm of three hundred and twenty acres thrown into the grounds, one-half of which forms the park surrounding the buildings, all are themes of constant conversation; but the surprise ceases when it is known that Mr. Wilson is engaged in other active business pursuits, involving heavy capital, and that this is an investment of taste merely, which he gratifies by throwing around it all that is beautiful and useful and charming. With a liberal heart, an active mind and energetic purpose, he is not sparing of his ample means in pleasing himself, while he procures everything which may gratify others. Only yesterday he effected a shipment of $30,000 worth of hogs, thus making business and pleasure blend; for while his eye is ranging over his magnificent grounds, the pet of his leisure, he is revolving matters of business in which a heavier portion of his fortune is engaged. He has been largely liberal to the press, and his visitors are supplied with newspapers from every direction. At his own expense he has established a telegraph line connecting with the wires that communicate with all parts of the Union. Billiards and Ten Pins are provided for those who take pleasure in those active and healthful games, and the contiguous river affords to the expert angler a fair opportunity to show his skill. As the season advances we shall hear "the baying of the deep-mouthed hound," and helter-skelter, with J. O. R. H. in the van, will the hunters dash after sly Reynard, brushing the dews aside, and making hill and valley jocund with their glee.

There is not in the wide west such another watering-place. Why should our citizens seek Saratoga, or the sea-side, when they can have all the enjoyments of society, of summer recreation, so near home? They can be as fashionable at the Ohio White Sulphur as at the Virginia White Sulphur; and they can have here as magnificent accommodations, an unexceptionable cuisine, a table that cannot be surpassed, wines as rich and delicate and costly—every luxury that can be found anywhere, and that too at but a few hours' ride from their homes. Large parties are expected from Cincinnati this week, and it is thought that Columbus may swell the throng of visitors. Three hours on a smooth road, or half that time by the C. C. and C. Railroad, and ready conveyances at Lewis Center, always at hand, will bring you to "the Springs." Bands of music enliven each evening with cheering music, and the lively dance in the cool, airy halls invites the young and gay and happy to wear their prettiest smiles. Whether for pleasure, for pastime, for the enjoyment of solitary rambles or lonely, solemn reverie; or for the use of its several medicinal waters, for there are within a stone's throw of each other, White and Red Sulphur, Magnesia and Chalybeate, commend us to the Ohio White Sulphur Springs. We can run through a day and night there pleasantly, and through the week, day and night glide by so tranquilly, the hours are so beguiled, that they pass away without counting, and are scarce half-remembered when gone.

The Proposed Basis of Peace.

The London Times' Paris correspondent says it is stated that two of the most influential neutral Powers have agreed in proposing an arrangement after the first great battle, and, if necessary, insisting upon the adoption of it by three belligerents, on the following principles:

1. That the territory gained by the victorious party shall be accepted by all the European Powers as the basis of a Congress.
2. The entry of the French into Milan, supported by a popular manifestation, shall be considered by the European Powers as a convincing proof of the disapprobation in Italy of Austrian policy.
3. The neutral Powers will insist on an armistice while a Congress is assembled.
4. The extension of the Kingdom of Sardinia will be deemed essential; and the Duchies of Parma and Modena, with the fortress of Piacenza, are to be added to it.
5. It will be proposed to form the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom into a State distinct from the Austrian Empire, but governed by an Austrian Archduke.

Auricular Illusion Dispelled.—We were walking the other morning not far distant from the residence of one of our wealthy citizens, whose shade trees are very luxuriant, and at the time seemed filled with song-birds, above which the capricious notes of the cat-bird were distinctly audible. We almost envied his good fortune to have so much shrubbery, and the natural music of so many birds.—As we approached, we looked in vain to see the feathered songsters flitting about; and the harmony of the music vanished when we perceived a boy trundling a hand-barrow, whose ill-greased wheel was making a most discordant and squeaking noise. Who says that we are not imaginative?—Had we been walking the other way, the illusion would not have been dispelled, and we should have continued to think we had heard an unusual concert among the birds.

Hillsborough Gazette.—Mr. Frank Seaman has disposed of his interest in this Democratic paper, to his partner, and H. G. Armstrong, who has heretofore conducted the political department, and will henceforth have sole charge.—Mr. Seaman takes leave of his friends in a sprightly, agreeable address, and Mr. Armstrong assumes the reins, with the following very just intimation to the Democrats of Highland:

It behooves every true Democrat to contribute his proportion to aid in sustaining his own county paper, and if those from other places are better than your own local paper, the cause for such a state of things will be found in the apathy of its professed friends. Within the next three months we hope every Democrat in Highland county will be supplied with his own home paper, and we pledge ourselves you will have no cause to complain of the inferiority of the Gazette, in comparison with other papers. Now is the time to increase its efficiency. Quiet work done now in increasing its circulation will be as seed planted in good ground, yielding next fall an abundant harvest of intelligent Democratic voters.

Flaxen Ringlets.—Poets have often sung in raptures of blue-eyed, laughing flaxen haired girls, but George Speight, of London, a thoroughly practical man, understands things better than those dreaming rhymsters who make sonnets to their sweethearts' ringlets, for he makes flaxen ringlets for those sweethearts. He has just taken out a patent for making plaits and curls for headdresses and other head ornaments, and employs Russian or American hemp dyed to the exact shade desired, and glossed up with aromatic grease, and curled to adorn the head of some happy fair one either with flowing auburn or raven locks, as may be desired. When it is taken into consideration that long brown hair for making ladies' artificial curls, costs from $10 to $12 per pound, Mr. Speight may be considered a sort of benefactor to all those individuals who are deficient in natural cranial ornamentation, although we think his invention will rather strike the girls in Normandy, who cultivate their hair expressly for our wigmakers.—Scientific American.

We trust that this new invention will not injure the business of our friend Collier, who at his rooms opposite the Goodale House, furnishes beautiful suits of natural hair, of all shades, to those who have been bereft by the early symptoms of age. In his line, Mr. Collier is an artist, and will make the most wonderful change in appearance (bringing back the "form and pressure" of youth) that can be imagined.

Death of Col. Hart.—Col. Gideon W. Hart, of Bloodon township, in this co., an old and much respected citizen, died rather unexpectedly at his residence on Monday, at the advanced age of 82 years. A day or two before his death he was in his usual health, but feeling somewhat indisposed on Sunday, took, as he was wont to do, a portion of laudanum, and after a short interval being still restless, repeated the dose contrary to the warning of his wife, which unfortunately proved too powerful, causing him to fall into the sleep which knows no waking. Col. Hart was a native of Connecticut, but moved into this State at an early day and settled in the township, where, as an upright citizen and a good neighbor, he was esteemed by all. On Tuesday, the whole neighborhood turned out to pay their last tribute of respect by depositing his remains in the family burying grounds.

☞ Men's lives should be like the days, more beautiful in the evening; or like the seasons, aglow with promise, and the autumn rich with golden sheaves, where good words and deeds have ripened on the field.

Chronology of the War in Italy.

The New York Times thus groups the main incidents of the campaign for the first six weeks. It will be interesting as a sort of [illegible] of the important events which have transpired since the declaration of war, and sovereigns left the "game" at home, to dispute the most hazardous and exciting match upon the chess board of the tented field. Here our readers have a condensed history of the war, without the details of battles and skirmishes:

PRELIMINARY EVENTS.

April 19.—Departure of the first body of French troops from Toulon—Austrian ultimatum dispatched from Vienna to Turin.

April 23.—It is received at Turin.

April 26.—The limit fixed by the ultimatum expires. Statement of the war question addressed to the Corps Legislatif by Count Walewski—French troops first cross Mont Cenis.

April 27.—Revolution in Tuscany. The Grand-Duke retires.

THE FIRST WEEK OF THE WAR—THE AUSTRIANS ENTER SARDINIA.

April 29.—The Austrians, under Count Gyulai, pass Ticino—Marshal Canrobert and Gen. Niel reach Turin and assume command of their respective corps d'armee—Gen. MacMahon arrives at Genoa—Death of Gen. Bonet.

April 30.—The Austrians occupy Novara. The French Ambassador quits Vienna.

May 1.—King Victor Emanuel leaves Turin to take command of his army. The Austrians occupy Mortara. Their steamers seize the Sardinian ports on Lake Maggiore. Three Austrian vessels repulsed in the lake.

May 3.—Manifesto of Napoleon III., addressed to the Corps Legislatif. The Austrians pass the Po at Cambio; they are repulsed in an attempted crossing at Frassinetto. They burn the bridge over the Scrivia at Piacenza—The Austrian vanguard reaches Tronzano.

May 4.—The Duchess-Regent of Parma enters her Capital—The conflict at Frassinetto continues—The Austrians, passing the Po at Vaccarizza, advance to Sale—A cannonade at Valenza.

THE SECOND WEEK OF THE WAR—THE FRENCH EMPEROR PROCEEDS TO THE SEAT OF WAR.

May 6.—Gen. Cialdini, issuing from Casale, seizes a convoy of the enemy.

May 7.—The Austrians repass the Po at Gerola.

May 10.—The Emperor Napoleon III. and the Prince Napoleon-Jerome leave Paris for the seat of war. The Austrians complete a retrograde movement to the left of the Sesia.

May 11.—The Emperor embarks at Marseilles. The Austrians pause at Vercelli, and return reconnoitering parties to the right bank of the river. They occupy Rivergaro.

May 12.—The Emperor lands at Genoa.

THE THIRD WEEK OF THE WAR—THE AUSTRIANS RETREAT.

May 14.—The Austrians occupy Bobbio and push their advanced post to Casteggio.

May 15.—The French Emperor arrives at Alessandria.

May 16.—The French squadron of Admiral Jurien-Graviere anchors before Venice—the Emperor visits the outposts at Valenza.

May 17.—The Austrians threaten the bridge at Stella—the Emperor visits the headquarters of the King at Occimiano—The Austrians vainly attempt to take the bridge at Valenza.

May 19.—The head-quarters of Count Gyulai transferred in retreat to Garlasco.

THE FOURTH WEEK OF THE WAR—THE BATTLES OF MONTEBELLO AND VERCELLI.

May 20.—Great speech of M. Kossuth on the War, delivered at London Tavern—Battle of Montebello—The Allies numbering 6,800, under General Forey, defeat 25,000 Austrians under General Count Stadion—The Emperor visits Casale.

May 21.—The Piedmontese, under General Cialdini, force the passage of the Sesia, at Vercelli, routing the Austrians—Garibaldi, with his corps, leaves Biella, and marches for Northwestern Lombardy—The blockade of Venice re-established.

May 22.—Death of the King of Naples.

May 23.—Garibaldi, passing the Ticino at Sesto Calende, defeats the enemy and captures Varese.

May 25.—Garibaldi attacked by the Austrians, beats them—Col. Cristoforis, with a portion of Garibaldi's force, beats the Austrians near Sesto Calende—The Emperor at Voghera.

May 26.—The Emperor arrives at Vercelli—Garibaldi again beats the Austrians at M[illegible]mate.

THE FIFTH WEEK OF THE WAR—THE BATTLES OF PALESTRO.

May 27.—Garibaldi marches upon Como, and routing the Austrians at San Fermo, occupies that city—Rapid movement of the French army from the south to the north of the Po—Montebello and Casteggio evacuated by them, occupied by the Austrians.

May 28.—Garibaldi occupies Camerlata and Lecco—Austrian vessels bombard Canobbio, on Lake Maggiore—The Valtelline rises in insurrection.

May 31.—Battle of Palestro—The Allies, commanded by Victor Emanuel, attack the Austrians—The Emperor of Austria, attended by Field-Marshal Baron Hess, arrived at Verona.

June 1.—The Allies defeat the Austrians at Palestro—Gen. Niel occupies Novara.

June 2.—Garibaldi, retiring before a powerful body of the enemy, attacks Laveno unsuccessfully—The Austrians attack the allied outposts at Robbio, but speedily retreat—The advance of the Allies under McMahon, enters Lombardy by the bridge of Turbigo.

THE SIXTH WEEK OF THE WAR—THE GREAT BATTLES OF MAGENTA AND MALEGNANO.

June 3.—The Austrians hastily evacuate Sardinia—Severe action at Buffalora—Garibaldi again marches upon Varese, beats the Austrians, and re-occupies it.

June 4.—The conflict at Buffalora concludes in a splendid victory of the Allies at Magenta.

June 6.—Milan rises upon the Austrians—The garrison retires—Victor Emanuel proclaimed King—Lombardy annexed to Sardinia—Grand Te Deum at Paris for the victory at Magenta.

June 7.—The Emperor and King enter Milan—The Austrian custom-houses on Lake Maggiore seized by Garibaldi's corps.

June 8.—Garibaldi pursues the Austrians, who retreat towards Monza.

June 8.—Marshal Baraguay d'Hilliers attacks the Austrians at Malegnano, and after a severe contest, carries that post—The Austrians evacuate Laveno on the Lago Maggiore.

The Bloodiest of Battles.—If the French bulletins are true, and the number of troops engaged correctly furnished, Magenta was one of the most bloody battles in the annals of modern warfare, and inferior only to that of Waterloo. At Austerlitz there were only some 70,000 French opposed to an Austrio-Russian army of 75,000, of which 10,000 were left upon the field. Magenta was fought by 100,000 Frenchmen against 150,000 Austrians, of whom the former are reported to have lost from 3,000 to 9,000 and the latter 12,000, besides 7,000 made prisoners. At the battle of Friedland (1807) in ancient Prussia, the Russians and Prussians were defeated, with the loss of 17,000 men and 80 cannon, by the French under Bonaparte. At the battle of Marengo (1800) in Italy, Bonaparte defeated the Austrians, who lost 1,700 killed and prisoners. The French acknowledged the loss of 600 killed and wounded.

Accident to Flora Temple.—In the race between Flora Temple and Princess, over the Union Course, L. I., on Thursday, Flora, in the first heat, cast two shoes, cutting her quarters and laming her so badly that her owner, Mr. Tallman, wished to withdraw her. Much sympathy was expressed for her mishap, and many prophecies were ventured as to what would have been had she not met it.

The White Weed.—As this pest to meadows is in full flower about this time, it should be cut down. A few plants, carelessly left, will scatter seeds, and occupy more ground next year, and so on, distributing its seeds until, before the farmer is aware, his meadow is destroyed. The root is perennial, and should be eradicated wherever the stalk is visible the first wet spell, as it is otherwise hard to be drawn.

Pike's Peak.—A writer from the Upper Missouri, in a letter to the Missouri Republican mentions the fact that the deluded ones who had been to Pike's Peak are returning by hundreds and by thousands. Among the crowd he heard a song which seemed to have passed into general currency, one verse of which ran thus:

There's Larimer and McLean, two men of renown,
Have raised such excitement to build up a town;
For the rent of their houses they don't get half pay,
[illegible]
For it's hard times.

☞ Gen. Cass insists that the LeClerc and Borne letters are the doctrine of the Administration and not his alone.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

New York, June 21.—The steamship Persia, with Liverpool dates to the 11th inst., has arrived.

Mr. Bailey, editor of the National Era, of Washington, died on the 5th inst., on board the steamer Arago bound from New York, to Southampton, whether she arrived on the 9th inst.

The British Minister was expected to resign on the meeting of Parliament, on the 11th.

The British Ministry has been defeated in the House of Commons, and the resolution of a want of confidence has been carried by a majority of thirteen.

The Austrians have been driven from Marignan, with a loss of 1,200 prisoners, and the main body of the army is reported to be retreating across the river Adda.

The details of the battle of Magenta are received at London and Paris very slowly, but they do not change the first complexion. The losses were undoubtedly severe on both sides. The Austrian official account only acknowledges from 4,000 to 5,000 killed and wounded, and says the enemy lost fully half as much again.

It is reported, but not confirmed, that Gen. Gyulai has been dismissed and Gen. Hess appointed Commander-in-Chief.

The Austrians have retreated beyond the river Adda. Their head quarters were Cremona. They were expelled from Marignan by Gen. Baraguay D'Hilliers, who took 1,200 prisoners.

Pavia was evacuated by the Austrians, and the Emperor Napoleon and the King of Sardinia entered Milan on the 8th inst., where they were most enthusiastically received. They remained there at the last accounts.

The latest advices say that the allies were advancing from Milan in pursuit of the retreating Austrians, and also that Prussia had given indications of aiding Austria.

It is said that the Prussian Government is negotiating for the passage of troops through Germany.

Gen. Garibaldi had beaten an Austrian force at Brescia.

Five hundred Zouaves were killed and wounded at Marignan. The Austrians lost 1,200 killed and wounded, and 1,200 made prisoners. The battle at Maregnan lasted nine hours. The armies were preparing for another engagement.

Vienna, June 10.—The Austrian correspondent states that the Austrian army was continuing its retreat beyond the Adda, and that its head quarters were at Caratignozzi.

A special dispatch to the London Times says that on the 8th, the second Austrian army had its head quarters at Cadogna, on the Adda.

It turns out that Gen. Canrobert was not wounded at the battle of Magenta. All accounts give the great glory of the day to Gen. MacMahon. He had no orders to proceed to Magenta, but he heard the roar of the battle, rushed on, and saved the army.

The Moniteur of the 10th inst. contains the following details of the battle of Magenta: The concentration of our troops on the Po deceived the enemy into the belief that we intended to cross the river. On the morning of the 4th, 125,000 of the Austrians were in position opposite the Emperor, and the Grenadier division of the Guards was obliged to fight this disproportionate odds. All our Generals displayed great energy in the action.

The French General Mimpfek was wounded. Deme and Madhurt, commanders of the Grenadiers, were killed.

The official bulletin describes the [illegible] of General McMahon, who lost 1,500 men, but put ten thousand Austrians hors du combat, and made 6,000 prisoners. The Austrians had on their side four corps d'armee.

The bulletin sums up the results of the five days: Since the departure from Alessandria our army had three combats, gained one battle, and freed Piedmont from the Austrians, who, since the battle of Montebello, have lost 25,000 killed and wounded, 16,000 prisoners, and 17 cannon.

The defeat of the Austrians is said to have produced an immense sensation in Germany.

The correspondent of the Daily News gives the following details: In less than two hours the allied monarchs had displayed 60,000 men against the Austrians, whose force was 90,000, together with a powerful artillery. They compelled the Austrians to move on to most disadvantageous ground, as their left was soon turned by Gen. Canrobert's corps, supported by Gen. Vanti's division, and the Austrians were obliged to fall on their centre at Abbiate Grasso.

The Austrian centre being thus assailed by the routed columns of their left wing, were soon in disorder, and thousands fell crushed by the French artillery.

Gen'l. McMahon seeing the moment had come to break the disordered centre of the Austrians, charged, supported by Durand's division, which stood in reserve.

The shock was terrible, and the dead and wounded fell by thousands. The Austrians were finally routed.

The Zouaves had 700 killed and wounded. A brigade in Gen. Canrobert's corps was almost destroyed with the last charge. The Emperor and King were always in the thickest of the fight. The military men are unanimous in praise of the strategic combinations of the Emperor.

At Marengo, the Austrians were entrenched. Gen'l. d'Hilliers was sent to dislodge them, and took the village, with but little loss.

The Emperor and King Victor Emanuel attended a mass in the Cathedral of Milan on the 9th, when a Te Deum was sung. They subsequently rode through the city, the enthusiasm of the people was indescribable.

The King of Sardinia issued a proclamation to the Lombards, saying that their independence having been secured, a regimen, liberal and durable, will be established. He eulogizes the Emperor Napoleon, and calls on the Lombards to join them on the battle field.

A Hungarian Legion was organizing at Turin.

The London Post's Paris correspondent says that over four thousand of the prisoners are Italians, who take the earliest opportunity to give themselves up. They were always placed in the front, and were threatened by the Croats in the rear if they did not fight well. Many of them offered to join the Allies, but their services have not yet been accepted.

The Swiss government has ordered the immediate fortification of the Austrian frontier.

The Emperor of Austria has issued a proclamation to his subjects, in the Tyrol and Soralberg, calling them to defend the righteous cause for which the sword was ever drawn. He confides to them the task of defending the frontier against the enemy, who has made himself an ally to revolt against the legitimate dominion established by God.

Great Britain.—The motion of a want of confidence in the British Ministry was carried in the House of Commons by a vote of 323 to 310.

The Red Sea Cable broke and was lost when 60 miles from Cape Sidero.

The Ministry did not resign on Saturday. The House of Commons adjourned over till the 17th inst.

It is reported that the Prussian army will be mobilized, and Prussia will soon take part in the conflict.

The British sloop-of-war Heron capsized in a tornado on the African coast; 107 lives were lost. The captain and twenty-six of those on board were saved.

London, Saturday, June 11.—The attendance in the House of Commons was very numerous to-day, the expectation being that the address in reply to the speech from the throne would be agreed to as amended. The House of Commons agreed to take the speech into consideration on Friday and adjourned till that day.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market.—The Breadstuffs market closed with a declining tendency. Richardson, Spence & Co.'s Circular reports flour dull and quotations nominal.

Wheat 2d@3d lower than Tuesday's quotations. In corn there has been a declining tendency.

Bigland, Athyra & Co. report a decline of 6d @6d on the week, quote mixed at 6s 3d@6s 6d.

Liverpool Provision Market.—The circulars report the Provision Market with a declining tendency. Beef heavy. Pork heavy and 2s lower. Bacon dull. Lard dull at 60s. Tallow firm.

London Money Market.—Consols closed at 93@94. The bullion in the Bank of England has increased during the week £193,000.

Dresden, June 10.—Prussian Commissioners were here yesterday negotiating for the transport by railway of considerable bodies of Prussian troops. A satisfactory result was obtained without difficulty, and the commissioners started for Munich with a similar object.

Paris, Saturday, June 11.—Gen. Schramm has been appointed Chief Commander at the camp at Chalons, where three divisions of cavalry are to be assembled.

5,000 Austrian prisoners have arrived at Marseilles and Toulon.

Turin, June 10.—Gen. Garibaldi occupied Bergamo on the 8th, and having learned that 1,500 Austrians were coming from Brescia sent a detachment to meet them, and though the force sent was in considerable inferior in number, they, nevertheless, beat the enemy.

Verona, June 10.—The Austrian Official Bulletin says, Gen'l. D'Urban and Canonia and other corps d'armee at Magenta were engaged in sanguinary fights. The enemy, in greatly superior force, appears to be advancing from Milan, and the Austrian army has therefore passed the Adda in good order and are nearing the re-inforcements in reserve. The courage of our troops is unbroken; and they are longing for a decisive battle.

Turin, June 11.—Private letters from Milan, respecting the battle of Marignano, state, that 500 Zouaves were put hors de combat. The Austrians, who were 30,000 strong, suffered a loss of 1,500 killed and wounded, and 1,200 prisoners. The battle lasted nine hours. At eleven o'clock at night a battalion of Hungarians and Croats, who intended to surprise the village, were surrounded and defeated.

The Times' correspondent at Vienna says, the official Austrian Bulletin, announcing the battle of Magenta, produced an indescribable effect at the capital; and every one for a moment appeared to be stunned. Military men are indignant that the finest army Austria ever possessed should have been entrusted to such a bungler as Count Gyulai appears to be.

Liverpool Breadstuffs.—The following are quotations; American flour 10s 9d@13s 9d. Wheat western red 8s@9s 10d. Western white 10s 3d@11s. Corn yellow 8s@8s 3d white 8s@8s 9d.

Sandy Hook, June 28.—The steamship Bremen passed here this evening from Bremen, with Liverpool dates to the 15th inst.

The British ministry had resigned, in consequence of the want of confidence expressed by resolution in the House of Commons. Lord Palmerston is the new Premier, and Lord John Russell the Secretary of Foreign Affairs.

The latest intelligence from the seat of war is that the Austrians have evacuated Piacenza, Pavi, Lodi, Bologna and Ancona. The citadel and fortifications at Piacenza were first blown up.

The death of Metternich is announced. The steamship Canada arrived out on the 11th. The Borussia on the 12th, and the Vanderbilt on the 14th inst.

Lord Granville was first summoned by the Queen, but could not form a ministry. [illegible] the cabinet assembled on Saturday and determined to place their resignation in the hands of the Queen, which was done at a formal announcement made by Lord Derby at the banquet of the Merchant Tailors' Company, at which several ministers were present. Lord Granville, after audience with the Queen, waited on Lord Palmerston, who consented to waive all claims and serve under Lord Granville. In an interview with Lord John Russell, Lord Granville found him disposed to insist on conditions which made a union with Palmerston impossible, whether the government was presided over by Granville or any other person. The Queen being satisfied that Lord Granville would be the only obstacle to the union with Lords Palmerston and Russell, sent for Palmerston, who had an hour's interview, and straightway sought one with Russell, who agreed to serve under him but not under any other person.

The London Times says that Russell is an ardent friend of Italy; both he and Palmerston want Austria to admit her defeat, her ascertained inferiority and the unconquerable disadvantages of her position south of the Alps. Both are of the opinion she would consult her own greatness, by relinquishing territory which costs a great army and still greater odium. It is rumored Napoleon returns from France, leaving Pellisier Commander-in-Chief. The Austrians left provisions, ammunition, and cannon behind in evacuating Piacenza. The Austrians quitted Bologna on the 11th for Modena.

Garibaldi occupied Bergamo and repulsed fifteen hundred Austrians who were marching against him from Brescia. Russia had concluded a financial convention with Rothschilds.

The French had passed the Adda river.

The Austrians evacuated all the States of the church, including Ferrara. The Austrian correspondence says Austrians at Malegnano yielded only to a decidedly superior force and retired unpursued.

A submarine telegraph is to be laid from Wribourne to Denmark.

The Emperor of Austria, it is said, will take command in person, acting on the defensive. The Austrian loss at Palestro, official, was fifteen officers and five hundred and thirteen men killed; one general and twenty-three officers and eight hundred and eighty-seven wounded; six officers and seven hundred and seventy-four men missing.

Garibaldi's corps threatens southern Tirol from Val Canonica, Val Trompia and Bagolino.

The French fleet in the Adriatic had received powerful reinforcements, and were reported landing troops between Venice and Trieste.

The Austrian head quarters would probably be at Mantua.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Liverpool, June 13.—Sales of cotton to-day 6,000 bales. The market closed dull, but steady; prices slightly favoring buyers. Breadstuffs dull; sales unimportant. Quotations nominal. The weather was favorable for the crops. Provisions and produce market steady.

London, June 13.—Consols 93@93½.
Wheat declined 3s in London.

New York, June 27.—The London Times speaking of Palmerston and Russell, says: Both see France a better agent for the reorganization of Italy and for the creation of that federal union which is all the unity possible under existing circumstances. Were the question to be confined to the present state of affairs, the policy to be pursued might be stated in a sentence. Austria is flying homeward. France and Sardinia are pursuing her across the Adda. Venice is about to be attacked immediately on the east, and on the south the whole peninsula is rising against her and expelling her allies and garrisons. The only advice to be given is that Austria should accommodate herself to those painful circumstances, just as England admitted the independence of U. S., and France has twice submitted to the dictation of invaders. There can be no glory gained by stubborn and even victorious resistance to the just claims of a great nation and it is unwise to wage a war where even military success incurs moral opprobium. No doubt this and similar considerations will be in due time urged upon Austria by the two Ministers who have undertaken to divide the responsibility of our foreign relations.

There is no doubt entertained that the Convention between Russia and the Rothschilds will result in their being contractors for any future loan Russia may desire to raise.

In London a blue book has been published containing all the English correspondence on Italian affairs. The latest note assigns to Austria the last responsibility for all the miseries and calamities inevitably consequent on a conflict which was on the eve being averted.

The London Daily News of the 14th says: that it is believed that Lord Elgin has been offered the Secretaryship of the colonies. Mr Cobden will have the option of the Board of trade and Milner and Gibson will also enter the cabinet; Sidney Herbert will probably be Minister of war, Sir G. C. Lewis, President of the India Board and Mr. Gladstone chancellor of the Exchequer. Sir R. Bethell is also spoken of for the latter office. Sir James Graham, the Duke of Newcastle and the Duke of Argyle have declined to join the new administration.

The London Times' city article of the 13th inst. says, that the statements that Prussia will soon abandon her neutrality appear to rest on no definite authority and are perhaps merely encouraged at Berlin to meet the excitement in the other German States.

A submarine telegraph is to be laid from Weybourne to Denmark.

Wheat had declined 3s in London.

Farther Point, June 27.—The Nova Scotian with Liverpool and London dates to the 15th has arrived.

Great Britain.—Lord Palmerston was making good progress in the formation of his cabinet. Rumor gives Lord Elgin the Colonial Secretaryship; Richard Cobden the Board of Trade; Mr. Gladstone the Indian Secretaryship.

THE SEAT OF WAR.

A dispatch from Turin says that after the retreat of the Austrians from Bologna, the cardinal legate departed, and the municipality proclaimed King Victor Emanuel Dictator.

The King of Sardinia had issued an order extolling Garibaldi's deeds of valor and awarding him a gold medal of military order.

On the 13th inst. Napoleon moved his head-quarters to Georgezall.

The Austrians were evacuating Modena and were in full retreat towards the river Oglio.

An official announcement appears in the Weiner Zeitung, that the Emperor of Austria will forthwith assume the immediate command in chief of his army, and had ordered a new position for the army.

An order had been issued for the mobilization of the Prussian army.

Large reinforcements to the allied army were about to leave France.

London, June 15.—The Daily News says that no authorised statement of the composition of the new government can appear before Friday. The Herald, in publishing a telegram from Berlin, stating that six Prussian corps d'armee have been mobilized, says, of course this means war. The advent of Lord Palmerston's ministry has evidently induced her to take this decisive step and join Austria. The English people will now perceive the truth of what we before asserted, that the Earl of Derby's government alone preserved Europe from being involved in a general war.

The London News' city article says that the funds received a fresh impulse, owing to the progress made in the construction of the Ministry, and the increased hope that the war in Italy will not be of long duration.

The Advertiser says that after Lord John Russell accepted the foreign office, any office he might prefer was offered to Sir James Graham who declined from infirm health; but at the same time assuring Lord Palmerston that he cordially supported the Ministry.

Paris, June 14.—On the 13th the Emperor removed his head quarters to Georgezall. In the afternoon he superintended in the throwing of bridges across the river Adda. As soon as this was completed the army began the movement which was completed yesterday. After some heavy rains the weather is again fine, and the troops are in high spirits.

STATE OF THE TRADE.

The Manchester advices continue favorable. A better demand for all kinds of goods has sprung up, but it has had no effect on the prices.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market.—Richardson & Spence's circular reports flour as dull and declined 3@6d; American is quoted at 10s 6d@13s 6d, but finds no buyers. Wheat is dull and declined 3@4d; white Western at 10s@10 6d; red at 8s@9s 6d. Corn closed dull and a slight decline; mixed is quoted at 6s@6s 6d; yellow at 6s 3d@6s 6d, and white at 8s@8s 6d.

London, 14th.—Consols closed to-day at 93¼@93⅜ for account.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

New York, June 28.—The Board of Brokers have voted to adjourn from Friday to Tuesday.

The stockholders of the Lacrosse Railroad, are to have a meeting to raise money to carry on legal proceedings against Mr. Chamberlain, the President of one of the Boards elected at the time of the annual meeting. Mr. Cleveland proposes fifty cents per share contribution for this purpose. This upon the 180,000 shares reported to have been issued would yield $90,000.

The bank statement is not calculated to make money easier. The loans are but little lower, and the shipments of coin have come from [illegible] deposits.

The steamers of Saturday will take out quite a large sum in bars.

The Express says private letters by the California mail report that Monsieur Belly the famous French man had died of a fever, but the rumor needs confirmation. It is hardly likely that so important an event could have transpired without becoming at once generally known.

Baltimore, June 28.—Jno. Shronister who was shot on Sunday evening at the Washington Gardens by Wm. Coulson, died last night. Coulson is still at liberty.

The notorious Joe Edwards who has lately been indiscreetly paraded before the public as a hopeful convert, through the instrumentality of the Union prayer meetings, yesterday in company with another notorious rowdy, George alias Yacht Gardener, perpetrated a murderous assault upon a colored caulker, at Cooper and Abraham's ship yard, and knocked down and beat Capt. A. Cooper, Esq., a well known ship builder and member of the grand jury. He then proceeded to the ship David Stuart, and nearly murdered the steward, named Hammond, after which he sailed away in a small boat. He was subsequently overtaken and arrested, but released on straw bail. The assailants are caulkers, and were taking revenge on parties for employing colored caulkers.

Cleveland, June 28.—A train from Chicago on the Michigan Southern railroad, went through a culvert last night near South Bend. The accident was caused by the washing away of the culvert. Twenty to thirty persons are reported killed. The particulars will be sent as soon as possible.

Markets.

Cincinnati, June 28—Noon.—There is a fair demand for wheat with prices steady sales 1,000 bu good white at $1 40½, 400 bu at $1 36, and fair mixed at $1 28. Corn steady at 60c for mixed. Oats declined to 50c with sales 4,000 bu at that price. Barley steady at 60@65c. Rye firm at 96. Flour dull and prices drooping but not quotably lower, small superfine at $6@6 25c. Whisky unchanged, sales 600 bbls at 28@28½. Provisions dull, mess pork 31c per bbl lower, with sales at $15 75. 100 hhds bacon sold at 7@9c and some bulk sides at 8c. River falling slowly. Weather clear thermometer 91°.

New York, June 28.—Flour 10c lower, sales of 8 000 bbls at $5,40@5,90 for State, and $6,20@6,60 for Ohio. Wheat is nominally lower. Corn firm, sales of 20,000 bush. at 81@83c for mixed, and 84@86c for yellow. Pork heavy, at $16@16.12½ for mess, and $13.12½ for prime. Lard firm, at 10¾@11¼c. Whisky is dull and heavy at 29c. Stocks dull and irregular, Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati is quoted 95½c.

Philadelphia, June 28.—Flour continues dull with sales at $6 62½@7 25 for common, superfine and extra family at $7 50, and $8 00 for fancy lots. The receipts and stocks are light. 150 bbls rye flour sold at $4 50. Penna cornmeal dull at $3 87½. Wheat very dull, sales of red at $1 60@1 65, and white at $1 70@1 75. Rye offered at 90c without sales. 4,000 bu corn sold at 82c afloat. Oats are dull, and 15,000 bu prime southern sold at 46c. Buckwheat has declined to 65c. Whisky unchanged, sales at 27@28½c.

Baltimore, June 28.—Flour nominal at $6,62@6,75. Wheat dull at $1,65 for white. Corn firm, white 80c. Provisions steady. Whisky dull at 28c for Ohio.

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! By Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c, &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

CITY NOTICES.

Soda.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. Denig on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

☞ Dr. J. Stewart has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Balmors of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at Rumsey's if you want a superior article.

☞ Fassig's Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the past two or three years.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

C. A. Wagner, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in the Odeon building, No. 21 East State Street.

☞ Seltzer & Webster are the agents of Knabe & Co's., celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, if equaled.

The Capitol Restaurant is centrally located, and its Proprietor John O'Hara is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the [illegible] Morgan deserves the liberal custom he has.

☞ E. J. Jennings, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ Charley [illegible] is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ Frank Bennett, at Winbecker's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ Kennedy has the latest periodicals.

☞ A British officer writing from Teheran, Persia, to the London Times, remarks:—"A Cathartic Pill manufactured by an American Chemist (Dr. J. C. Ayer, of Lowell, Mass.) has cured the Shah, of a Liver Complaint that threatened his life. This simple fact, as might be expected, renders the Americans immensely popular here, while we English are overlooked. Doubtless our own scholars made the discoveries which he employs, and thus it is in everything: we do the labor, then the guessing Americans put their mark on it and take the reward. Dr. Ayer is idolized by the Court and its retainers here, which will doubtless be reflected to him on a gold medal, or diamond hilted sword, while not the same [illegible] of Davy, Christison or Brodie—the great lights by which he shines, is known."—New York Sunday Paper. july

FRESH MEATS! FRESH MEATS!!
D. W. HILL,
Columbus Meat Market,
North-East Cor. of Spring and High Sts.
Has constantly choice fresh and salted Beef, Pork, Mutton, Lamb, &c., which his Ice chests enable him to keep sweet in the warmest weather.
[illegible]
June 23.

DESHLER ICE.
Charles G. Deshler is serving his customers with Superior Ice. [illegible]
June 23.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT,
In the Basement of the Odeon Building,
By JOHN O'HARA,
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
[illegible]
He has a French Cook,
[illegible]
The Capitol Saloon,
[illegible]
June 23.

COLUMBUS
Machine Manufacturing Company,
MANUFACTURERS OF
STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,
CASTINGS,
MILL GEARING, MACHINERY,
—ALSO—
RAILROAD WORK.
P. AMBOS, Pres't. CHAS. AMBOS, Sec.
June 23-1

Ohio White Sulphur Springs
VIA THE
CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI
RAILROAD.
To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 4½ A. M. and 1 10 P. M. daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis Centre station, [illegible] miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the springs. For the accommodation of persons wishing to spend the Sabbath at the Springs, the [illegible] freight leaving Columbus [illegible] on Saturday, will leave passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.

RETURNING.

Cincinnati Express will stop for [illegible] at Lewis' Centre Station [illegible] MORNINGS ONLY, arriving in Columbus [illegible]. The Mail train will stop daily at 4 30 P. M., arriving in Columbus at 5 30 P. M.
Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages to meet [illegible] at all times to convey [illegible] Passengers can rely upon being taken to the Springs promptly on arrival of trains.
The citizens of Columbus will find this the most convenient way to go to the springs.
Tickets for the round trip to the Station and back during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.
For further information and tickets, inquire at the ticket office in the Depot.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.
Columbus June 23, 1859—3m.

DR. STEWART
WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the [illegible] House, Columbus, [illegible]
[illegible]
CANCERS removed without the knife by a [illegible]
[illegible]

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.
WHEN Dr. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish [illegible]
[illegible]
Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,
from members of the Medical Profession, [illegible]
Eye Witnesses.
[illegible]
Facts:
That his BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to Contain no Mineral;
That they cure the almost universal complaint,
Dyspepsia,
[illegible]
Liver Complaint,
[illegible]
Sick Females,
[illegible]
Shattered Constitutions,
[illegible]
Lengthen Life,
[illegible]
Cause soon to Heal,
[illegible]
Recruit the Debilitated,
[illegible]
FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY
[illegible]
And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union
[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1859.

Popular Songs.

THE PRAIRIE FLOWER.

On the distant prairie where the heather wild
In its quiet beauty lived and smiled,
Stands a little cottage, and a creeping vine,
Loves around its porch to twine.
In that peaceful dwelling lived a lovely child
With her blue eyes beaming soft and mild,
And the wavy ringlets of her flaxen hair
Floating in the summer air.

CHORUS—Fair as a lily, joyous and free,
Light of the prairie home was she,
Every one that knew her, felt the gentle power,
Of Rosalie the prairie flower.

On the distant prairie when the days were long
Tripping like a fairy sweet her song,
With the sunny blossoms, and the birds at play
Beautiful and bright as they.
When the twilight shadows gathered in the west,
And the voice of nature sank to rest,
Like a cherub kneeling, seemed the lovely child,
With her gentle eyes so mild.

CHORUS—Fair as a lily, &c.

When the summer faded, and the chilly blast
O'er that happy cottage swept at last,
When the autumn song-bird woke the dewy morn
Little prairie-flower was gone.
For the angels softly whispered in her ear
"Child, thy father calls thee, stay not here."
And they gently bore her, robed in spotless white,
To the blissful home of light.

CHORUS—Fair as a lily, &c.

☞ There is no song, no passage in prose or poetry, in the language, however tender, sacred or exquisite the sentiment expressed, but passes through the sacrilegious ordeal of parody. Witness the following from the New York Picayune:

HOME! DREAD HOME.

Our Other Side of "Home, Sweet Home."

BY JOHANNES [illegible] VON F. KOUPLER.

Mid mer-rooms un per ortare dough ve may roam,
Ve vinde dem much greater, more pleasant dan home
Vere nothing put sch-lling un shqualling is dere,
Vhich, as drough der vorld, you can nix meet elsewhere.
Home! home! dread home!
Der is no beace at home!
Der is no beace at home.

A feller vrom home, an grief haunts him in vain,
So give me der old-fashioned per-room again;
Ver vriends singing [illegible] vould trick as mine call
Un vere der vas beace of mind, dearer dan all
Home! home! dread home!
Der is no beace at home!
Der is no beace at home.

The Crusoe of the Snowy Desert.

[From Dickens' "All The Year Round."]

Late in the autumn of the year eighteen hundred and fifty-one, Mr. Baldwin Mollhausen, a Prussian traveler, pursuing his investigations in Northern America, had occasion to make a return journey across the Rocky Mountains to the Missouri. He started with one companion only, and with three horses and a mule, for riding and for carrying the baggage.

Scanty fodder, Indian treachery, and the fearful cold of those snowy regions, produced the first disasters of the travelers, by depriving them of the services of all four animals. Their last horse was killed by exposure to an icy gale, at a spot in the miserable wilderness called Sandy Hill Creek. Here, now that their last means of getting forward had failed them, they were compelled to stop, at a period of the year when every succeeding day might be expected to increase the horrors of the cold, and the chances of death by starvation in the prairie wastes.

They had a little Indian tent with them, and they set it up for shelter. They had also a small supply of dried buffalo meat, rice, and Indian corn. On this they existed miserably for a few days, until the Post from Fort Kearney to the Flat River happened to pass them.

With all the will to rescue both the travelers, the Post did not possess the power. It was barely possible for the persons in charge of it—their own lives depending on their getting on rapidly, and husbanding their provisions—to make room for one man in their little vehicle drawn by six mules. The other man would have no help for it but remain behind with the goods, alone in the wilderness, and to keep himself alive, if it was possible, in that dreadful position, until the Post could send horses back for him from the Catholic Mission, eighty or a hundred miles off.

In this emergency—an emergency of life or death if ever there was one yet—the travelers agreed on drawing lots to decide which man was to be rescued, and which man was to remain. The lot to remain fell on Mr. Mollhausen.

The Post resumed its journey at once, with the rescued traveler squeezed into the little carriage. Mr. Mollhausen watched the departure of the vehicle till it was out of sight, till he was left alone, the one living being in the white waste—the Crusoe of the snowy desert. He had three chances, not of life, but of death. Death by cold; death by the murderous treachery of savages; death by the teeth of the wolves which prowled the wilderness by night. But he was a brave man, and he faced his imminent perils and his awful loneliness with a stout heart.

He was well supplied with arms and ammunition; and the first thing he did when the Post left him was to look to these.—His next proceeding was to make use of snow on the earth to keep out the snow from the heavens by raising a white wall, firmly stamped, all round his little tent.—He then dragged up a supply of wood from the river near at hand, and piled it before his door. His fire-place was a hollow in the ground, in front of his bed of blankets and buffalo hides. The food he possessed to cook at consisted of buffalo meat and rice. He had also some coffee. These provisions, on which his feeble chance of life depended, he carefully divided into fourteen days' rations, having first calculated that, in fourteen days at the furthest, he might look for help from the Mission. The sum of his preparations was now complete. He fed his fire, set on his food to cook, and crept into his blankets to wait for the coming of night—the first night alone in the desert.

After a time, the silence and the solitude weighed upon him so heavily, that he sought some kind of comfort and companionship in trying to talk to himself; but, in that folorn situation, even the sound of his own voice made him shudder. The sun sank to its setting behind snow clouds; its last rays were trembling redly over the wilderness of white ground, when the howl of the wolves came down upon him on the icy wind. They were assembled in a ravine where the traveler's last horse had fallen dead, some days before. Nothing was left of the animal but his polished bones and the rings of his harness; and over these bare relics of their feast the ravenous creatures wrangled and yelled all night long. The deserted man, listened to them in his tent, tried to while away the unspeakable oppression of the dark hours by calculating their varying numbers from the greater or lesser volume of the howling sounds that reached him. Exhaustion overpowered his faculties, while he was still at his melancholy work. He slept till hunger awoke him the next day, when the sun was high again in the heavens.

He cut a notch in the pole of his tent to mark that one day was passed. It was then the sixteenth or eighteenth of November; and by Christmas he vainly believed that he would be safe at the Mission. That second day was very weary; and his strength was failing him already. When he dragged up the wood and water to his tent his feet were lame, and he staggered like a drunken man.

Hopeless and hungry, he sat down on his bed, filled his pipe with willow leaves, the best substitute for tobacco that he possessed, and smoked in the warmth of the fire, with his eyes on the boiling kettle into which he had thrown a little maize. He was still thus occupied, when the dreary view through the opening of the tent was suddenly changed by the appearance of human beings. Some horsemen were approaching him, driving Indian horses before them. His weapons were at hand, and, with these ready, he awaited their advance. As they came nearer, he saw that they were Indians of a friendly tribe, returning from a beaver hunt. Within gunshot they stopped; and one of them addressed him in English. They accepted his invitation to enter the tent; and, sitting there by his side, they entreated him, long and earnestly, to abandon the goods, to give up the vain hope of help from the Mission, and to save his life by casting his lot with theirs.

"The wolves," said the man who had first spoken in English—a Delaware Indian—"the wolves will give you no rest, day or night; and if the men of the Pawnee tribe find you out, you will be robbed, murdered and scalped. You have no hope of rescue. Bad horses would not live to get to you; and the whites of the Mission will not risk good horses and their own lives to save one man whom they will give up for lost. "Come with us."

But Mr. Mollhausen, unfortunately for himself, put faith in the Mission. He was, moreover, bravely and honorably anxious to preserve the goods, only the smaller share of which was his own property.—Firmly persuaded that his fellow white men would not desert him, and that they would bring him easier means of traveling, in his disabled condition, than those which the Delawares could offer, he stuck to his first resolution, and still said, "No."

The Indian rose to leave him.

"The word of a white," said the savage, "is more to you than the will and deed of a Red Skin. You have had your choice—may you not deceive yourself!"

With these words he shook Mr. Mollhausen by the hand, and he and his companions departed. They never once looked back at the traveler or his tent; but kept on their way rapidly towards the South, and left him a doomed man.

For the next eight days snow-storms raged incessantly, and threatened to bury him alive in his tent. Although he was, as yet spared the pangs of hunger, (the friendly Indians having increased his small stock of provisions by the leg of an antelope,) his sufferings of other kinds were indescribable. He was so lame that he had to crawl on his hands and knees when he fetched his supply of water; his head swam; and he dared not close his eyes by night for fear of the wolves. Maddened by hunger, they came nearer and nearer to him. Howling and yelling they circled round and round the tent, closer, and closer, at the close of every day. One night he heard the snow outside crackling under their feet; the next, he saw the teeth of one of them appear through the leather side of his tent. He could only scare them away by firing at them in the darkness; but they returned to the attack in a few hours; and they left him no chance of sleep till the broad daylight drove them back to their lairs.

He was just strong enough on the ninth day to make the ninth notch in the pole of the tent. On the tenth he was powerless. His courage gave way, and he despaired, for the first time, of rescue. He had a medicine-chest with him, which he had already used, containing a small bottle of laudanum and a case of quinine.—Without forming any distinct resolution, without well knowing what he did, he put the laudanum bottle to his lips and almost emptied it. A deep swoon followed the draught; he remembered taking it, and remembered nothing more.

When he came to himself again it was pitch dark, and his tent pole was rocking in a gale of wind. Thirst, and, in a lesser degree hunger, were his awakening sensations. He satisfied the first with half-melted snow, and the second with raw buffalo meat. When his fire (which had dwindled to a few glimmering sparks) was relighted, he roasted the meat; and recklessly devoured three days' rations at a meal. By the morning he was so much better (partly through the rest which the laudanum had given his mind, partly through the sustenance which the excess of food had afforded to his body) that the perservation of his life became once more a matter of some interest to him. He tottered out, leaning on his rifle, to get a little exercise. In a few days he contrived to walk as far as the top of a low hill, from which he could look forth, all round, over the lonesome prospect.

By this time his provisions were at an end, and the last faint hope of rescue from the Mission had died out of his mind.—It was a question, now, whether the man should devour the wolves, or the wolves the man. The man had his rifle, his ammunition, and his steady resolution to fight [illegible], cold and starvation, to the very last—and the wolves dropped under his bullets, and fed him with their dry, sinewy flesh. He took the best part of the meat only, and left the rest. Every morning the carcase abandoned over night was missing. The wolves that were living devoured to the last morsel the wolves that were dead.

He grew accustomed to his wretched and revolting food, and to every other hardship of his forlorn situation—except the solitude of it. The unutterable oppression of his own loneliness hung upon his mind, a heavier and heavier weight with each succeeding day. A savage shyness at the idea of meeting with any living human creatures began to take possession of him. There were moments when he underwent the most fearful of all mortal trials—the conscious struggle to keep the control of his own senses. At such times, he sang, and whistled, and extended his walks to the utmost limits that his strength would allow; and so, by main force, as it were, held his own tottering reason still in its place.

Thus, the woful time—the dreary, lonely, hopeless hours—wore on till he had cut his sixteenth notch in the tent-pole. This was a memorable day in the history of the Crusoe of the snowy desert.

He had walked out to the top of the little hill to watch the sun's way downward in the wintry western heavens, and he was wearily looking about him, as usual, when he saw two human figures, specks as yet in the distance, approaching from the far North. The warning of the Delaware Indian came back to his memory, and reminded him that those two men were approaching from the district of the murderous Pawnees.

A moment's consideration decided him to await the coming of these strangers in a place of ambush which commanded a view of his tent. If they were Pawnees, he knew that the time had come when they or he must die.

He went back to his tent, armed himself with as many weapons as he could carry, took the percussion-caps off the rest, and hid them under his bed. Then he put wood on the fire, so as to let the smoke rise freely through the opening at the top of the tent, and thereby strengthen any suspicion in the minds of strangers that a living man was inside of it; and he next fastened the second opening, which served for the door, tying it on the inner side, as if he had shut himself up for the night. This done, he withdrew to the frozen river of Sandy Hill Creek, about one hundred and fifty paces off, walking backwards so as to make his footmarks in the snow appear to be leading to the tent instead of away from it. Arrived on the ice, off which the high winds had drifted the snow upon the banks, he took off his shoes for fear the nails in them might betray him by scratches on the smoothly-frozen surface, and then followed the stream over the ice, till he reached the winding which brought its course nearest to his tent. Here he climbed up the bank, between two snow-drifts, and hid himself among some withered bushes, where the twigs and stalks gave him a sight of the tent, and just room enough, besides, for the use of his weapons.

In this situation he watched and listened. Although the frost was so intense that his breath froze on his beard, and his hand felt glued to the barrel of his levelled rifle, the fever of expectation in his mind prevented his feeling the cold. He watched, for what seemed to be an interminable time; and, at last, the heads of the two men rose in sight over the brow of a neighboring hill. Their figures followed in another minute. All doubts were ended now—the last day in the world had dawned for him or for them—the men were Pawnees.

After holding counsel together on the hill, the savages threw back their buffalo skins, drew their full quivers before them, and strung their bows. Then separated. One walked to the top of the hill from which the deserted traveler had first caught sight of them, to trace the direction of his footsteps; the other examining the track between the water and the tent.—Both appeared to be satisfied with their investigations; both met again before the tent, and communicated with one another by gestures, which expressed their conviction that the victim was asleep by his fire inside. In another moment they drew their bowstrings, placing themselves so that their double fire of arrows should meet at right angles in the tent.

The man whose life they were seeking never felt that life was so dear to him as at the moment when he saw them shoot five arrows into the place where he slept. Still he watched and waited; for his existence now depended on his cunning and patience, on his not miscalculating, by an instant, the time to fire. He saw the savages pause before they ventured into the tent. One of them dropped his bow, grasped his tomahawk, and knelt to creep under the curtain opening; while the other stood over him with his arrow in the string ready to shoot. In this position, the skull of the kneeling Indian was brought within the white man's line of sight; and he cocked his rifle. Faint as the click was, he saw that it had caught their quick ears—for they both started and turned round. Observing that the movement made the kneeling man less likely to escape his eye in the tent, he shifted his aim, and fired at the naked breast of the man with the bow. The sharp eye of the savage discovered his hidden enemy at the same instant, and he sprang aside. But it was too late—he was hit; and he fell with a scream that went through every nerve of Mr. Mollhausen's body. The other savage jumped to his feet; but the white man's weapon was the quickest of the two, and a discharge of buck-shot hit him full in the face and neck. He dropped dead on the spot, by the side of the other man who was still groaning.

Although he knew that he had justifiably shot in self-defense, two savages, whose murderous designs on his own life had been bestrayed before his eyes—although he was absolutely certain that if either one of the Pawnees had been permitted to escape, the whole tribe would have been at the tent by the next day—the brave traveler's nerve deserted him when he saw his two enemies on the ground, and when he thought of the terrible after-necessity of hiding what he had done. With a feeling of unutterable despair he mechanically loaded his rifle, and approached the place. The groans of the Indian who had been shot in the breast, moved his pity so strongly that they seemed to recall himself. First turning the dead Indian's face downwards, to escape the horrifying sight of his mangled features, he approached his wounded enemy, and made signs that he would forgive him, help him, cover him with buffalo skins, take him into the tent, and there do all that was in the power of man to gain his good-will by preserving his life.

The savage lay writhing and bleeding with his teeth clenched, with his eyes glaring in deadly hatred through the long black hair that almost covered his face.—But, after a while, the merciful white man saw that his gestures were understood. A sense of relief, even of joy overflowed his heart at the prospect of saving the Indian, and of securing a companion in his fearful solitude. The wounded man signed to him to come nearer, and pointed with his left hand to his right hand and arm, which lay twisted under him. Without the slightest suspicion, Mr. Mollhausen knelt over him to place his arm in an easier position. At the same moment, the wretch's right hand flashed out from beneath him, armed with a knife, and struck twice at the unprotected breast of the man who was trying to save him. Mr. Mollhausen parried the blows with his right arm, drew his own knife with his left hand, and inflicted on the vindictive savage the death that he had twice deserved. The rattle sounded in the throat, and the muscles of the naked figure stretched themselves in the last convulsions. The lost traveler was alone again; alone in the frozen wilderness, with the bodies of the two dead men.

The night was at hand—the night came—a night never to be forgotten, never in any mortal language to be described.—Down with the gathering darkness came the gathering wolves; and round and round the two corpses in front of the tent they circled and howled. All through that awful night the lost man lay listening to them in the pitch darkness, now cooling his wounded arm with snow, now firing his pistol to scare the wolves from their human prey.

With the first gleam of daylight he rose to rid himself of the horrible companionship of the bodies, and of all that betrayed their fate, before the next wandering Indians came near the spot, and before the wolves gathered again with the darkness. Hunger drove him to begin by taking their provision of dried buffalo meat from under the dead men's leather girdles. He then rolled up their remains, with whatever lay about them, in their buffalo robes, tied them round, dragged them, one after the other, to the hole in the ice where he got his water, and pushed them through it, to be carried away by the current of the river.

Even yet, the number of his necessary precautions was not complete. He had a large fire to make, next, on the spot where the two savages had dropped, with the double object of effacing all traces of their fall, and of destroying the faintest scent of blood before the wolves collected again. When the fire had dwindled to a heap of ashes, a new snow storm smoothed out all marks of it. By the next morning not a sign was left to betray the deaths of the Indians—the smooth ground was as empty and white as ever—and of all that had happened on that memorable, sixteenth day of the traveler's sojourn in the wilderness, nothing now remained but the terrible recollection of it.

The time wore on from that date, without an event to break the woeful monotony of it, until Christmas came. He was still alive in his solitude on Christmas day. A stolid apathy towards the future had begun to get possession of him; his sense of the horror of his situation grew numb and dull; the long solitude and the ceaseless cold seemed to be slowly freezing his mind, and making a new wilderness there, dreary, and empty as the waste that encompassed him. His thoughts wandered with a certain sadness to the Christmas trees and the children's festivals, at that blessed season in his native Germany—but he was too far gone for any deep grief, or for any bitter pangs of despair.

He kept Christmas day with the only indulgence he could afford himself, a pipeful of the dry willow leaves; and, as night fell, he lay on his back by the fire, looking up through the hole of his tent, at the frosty heavens, and fancying dimly that the kind stars looked down on him, as they had often looked, in by-gone days, at home.

The old year ended and the new year came. His hold on life was slackening—and the end was not far off. It was daylight, early in the month of January. He was resting under his blankets—not asleep, and not awake. Suddenly the sound of approaching footsteps reached him on the still air. It was no dream—a salutation of Indian language sounded in his ear a moment afterwards. He roused himself, and caught up his rifle. More words were spoken before he could get out of the tent. It was the English language this time. "You are badly off, here, friend," said a cheerful voice. Had the white men of the Post and the Mission remembered him at last? No. When the tent covering was raised, an Indian entered, and pushed his five-foot rifle in before him.—A savage-looking man, with five savage companions. The lost traveler advanced to meet them with his rifle ready. Happily, he was wrong this time. These savage wanderers of the prairie—these charitable heathens whom the pitiless Christians at the Mission were established to convert—had come to do the good work which his white brethren had, to their eternal disgrace, neglected; they had come to save him.

The man who had spoken in English was a half-breed—a voluntary renegade from civilization. His companions belonged, like himself, to the friendly tribe of Ottoe Indians. They had gone out with squaws on a hunting expedition; and they had seen the smoke of the lost traveler's fire two miles off. "You are hungry," they said to him, producing their own food—"eat. You are ready the perish—come with us. You are sick—we will take care of you and clothe you."—Those were the words of the Red Skins; and the friendly promises they implied were performed to the letter.

On the next day every member of the hunting party, including the women and the boys, assembled at the tent to remove the forsaken white man, and all that belonged to him, to their own camp. The goods, for the preservation of which he had risked his life, were packed up; the wagon, abandoned by his fellow traveler and himself, at the beginning of their disasters, where their last horse died, was cleared of snow and made fit for use again; and even the tent was not left behind. It was too firmly frozen to the ground to be pulled up; so it was cut off just above the snow, and was thrown over the rest of the baggage. When the Indians had packed the wagon, their wives and their boys harnessed themselves to it, and dragged it away to the camp. Mr. Mollhausen and the elder warriors followed. The Prussian traveler stopped before he left the place forever, to take a last look at the lonely scene of all his sufferings and all his perils. The spot where his tent had stood was still marked in the snowy waste by the ashes of his expiring fire. His eyes rested long on that last left, touching trace of himself and his hardships—then wandered away to the bank of the river where he had lain in ambush for the Pawnees—to the hole in the ice through which he had thrust their bodies. He shuddered, as well as he might, at the dreadful memories which the familiar objects around him called up. A moment more, and he was descending the hill, from the summit of which he had looked back, to follow the trail of his Indian friends—a moment more, and he left his home in the desert forever.

In less than five weeks from that time, he and his wagon load of goods were safe, thanks to the Ottoe Indians, at a fur-trading station on the Missouri river; and he was eating good bread again, and drinking whiskey punch in the society of white men.

The particulars of this fearful narrative of suffering and peril have been abridged from an episode in Mr. Mollhausen's own record of his traveling adventures in North America during a second visit to that part of the world, when he was in the employment of the United States Government.

POPULATION AND PEOPLE OF CINCINNATI.—Mr. Cist has just published his "Sketches and Statistics of Cincinnati in 1859." He estimates the population of that city—exclusive of Covington and Newport—at 225,000, and assumes that if the census of 1860 is properly taken, it will be 252,000. The total increase of population from 1830 to 1840 was 90 per cent.; from 1840 to 1850, without allowing for deficiency in the census of 1840—the increase was 150 per cent. Of the foreign born and native inhabitants Mr. C says:

"Of the foreign born citizens, the German element largely preponderates, being more than two-thirds of the whole; the Irish is next, and with the natives of the other British isles and dependencies, make up nine-tenths of the residue. Foreigners, with their children born here, constitute more than half our population. Of natives, those of Ohio make up three-fourths of the aggregate. Pennsylvania, New York, Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey and Indiana are of successive importance as to numbers. The entire New England ingredient does not more than equal that of either Virginia or Kentucky, and is not more than half that of Pennsylvania. As a general rule the Irish reside in the vicinity of the river, and the Germans occupy our territory to the north and north-west. The Germans, to a great extent, own the property on which they reside. Of all classes of foreigners, the German soonest assimilates to the great mass. It takes but one generation to obliterate all the distinctive marks of this race—even of language, usually a most tenacious feature. On the contrary, the Irishman, whose dialect does not differ much except in accent and tone, from ours, retains his family identity for several generations. So, also, but in a less degree, with the English and Scotch."

☞ An awful accident occurred at the steam saw mill of Mr. Jacob Bush, of Lewis county, Va., last week. While Mr. James Rankhead, of Braxton county, was adjusting the machinery, he was caught by the strap and thrown against a circular saw, severing the legs from the body and sawing the body in twain, scattering the bowels in every direction. His heart and liver were cut in two and thrown off some thirty feet.

☞ The people of Newburyport, Mass., are talking about reducing the number of school hours, and have but one session a day.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

YE CAN CONQUER IF YE WILL.

Rugged toiler—son of labor—
Sternly battling every day,
For existence—O, my brother,
Thou shalt triumph in the fray.
On life's changeful scene of action,
Though defeat may oft appear,
Thou shalt win the victor's laurels,
If thou wilt but persevere.

Though thou art obscure and lowly,
Thou must reach the wished for goal,
Grasp the prizes, wealth and station,
If thou hast a dauntless soul.
If thou hast a resolution
That misfortune cannot shake;
One on which the angry surges
An impression fail to make.

Art thou sneered at and derided
By the self-styled lofty born?
Heed thou not the fool's contumely,
Or the weak mind's harmless scorn.
Art thou friendless—friends will gather,
As the courtiers, kings around,
When thou hast achieved distinction,
When thou hast position found.

Strong in faith, but naught repel there,
Thou shalt in the end prevail;
In life's trials, and its battles,
None but nerveless cowards fail!
Noble natures prove [illegible]
When earth's mighty contests ring,
To renown, from dark oblivion,
Robed in glory up they spring.

What if years of fierce endeavor
Have been spent by thee in vain?
What if thou hast met disaster?
Up! and take the field again!
Wreck and ruin all about thee,
Give not out, but struggle still;
Stubborn courage is resistless,
Ye can conquer if ye will!

TO EXCLUDE FLIES.—It is said that flies will not pass through the meshes of a net, though sufficiently large to admit several at once with expanded wings, such is their dread of the web of their natural enemy. Suspend a net of light-colored thread to the outside of the window, and permit the light to enter the room from that side only. This excludes them effectually while it is no barrier to the air.

HAIR OF CHILDREN.—It is a great mistake to plait the hair of children under eleven or twelve years of age. The process of plaiting more or less strains the hairs in their roots by pulling them tight; tends to deprive them of their requisite supply of nutriment, and checks their growth. The hair of girls should be cut rather short, and allowed to curl freely.—When they are about eleven or twelve, the hair should be twisted into a coil not too tight, nor tied at the end with thin thread but with a piece of ribbon.

TO CURE RHEUMATISM.—It is said inflamatory rheumatism can be cured by the following simple method: "Half an ounce of pulverised saltpetre put in a half pint of sweet oil. Bathe the parts afflicted, and a sound cure will immediately follow."

NOXIOUS GASES.—When, by letting down a burning candle, it is found that a well contains carbonic acid, it is only necessary to pour down a sufficient quantity of lime water to take it up; and if a person lies senseless at the bottom, this is the best, if not the only means to rescue him from certain death, and it is infallible.

Chrome yellow (chromate of lead) is said to be an excellent substitute for arsenic or strychnine in poisoning rats. The color frees it from the danger of mistake. Mix it in dough or make a paste and throw in wheat, corn or grain of some kind.

Sour buttermilk is said to be a remedy for lice on calves, to be used as a wash.

By sowing nitrate of soda in small quantities in showery weather, under trees, a most beautiful verdure will be obtained, and the herbage is preferred.

The Davenport (Iowa) Gazette compiles from the Assessor's returns for Scott county, some facts which illustrate fully the great comparative decrease last year in the products of the county, and convey an idea of the severe loss suffered by farmers from the damage to their crops; 47,278 acres sown in wheat produced only 336,166 bushels, whereas in 1856, 23,661 acres produced 536,521 bushels. Of oats 10,780 acres were sown, which produced only 73,843 bushels, whilst 5,218 acres in '56 yielded 179,896 bushels; 23,068 acres planted in corn brought 664,243, and in '56—15,703 acres brought 780,737 bushels. The population of Scott county is shown to be 25,861, and that of Davenport alone 15,190 with 3,049 dwelling houses.

NEUTRALIZING POISON.—A general reader sends us the following prescription:—

"A Poison of any conceivable prescription and degree of potency, which has been intentionally or accidently swallowed, may be rendered almost instantly harmless by swallowing two gills of sweet oil. An individual with a very strong constitution should take nearly twice the quantity.—This oil will almost positively neutralize every form of vegetable, animal or mineral poison with which physicians and chemists are acquainted."

TRUSTING TO A SINGLE CROP.—There is no crop that does not fail sometimes, though there are a few which are never wholly cut off in any season. Grass, for example, always yields a partial crop; and a person may, if need be, depend wholly on this product as a means of subsistence. The same thing, however, can hardly be said of any other staple crop. Innumerable illustrations might be given of the danger of depending on a single crop.—The result in Ireland of relying upon the potato crop is patent. The failure of the wheat crop, in many parts of this country, has involved thousands of farmers in debt, which will take years of toil and economy to liquidate. A friend at the West has been so successful in raising peaches that he turned his whole attention to the crop. One year he realised a large net profit, and looking for still greater results next year, he laid out his plans accordingly, and incurred considerable debt, to be paid from the proceeds of his peaches. The result is, that from six or seven thousand trees he gathered scarcely two bushels of marketable fruit.

A mixed cultivation is the safest in the long run. If the potato crop fails, let there be corn, wheat, barley, or other grain to fall back upon. The chances of utter failure are diminished by different crops under culture. A season destructive to one is likely to be just the thing for another.—Am. Ag.

A BURGLAR SHOT.—On Sunday morning of last week, about two o'clock, Mr. Benner, a jeweler at New Lisbon, caught a young man in the act of helping himself to four silver and one gold watch in his shop, and put at him with a revolver.—The fellow ran and was pursued, the pistol going off three times in the direction he was going. One shot hit him in the side below the ribs, which brought a lusty yell from the wounded bird. Still he ran, crossed a creek, sat down on the bank, and thinking himself a "gone coon," cried immensely for help. Help came, took him to jail, got a doctor, who extracted the ball, and saved the scamp for the Penitentiary, if he lives.

☞ The City of Baltimore receives $900,000 as its share of the McDonough estate.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.
A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Saloon and Restaurant supplied with the best of every thing. June 23.

GIBSON HOUSE,
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers:
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially Tiles; including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse Keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store. June 14, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

LATEST BOOKS—
Mosaic. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Steuben.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Caird's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store. June 14, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

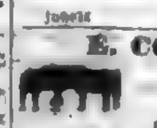
PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.
RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.
Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October State election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of this State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."
WM. B. WOODS, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER, President of the Senate.
April 4, 1859.
SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE, Columbus, O., April 7, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly, is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.
A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.
AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO, Columbus, April 18, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correctly as recorded in this office.
JOHN PHILLIPS, Auditor of Franklin County.
june16-td

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Well selected for this market.
Silks, Satins, Lawns, Robes, Berages, Calicoes, Chintz,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles, Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
J. G. CHITTENDEN.
may12.

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS.
BLANK BOOKS,
of every size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices,
supplied with any article, in the line of Stationery, on the best terms, and all Work warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
JOB PRINTING, BOOK BINDING
A full supply, at all times, of Valuable Standard Works Foreign and American Editions.
A good stock of valuable Mechanical and Scientific Works at all times. All the new Books received direct.
French, English and American Stationery
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.
Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors from 3 to 8ft., French Plate; Oil Paintings and Engravings, Portrait and Picture Frames of every kind on hand and made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens; Work Boxes and Dressing Cases; Card Cases and Porte Monnaies; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes; Pocket Books, Wallets, Bill Holders, &c., &c.
june16

New Books.
FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
Views and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
Acadie, or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederic S. Cozzens.
Seacliff, or the Mystery of the Westervelts. By J. W. De Forest.
[illegible] By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Teachers and Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Asia, Africa and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland. (6 vols., cloth $10.)
The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novelette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
[illegible]
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Works of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of General H. Havelock, K.C.B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.
June 16, 1859-tf J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.
DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
[illegible]
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England. New Ed. with additions.
[illegible]
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Howard.
Sixty Years' Gleanings.
The Foster Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
[illegible] and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Arago's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store.
june16 J. H. RILEY & Co.



Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Agnel's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Staunton's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.
CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10½ a. m., to 12 m. One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make the Saloon one of the best in the city. may25-3m.

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $251,000.
Offices 257 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N. Y.
This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent, Columbus Ohio.
may28tf

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.
THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.
The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.
The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.
An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.
Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa. By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
may12ly.

1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs.
Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.
The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles North of Columbus, (the Capitol of Ohio) on the Scioto River, 10 miles from Delaware, 5 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburgh Railroad, and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad.
The medical qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States. For Room or other information, address
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio.
june16

E. CORNELISON,

TUNER AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
[illegible] Music Store, will receive prompt attention. je16

C. A. WAGNER,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF FIRE WORKS, FIRE BALLOONS, FLAGS, MOTTOES, &c.
☞ Exhibition Fire Works for Cities Towns and Private parties at low prices from $25 to $500, and the necessary directions given for burning the same.
State Street, Columbus, Ohio.
je16-1m

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,
The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.
The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing
Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of Confirmed Consumption.
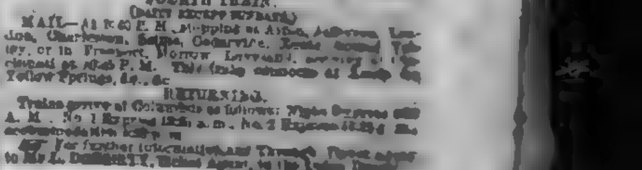
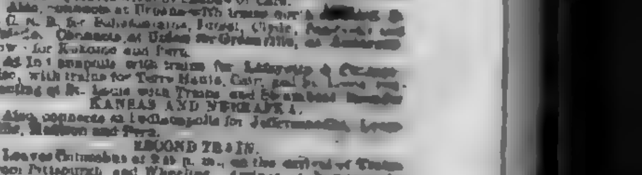
A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.
These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.
In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.
jelm3

Fever and Ague,
from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathise with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.



Ayer's Ague Cure,
which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Billious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.
This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system, and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.
PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.



Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.
FOR COSTIVENESS;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA;
FOR JAUNDICE;
FOR THE CURE OF INDIGESTION;
FOR HEADACHE;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSENTERY;
FOR A FOUL STOMACH;
FOR THE CURE OF ERYSIPELAS;
FOR THE PILES;
FOR THE CURE OF SCROFULA;
FOR ALL SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS;
FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM;
FOR DISEASES OF THE SKIN;
FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT;
FOR DROPSY;
FOR THE CURE OF TETTER, TUMORS, AND SALT RHEUM; FOR WORMS;
FOR THE CURE OF GOUT;
FOR A DINNER PILL;
FOR THE CURE OF NEURALGIA;
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.
They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.
Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.
Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The Agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.
Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.
All our Remedies are for sale by
Roberts & Samuels, No. 34 N. High St., Columbus O., Suire Eckstein & Co., Cincinnati O., [illegible] Cleveland O., W. Allinson, [illegible] O., and by all druggists, and dealers in medicine.

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.
Great Northern & Eastern Route,
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore.
Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad.
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.
THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.
FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at [illegible]
SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, [illegible] Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad [illegible]
THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at [illegible]
☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.
RETURNING.
[illegible]
Fare as low as by any other Route.
For further information, and Through and Local Tickets, apply to M. L. Doherty, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. C. & X. Railroads.
E. S. FLINT, Superintendent.
[illegible]
JAMES PATTISON, Agent.
Columbus, May 23, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, [illegible]
FIRST TRAIN (DAILY)
NIGHT EXPRESS—at 2:15 A. M., [illegible] Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:30 A. M. [illegible]
SECOND TRAIN.
NO. 1 EXPRESS—[illegible]
THIRD TRAIN.
NO. 2 EXPRESS—[illegible]
FOURTH TRAIN.
MAIL—[illegible]
RETURNING.
[illegible]
Columbus, May 12, 1859.

1859. NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST. 1859.
Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily.
(Sundays excepted.)
Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:
FIRST TRAIN.
[illegible]
KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.
[illegible]
SECOND TRAIN.
[illegible]
THE WAY FREIGHT.
[illegible]
Columbus, Ohio, May 12, 1859.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!

A Democratic Newspaper,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.

By J. Birney Marshall,

At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic truths and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statements relied on for their unhesitating veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, but consistently pursue the object for which it is established—that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disruption—while it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the duty, (it must know that it is Democratic and not a false light held up to blind, perhaps to betray)—while it will support the present Administration [illegible], and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its candidate for the Presidency in 1860, and [illegible] consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to promote his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year........$2 00

A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; 15 per cent on clubs of twenty; 15 per cent on clubs of thirty; and 20 per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 22, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Received for six months at One Dollar in advance.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Will be sent for the campaign, to subscribers at FIFTY CENTS for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS

May be formed for the Press at the following rates:

Five Copies........[illegible]
Ten........[illegible]
Twenty........[illegible]
Fifty........14 00
One hundred copies........[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1859. NUMBER 9.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $1 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 6 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion	$1.00
Each additional insertion	50
One square 3 months	5.00
" " 6 "	8.00
" " 12 "	12.00
One fourth of a column per year	40.00
" half "	60.00
" column	100.00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $10.00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements must be paid for in advance.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognise the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintainance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose domains it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and equally disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those conflicts which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretensions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by adopting a measure taken from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizens a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

[illegible]

The great leading central organ of Democracy is unfortunate in unraveling the mystery of the letters of the Secretary of State. Its first effort explained what Gen. Cass did not say. Its second thought the more full letter to Hofer was all right, and defended the position, that any naturalized citizen who was in the army at the time he left Europe, or had been called into the army, could not be exempt from service, by naturalization. As a dernier resort, it publishes what the National Intelligencer says, relying upon the old federal organ to sustain the Democratic Secretary. Perhaps it will not relish the views taken by Hon. George E. Pugh, which if its own several positions are correct, are not exactly orthodox.

Mr. Pugh's explanation is able, but undertakes to conjecture what Gen. Cass meant, rather than what he said. If Gen. Cass meant the French and Prussian rules merely to include deserters from their armies he would have said so.—[Fact.

CHANGE IN THE BRITISH MINISTRY.—The leaning of the Ohio Statesman to the Derby Ministry and its Austrian sympathy, did not save it. It has gone by the board, and the new British Ministry it is understood will sympathise with the Italian cause. Whether this will have any effect upon the Statesman's sympathy for Austria and Austrian arms, has not yet transpired. The Statesman gives a fling at Lord JOHN RUSSELL, however, which must make that gentleman feel very down-hearted. It says:

"Nobody appears to have any confidence in Lord John Russell, and nobody ought to have any. The Bedford family influence, which ruled the old Whig party in England, seems to be about "played out."

Yet for all this, it seems that PALMERSTON has some confidence in Lord JOHN—at least so say the telegraphic despatches, unless the Statesman's "stupid fool in the Telegraph-office" made another blunder.—[Fact.

☞ The New York Herald is still beating about in its attempt to show that Mr. BUCHANAN is the only possible and probable compromise candidate for the Presidency, who can reconcile the Northern and Southern wings of the Democracy.

The Mobile Register on Judge Douglas.

The Mobile Register of the 26th, takes ground against the effort making in the South to ostracise Judge Douglas, simply because he has chosen to maintain his political integrity in adhering to the basis of compromise of the Congressional slavery agitation agreed upon in 1850, and further amplified in 1854-6—while other Democrats have thought proper to turn traitors to themselves and their party.—The Register says:

"We said the other day, and with a conscientious belief in the absolute truth of the averment, that no public man has ever been so misunderstood and so misrepresented as Judge Douglas at the South, and we greatly fear that his growing prominence as a Presidential candidate has not a little to do with the attempt to cripple him and put him out of the way of other aspirants of smaller calibre and statesmanship. The effort upon a man of less steadfastness of purpose than Judge Douglas would have been most fortunate to the South, in separating from it the boldest, ablest, and truest public man of the State-rights school that has yet risen up to throw down the glove of defiance to the abolition enemy, and to vanquish it, against immense odds, on its own free soil fields of fight.

We do not think the South can afford to throw away such a man as this, either through tenderness to the Buchanan Administration, the ambition of southern gentlemen, or a misapprehension of and prejudice against his views on a single point.

* * * * *

It was because Judge Douglas would not surrender principles which he had maintained for years in the Senate, and which he had defended on a thousand stumps before the people, and abandon an adjustment squarely made in Congress, and endorsed by the people of the South over the heads of the fire-eaters; because he had the courage to stand by the settlement, in defiance of the power of a then new and popular Administration, in the first year of its existence, that he has been denounced from Dan to Beersheba by the southern press, and accused of principles and opinions treasonable to the South, which he has never entertained.

Is this "doing fair?" Is this wise in us of the South? Are Constitutional and true men so plenty at the North that we can afford to throw away that one of them who has stood a head and shoulders above all his compeers in courage, in manliness, in faithful consistency? These are important questions for the South to answer, and upon their wise solution will depend events of the greatest magnitude.

For our part, we conscientiously believe that Judge Douglas stands firmly and consistently upon the basis of compromise of the Congressional slavery agitation agreed upon by the majority of the Democratic Senate in 1850, resisted by the fire-eaters, (the writer of this article among them,) and afterwards ratified and endorsed over our heads by overwhelming majorities of the southern people. If now the South wishes again to change its front, is it fair in its public men and its presses to decry and denounce as a traitor a northern Democrat who simply stands by the bargain then made, endorsed over and over again by the Democratic party, north and South? We think not, and that all honest and candid men will agree with us. We opposed the bargain at the time with all our might, but we took it, not because Congress made it, but because the sovereign State and people of Georgia willed it so."

A Strong Position.

The Lynchburg Republican, one of the ablest and most influential of the Virginia Democratic journals, announces its position as follows:

"We are gratified to observe that our position in favor of non-intervention with slavery in the Territories is likely to be sustained by the almost unanimous Democratic sentiment of the country. Intervention has but few advocates, and they can not long hold out against the almost unbroken opinions of the National Democracy. A few extreme men in the South, tenacious of their individual opinions, may continue to cling to their peculiar and extreme views upon this subject, but the whole question will receive a quietus in the Charleston Convention. The National Democracy will again plant itself upon the Cincinnati platform and the compromises of the country without the emasculation or addition of any plank."

The views expressed by the Richmond Enquirer in favor of Congressional protection of slavery in the Territories we are satisfied does not reflect the sentiment of the Democratic party in its own State. Otherwise, we have evidence that the Democracy of the South generally will abide by the doctrines announced in the Cincinnati platform upon the question of slavery. The Richmond Examiner which is supposed to represent the views of Senator Hunter, is equally emphatic with its Lynchburg cotemporary in defining its position:

"Were we to insist upon forcing on the Democratic party the doctrine of the duty and power of intervention by Congress for protection of slave property in the Territories, we should abandon the old practice of our party, subject ourselves to the mortification of defeat in the Democratic Convention; and, if successful, drive off the masses of the North, paralyse our party in the free States; and yield the Presidency to the Black Republicans; and all this we would encounter for the purpose of reviving an issue which has been practically adjudicated, and has ceased to be a living and practical question."

All signs indicate that the Charleston Convention will re-affirm the Cincinnati platform without essential alterations, and that the Democracy will go into the Presidential contest still pledged to "non-interference by Congress with slavery in State and Territory or in the District of Columbia."

POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY.—Our exchanges throughout the State bring us reports of caucusses in which resolutions were passed in favor of the Democratic doctrine of popular sovereignty, as understood by President Buchanan when he said, that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether or not they will have slaves among them. The Bangor Times of last week says the delegates to the State Convention thus far elected are about four to one in favor of popular sovereignty.—Saco (Me.) Democrat.

The New Hampshire Gazette says: The following noble letter from Judge Douglas is honest and manly, and proves that he will play no double game for the Presidency. He will neither cheat nor be cheated.

That talk is very different from the Ohio Statesman, that could find nothing in it "to which any Democrat could take exceptions."

Artful Dodging.

We did not suppose the Statesman would take decided ground relative to the Douglas letter, notwithstanding the onslaught upon it by the Washington City Constitution, echoed by the Cleveland National Democrat.—The Statesman is understood to be in that interesting situation called "moulting time"—when the bird casts its feathers and the snake its skin, and newspapers "cross to the other side of Jordan." But the period is rather premature. Time has not sufficiently sped.—The Post office and Government patronage have not been enjoyed sufficiently yet and "Let us not distract our councils or impair our energy by introducing the Presidency into our politics until after the State election. We will have ample time then to discuss the question."

Prudent advice enough—especially as the Washington Constitution has already indicated the way Democrats should go, therefore it would be wrong in the Democratic papers of Ohio to express an opinion, especially if they are reluctant to follow the lead.

The Statesman approaches the letter very warily, and smells around it as gingerly as a dainty dog would a dish which contains choice fare, but is apprehensive that there may be something in it not so enticing. At last it gathers courage to do something, and after looking all around to see that it is not watched, arrives at a most dainty and satisfactory conclusion. After several days' gestation it is thus happily delivered:

"The note of Judge Douglas appears, notwithstanding it is quite brief and explicit enough, to puzzle the wise ones of the press very much. This one thinks it a bold stroke, fortunate in time, happily conceived, and just the thing for the occasion; another thinks it a miserable affair and of no moment whatever; a third sees in it conclusive evidences that Judge Douglas intends to abandon the party, cut loose from the organization, and oppose the nominee of the Charleston Convention; a fourth esteems it an attempt to dictate terms to the Convention, as to the platform and candidate; a fifth applauds it as evidence of the continued integrity and consistency of Judge Douglas as the great doctrines of popular sovereignty and the rights of the people of the territories as well as the States to regulate their internal affairs in their own way, &c. The Democratic papers in the free States, with but few exceptions approve of the sentiments expressed in the letter of Judge Douglas, whereas it will no doubt meet with severe criticism in some of the Southern Democratic journals. Mr. Dorr having interrogated Judge Douglas, the latter was in duty bound to reply, and we are at a loss to perceive anything in the brief note he has written, to which any Democrat need take exceptions."

The most scrupulously careful neutral papers that sought to be exemplary in its non-committalism, could not have hit upon a more harmless manner of expressing nothing. The concluding phrase is peculiarly striking and savory. "We are at a loss to perceive anything in the brief note which he (DOUGLAS) has written, to which any Democrat need take exceptions." Then he has written something in "the brief note" to which "any Democrat" may "take exceptions." If the Statesman meant anything else, why not say so at once that there was nothing in it to which any Democrat could take exceptions? But that might give offence in a certain quarter, which the Statesman was studious to avoid. It is not ready to cast its skin and don a new coat. Time enough for that after the fall election. Bear ye them all Democrats! You need not take exceptions to Mr. DOUGLAS'S letter. It is only a private note to an inquisitive gentleman whom he was bound to answer, but there is nothing very dangerous in it; some think of it one way and some another, and "we think it contains nothing——to which you "need take exceptions."

There now, Mr. DOUGLAS, take that and rejoice at our friendship. See how boldly the Statesman and "us" sustain you in defiance of the President and his Constitution.

The friends of Mr. DOUGLAS must be very grateful for this display of generosity, which tells them if they "do not think it good cider to just smell of the mug."—[Fact.

The Douglas Letter.

The short letter of Senator Douglas on the Presidential question, published in our columns the other day, has produced not only excitement but consternation in certain political circles. The letter is a Napoleonic movement in political strategy. It demolishes, with the irresistible force of a lightning stroke, the plans or schemes of those Presidential aspirants who have been coquetting with the Secessionists of the South and the truckling "doughfaces" of the North. We are not, therefore, surprised that the organs of petty cliques should denounce the letter in the bitterest terms. It destroys all their hopes.

Douglas has given the death blow to the secession agitators; and though our ears may be filled for a time with their groans and dying agonies, every patriot will rejoice over their extinction. They have, for many years, exerted a most malarious influence upon the domestic and foreign policy of our Government, but their powers for future mischief is completely broken.—N. Y. Sun.

DOUGLAS NORTH AND SOUTH.—The Bangor Times says that more than four hundred delegates to the Maine Democratic State Convention have now been chosen, and in the proportion of at least two to one they are in favor of electing delegates to the Charleston Convention, who will vote for STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1860, and of a platform which clearly defines and endorses popular sovereignty. Per contra the Charleston News declares that if the Charleston Convention hesitates about a slave code, and especially if DOUGLAS is in danger of nomination, the southern delegates will secede, and nominate for themselves.

AN INDEPENDENT JUDICIARY.—At the Buffalo dinner to Gov. MORGAN of New York, Judge CLINTON was called to respond to a sentiment complimentary to the Judiciary. In the course of his few pleasant remarks, he said that Judges should be independent in every respect.—Judges should be placed above all fear of pecuniary want, that those who are needy may not be approached. That they might say "though the Heaven fall, I will do justice," know no justice which does not spring from the laws, and is not sanctioned by the Constitution of our country. There is no higher-law than the Constitution—there can be no justice that conflicts with that holy instrument. Give us such judges, and then, indeed, will that sentiment become universal. What so base as a venal judge? What so craven as the judge who hesitates, for a moment, because the people demand it? What more despicable than the timid judge? Give us independent judges, and you cannot give them to us unless you yourselves are a law-respecting, law-abiding people. Give us such judges—then indeed will the Constitution be revered—then indeed will it stand forth as the beacon of hope, the harbinger of peace, good will and happiness to the world.

☞ A Washington dispatch, June 27, says: "Negotiations have been going on here since the death of Dr. Bailey, to secure the National Era for a party paper for the Republican Presidential candidate. Donn Piatt, of Ohio, it is understood, will take charge of it as an organ of Gov. Chase."

The County Candidates.

The canvass for county offices is going on in this county quietly but not the less industriously. Some little feeling is experienced in the matter of Clerk of Common Pleas, but the absence of Mr. Martin, one of the Democratic candidates, for some month or so, has caused less to be said on the subject than probably will be upon his return home, which is expected every day. We do not hear much said of the Republican candidates for this office.

For Sheriff, the friends of the Democratic candidates, or some of them at least, are secretly very active. Those who desire the office have not announced themselves, but it is thought as there is a multiplicity of candidates, one who is obnoxious to a majority of his party may get the nomination. Among the Republicans, Mr. Ijams has been announced, and the contest it is thought will be narrowed down to that gentleman Col. Miles Pinney, and Capt. Marion, strong men with their party, but who is the more popular remains to be seen.

The public mind has not settled down upon the favorites for representatives in the next Legislature. On the Democratic side there is considerable feeling in favor of the late incumbents, Judge BARKER and Dr. CHANEY, whose course in the Legislature entitled them to the renewed confidence of their constituents. But "things is working," and the private views of certain leaders are contemplating other timber out of which to make representatives. There is an undercurrent, silently gliding through the county, bearing one of those submarine inventions of mischief, which do not disclose themselves until they explode. We allude to a movement to elect S. S. Cox to the Senate of the United States! The mere announcement may astonish some, but it is so; and will have an important bearing upon the selection of Democratic candidates for representatives, if certain folks are permitted to have their own way. In this connection we hear the names mentioned of JOHN G. EDWARDS, of Madison, and Dr. DURANT, of Blendon. How far those gentlemen would be willing to lend themselves to such a movement we have not been apprised. A word of caution might be advisable to Mr. POOR if he does not desire to be succeeded by SAMMY COX of anti-weevil wheat renown.

We have not heard who will probably be the Republican candidates. Those gentlemen very naturally keep shady.

For Senator, it is said that a certain "clique" are opposed to the re-election of Hon. A. L. PERRILL, because he was not obedient to their dictation; and that they will bring out another candidate. There was not a Senator in the last Legislature who commanded more respect, or who more scrupulously and honorably served his constituents than Mr. PERRILL. Should he consent to a nomination, there is no Democrat they can bring forward who can defeat him.

We have not heard of a Republican candidate for Senator yet, but presume there will be one.

For Auditor we believe it is very generally conceded that JOHNNY PHILLIPS will have the Democratic nomination, to which nobody is seriously opposed—at least we have not heard of opposition.

The Republicans will very likely call upon R. F. JENKINS as their candidate for Treasurer, a gentleman worthy in every respect, and who understands thoroughly the details of the office.

The Democrats will have a hard time to decide between 'Squire SHOUP and Mr. THOMPSON, the latter being understood to be the favorite of the "clique."

We presume, in the course of time we shall have announced the names of some of those who want office, unless they want things arranged for them, in which case, they will get their business done, and no mistake.—[Fact.

A DIABOLICAL PLOT TO BLOW UP A LAKE STEAMER EXPOSED.—The minute particulars of a most rascally plot to blow up one of the splendid steamers of "the Railroad Line," between Cleveland and Buffalo, are given in the Cleveland Herald, from which we condense so much as we think will be interesting to our readers. The value of the steamer proposed to be destroyed is $250,000. A man named COOLEY, a regular old jail-bird, who three or four years since was arrested for passing counterfeit money, but escaped by turning State's evidence, and has since been engaged as a diver, blowing up wrecks and removing obstructions from harbors, about two weeks since made proposition to Mr. E. B. WARD, who runs the "Opposition Line," to blow up and destroy one of the superb steamers in the "Railroad Line, either the Western Metropolis or City of Buffalo, thus breaking up the line, as the destruction of either of these boats would involve the company in such losses that they would abandon the route. Ward objected to this proposition on account of the lives that would be endangered by it, but Cooley stated that the boat should be blown up on a Sunday, as it could then be done without danger to life. Ward feigned compliance with the scheme on this condition, and enquired as to the terms proposed. Five hundred dollars for the breaking up of the line was the sum agreed on.—Cooley stated that he proposed to blow the steamer up with a torpedo, and said he had experience in such matters. The bargain was struck, and another meeting appointed.

Other interviews were had, and COOLEY fully committed to the job in the presence of concealed witnesses—the sum of $20 was paid him to procure materials, two kegs of coarse powder from Cuyahoga Falls, a tin can with long pipe, fuse, &c., all of which were duly bought—the tube would hold two pounds of the fine powder and the can or case fifty pounds of the coarse, sufficient to blow the vessel to atoms.

The "infernal machine" is a tin case, ten inches high and fourteen in diameter, flat at the bottom and top, and in shape about two-thirds of a circle, having a flat side on the other third. From the top of this case extends an erect tube of tin, five feet in height. On the tube a water-tight cap was to be screwed on, and from this was to extend a quick burning fuse, bound around with twine and made water-proof. The plan of operation was for COOLEY to proceed in his boat on Saturday night, under pretence of fishing, to the Railroad pier, where all the arrangements would be made. On Sunday night he would again visit the place secretly, set fire to the fuse, which was to extend under the pier, and then escape before the explosion.

The articles were kept at the house of a negro named RAY, where they were found; RAY having been sent to the Penitentiary fifteen years ago for counterfeiting, and being mixed up with the same kind of business at present. Great praise is awarded to Mr. WARD for his action in this matter, and thus exposing the scoundrel, and it is to be hoped that COOLEY may have the benefit of doing the State "some service" in the enlarged sphere, to which he will probably be removed.

CINCINNATI HORSE MARKET.—The number of horses sold for the week ending June 27 was 263, for which number the gross sum of $39,475 55 was paid.

Who is Garibaldi?

The last European advices inform us of the brilliant and successful movements of Garibaldi, his invasion of Lombardy, and his triumphal entry into Como. Though the name of Garibaldi is a familiar one to most of our readers, the history of the man may not be so well known.

Giuseppe Garibaldi is a native of Nice, and now about forty-seven years of age. His father was a mariner, and gave his boy Giuseppe an education that peculiarly fitted the lad for a maritime life. Young Garibaldi made several voyages to various parts of Italy, the Levant and the Black Sea. He was a bold sailor and a warm-hearted and generous man.

Well read in Italy's history, he could not help contrasting her glorious condition with that which followed the European treaties of 1815, and at Rome, amid the monuments of ancient splendor, he conceived the hope of the resurrection of Italian liberty. When told that a society of young Italians already existed who had devoted their lives to the glorious work, he eagerly enrolled himself among their number, and when the uprising of 1834 took place, he became a prominent actor in the eventful scenes.

The movement proving a failure, Garibaldi with others was condemned to death. He succeeded, however, in escaping in disguise to Genoa, and thence to the coast of France, where, to place himself beyond the risk of recapture, he took passage in a friendly vessel for Brazil. His original intention was then to engage in trade, but finding on his arrival that the patriots of La Plata were in arms, he engaged in their service as a naval officer, and was soon mingled in their public affairs. His deeds of valor, and the dangerous encounters which he had with the enemy, secured him the lasting gratitude of his companions in arms. No man who ever fought on the coast is said to have performed more wonders of naval skill and courage, than this Italian volunteer.

It was while in South America that he married a Brazilian lady from the province of St. Catharine's. She accompanied him in most of his expeditions, sharing intrepidly all the vicissitudes to which he was exposed during the many years that he battled for the Republic of Rio Grande.

When the revolutionary troubles of 1848 broke out in Europe, Garibaldi hastened back to Italy, and arrived at Rome during the formation of the Roman Republic. He was at once appointed General of the body known as the Legion, composed of the most gallant and accomplished corps of young Italy.

The incidents connected with the attack on Rome by the French troops, and the bombardment of the city by the command of General Oudinot, are of too recent occurrence to be recounted here. It is by his gallant defense of Rome, by the frequent sallies he led against the besiegers, that Garibaldi has achieved his greatest military reputation, and rendered himself so honorably known throughout Italy.—The result of that attack, and the brave, but unavailing defense, is too well known. When the city was forced to surrender, Garibaldi and his noble-spirited young soldiers refused to lay down their arms, and resolved to force their way to a safe place of refuge.

Their leader's speech on the occasion would have done no dishonor to Brutus or the Gracchi: "Soldiers," he said, "in recompense of the love you may show your country, I offer you hunger, thirst, cold, war and death; who accepts the terms, let him follow me." The enthusiastic Legion followed him to a man.—Their object in quitting Rome was to reach Venice in time to assist her against the bombardment of the Austrians. But Italy was overrun by the enemy's troops, and the little legion, after passing through many dangers, were obliged to disband and seek individual safety. Still, a number clung to Garibaldi, gained the sea-coast, and embarking at the little Adriatic port of Cesenatico, steered for Venice.—A storm dispersed their fleet, and only a few of the adventurers succeeded in reaching land near the mouth of the Po.—Here Garibaldi's devoted wife, overcome by the exhaustion and fatigue attendant on the perilous expedition, died, and Garibaldi himself almost alone made his way to Genoa, no one knows how, and then came to the United States.

He declined all public reception, and remained several years residing at Staten Island. He subsequently went to California on business, and then engaged in the [illegible] marine service on the Pacific. At Lima and Equador he was received with distinguished honors, and offered a high military position.

On the first symptoms of another European crisis, Garibaldi again returned to Europe, and proceeding to Sardinia, was at once appointed to an important military post. He commands a number of the most ardent young patriots of Italy, and his recent brilliant exploits prove that his reputation for military ability has been by no means exaggerated, nor that ability exhausted. He now enters Lombardy, where he expects to incite a decided uprising of the Lombards against the Austrians. This is a dangerous enterprise, but there is every prospect of its complete success.

The relatives of Garibaldi reside in Rome, the brave defender of that city being an exile from the very place he once defended, and forbidden by its government to enter its gates. His two sisters belong to a wealthy and aristocratic family, but on account of the Republican sentiments of their famous brother, they are closely watched, and not allowed to send any of their property out of the city. They are themselves desirous of leaving Rome, but are, to all intents and purposes, effectually prohibited from so doing. It is, by the way, a curious fact that this same Garibaldi who fought so bravely against the French some two years ago, should now be enlisted in the very cause to which they are so great a support; it proves that Garibaldi is no ranting Red Republican, but can lay aside all personal prejudices, and really and patriotically devote himself to the great cause of Italian melioration and liberty—a cause in behalf of which Louis Napoleon and the French seem to be powerful instruments.

Since the above was written, Garibaldi has accomplished all that he meditated in Lombardy.

SENSIBLE VIEW OF PIKE'S PEAK.—Mr. GREELEY writes from Denver City, Pike Peak, Rocky Mountains, to a friend in New York, thus,

I have spent the last three days climbing the Rocky Mountains and looking through the Gold Diggings, and my conviction is that there is no mistake about it. There is gold here, but it is harder to get it by digging than in almost any other way. A few will make fortunes here, while many will loose all and go away utterly bankrupt.

The New Line of Steamers Between Cleveland and Buffalo.

An Association has recently been formed in Buffalo, under the title of the Lake Erie and Buffalo Steamboat Company, for the purpose of re-opening the Steamboat travel between Cleveland and Buffalo. The Company has chartered two of the largest and most magnificent fresh water steamers in the world, the "City of Buffalo" and "Western Metropolis," to run between those ports. There cannot be found two points more admirably located than these, for the purpose of enabling travelers on their way East to ride just one night on these magnificent floating hotels, and thus recruit, dust and wash themselves, after having rode all day in the cars, completely fagged out. The distance between Cleveland and Buffalo is 180 miles. These boats make the time in about ten hours, and arrive in season to connect with the morning trains.

The following description of the "City of Buffalo," which we copy from the Cleveland Leader, will give our readers some idea of the elegance and safety of these boats:

THE BUFFALO BOATS.—Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock the splendid steamer City of Buffalo came into port from Toledo, and was welcomed by a host of friends upon the dock, gathered from curiosity to see this magnificent boat. The City of Buffalo has no superior in any lake or river craft in the world, in regard to elegance and strength. As this boat has never run from our port, a brief description of her prominent features will not be uninteresting. The boat was built in 1857, in Buffalo. It was intended by the builders to construct a boat that should be as complete and perfect in every part as money and care could make it; and that they succeeded, no one who examines her can doubt. The hull is 340 feet long. The bottom of the boat, instead of being half spaced, (a space of planking equal to the width of the timbers between every two timbers,) is solid timber from stem to stern, and from keel to bilges. Such a hull as this cannot fail to have great strength, and, consequently, safety.

But no increase both safety and strength, the hull has five water-tight bulk heads, the partitions being of solid timber, thus rendering the vessel water-proof should any accident happen to one or more of its compartments. This is after the plan of the best ocean steamers. The boilers are surrounded by a complete iron box, which render ignition of wood work by sparks or fire from the engines a thing next to impossible. The engines are from the Morgan Iron Works, New York, and are models of strength and beauty, beside which, a very important item, they have been so constructed as to burn comparatively little fuel. The accomodations for freight are equal to any emergency. An immense amount can be stowed far away ward.

The passenger apartments are the chief attractions to the traveler. There are three cabins—the Nursery, the Ladies,' and the after cabin. These are one above another, but so arranged that the best of ventilation is secured, and all are light, airy and comfortable. The main or after cabin is 260 feet in length. All of their saloons are well furnished with the finest carpets, the most elegant furniture and splendid mirrors, while the wood work and the ceiling is handsomely gilt and decorated. At either end of this main cabin is a handsome dome, which has a fine effect in giving an air of "roominess" to the saloons. An open space extends from the upper to the lower cabin; each opening surrounded with handsome railings, and a massive chandelier hanging in this opening, with beautiful jets for each room. On each side of the boat are two suits of bridal and family rooms, each suite comprising a parlor and one, two or three bedrooms, as the case may require, opening into each other. These are most beautifully and tastefully furnished, and look charmingly. Beside these, there are fifty state-rooms with beds, and fifty with three berths each, all of which are very costly and finely furnished. The boat can accommodate 450 passengers, and we hope it may often have a large proportion of that number this summer.

Nothing can exceed the care taken to render the boat perfectly safe from fire. There are on board two steam and two hand pumps, with one thousand feet of hose, which can be instantly attached and put into operation, so that the whole boat can be flooded in ten minutes. This hose is attached at night to the force pumps so as to be ready for use at a moment's warning. Passengers will therefore be as safe on the boat as on the cars.

We should not omit to mention, among the pleasing attractions of the boat, its pretty fountain, which constantly throws its sparkling and cooling jets into the air in the reception cabin.

The officers of this model boat are as follows: Captain, A. D. Perkins; 1st Mate, L. B. Goldsmith; 2d do., Mr. Foster; Clerk, Mr. Colgrove; (formerly of the Isaac Newton, on the Hudson); Steward, Washington Rowley.

The officers of the Western Metropolis are: Captain, Wm. T. Pease; 1st Mate, George Pleasants; 2d do., Mr. McCaller; Clerk, Mr. Horton; 1st Engineer, Wm. Moses; Steward, Mr. Oakley.

These are attractive and efficient officers.—Captain Perkins and Pease we know to be just such as are wanted—they are the right men in the right place, and their officials will be found prompt and capable in the discharge of their duties.

For freight or passage apply to the Cleveland Agent, G. L. Heston, at his office in the Union Depot.

SHOCKING MURDER AND SUICIDE.—A horrible murder was committed at Vernon, Indiana, on Friday last. A man named GOODARD, aged sixty-five years, planned the destruction of his own, his wife and son's life, and for this purpose a week before purchased at Indianapolis two pistols, a knife and some strychnine. On Friday he determined to carry out the fiendish act. He repaired to his house, and on entering his wife came to meet him, when he shot her dead. He then concealed himself, expecting the arrival of his son, who came in, and beholding his mother weltering in her blood, went to raise the alarm. The father finding his plan to take the life of his son defeated, took a dose of strychnine and cut his throat, from the effects of which he died shortly after. The sad tragedy, which arose from some difficulty concerning property, had been deliberately concocted, as a letter was found in the old man's pocket in which was enclosed fifty dollars to pay the expense of the three funerals.

MURDER AT LANCASTER, N. Y.—Mr. E. BLACKMAN, of Lancaster, in Erie county, N. Y., was shot dead by his neighbor, JAMES NICHOLS, Monday afternoon, near the village of Lancaster. Both were farmers and well advanced in years, NICHOLS being about sixty. Rumor ascribes the death to two reasons—one that the quarrel grew out of some difficulty in relation to taxes; the other that it resulted from a family affair. In the quarrel NICHOLS is said to have been observed to have a revolver, and a bystander remarked the fact, and NICHOLS said "Yes, and I'll use it too." BLACKMAN advanced towards him and he fired, and immediately fled to the woods. He was traced to this city, whence he went west on the State Line railroad, on the early train.

FROM SOUTH AMERICA.—By a late arrival we have dates from Valparaiso to the 29th and Callao 27th of May. The Congress of Peru had adjourned, setting the President's authority to convene it again as sought by resolution. The resolution empowering the President to make war on Ecuador, in certain contingencies, was affirmed. There is nothing important from Chili. Two of the revolutionists protected by the United States Consul Trevitt had lately been condemned to death. The Austrian exploring frigate Novara had sailed for home. The revolution in the north was ended. The blockade of Guyaquil was continued very strictly. President Linares, of Equador, had established liberty of the press, and the material interests of the people were advancing.

Louis Napoleon's Proclamation.

The Proclamation from Milan, of LOUIS NAPOLEON, if it be the genuine reflex of his intentions, must inspire for him a greater degree of respect, than he has elicited since the coup d'etat which made him Emperor. It even challenges the admiration if not confidence of the London Times, which has moderated its Austrian sympathy, since there has been a change in the ministry. The people of Italy believe in his disinterestedness, and why should not we? Perhaps "we" will remain obdurate, but the world will move on.

POETICAL, VERY.—Damon is a poet. He was the "laureate" of the last editorial convention, and did up the "rhyme" quite handsomely. He has just been sipping honey of a higher flavor than Hybla could boast. In his last "Register" he records having enjoyed a nectar far more exquisite than that which gladdened the feasts of the gods of old. Talk of your "Tokay," or "South Side," "Imaishona," "mountain dew," "peat reek"—what is anything else to honey from "lips of roses"—ah!

Crawford Johnson, recently a sojourner of Louisiana, has presented us with a sample of honey, made at the South, in the garden of an eminent lady florist, who cultivates roses by the acre. The honey is supposed to have been entirely extracted from roses, and is of exquisite flavor, differing entirely from the ordinary article produced in these parts.

HAIL STORM.—A letter to the Cleveland Herald, from Hudson, Summit county, describes a destructive hail-storm which occurred on Friday, about 3, P. M. It is said to have left nothing in the shape of wheat or rye. Grass, potatoes and other crops are flat, beaten down or cut off as with a scythe. In Hudson, 12,000 panes of glass were broken—in the College 2,000 panes. One room that had 60 panes, only had 14 left whole.

The storm came from the North-West and was accompanied by terrific wind which snapped off branches of trees hurling them through the air and even into the college room, through sash riddled of its glass.

THE FIVE MILLION SEIZURE.—We have farther details of the $5,000,000 seizure in Mexico. The conducta of five million of specie arrived at Jalapa on the 10th inst., and remained there a week by the orders of General Bosas, for examination. It started again on the 16th, under a permit from Gen. Bosas, but when near the National Bridge he overtook it, and ordered its return to Jalapa, by the authorities of MIRAMON. The conducta refused to obey the order, when Gen. BASLES ordered it to be shipped aboard the British vessel off Sacrificios, but her commander refused to receive it notwithstanding the orders of the French and English Ministers to do so. The conducta still remains at Reconado, subject to the orders of ROBLES.

AN INSANE MAN AT LARGE.—Thursday afternoon, as the train on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Road was coming to this city, when within about three miles west of Pleasant Valley, a man was discovered a short distance ahead lying upon the track. All efforts to whistle him off the track were fruitless, and failing to stop the train, it passed over and at the time being the man was 100 feet from view. All on board supposed that he was killed, but upon looking behind the train the fellow was seen leisurely walking along. It is supposed that when the locomotive was within a few feet of him, he threw himself to one side of the track, being deterred from his suicidal intentions as his time was approaching, and thus escaped. The train was stopped, and from conversation with the fellow he was pronounced insane.

THE WHEAT HARVEST.—On our return trip from the White Sulphur Springs yesterday we noticed in the townships of Norwich, Washington and Perry some wheat has been already cut and shocked, while in other localities the cradle and reaping machine are at work, and from the appearance of the fields, the force employed we have no doubt but that the crop will be mostly harvested this week. We took some pains to ascertain by personal examination and inquiry the extent of damage by the late frost. Washington township we find has suffered most some few fields being badly injured, say to the extent of one-half or three-fourths. There is, however, a large quantity unscathed that will yield abundantly, the grain being unusually well filled and plump. Farmers having now recovered from their alarm are able to form a more correct estimate of the loss, and the most intelligent with whom we conversed admit, that from the large quantity sown, and the superiority of the uninjured, that the crop in the aggregate will be fully an average one.

HAIL STORM IN MEDINA.—The towns of Granger and Weymouth, Medina county, were visited with a severe hail storm on the afternoon of Friday, which ranged from one-quarter to three-quarters of a mile wide. The stones were from one to three inches in diameter, breaking limbs from fruit trees and cutting to the ground whole fields of oats, corn, potatoes and wheat; and in some instances even killed young sheep that were unprotected. So severe was the storm that in some places the hail lay to the depth of four inches and remained unmelted until Saturday.

☞ The Kansas Constitutional Convention will consist of fifty-four members, and the Leavenworth City Herald of the 19th inst., sums up the election of delegates as follows:

Democrats	[illegible]
Republicans	[illegible]
Free State	[illegible]
Doubtful	[illegible]

☞ The Constitution emphatically denies that Mr. BUCHANAN and Mr. ROBERT J. WALKER have come to terms. It states definitely that no concessions have been made, nor any terms agreed upon. So much for the reports of the last week to the contrary.

☞ The race over the Fashion Course on Friday, between Bill Cheatham and Tar River, was won by the first named horse in two straight two mile heats. Time—3:45, 3:46½. Robert J. Walker won the mile race, beating Don Juan in 1:52½, 1:53½.

ST. LOUIS RACES.—Hannie Farrow won the three mile race at St. Louis, on Wednesday, beating Laura Spillman and Laura White. The latter was distanced the second heat, which was won by Laura Spillman. Time—5:53, 5:60, 6:06.

VINEYARDS NOT TO BE TAXED.—Some two or three weeks since the State Auditor instructed the Auditor of this county that vineyards and nurseries were to be returned by the Assessors, for taxation, as personal property. Thos. H. Yeatman, Esq., wrote to the Auditor of State, giving his reasons for claiming that vineyards should not be taxed, any more than growing crops. Mr. Y., yesterday, received a letter in reply, in which the State Auditor explains that his former letter to the County Auditor was written without much consideration, but that he has since reviewed his decision, and communicated the fact to the Auditor of Hamilton county that vineyards are not to be taxed, but that the decision does not apply to nurseries, which will be taxed as merchants' stock.—Cin. Gaz.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
[illegible]
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
[illegible]
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
[illegible]
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
[illegible]
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

The Letter of Mr. Douglas.

The letter of Hon. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, clearly defining his unalterable position in regard to the intervention of Congress in territorial affairs, and declaring his opinion upon other questions that may be agitated at the Charleston Convention, and now being agitated by the press and aspirants for office, especially at the South, has been subjected to much comment and animadversion. While it is frank, distinct and devoid of circumlocution and mystification of any kind,—while it, in the most simple manner, leaves his friends no reason to apprehend the slightest departure from the great principle which he has on all occasions so ably defended,—while it has afforded to his enemies nothing in reality to cavil at—while it is true in its fullness, brief as it is, to his brilliant record, ingenuity has been exhausted to discover in it something wonderfully at variance with propriety, and it is considered, especially by the Washington "Constitution" as a piece of presumption and an attempt, on his part, to dictate terms to the national Democratic Convention. Men who look through an imperfect medium are very apt to see things wear a distorted shape; and nothing so warps the mental vision as prejudice. The "Constitution," notwithstanding its professions of regret, like its predecessor, the "Union," is determined that Mr. DOUGLAS is a Nazarene, from whom nothing good can emanate. Before the appearance of this letter, (which was in reality nothing but a candid reply to respectful interrogatories,) the "Constitution" had assumed to interpret the Democratic platform very differently from its acceptation in 1856, and in antagonism to the well-known and patriotic views of Mr. DOUGLAS. The position of that paper, understood to reflect the will and pleasure of the President, and, despite its frequent puerilities and platitudes, exercising no little influence with a portion at least, of the press of the country, was such as to convey a mistaken and novel interpretation of the Democratic platform. Desperate efforts were made in other quarters to misrepresent Mr. DOUGLAS. Papers with extensive circulations were busy with suggestions, and political speculations, in which his name was freely used, and intimations of his being willing to modify his opinions, were given out. It was not necessary that Mr. DOUGLAS should re-assure his friends, but there was a propriety, if not necessity, of giving a quietus to the slanderous rumors that were daily put in circulation—nothing could more effectually bind them up, than this frank expression, which now is falsely construed into an attempt to dictate terms to the Charleston Convention.

We have in our possession a letter of similar import, of two months earlier date, (April 22d) in which Mr. DOUGLAS says:

"I am not desirous of the Presidency in 1860, and would not accept the nomination, unless upon the basis of 1856."

Now, we know this letter was not for the public eye—was not written to forestall the Charleston Convention, or dictate terms to it. It most conclusively settles the absurd charge that the published letter which has created so much "noise and confusion," was concocted between Ex-President Van Buren and Mr. DOUGLAS, or in any conclave of friends and advisers—or was a suddenly-formed determination, but clearly shows his fixed purpose, of which he had advised his personal friends, and now of which the public are advised.

Mr. DOUGLAS, notwithstanding the mean and dastardly assaults upon him, despite the wicked and false insinuations against his integrity to the people, and the charges so frequently made by his enemies that his political life has been but a series of schemes and devices to obtain the Presidency, has pursued his course onward and upward, commanding admiration for his statesmanship, and taking the highest place in the affections of the people for his consistent and unswerving fidelity to them.

That the ingenuity of the "opposition should be tasked to invent some plausible misinterpretation of motive, to show that a serpent lurked beneath the frank offering, is not remarkable; but that Democrats should be found to torture and pervert straightforward, unmistakable language, and misrepresent a free, candid avowal of purpose, to injure one who has done so much for his party, has been so true to his party, has fearlessly stood in the breach and defended them when assailed by foes flushed with the hope of victory, is a pitiable spectacle, and should meet the merited condemnation of all honorable, right-minded men.

There is no more brilliant record than that of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. Though he may never reach the Presidency, as has been the lot of great men before him, he can look back upon his career, without a sigh of regret. There is not in the record of his political history, a passage that does not glow with patriotism, and stand as an imperishable monument of his fealty to his country. If he has seen his party retreating from the high eminence to which he led them, and refuses to follow; but calls to them to pause, to come back, to rally, before it is too late—to gather once again around that dear old standard which has signalled so many triumphs, must he be degraded from his rank, charged with recreancy and cowardice, and overwhelmed with ignominy as a base deserter? We have too much faith in the American People, too much confidence in the Democratic Party, to believe that such cruel and undeserved fate is reserved for the Champion of the People's Rights.

Since our own remarks upon the recent letter of Mr. DOUGLAS were penned, we have received the Cincinnati "Enquirer," which temperately, but firmly rebukes the Washington "Constitution," for the acrimony and unfairness with which it treats the letter and its author. We must satisfy ourselves with a few extracts which indicate the tone and character of the "Enquirer's article, and produce a favorable impression of the ability and candor of the new editor, who is not embarrassed or trammeled by "other duties" or inconvenient obligations; and from having been a reader of the South Side "Democrat" of which he was editor, we recognize his ability and cordially welcome him to the field of labor upon which he has entered. He says:

"We have read this letter over attentively, and confess to an inability to perceive in it either the "dictation," the "arrogance" or the disposition "to avoid the decision of the Charleston Convention," which our Washington cotemporary discovers through his metropolitan spectacles. No one can deny to Mr. Douglas the right to be the judge of whether his name may or may not be used for the Charleston nomination; and it would be equally unfair to deny him the right to say, in advance, to the public—if certain things are put in the platform—he cannot afford to accept the nomination. If Mr. Douglas chooses, before the meeting of the Convention—before, even, the delegates are chosen—to discard the usual strategy of aspirants, and publicly avow the terms on which he will accept the nomination, we ought rather to admire him for a frankness and gallantry which we do not often meet within these days, when intrigue, cunning and management are more relied on as auxiliaries of success.

The "Constitution" says it is certainly not to be expected that the Charleston Convention would recede from the principles to which Mr. Douglas announces his adhesion, and intimates that his hypothetical allusion to its possible action is an unnecessary slander on the good intentions of the Democratic party. * * *

* * Has the debate in the Senate of last winter died out of the recollection of the "Constitution" in which Democratic Senators, high in authority, asserted the doctrine of Congressional intervention? Has the late elaborate and eloquent letter of Governor Wise escaped the "Constitution," in which he argues and urges the power and duty of Congress to protect slavery by positive legislation in the Territories? We have before us an article from the Richmond Enquirer, a venerable paper of high standing, from which we make the following extract:

"From every quarter of the South we are informed that this question of protection of slavery in the Territories will be made an issue before the Charleston Convention as an article in the platform. The denial or evasion of it will involve the party in hopeless defeat in the South. The Convention will, in our opinion, meet the issue, and, upon the Dred Scott decision, affirm the duty of Congress to protect rights judicially acknowledged. * * *

"The organ at Washington should not attempt to shy around this vital point. After according the principle contended for, it should manfully face all its consequences. It should candidly and promptly say that if the people of the Territories should attempt to meddle with slave property within their limits, and the judiciary should prove inadequate to its full and efficient protection, Congress should interfere to protect it. It is insulting to the people of the South to tell them that they have an equal right to the public domain with the people of the free States, but that they shall not have full protection in the enjoyment of that right, if it is illegally invaded or interfered with."

If necessary we could multiply in our columns evidences of sentiments of this description, going to show that the remarks of Mr. Douglas touching the action of the Convention, were neither unwarranted nor uncalled for.—Extreme views of this sort exist in the Democratic party. It is idle to disguise it. But these views are only dangerous when toyed and tampered with. They must be met by the National Democracy with a bold and becoming front—doing justice and exacting justice.

The "Constitution" thinks that the views of Mr. Douglas, as given in his letter, respecting the power of the Territorial Legislature over slavery—treating it as other property—is an ambiguous announcement of his doctrine of "unfriendly legislation," and runs athwart the creed of the Democratic party, which the "Constitution" says is, that "the question of slavery in the Territories can only be determined when the incipient State forms its constitution and seeks admission into the Union." The "Constitution" also adds that this is the decision of the Supreme Court. Now, we join issue with our Washington cotemporary on both these points. We plumply deny that such is or ever has been the creed of the National Democracy, and we as flatly deny that the Supreme Court has ever decided any such thing to be law. The doctrine of the Democratic party is, that Congress remits to the people of the Territories the whole mass of their legislation, subject to the Constitution; that they can legislate on all questions touching their welfare, subject to an appeal by aggrieved parties to the courts to pass on the validity, under the Constitution, of Territorial laws. The doctrine of the Democratic party renounces for Congress all right to intervene in any way with the legislation of the Territories.

The Kansas-Nebraska Bill, carrying out the spirit of the compromise of 1850, established the doctrine of Congressional non-intervention, adjourning the question of how much power the people of the Territories might exercise, to the courts for arbitrament. In accordance with this adjustment the question of Territorial power has never been deemed a practical issue, and the utmost liberality and toleration have been exercised in respect to individual opinion. For this reason it has never been made a test in the Democratic party, and a distinct proposition to have an expression of opinion on the subject at the Cincinnati Convention was overwhelmingly voted down in the Committee on Resolutions.—As for the resolution quoted by the "Constitution," the whole cotemporaneous history of the Convention, as well as the letter of Mr. Buchanan accepting the nomination, together with the speeches delivered all through the campaign, attest the utter absurdity of the construction sought to be put on it by the "Constitution."

The "unfriendly legislation" doctrine of Mr. Douglas, to which the "Constitution" alludes, was a mere expression of opinion in answer to a question propounded to him touching Territorial power, which he had a perfect right to answer in his own way, and in doing so he violated no recognized tenet of Democratic orthodoxy. The opinion had been before expressed by Southern men on the floor of Congress.

But it is contended that the Supreme Court has decided the question of Territorial power touching slavery. With all respect for the worthy gentlemen who accept this view of the case, we have only to say it is nonsense: it is untruth. The supreme Court have made no decision bearing at all on the question.

There is no tergiversation, circumlocution or "dodging" about this. The "Enquirer" stands squarely up to the work, and administers to the "Constitution" a proper rebuke—a much-needed memento to that inflated concern which forgetful, or regardless of the past, presumes upon its position to mislead and entangle the Democratic party in a web from which it could only be extricated with difficulty, if at all. We hope the people will not plunge themselves madly after its blind folly, but remain steadfast to the true principles by which alone the Democratic party can stand, and in sustaining which if it must fall, it will fall gloriously in defending the dearest rights of the people.

☞The Charleston "News" advocates the nomination by the Democratic party, of Dickenson of New York, and Brown of Mississippi, for President and Vice President. The same paper argues justly that Douglas could not carry more than one or two Northern States, while one-half of the Southern States would go against him. Many extreme southern journals are prepared to bolt, should Douglas be nominated at Charleston.—[Dayton Gazette.

The Charleston "News" is one of those "extreme southern journals prepared to bolt," if the doctrine of popular sovereignty and non-intervention by Congress be not modified or stricken from the Democratic platform. Here is an admission that Mr. DOUGLAS can carry "one or two Northern States" and one-half of the Southern States." What other Northern man, or what Southern man on a different platform, can carry "one or two Northern States," or what Southern man can carry any Northern State? If Dickenson of New York stands on the platform of Brown of Mississippi, he could not carry a Northern State, for that gentleman has declared that unless slave property is protected in the Territories, and the doctrine be made part of the Democratic platform, the party may go to blazes for him. We want no such ticket than as the Charleston "News" recommends, nor will the Democratic party endorse it. But why couple the name of Dickenson with Brown? Do they stand side by side? Has the former made his peace with the Democrats of his own State, who were wont not long since, to hold him at arm's length? Or is this an admission that the objection of certain politicians is against Mr. DOUGLAS PER SE, and that the objection is not to the great principle of the people's rights in the territories for which he contends?

Now, the cotemporary and neighbor of the "Gazette," the Dayton "Empire" does not think there is so much danger of "many extreme southern journals," (of the Democratic persuasion) bolting Mr. DOUGLAS if nominated; for in speaking of his recent letter, it says:

There is no schism in the Democratic camp; and in the whole Union, only three or four Democratic papers have found fault with the letter of Judge Douglas. Their remarks are published, quoted, requoted, and commented upon by the Republican press, until the country is flooded with them, and then the Republicans turn in and declare that the hubbub which they themselves created, originated in and threatens destruction to the Democratic Party.

We wish this were so, but candor compels us to say that the number of cavillers is greater than the "Empire's" calculation; but we hope they will perceive their error, and agree with the "Empire" that "it is the motto of our party to sink all personal predilections in a political contest and battle together for victory."

MR. DOUGLAS' POSITION.—A letter from Washington, communicated by telegraph, informs the country of Mr. Douglas' position. It shows that he still occupies the grounds which he long maintained, and puts, or ought to put, an end to a good deal of misrepresentation which has been indulged in as respects his views and purposes. These grounds are such as ought to be, and we think will be, acceptable to the South.—St. Louis Herald.

Heading Off S. A. Douglas.

This is the game being played by certain politicians, and to this end, all the powers and energies of the "Constitution" and its co-workers, are bent. In making this assertion, we do not mean to assail the Administration, or attribute to it any other motive than opposition to Mr. DOUGLAS, in the pursuit of which the integrity, if not existence, of the Democratic party is jeopardized. As a DERNIER RESORT, the plank of Congressional intervention for the purpose of protecting slave-property in the Territories is to be interpolated in the Cincinnati platform. No Southern politician is so short-sighted as not to perceive the dangers lurking beneath this doctrine, to their institutions of the South—as not to know that this opens up the whole matter of controversy settled by the compromise of 1850, by the Kansas-Nebraska act, by the Cincinnati Platform and the election of Mr. BUCHANAN, but now sought to be revived by those presumed to be in his confidence.

This is a matter that cannot be handled as a play-thing, to be thrown aside and resumed at will. Nor can the South have it all their own way. As it takes two to make a bargain, so, should the subject of PROTECTION by Congress come up, the nature and degree of PROTECTION will be a matter of controversy in Congress, and the MAJORITY will rule there. Neither the Executive nor the Judiciary can dictate terms or the measure of PROTECTION to Congress; and again introduced there as a living issue, we shall have a renewal of the excitement which was hoped had been silenced forever by the Compromises of 1850 and their acknowledgment and ratification subsequently by both Congress and the people.

In the paltry manner in which the "Constitution" attempts to evade the positive and unmistakable declaration of the Cincinnati platform of 1856, and the mean "dodge" of which it was guilty, and that paper claiming to speak "by authority," we have much to apprehend, that, as the battle against Mr. DOUGLAS, is to be renewed with all the effort which the Administration can employ. In such a contest, our course is plain. While we desire to uphold the Administration in every Democratic measure, and applaud it whenever it is right, it is our duty as a citizen and as a Democrat to raise our voice in opposition when we perceive it undermining the very foundation-stone of the Democratic platform,—that platform with which Mr. BUCHANAN was so contented, and on which he so reliantly placed himself in 1856. In so elaborately and exultantly expounding a resolution of the platform of 1856, asserting the right of the people of a Territory of sufficient number to form a Constitution with or without slavery and apply for admission as a State, the sage editor of the "Constitution" with microscopic eye for that particular clause, entirely overlooked a most important part of the platform; to which it might not be unadvisable to call his attention and the attention of those who are willing to follow his tortuous meanderings.

"Coming events cast their shadows before,"

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

* * * * * * *

The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

This portion of the platform was carefully overlooked by the "Constitution." It is on that vital principle of Democracy that Mr. DOUGLAS stands, and in the effort to crush him, the "Constitution" and its allies have to throw away that cardinal feature, the very soul of the Democratic platform.

Is it not time that the Democratic party should be apprised of their danger? Is it not time that the Democratic press should speak out? Is it a time to put off, to evade, to avoid speaking on this attempt to palm off a forged and spurious Democratic platform, until after the election? How are we to know who are our friends, who our adversaries, unless they give the countersign?

The country is aware that the Administration owes Mr. DOUGLAS no love. It remembers what efforts were made to defeat him for U. S. Senator. It has been apprised how papers were "bought up" that had been vociferous for him, and others started to detract from and disparage him, when there were no more to be brought. It has been told how offices has been held, out to the greedy, and even Post-Offices conferred, to silence the friends of DOUGLAS. But it is all would not do. He is still uppermost in the affections of the people; and it is now sought to tear out important planks of the platform, because he refuses to stand upon one inconsistent with the good, old, true Democratic platform of 1856.

We call upon the people to be true to themselves, to their country, to their dauntless champion, and at every meeting, at every primary election, demand that their candidates shall express fully and unequivocally upon what platform they stand—the platform of 1856, on which STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS stands, or the mutilated wreck of a platform, such as is announced by the Washington "Constitution" as the present platform of Democracy? This is their remedy. Let them not be content to "wait until after the election"—that will be too late. Make the demand NOW. When the thief shall have stolen the horse, it will be useless to close the door.

"A Significant Letter."

The Xenia News is in a quandary. It does not know which most to admire in Mr. DOUGLAS—"his blunt frankness, or his cool impudence." Will it require the bell-ringer to ascertain the whereabouts of this editor, lost in admiration?

The News, which is one of the Republican papers, says:

Viewed merely as an electioneering stroke, this letter is one of the boldest and happiest we have ever seen, and its influence upon political manoeuvering, at this juncture, cannot fail to be great. Our readers will do well to note it carefully.

The News publishes the letter, and adds:

The frankness and manly tone of this letter is worthy of all praise. The sum and substance of it is, that if the Democracy don't throw away their present principles, and manufacture a new set, he is willing to be their candidate, but that, if they turn another summersault, and abandon the political faith to which he is pledged, he would not accept the nomination, if tendered him.

Of course, after this cordial endorsement of the "tone" of the letter, it is impossible for the News to dismiss the subject without a "fling" at Mr. DOUGLAS, and "the principle of Popular Sovereignty or Congressional non-intervention." Speaking of the assault of the Constitution on this letter, the News says:

The assault is a curious one. Mr. Douglas is not blamed for what one would be disposed to find fault with—his adherence to a principle, radically false, and his impudence in asserting it to be a "time-honored doctrine" of the party. The complaint against him is that he has had the arrogance to demand that, if a candidate, he shall be permitted to maintain doctrines which he believes, and that the party shall not prove false to its avowed principles.

This is pretty fair for a political adversary, and should call up a blush on the faces of those who, claiming to be Democrats, treat Mr. DOUGLAS with less candor, and desert their principles to assail him.

LETTER OF SENATOR DOUGLAS.—We publish to-day an important letter from this distinguished Democratic statesman, who always has the independence to give his views in a candid way, for which we admire him, and accord to him our support, for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency in 1860. With him as our standard-bearer in that contest, victory is certain.—Delaware (O.) Standard.

Senator Pugh's Letter.

Although we do not coincide with all the positions in Mr. PUGH's letter explanatory of the letter announcements from the Department of the State, on the subject of naturalization, yet it is of marked ability, and belongs to the current political history of the country. We should be gratified to know that Mr. PUGH does not mistake the views he essays to make clear, and that Gen. CASS merely alluded to "desertion from the army;" which point we have heretofore discussed. If he holds otherwise than as he understands him, Mr. PUGH dissents from the positions of Gen. CASS; and we think he very clearly does. It would have been an easy matter to have been explicit in reply both to LE CLERC and HOFER, and said that the right of expatriation was denied by European governments; that service was claimed by Prussia and France of those who, owing such service, returned to their native land at this time; that former negotiations had been attended with trouble, although ultimately successful, for the liberation of such as had been pressed into service; and that the United States government would do what it could to procure the liberation of any who should be so unfortunate as to be subjected to service in either of the foreign armies, but that it would be attended with delay and annoyances, and might involve war. This would have been more in accordance with American sentiment; it would have looked like a determination on the part of our government to protect the naturalized citizen, which it is the duty of our government to do. In all the treaties formed, there should be express reservation that naturalized citizens of the United States should be placed on a full equality with natives. Our understanding of the duties of the American government is, that it should interpose for the liberation of a naturalized citizen just as it would in case a native should be impressed, imprisoned, or made to take up arms for a government to which he owed no allegiance,—that of the former having been discharged by his oath of naturalization, and the latter, owing none, while both are entitled to the protection of their own government.

False Charge Against Judge Ranney—Its Refutation.

The "State Journal," Cincinnati "Gazette," and other Republican papers have published a serious charge against Judge RANNEY, which first appeared in the Noble county "Register," that at a meeting in Canfield, Mahoning county, he had fiercely denounced the Fugitive Slave Law, shortly after its passage, and sustained a series of resolutions of which this is a sample:

Resolved, That come life or come imprisonment—come fine or come death, we will neither aid nor assist in the return of any fugitive slave, but on the contrary, we will harbor and secrete, and in all just means protect and defend him, and thus give him a practical God-speed to Liberty.

As to the speech of Judge Ranney, on the occasion, the editor of the Noble County "Register" says:

"We were present at this meeting, and can never forget the burning indignation—the withering satire that characterized Mr. R.'s great speech on that occasion. His brow knit with rage, and his keen eye seemed to spit fire when he hurled defiance at the law, and pledged himself before that great assembly to stand by the right of habeas corpus as the palladium of American Liberty, and that no political necessity should ever whip him into the support of so infamous an enactment."

The Cleveland "National Democrat," disposes of this flagitious charge in the following summary, and conclusive manner, addressing itself especially to the "Gazette."

At the time the meeting alluded to was held, Judge Ranney was attending Court in Canfield, and had just finished a lengthy argument in a case then on trial. An anti-Fugitive Slave law meeting was called, and he remained in the Court House to listen. Judge Wade, Judge Newton and others made speeches, bitterly denouncing the law. The Democrats present raised a shout for Ranney, and in the call, several of the Abolitionists joined, as all were anxious to hear him. Judge Ranney spoke but a few minutes, but his speech, short as it was, was a damper to the nullifiers. He drew the attention of his hearers to the fact that although the Fugitive Slave bill had passed Congress—for they had that fact by Telegraph, yet none of them knew in what shape it had passed. That they had better restrain their indignation until they saw the law, and then if it was wrong and if it needed amendment or repeal, the only course left was to apply to Congress. Under the Constitution, that was the only tribunal that could pass upon the matter, except the Supreme Court of the United States—and to one of these, if a wrong was committed by the law, the application for redress must come.

In no shape, by no word or action, did Judge Ranney counsel resistance to the law and the assumed speech, which the "Gazette" copies from the Noble County "Register,"—the "burning indignation" and the "withering satire" included, is but the coinage of a lying brain. At the time he had never seen the law—although passed, it had not been published, and, as the meeting was called on the Telegraphic announcement that the two Houses of Congress had passed the law, in all probability it was not then approved by President Fillmore.

The "Gazette" will thus see that it does grievous wrong in its endeavors to bring Judge Ranney down to the level of its own friends, by trying to make a nullifier out of one of the best and most law-abiding citizens of the Reserve.

In the proceedings of the meeting, as published at the time, the Secretary, a bitter Abolitionist, and, if we mistake not, the editor of an Abolition paper, published the name of Judge Ranney as one of the speakers at the meeting—being anxious, we suppose, to have the name of a Democrat so distinguished as Judge Ranney, but took particular care not to tell its readers that his speech was against the incendiary and nullifying course of the leaders of the meeting. Judge Ranney went to the meeting, or rather he remained in the Court House, to hear what could be said in favor of condemning a law which the meeting knew nothing about—which not a single person present had ever read. Called to the stand by the Democrats present, he rebuked in strong terms the denunciatory spirit of the faction in denouncing, in abusive and in threatening terms, a law, the provisions of which, in the very nature of things, the getters up of the meeting could know but little or nothing. "The very head and front of his offending hath this extent, no more."

Doctors will Differ.

While the Statesman and its one or two echoes affect to think (though they know better) that the PEOPLE'S PRESS is calculated to do Senator DOUGLAS and his cause a wonderful degree of irremmediable harm, so do not think others who are not so much interested, and who do not feel their mission to be to disparage or repress a new enterprise. We are indebted to the kind friendship of the Marietta Republican, a sterling Democratic paper, for the following complimentary notice:

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.—We are in constant receipt of Birney Marshall's new paper, bearing the above title, and published at Columbus. No paper in Ohio presents a better typographical appearance. It can be read without spectacles, and understood without translation. On the outside, the editor, by his judicious selections from the best current literature of the day, exhibits a cultivated literary taste, worthy of his scissors. Besides, he occasionally throws in, by way of spice, an original poem of his own,—for be it known that Birney, from his very boyhood, has been on familiar terms with the muses.

His editorial columns are crowded with matter which shows him to be master of a vigorous and polished pen. He is strong for Popular Sovereignty, and has thrown the name of its great champion to the breeze, as his first choice for President in 1860. We can say nothing better than that he does no discredit to the great cause, nor to the man.

His terms are, single copy two dollars a year, or fifty cents for the campaign.

☞The editor of the Charleston Mercury declares that he will not sustain or countenance Douglas under any circumstances whatever.—"Finally," says the Mercury, "we shall sustain no man, of whatever party, clique, creed or section, who shall stand upon the platform of Douglas' principles, though he should be nominated by twenty Democratic Conventions."

The Charleston "Mercury," notwithstanding one of its proprietors has been appointed to office by Mr. Buchanan, has been consistent only in pursuing its own course, quite as frequently adverse to the Democratic party, as with it. It was found in opposition to the Democratic party when secession was on the tapis; it has uniformly maintained dogmas which the Democratic party never entertained; and at most can be reckoned on about as certainly as an expended clock, whose hands denote the hour twice in the twenty four and are wrong all the rest, but unlike that silent minister, it keeps up a constant clatter. It has the merit of boldness and frankness, and does not conceal its opinions. Its hostility to Mr. Douglas is of very little importance, and is possibly the price of the appointment in place of Gen. Bowman, if indeed the "Mercury" needed any price for opposing every thing calculated to hold together the Union, which it has striven so sedulously to sever.

☞Petitions are in circulation in Boston, praying for a commutation of the sentence of the mutineer, Plummer. His counsel are about to sue out a writ of error.

Letter from Senator Pugh to Mr. Hofer, in relation to the Rights and Liabilities of Naturalized Americans.

CINCINNATI, June 21, 1859.

DEAR SIR:—I have read your letter to General Cass, together with his answer and your comments in the Volksfreund of the 18th inst. The question is not entirely new to me; I had occasion to examine it last winter, and endeavored to bring it before the Senate by a resolution adopted on the 28 of February, requesting copies of the correspondence between our Government and the Government of Prussia upon that subject. Those copies were not furnished, however while the Senate remained in session, and probably because the negotiation with Prussia was not finished.

If General Cass intends what you seem to suppose, namely, that every native of Prussia, or Austria, or France, enrolled in the reserve or militia, (Landwehr) and thus rendered liable to military duty, notwithstanding his naturalization under our laws, I agree that the opinion is altogether untenable. It is of no importance (as I view this question) whether the return of a naturalized citizen to Prussia, or Austria, or France, be voluntary or involuntary; because if he is subject to military duty—as to a debt or obligation not discharged by naturalization in the United States—such duty can as well be enforced in a case of involuntary return, impressment, captivity, or shipwreck; nay, it can be asserted within the dominion of a neutral power, or even (by means of a treaty of extradition) in our own midst.

I am satisfied that no such duty remains, or can be recognized by the United States for one moment after naturalization.—Birth in a particular place does not necessarily compel allegiance to the sovereignty of that place; for the child of American parents, although born in a foreign country, does not require naturalization by our laws. He is a citizen of the United States from the time of his birth, as fully as if born here.

Residence in any country, so long as it continues, will subject the party resident to the law of that country; and we presume residence, ordinarily, from the mere fact of birth. But this presumption is rebutted, and completely overcome by a change of residence, accompanied by other acts denoting the intention of the party to expatriate himself.

A man born in Prussia, therefore, who has become a resident of the United States, and takes the oath of naturalization, is no longer a subject of the King of Prussia in any sense or to any extent whatsoever. He never can become a Prussian subject, in fact, unless by removing to Prussia and obtaining a new, fixed, permanent residence there.

It is only necessary to read our Naturalization Law to be convinced of this.—The act of Congress, approved April 14, 1802, requires that every alien (in order to become a citizen) shall, upon oath or affirmation, "absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to every foreign prince, potentate State or Sovereignty whatever, and, particularly by name, the prince, potentate, State or Sovereignty whereof he was before a citizen or subject." How absurd to say, after exacting such an oath of affirmation, that the United States ought to acknowledge as yet in existence a claim of military service on the part of the sovereign toward whom "fidelity," as well as "allegiance," has been thus absolutely and entirely renounced and abjured! To acknowledge any such claim after naturalization, is, in effect, to compel the party naturalized to violate the very oath or affirmation demanded of him.

I do not understand, however, that General Cass entertains the doctrine which you attribute to him. The real difficulty is that his attention has not been called specifically, to the question which you proposed to me. Every able-bodied subject of Prussia, for instance, must serve in the army, during a period of three years, between the ages of eighteen and thirty; and is liable to be again called into actual service, as the public exigencies may require, until he has passed his sixtieth year. If the "duties or penalties" to which General Cass refers as existing at the time of emigration, are such as result from mere liability to service, in the army, no Prussian can safely become a citizen of the United States, unless he emigrated from Prussia after sixty years of age. But General Cass evidently does not so intend; the 'duties' of which he speaks are those of actual service, already commenced, before emigration; and the 'penalties' are those which attach to the desertion of a soldier, while actually in service, or under arms. His language is:

'If at that time they were in the army or actually called into it, such emigration and naturalization do not exempt them from the legal penalty which they incurred by their desertion.''

Now that term 'desertion' is only applicable to a soldier in actual service, under arms, who abandons his colors without leave. It does not even apply to a man who abandons his country in order to avoid becoming a soldier.

The same distinction exists in our State as well as elsewhere. The Constitution of Ohio, article ninth, section first, declares:

"All white male citizens, resident of this State, being eighteen years of age, and under the age of forty-five years, shall be enrolled in the militia, and perform military duty in such manner not incompatible with the Constitution and laws of the United States, as may be prescribed by law."

The Constitution of the United States, article second, eighth section, authorizes Congress:

"To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

"To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States; reserving to the States, respectively, the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress."

Clearly, therefore, each male citizen of Ohio, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, is liable to perform military duty, and is to be enrolled for that purpose. But until actually called forth in pursuance of law, and mustered into actual service, he is not a soldier of the United States—is not subject to the President of the United States as Commander-in-chief of the army, and cannot be tried by a court martial for any offense against the United States, whether it be desertion, or disobedience, or something else.

The fourth amendment of the Federal Constitution secures this:

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war or public danger."

There is a distinction, wide and manifest, between liability to service and actual service—a distinction which, as I think, General Cass meant to observe. If a native of Prussia, for instance, should leave that country, between the ages of eighteen and thirty, without having served in the army, or before the age of eighteen, no military service can be exacted from him by the Government of Prussia after his naturalization here; but if he had actually begun his service in the army, and afterwards deserted, before the period of three years had expired, naturalization will not relieve him from the "penalties" of such desertion. Those penalties may, under the law of Prussia, consist of military service, or fine, or imprisonment; but they are the penalties of an offence committed before naturalization, and not the acknowledgment of any allegiance or fidelity whatsoever. I understand this to be what General Cass means; and it is in accordance with the language of Governor Marcy (while Secretary of State) in the case of Tousig.

Having been once subject of the municipal laws of Austria, and while under her jurisdiction violated these laws, his withdrawal from that jurisdiction and acquiring a different nationality, would not exempt him from their operation whenever he again chose to place himself under them. Every nation, whenever its laws are violated by any one owing obedience to them, whether he be a citizen or a stranger, has a right to inflict the penalties incurred upon the transgressors, if found within its jurisdiction. The case is not altered by the character of the laws, unless they are in derogation of the well-established international code. No nation has a right to supervise the municipal code of another nation, or claim that its citizens or subjects shall be exempted from the operation of such code, if they have voluntarily placed themselves under it. The character of the municipal laws of one country does not furnish a just ground for other States to interfere with the execution of these laws, even upon their own citizens, when they have gone into that country and subjected themselves to its jurisdiction.

It is not because a naturalized citizen of the United States, who returns to the place of his nativity, in pursuit of business or pleasure, will thereby lose his citizenship or national character; but because even a native-born citizen who should enlist in a foreign army, and then desert, would subject himself to all the penalties of desertion whenever he returned to the dominion of the sovereignty against which he thus offended. Our Government could no more interpose in the one case than in the other.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant, G. E. PUGH.

A. V. Hofer, Esq., Present.

Integrity of the Democratic Party.

While other parties have risen to some political distinction in this country from time to time, and as suddenly become impotent, says the Wilmington Constitution, the Democratic party has pursued the even tenor of its way, and erected its everlasting pillars of stability, upon which the fundamental principles of constitutional liberty now stand as monuments of practical utility and sound experience.

In the events of the past, when the elements of discord and disunion have been rife within our borders, the Democratic party has calmed the storm, and made peace to reign triumphant. In our earliest history this party planted its standard upon the constitution, and taking that instrument for its guide, it has steadily moved forward, unawed by faction, and unmoved by political adversaries. It has sought to elevate the moral standard of political, and give tone to the republican principles of our institutions, and the evidences of its success are everywhere apparent throughout the length and breadth of our country.

Its integrity of purpose has been its panoply of strength, and all nations of the earth have learned to know that a Democratic administration in this country is the defender of the Union, and the most potent barrier against foreign aggression.

Foreign aristocracies look upon the American Republic as a rival gaining strength and power at each federative pulsation, and their fondest hopes have too often been expressed, that intestine convulsions may unloose the bond of union which thus far has made us impregnable against all nations and all people. But their hopes are futile so long as the integrity of the Democratic party shall be preserved.

This is a noble thought for our people, and should teach the philanthropist to unite his energies in maintaining the faith of the Democratic party inviolate, and thus perpetuating the glorious inheritances bequeathed to us by our forefathers of the Revolution. Moreover, it teaches the wavering politician to regard well the steps he may be about to take, in doing aught which shall have a tendency to impair our strength; but rather should he nerve himself to increased action and efforts to conciliate and harmonize the Democratic party, and thus secure good government to those who are to come after them.

We should not live for ourselves alone. Our children, and our children's children, are to be benefitted or injured by the manner in which we discharge our duty now. That duty will be best performed by religiously adhering to and preserving the integrity of the Democratic party.—N. H. Gazette.

☞Lieut. Gov. Martin Walker is prominently named as a candidate for Congress from the 14th District, in place of Hon. Cyrus Spink, who died on the 30th May.

Now if we were to say that Mr. WALKER is a most amiable, courteous gentleman, that he presided with dignity and impartiality over the last Senate, that he possesses ability and attainments, we should say no more than we think, and what is true. Yet we should be taken to task by very minute politicians for eulogising a Republican. Perhaps, if we were to say that we would rather see him elected than any other Republican in his district, we should be set down as advocating his election. Such is the propensity to misrepresent us among a few of our cotemporaries, who are mean enough to play second fiddle to a very unscrupulous leader. Let the Democrats of the 14th district bring out their best man, and rally to his support as they should do. Let them bring out a candidate who ought to represent them, and see that no omission on their part procures his defeat.

☞The Marysville Press is in favor of Mr. Gatch, of Hardin, for re-election as State Senator. Mr. Gatch is a gentleman of ability, unobtrusive, and mild in his manner, yet firm and decided. He does not speak to hear himself talk, but to SAY SOMETHING. He is a Republican, and, therefore, we should like to see him defeated by a clever Democrat; but are sure the Republicans could not put forward a better candidate, or more unexceptionable gentleman.

☞Senator Pugh's letter in to-day's paper, on national politics, meets our views of the true Democratic issue on the slavery question, and such of our southern brethren as ask for a different and sectional platform will certainly be disappointed. Take Mr. P.'s views through his term, thus far, without absolute coincidence in all respects, we think he has fitly, ably and well represented the Ohio Democracy.—Allen Co. Dem.

From the Chicago Times.

The Vermont Democracy.

On the 16th instant, the gallant Democracy of the Green Mountain State held their convention; at which they nominated candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and Treasurer, and elected delegates at large to the Charleston Convention.

As this is the first election that has occurred of delegates to the next National Convention, considerable interest has been taken in all sections of the Union in the strife that has been prosecuted there between the office-holders and the rank and file of the party. Owing to the at present hopeless minority in which the Democracy there labor, it was thought by interested individuals that the masses would not take the trouble to attend the convention—and months ago a move was designed on the part of three or four leading federal officials to take possession of the convention. These men were styled Cow Boys by the straight Democratic press of the State—a designation describing a set of political desperadoes precisely like the Danites of Illinois. For a time they seemed to have the advantage, but by a succession of bold and vigorous charges conducted by the true leaders of the party there, they were soon put on the defensive—and finally, in the recent convention, they were completely routed. The candidates for State officers, are all just such Democrats as we hold in Illinois to be orthodox—they are all friends of Senator Douglas. And so of the delegates at large to the Charleston Convention; and though they are uninstructed as to whom they shall support in that convention, we have the most positive assurances that they will insist on a platform and on a candidate that shall be acceptable to the friends of Popular Sovereignty. They are: Ex-Governor John S. Robinson, Henry Keyes, Jasper Rand, E. M. Brown.

We are informed that this convention was the largest political gathering ever held in Vermont. It was temporarily presided over by Erasmus Plympton, an old warrior of the party; and H. B. Smith, Esq., an able gentleman, was elected permanent President. The President was assisted by a Vice-President from every county. A committee on resolutions, consisting of five of the ablest gentlemen in the State, was raised, of which Hon. Chas. G. Eastman was chairman.

The candidates for State officers are:—For Governor, John G. Saxe; for Lieutenant Governor, Stephen Thomas; for Treasurer, J. S. Thurston. We have had the pleasure of an acquaintance with all these gentlemen, and we can vouch for their ability and Democracy. The first name on the ticket—John G. Saxe—is so familiarly known throughout the length and breadth of the Union, that nothing need be said. Besides being a poet of the first rank, he is a sound, reliable Democrat, and a stirring business man.—Should he be elected—and there is no great likelihood that he will be—he will make an admirable chief executive officer. He will receive a large vote.

This resolution, passed among others, is very important:

"Resolved, That it ever has been, and is now, the policy of the Democratic party, to encourage emigration to this country from foreign countries, and to favor the policy and laws providing for the naturalization of foreigners; and that we indignantly repudiate that false philanthropy which attempts to elevate the negro to the rights and responsibilities of an American citizen, and disfranchises white men, because they happen to be born in a foreign land."

Thus are the Vermont Democracy fully entered upon another contest, their colors well up, and all right. We wish it were among the possibilities that they may succeed; but, at all events, they will have a smart fight, and a good time of it.

From the Springfield, Ohio, Press.

The Charleston Convention.

The Democratic papers of the country are beginning to discuss the manner in which delegates should be chosen to the next Democratic National Convention.—We are glad to see a disposition manifested throughout the Union by the Democracy to leave the choice of these delegates to the people of their respective districts. Each Congressional District in the Union should have the exclusive right to choose its own delegate. The framers of the Constitution, in their wisdom, conferred upon the people of every Congressional District in the Union, the power to choose their own representative in Congress.

Without this power the legislative department of the Government would soon become a centralized despotism, because packed conventions, backed by popular sentiment in certain localities, would frequently disfranchise minorities in other localities.

The executive department, like the legislative, in a republican government should as far as possible, represent the sentiments of those who clothed it with power. To have a President of the United States is to have one who represents all the States. He should be placed before the people for their suffrages, by representatives of the people. These representatives can only be chosen collectively by the people in their respective localities.

Let each Congressional District in the Union choose its delegates to Charleston, and they will nominate a candidate for President who will be a direct representative of the masses. But let the choice of these delegates be left to a State Convention, and a few districts like Cincinnati could combine and disfranchise one half of the State. The people of the first district should have no voice in the choice of a delegate to represent the Democracy of the sixth district. The Democracy of Ohio want a representative man of the party. He can only be nominated by the single district system. We of the eighth Congressional district do not claim a voice in the choice of delegates from other districts, and at the same time we utterly deny any other district of the State any control in the choice of the delegate to represent us. The late Democratic State Convention, well knowing the sentiments of our people, recommended that this system of choosing delegates should be adopted in Ohio.

We hope to see this recommendation of the State Convention carried out in all the States. With delegates thus chosen, a nomination will be made at Charleston which will be overwhelmingly ratified by the people of the nation.

☞Mr. Douglas has announced in a letter his candidacy for the Presidency in 1860, and briefly laid down his platform. To the platform we have no objection, and Douglas, if chosen by the Democracy, would, we believe, fully carry out Ohio Democracy. Still we do not think him the only able Democratic leader fitted and desirable for the position. With the choice of the Convention, Douglas, or any other good statesman, we expect to be content.—Allen Co. Dem.

☞A fat candidate for office in Alabama, who is said to weigh 325 pounds, asks the people of his district to "try" him.

A printer, in setting this up, had the temerity to use an f instead of the t, as if he wished the Alabamians to put their "fat candidate" to the useful purpose of "larding the lean earth."

LITTLE MIAMI CONDUCTORS.—The Hocking Sentinel pays the following compliment to two of the worthy conductors on the "Little Miami," to which we say "Amen." We have always found the officers of this road gentlemen with whom it is "fortunate" to travel. They are agreeable, accommodating, and thoroughly "up to every duty." It has been our lot to travel "the Little Miami" more than any other road, and on no occasion have we ever known an officer on that road fall short of his duty:

"The Little Miami Railroad is the best managed road in Ohio. The stockholders are always fortunate in the selection of officers, and especially so in conductors. We notice that experienced, popular and accommodating conductor, Mr. D. B. Groat, runs the morning express train from Cincinnati to Columbus, and returns same evening to the "Queen City," thus making a trip of 240 miles every day.—Groat has a constitution equal to the grip of a vice, and can perform as much labor, and do it well, as two ordinary conductors. Long may he wave.

"The inimitable Andy Hall is also a conductor on the Little Miami Road, and our readers in this vicinity, who pass over the road, should make it an object to ride with either Groat or Hall."

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under SAMUEL I. MCCOY, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

[illegible] COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 22, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

N. SHAFFER.

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's Building, Town street, near Fourth.

DEATH OF DR. MONROE, OF ILLINOIS.—Dr. Byrd Monroe, a native of Kentucky, the founder as it were of Charleston, Coles county, Illinois, died at that place on the 25th ult. He practised his profession several years, but relinquished it and turned his attention to merchandising, in which he accumulated a large fortune. He was distinguished for public spirit, and has left a monument of it in the numerous edifices he caused to be erected. He was a man of talent, and represented Coles county in the Senate of Illinois, to the great satisfaction of his constituents. He was the founder of the Christian Church in Charleston, and died in the Christian faith, leaving five sons and a daughter to cherish and revere his memory.

NATIONAL LYRIC.—On our fourth page will be found a stirring, elegant and patriotic poem by Capt. GEO. W. CUTTER, who has written some of the finest lyrics in the language. His poem loses none of its freshness or vigor from the fact that it was published originally several years ago. We do not know where Capt. CUTTER is at present located, (we last heard of him at Buffalo,) but he served his country gallantly in Mexico, and commanded the Kenton Rangers, in the 2d Kentucky Infantry, at Buena Vista, under Col. McKee and Lieut. Col. Clay, who fell in that memorable action.

SHOCKING MURDER.—About eight miles from Carlinsville, Illinois, an old gentleman named Searcy was murdered on the 28th ult., by a young man with whom he shared a hired buggy, from that place, in which he was driving to visit his sons living out in the country. It is thought the murderer robbed his victim of about $2000, as $500 was found on the person of the corpse which had escaped his search. The following is a description of the wretch:

About five feet ten inches high; twenty-one or twenty-two years old; slim visage, sallow complexion; dark hair; hazel eyes; light built; round shoulders; and had a mean countenance. Had on black cloth pants; dark coat and vest; straw hat, low crown, and hat brim about five or six inches in width. Had a small carpet satchel.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.—Our friend A. W. DOLSON had an overflowing house on the 4th of July, which its known good cheer and capital accommodations, as well as his excellent qualities as a host, drew there. They had no occasion to regret their sojourn, as its central location afforded them the convenience of witnessing the several displays from their hotel. DOLSON keeps an excellent house, and those who stop with him once, are sure to return when business or pleasure calls them to Columbus.

APPROPRIATE.—The Detroit Tribune, a leading Republican paper, introduces Greeley's Pike Peak letter with the following appropriate heading:

"Apparently authentic accounts from Pike's Peak—Horace Greeley's statement."

It will be seen that the Detroit Tribune does not regard Horace's marvellous story of gold "findings" as gospel. Perhaps the investment of Horace in a claim has thrown "dust" in his eyes, and given them a "yellow" tinge!

☞The Reserve undoubtedly went against Judge Swan because of his decision.—[Circleville Herald.

And as goes the Reserve, so goes the Republican party. It was so in the Convention: we shall see if the people of Ohio are willing to follow suite.

☞We have received No. 1, Vol. 1, of the People's Press, published by J. Birney Marshall, at Columbus, O. It is devoted to the interests of Stephen A. Douglas, and enters him for the Presidential race of 1860. It is a large weekly, well printed and ably edited. We commend it to Douglas men.—[Portsmouth Tribune.

Thank you, Mc. We hope the "Douglas" men of your section may take your advice. There ought to be a good many of them in that "neck of woods," and they will not find a paper that will more earnestly and unfalteringly stand by the principles of the Democratic party, as they were understood in 1850, 1852, 1854 and 1856 than the People's Press—more strenuously opposed to new-fangled doctrines sought to be incorporated in the platform—or more steadfast in an honest and honorable support of Mr. Douglas for the Presidency in 1860.

☞There were during the last year one hundred and thirteen sheep, valued at $212, killed by dogs, and forty-two sheep, valued at $54, injured by dogs in Norwalk township, Huron county.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1859.

The Fourth of July—Our Anniversary.

Eighty-three years ago the American People became a nation. Then, the thirteen colonies, after the most mature consideration, after appealing vainly for redress, after insisting that they had a right to a voice, at least, in their own government, only to meet refusal, determined to be free; and then and there laid the foundation of our mighty empire, the basis being that the people are their own sovereigns, and owe allegiance to no other power on earth. What was then considered a problem has been demonstrated, that man is capable of self-government.

On the 4th of July, 1776, the delegations of the several colonies assembled in Philadelphia, announced to the world that America was no longer the footstool of Great Britain, but stood erect in her young manhood, a nation in her own right—a people of freemen.

The progressive steps that led to the Revolution initiated our peculiar form of government. In insisting that representation and taxation should go together, the colonies were brought together and for mutual benefit, and thus out of separate governments, subject to their own charters, the foundation was laid for "e pluribus unum"—one harmonious whole out of many. They were long loyal to the crown; and even after the sword had been drawn, they would have resumed their peaceful avocations, if a patient ear had harkened to their petitions and had not defied their remonstrance. But royalty was deaf, and there was no alternative but the bayonet and the sword. Patience had ceased to be a virtue, endurance had exhausted its powers; and resistance to the death was their sole recourse. A voice in their own government was all they fought for, and they triumphed, as a people will always eventually triumph who are determined to protect their own rights and can neither be cajoled nor deterred from their purpose.

The principle inculcated in the very formation of our government in the preliminary and apparently Providential steps by which a confederacy was established—the starting-point, the germ as it were of this great nation, must be eternally cherished—that the people are the fountain of power, and government was devised for their use. We trust in God that this principle, so dear to our fathers, so precious in their sight will never be abandoned by their sons. It is that principle, stronger than adamant upon which exist and will, if preserved, exist forever our free institutions. It is a holy principle, a glorious heritage—and on every 4th day of July, the anniversary of our nation's birthday, let us assemble around our country's altar, and renew our fidelity to the faith of our fathers, the living principle of liberty.

"To the sages who spoke, to the heroes who bled,
To the day and the deed, strike the harpstrings of glory!
Let the song of the ransomed remember the dead,
And the tongue of the eloquent hallow the story!
O'er the bones of the bold
Be that story long told,
And on Fame's golden tablets their triumphs enrolled,
Who on Freedom's green hills Freedom's banner unfurled,
And the beacon fire raised that gave light to the world!

They are gone—mighty men! and they sleep in their fame;
Shall we ever forget them? O, never! no, never!
Let our sons learn from us to embalm each great name,
And the anthem send down—'Independence forever!'
Wake, wake, heart and tongue!
Keep the theme ever young;
Let their deeds through the long line of ages be sung,
Who on Freedom's green hills Freedom's banner unfurled,
And the beacon fire raised that gave light to the world!"

A more propitious day for a grand pageant never dawned. The air was cool and bracing a slight frost having fallen the night before but not sufficiently severe to do injury. With the dawn, our city gave unmistakable tokens of the coming festivities. Every train during the night and morning had come in with extra cars, and literally jammed. From the country people poured in from all directions; and soon the streets were alive with them, dressed in their gala clothes and happiness beaming in every face.

At sunrise a salute was fired by the Columbus Light Artillery, under Capt. Ijams; and the city bells were rung for the space of half an hour. Drums were beating, fire-arms exploding, and the shrill notes of "the ear-piercing fife" mingling in the noise of many-voiced sounds.

At 8 A. M., the several divisions, as arranged by the committee, were formed on the streets assigned them, and at 9 o'clock they debouched into High street, and formed the grandest procession Columbus ever witnessed. The numbers on the side-walks could only be computed by thousands. From end to end to the other, there was a constant stream of people on the side-walks, and every window and convenient balcony, door way, and avenue was choked with heads. But there was no confusion, no noise save that of happy voices, and the frequent discharge of crackers and torpedoes, and of an occasional fire-arm, which some individual who was keeping the Fourth of July on his own book would let off.

The procession moved through High street in the following order:

First Brigade of the 13th Division Ohio Volunteer Militia, under the command of Brig. Gen. L. Butler, comprising the following: Capt. Ijams' Light Artillery Corps; First Battalion of Infantry, Lieut. Col. H. Z. Mills, commandant. Military Band. Company A. Capt. Walcutt; Company B. Captain Riley; Company D. Captain Riches; Company E. Captain Haldy; Regimental Staff; Major General Henry Wilson and Staff; Heads of Departments; Adjutant General H. B. Carrington; Quarter-Master General D. L. Wood; Surgeon General Wm. McMillen.

Committee of Arrangements on Horseback: His Excellency S. P. Chase, President of the Day; Rev. James Hoge, D. D., Rev. Conrad Mees and Committee of Escort in Carriages. J. H. Geiger, Orator of the Day; J. G. Reamy, Reader of the Declaration of Independence, and Committee of Escort in Carriages. Vice Presidents of the Day—Geo. B. Harvey, D. W. Deshler, L. Goodale, W. T. Martin, J. Silbernagle, Rodney Comstock, Amor Rees, John Clark, S. S. Davis, Joseph Chenoweth, and Harmon Jaeger in Carriages. State Officers in carriages; County Officers in carriages; Mayor and City Officers in carriages; Clergy of Columbus in carriages; Franklin County Bar in carriages; Medical Profession in carriages; Soldiers of the Revolutionary War of 1812 in carriages; soldiers of the Mexican War.

Band.—The Fire department of Columbus, with their neat and becoming uniforms, and their engines and hose, and hook-and-ladder carriages handsomely decorated, the steam fire engine occupying its place in line, the No. 1's taking precedence.

Band.—Buckeye Mounted Columbus Boat Club; Keys' U. S. Mail cars, Champion's Coal Wagons; Express Company's Wagons; Livery Carriages and Omnibuses; City Express Wagons, Drays and Carts; and Scavengers with their bright hose. The Coal Wagons of Messrs. Champions heavily laden with choice coal of several varieties, wood wagons, and carts of sawed wood, made quite a feature in the procession, the horses and wagons decorated. Not less so, were those of Messrs. Bradford, Suydam & Co. The draymen made a fine turn out, their vehicles laden with every variety of boxes, barrels, crates, &c. appropriately labeled and liberally advertising the merchandise of various establishments not the least distinguished among which were the pianos of Messrs. Wood, and Seltzer and Webster, the latter mounting a monster "Knabe Piano," as the monarch of instruments. There seemed to be a complete Apothecary Shop on one dray with all kinds of nostrums, piled up in pyramidal form, as high as Jones' Perry monument.

Band.—Hayden's Rolling Mill in miniature drawn by eight horses, in full operation, followed by a long line of operatives. Then his wire weaving apparatus in full operation.

The Columbus Machine Works made a handsome display. Their boiler men at work and "the cling of hammers closing rivets up," keeping up a musical clatter.

Next came Messrs. Gill's representative, in the [illegible] large iron kettle, large enough for a soup-bowl for the immense crowd. Then the Brass Foundry of W. B. Potts. Then the moulders of J. L. Gill & Son, at work. Then their representation of the progressive elements of the age, steam and electricity, their varieties of ploughs and agricultural implements, sled, smasher &c. Then came the Columbus woolen manufactures, with varieties of wool, yarns, cloths, &c. Then came the tailors' union, the stone cutters, chair and cabinet manufacturers, carpenters, brick makers, the circus Calliope, the Maennerchor Association, and hundreds of carriages and [illegible].

We are able to give but a very imperfect outline of the grand procession, which more than realized expectation, and was the finest display of the kind ever witnessed in this city, and would have been creditable to a city of four times its population.

The line of march being taken to the Park, where thousands had already assembled, the ceremonies of the day were commenced by an impressive prayer by Rev. Dr. James Hoge, and the singing of the following:

ODE—Air—"Old Hundred,"
(Sung by all, standing.)

Before Jehovah's awful throne,
This Nation bows with sacred joy,
Knows that the Lord is God alone;
He did create, He can destroy.

His sovereign power, His gracious aid,
Our Country's foes alone did stay;
Our banner, He victorious made,
His name, we'll praise this "Natal Day."

We'll fill His graves with thankful songs
High as the Heaven our voices raise,
Our Nation, with her thousand tongues,
Now fills His courts with sounding praise.

Accept, O God, this tribute now,
Our Nation pays to Thee, our Trust,
Our Help, our Strength, to Thee we bow,
One Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Reading of the Declaration of Independence,
By J. Greener Reamy, Esq.

MUSIC—Air—"Yankee Doodle,"
By the Bands.
"Singers' March,"
By the Columbus Maennerchor.
Oration—By Hon. Jos. H. Geiger.
ODE—Air—"Hail Columbia,"
Sung by all, standing.)

Hail Columbia, happy land,
Hail the heroes, heaven born band,
Who fought and bled in freedom's cause,
And when the storm of War was gone,
Enjoyed the peace their valor won.
Let Independence be our boast.
Ever mindful what it cost,
Ever grateful for the prize,
Let its altars reach the skies.

Chorus:
Firm, united let us be,
Rallying round our Liberty,
One and all with voice of might
Shout, Ohio for the right.

While our Eagle Banner flies,
(this Votive offering bring,
From Town and Field, from Shop and Mill,
The Church the State, the Plow and Sword,
All join us with a glad accord.
Here labor flings its honors down,
This joyful Day of Days to crown,
And o'er the whole—a golden prize—
Flashes the light of beauties' eyes.

Chorus:
Firm, united let us be,
Rallying round our Liberty,
One and all with voice of might
Shout, Ohio, for the right.

Benediction, by Rev. Conrad Mees.

After the benediction, the Maennerchor favored the assemblage with a spirited national song, and the bands played "Hail Columbia" and the "Star Spangled Banner."

The "Declaration" was very distinctly and eloquently read by Mr. Reamy, and the oration of Gen. Geiger, although brief, (he was laboring under very severe indisposition) was appropriate and eloquent. He adverted to the occasion. It was a welcome day to a grateful people. It was the anniversary of an event that gave birth, name and character to a nation. Whatever may be its faults, this country stands forth the pride and the example of the earth.

His allusion to the character of the Pilgrims, men who did their own work—except Miles Standish, who procured Alden to do his courting for him, and got in a good word for himself, was very happy. The consolement of Miles for his disappointment, by fighting the Indians, led to an episode in which the orator credibly alluded to the cruel policy which had been exercised toward that unfortunate and down-trodden people. His sketch of the condition of the colonies, the progress of events that led to revolution, the assertion that taxation and representation should go together, the eloquence of Patrick Henry, the mighty echoes of "liberty or death" that came up from hill and valley, from mountain and Savannah, the glory of Bunker Hill, the unconsciousness of the hero-patriots that they were giving birth to such a nation, who in after years would be revelling in the delights of freedom, the formation of the government, and the adoption of the Constitution was graphically drawn. The invocation to "spare the Constitution," to leave unharmed that which had made us what we are, was truly eloquent and elicited cordial applause. The effort of the orator was worthy of the theme, and was listened to with rapt attention by the crowd gathered around that shady glen, presenting the appearance of a vast amphitheater, with a ceiling of overarching boughs, through which could be had rare glimpses of the blue sky above.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, Gov. Chase, as President of the day, in a few appropriate remarks, proposed three cheers for Doctor Goodale, the donor of the Park, which were cordially given.

The rest of the day was spent in festivities and dancing, and passed off harmoniously and happily. All was joyous, free, hearty enjoyment. Not an accident or altercation in that vast mass of human beings occurred to mar the pleasures of the day. The dancing was kept up until 7 o'clock, when a national salute was fired by the artillery, and the Park was left to the silence of its solitude.

In the evening there was a grand display of fire-works opposite Capitol Square, which was witnessed by many thousands. Nixon's Circus, too, entertained a large number of spectators under its broad canvas.

We cannot close this notice without expressing the obligations which the community must feel for the admirable arrangements of the Committee, who seemed to have omitted nothing in preparing for a most magnificent celebration of the Nation's birth day—the most harmonious, joyous and orderly celebration ever witnessed here, all which will cause it to be long remembered as THE GREAT DAY IN COLUMBUS.

THE GREAT AERIAL FLIGHT.—The aerial voyage of Wise and his company, was the grandest ever made, and casts the flights of all former navigators of the air completely in the shade. They left St. Louis at 6:40, P. M., on Friday, and at 1½ P. M., the next day, they were hovering over Lake Ontario, abreast of Rochester, N. Y., and found it impossible to ascend higher than the current of the storm, and when it was raging the highest they were not more than thirty feet above the water. They made the land, however, near the town of Henderson, Jefferson county, in the edge of the woods, the balloon swinging above the top of a tree to which the basket was made fast, and the four passengers descended safely. A good reception was given to the parties at the town of Adams. The whole distance made was 1,150 miles, time about 19 hours, or something over sixty miles an hour. Many miles were traversed with greater rapidity, or rather in less time but that includes all the detention from the necessity of ascending or descending, and meeting contrary currents. It was a most remarkable voyage.

☞ Friendship for Mr. Douglas seems to be a political issue in Kentucky. Most of the Democratic candidates are interrogated, and all of them have thus far answered that they would support him if nominated.

President Buchanan has gone to Old Soldiers' Home for the Summer, but attends at the White House daily, as heretofore, during official hours, and after then on Cabinet days, Tuesdays and Friday.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

BROWN COUNTY.—The boys of Georgetown, have formed an Amateur Circus Company, and have given several exhibitions. Their feats of tumbling are said to be clever, and their clown brimful of wit. They were to give a grand display on the 4th.

CRAWFORD COUNTY.—A Democratic Club is to be formed at Galion on the 13th inst., and a meeting of the Democracy of Polk township is called for that purpose at the office of Poe and Clymer.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY.—A few weeks since the death of the fine stallion Printer, the property of Baker and Johnson, was announced. His lungs were almost decayed and his kidneys and windpipe were affected.

The "Eagle," last week, announces the death of Blackhawk Henry, on Wednesday night, the property of Crim and Wollard, costing two years ago $1000. It was found upon examination, that the parts immediately beneath the brain were much affected, turned black through inflammation; also the gullet was found to be in a similar condition. Mr. Crim attributed his death to an affection of the heart.

The Union Schools closed week before last. In the examinations the scholars are said to have acquitted themselves handsomely. Great praise is bestowed upon the teachers and especially Mr. Whitney.

Gen. Carrington inspected the military company at Lancaster, on the 27th ult., which he found well-drilled, and a fine looking body of men, capable of standing in the breach if necessary.

FAYETTE COUNTY.—The Agricultural Fair will take place on the 7th 8th and 9th of September. There will be a full average crop of wheat. A field that was thought "clean gone" will average twenty to twenty-five bushels to the acre! The "Register" says:—"The hay crop promises to be very heavy, while corn appears so promising that a hungry horse next winter must prove a curiosity."

The "Register" complains as "a bad arrangement that the Pickaway County Fair is set for the same time as that of Fayette, "as the people of Fayette and Pickaway interchange largely in visiting both Fairs."

The July stock sales take place at Washington to-day.

A man named John McDonough was committed to jail for rape on a girl twelve years old named Mary Nelis.

GREENE COUNTY.—At Xenia, on Thursday night last, says the "News," the mysterious "Sons of Malta" appeared in the streets at midnight, in procession, in an entirely original regalia. Half the town was on the streets, looking at them. Notwithstanding their ghostly appearance, they are said to have discussed the creature comforts which mine host, Cram, had prepared, with a very mortal and human-like relish. A delegation was over from Dayton. Some conjecture, from their strange appearance, that they were the inmates of the Lunatic Asylum over there, who had broken loose, in some way.

The negro "Masons" had a celebration at Xenia on the 24th ult., and, after a procession, were addressed by C. H. Langston, the Oberlin rescuer.

The crops are said to be promising, and the wheat, "not to be sneezed at."

HANCOCK COUNTY.—The wheat is better than was expected, the crop being one third greater than last year, notwithstanding the frosts. In places, where the wheat is late ripening there is some weevil, showing that the pestiferous insect was not "froze out."

HURON COUNTY.—A school house in Fairfield township was struck by lightning on Friday, 24th ult., and completely riddled. The chimney was prostrated, the floor was ripped up, and one end torn off. What is most singular about the affair is, the school children were all in the house at the time it was struck, and not one of them was hurt.

A German was found dead in his bed, at the Fountain House, Monroeville, on May 31st, who came to his death from taking opium or laudanum.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY.—On Wednesday of last week three skeletons were exhumed in a gravel bank in the cemetery at Dayton, which had been deposited within two feet of the surface. They seemed to be in a good state of preservation, but crumbled on being exposed to the air. From the thickness of the skulls, and the high cheek bones, they were pronounced to have been Indians. A skull, some teeth and fractions of limbs were presented to the editor of the "Empire" who thinks "what a strange history could these mouldering aboriginals disclose, had they the power to describe!" Very likely.

OTTAWA COUNTY.—Near Ottawa City a sturgeon was taken six feet eleven inches long, weighing 144 lbs. 7 oz. Wasn't it a whale?

ROSS COUNTY.—From the township Assessor's returns of Ross county as published in the Scioto Gazette, we make the following summary:

Number of horses 11,706, valued at $759,645; number of cattle, 25,863, valued at $404,919; number of hogs, 64,713, valued at $185,576; number of sheep, 16,851, valued at $19,952; number of mules, 165, valued at $12,380.

SENECA COUNTY.—On Tuesday of last week the steam mill of D. P. Russell was consumed, supposed to have been struck by lightning during the storm. Loss $18,000, with $13,000 insurance. O. L. Peck, the lessee, loses about $3,000. Some 600 bushels of wheat and about 25 barrels of unpacked flour, beside other grain, which were in the mill at the time, are a total loss. About 100 bbls of packed flour were saved.

On Friday, the 24th, Christian Bealer was killed by lightning about a mile from Tiffin. He had taken shelter under a tree.

The mail route between Tiffin and Fostoria has been discontinued.

The commencement exercises of Heidelberg College commenced on Sunday of last week, with a sermon addressed to the graduating class by Rev. E. E. Higbee. The examination commenced on Monday and closed on Wednesday, at the College building. Tuesday evening the anniversary exercises of the College Literary Societies took place, at the First German Reformed Church, consisting of an address by Rev. Geo. B. Russell, of Pittsburg, on "The Anglo-German Element in America."—The graduating and baccalaureate exercises came off at the same place, on Wednesday evening. The graduating class were: S. C. Lamberson, Tiffin; James Heffley, Berlin, Pa.; John D. Gouger, Lafayette, Ind.; P. J. Wilson, Lansing, Mich.; G. H. Leonard, Brazil, O.—After the degrees were conferred, the Alumni Association was addressed by V. Hays, A. B., of Somerset, Pa.

STARK COUNTY.—The "Democrat" says:—"The Stark County "Republican" has again changed hands. Mr. Meredith, its late editor, had his heart 'busted,' and left because he could not stand it any longer." What! didn't the course of true love run smooth?

WOOD COUNTY.—On Friday afternoon, 24th ult., a severe hail storm did much damage in the neighborhood of Freeport. Some fields of corn and wheat were entirely destroyed, and fruit and garden vegetables within the range of the storm suffered a similar fate. The crops generally are reported fine.

BLONDIN.—The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says, in relation to Blondin's crossing the Niagara on a tight rope, that he will first walk across the chasm on a rope. He will then return with a sack drawn over his head, and finally he will re-cross with a pack upon his shoulders, pushing a wheelbarrow—the latter being his crowning feat for the day.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.—Our readers will find on the 4th page a very neat, chaste, and appropriate address to the medical visitors on the 9th ult., by Dr. R. Thompson of this city.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

HALIFAX, June 28.—The royal mail steamship Arabia arrived at noon, with Liverpool dates to Saturday, 18th inst., three days later than received by the Nova Scotian at Quebec.

There are no battles to report, and according to the latest advices from the seat of war, the Austrians were retreating from the Oglio towards the Mincio. The allies were advancing rapidly and concentrating their forces for a decisive attack. A battle was expected to occur within a week. A naval demonstration in the Adriatic was also impending.

Lord Palmerston has succeeded in forming a strong cabinet, embracing Lord John Russell, Mr. Gladstone, Lord Elgin, Richard Cobden, D. M. Gibson, and Earl Granville.

STATE OF TRADE.

Manchester advices continue favorable; the prices for goods are higher and holders demand a still further advance.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Richardson & Spence's circular reports the breadstuffs market dull, at Tuesday's decline. Corn has a declining tendency, and all qualities are lower than on Tuesday.

Provisions declining.

LONDON.—Consols 92⅝@92⅞ for account, and declined. The money market is unchanged. The supply of money is abundant. The bullion in the bank has increased £7,600.

SACKVILLE, N. B., June 29.—The one-horse express of the Associated Press has arrived here from Halifax, bringing details of European news furnished by the steamship Arabia, which arrived at that port yesterday.

GREAT BRITAIN.—Parliament had reassembled, but Lord Palmerston postponed the presentation of his programme for the present.

THE SEAT OF WAR.

Gen. Gyulai had been superseded in his command of the second army by Gen. Schlick, Commander of the Fourth Military District.—The Austrians report that Gen. Urban had repulsed Garibaldi's force. Garibaldi was at Brescia. The Austrian troops were moving towards Italy. Napoleon demands 100,000 additional men, in order to besiege the fortresses of the Austrians, which form the historical square between the Mincio and Adige. The Austrians are said to be preparing at Modena to attack the allied army. The mobilization of the Prussian army, and the more hostile attitude which the German Confederation has assumed, created an uneasiness as to the result, a general war being feared.

Kossuth had passed through France en route for Italy.

Prince Napoleon's corps had commenced moving.

The Austrians are reported to have entered the Valtelline.

FRANCE.—The Paris Bourse was depressed.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, June 17.—Richardson & Spence state that the weather is favorable for the crops. Flour closed very dull at a decline of 3d@4d on the week. Sales at 10 6d@12s 6d per cental. Wheat is also dull at a decline of 3d@4d on Tuesday's prices, closing firm; western red is quoted at 8s@9s 9d; white 9s 6d@10s 6d; Southern 10s@12s. Corn exhibits a declining tendency for all qualities; mixed 6s@6s 9d; yellow 6s 1d@6s 4d, white 8s@8s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, June 17.—Beef heavy, with a decline of 3s@5s for inferior qualities. Pork heavy and 2s 6d lower. Bacon heavy, at 1s@2s decline, closing with nominal quotations. Lard heavy at nominal quotations, the inquiry being slight and prices weak.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET, June 17.—Sugar is buoyant, and holders demand an advance. Coffee firm.

LONDON MARKET, June 17.—Wheat dull at a decline of 1s@2s. Sugar firm. Coffee firm. Rice quiet.

MONEY MARKET.—There has been a decrease in bullion at the bank of England of £7,000. State stocks steady but unchanged. Railroads inactive. Illinois Central 41@42.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Later news from Aspinwall, received by the Northern Light brings intelligence of the arrival of M. Belly at Aspinwall, from San Juan, on his way to France. Financial difficulties are supposed to be the cause of his sudden return. These tidings settle the question of M. Belly's whereabouts, and refute the rumor of his death which has been in circulation.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The new British ministry had been officially announced as follows: Viscount Palmerston, first Lord of the Treasury; Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Lord John Russell, Secretary of State; for the Foreign Department, Duke of Newcastle, Secretary of State; for the Colonies, Hon. Sidney Herbert, Secretary of State; for the War Department, Hon. Chas. Wood, Secretary of State; to the India Post Department, the Duke of Somerset; Lord of the Admiralty, Lord Campbell; Lord Chancellor, Earl Granville, President of the Council; Duke of Argyle, Privy Seal; Earl of Elgin, Postmaster-General; Hon. Richard Cobden, President of the Board of Trade; Hon. J. Edward Cardwell, First Commissioner of the Board of Public Works; Hon. J. Milner Gibson, President of the Poor Law Board; Hon. Sir George Grey, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; Hon. Sir A. Cockburn, Lord Chief Justice.

Parliament met on the 17th inst., when Lord Derby announced the resignation of the ministry.

Earl Granville, President of the Council, said he would reserve his explanation of the policy of the new Government till a future day.

The House of Lords then adjourned till the 21st inst.

In the House of Commons, Mr. D'Israeli announced the resignation of the ministry, and moved an adjournment which was carried.

A dispatch from Vienna says the French have re-established a depot on the Albian coast, and disembarked large quantities of gold coin.

An Austrian corps d'armee, which left Ancona for Tesearo, had been directed toward the lower Po, to join the troops in the Provinces. It is uncertain yet whether Ancona has been wholly evacuated.

VERY LATEST BY TELEGRAPH FROM LONDON TO LIVERPOOL.

LONDON, June 18—4 P. M.—Kossuth has left London for Paris with French passports. On Monday next he will arrive at Genoa, where a becoming reception awaits him. He will have an audience with Napoleon, but no grounds exist for the report in circulation as to his plans.

An amnesty has been granted to the political prisoners at Naples on the strong remonstrance of Mr. Elliott, the British Minister.

The Times in its city article of last evening, quotes advices from Frankfort, which state the German confederations are understood to have resolved that 80,000 men, namely, 40,000 Prussians and 40,000 Austrians, shall be stationed on the Rhine. There were also strong rumors that Prussia will issue some decisive announcement in the course of a few days. According to prevalent conjecture, peace is to be proposed to the Emperor Napoleon on certain conditions, and if these are refused, Germany is to enter into the war. Under these circumstances there is great anxiety and stagnation in all commercial cities.

The Times also says that Russia is making vast war-like preparations at all naval depots. The Neva division of the fleet is reported to number 86 first class ships and the Baltic fleet 35 sail of the line, of which 14 screw vessels are at Cronstadt.

The Times accounts for the recent shipments of gold from St. Petersburgh to London as payment for machinery made in America and elsewhere.

Large Russian orders are lying unexecuted in England.

The Daily News thinks that the Cabinet is not yet complete, and complains of the manner in which Mr. Gibson has been moved from post to post to make room for the old class of placemen.

It was reported that the Generals under Pelissier are forthwith to repair to their respective stations, and it was considered not improbable that the army now called the Army of the East would soon be denominated the Army of the Rhine.

The French Army of observation on the Rhine frontiers number 71,000.

An imperial decree proclaims that the public will receive for the interest on the national loan now due, either bank notes at 125 florins for every 100 florins or second government bonds redeemable with compound interest in 5 years.

Commercial letters from Vienna describe the financial condition of Austria as one of complete bankruptcy.

A letter from St. Petersburgh says if Prussia allows herself to be goaded into menacing steps, Russia will concentrate troops on the Gallician frontier and send detachments of her fleet to the Prussian frontiers.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The steamship Vanderbilt, with London and Liverpool dates to 22nd ult. has arrived.

There are no battles to report, but the allies are besieging Mantua, and another decisive battle may soon be expected.

The Austrians have issued at Mantua forced paper currency of £5,000,000 sterling.

King Victor Emanuel has declared that he would not consent to the annexation of any part of the Roman States to Sardinia.

The Austrians have removed their headquarters to Villa Franca, midway between Verona and Mantua. They have abandoned Lonato, and also Castiglione and Motechiaro, which recent positions they have occupied in great force and had strongly fortified.

The French and Sardinian troops occupied Prescia, and the Emperor Napoleon had advanced from that position on the Austrians.

Kossuth had embarked for Genoa.

Many other Italian cities had pronounced for the Italian cause.

Gen. Garibaldi marched, on the 20th ult., from Salo, on Lake Garda, towards Desenzano, but was repulsed by an Austrian force. He has since pushed his outposts to Ballodore, in the direction of Bormio, which latter place is occupied by the Austrians.

Victor Emanuel had refused the Dictatorship offered him by the Commissioners from Bologna, in pursuance of his determination to decline the annexation of any part of the States of the Church.

The Austrian account of the losses sustained during the battle of Magenta has been published. The killed are stated at 61 officers and 1,302 soldiers—total, 1,363.—Wounded, 218 officers and 4,138 soldiers—total, 4,356. Missing, 4,000 soldiers. Total killed, wounded and missing, 9,713.

A dispatch from Berlin says that six Prussian corps d'armee, besides the guard, are to be mobilized, and three others kept in reserve to oppose Russia if necessary. All the other corps will be concentrated on the Rhine, and only a sufficient number of troops left in the provinces to garrison the towns and fortresses.

The various bulletins from the seat of war present the following as the state of affairs:

The Sardinian army is in position before Brescia in lines with the French troops.

The cities of Fano, Fossombrone, Sesi and Ancona have all pronounced in favor of the national cause. Another dispatch says that the Austrians had re-occupied Montevolo, on the 17th, in considerable force.

Two thousand Papal troops had been sent from Rome to restore order in Perugia.

A collision had taken place at Corsica between a detachment of the Papal troops and the [illegible].

A dispatch from Turin, dated the 17th ult., says that the Emperor Napoleon entered Brescia on that day with Victor Emanuel.

Much popular enthusiasm accompanied the march of the allies throughout Lombardy.

The districts on the right of the Tiber, also Lind de Gadello had declared for the national cause.

Victor Emanuel, in refusing the dictatorship of Bologna, told the commissioners that he should disapprove of every act subversive of a contrary to equality, and prejudicial to the cause of national independence.

The King had also sent a message to the Pope to assure him that he has nothing to fear, and that the independence of the Peninsula should be a guarantee and not a menace to the neutrality and integrity of the States of the church.

A despatch from Berner, dated the 18th, says that the Austrians in great force have occupied the Stalvio Pass, blown up the Devil's bridge, and planted their artillery in the pass.

A French army is advancing, by forced marches, against this position.

Gen. Garibaldi was organizing a free corps in the Valtelline.

The city of Mantua is besieged. The provisioning of the place has been ordered.

The Austrians had destroyed the railway from Milan to Brescia.

The French official reports make their loss at the battle of Magenta 323 killed, 2,166 wounded, and 470 missing; and at Malegnano 154 killed and wounded and 64 missing.

The Austrian prisoners are to be sent to Algiers to be employed on the public works. Gold and silver medals are to be distributed by the king of Sardinia to the Zouaves, who distinguished themselves at Palestro.

Advices from Egypt says that the Pasha had suspended the Suez canal works, that M. Lesseps had protested, and that the French Consul was about to interfere in the matter. King Leopold, of Belgium, was making preparation to visit England.

The London Times, in speaking of Kossuth's mission to Italy, says that he will be employed at once in acting as the Hungarian regiments in the Austrian service, and, if possible, produce a revolt in Hungary.

A dispatch from Paris says: One hundred rifled cannon were sent, on the 17th ult., to the army in Italy.

Advices from India announce signs of military at Gwalior, Meerut and other places among European troops.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Bavaria, from Hamburgh and Southampton on the 18th ult., has arrived. Her dates have been anticipated, but the London papers of the 18th, brought by her, furnish the following:

TURIN, June 17.—The following official bulletin has been issued:

On yesterday, the head quarters of the Emperor of France were at Cove, on the road from Bergnabo to Cremona, and those of the King of Sardinia at Castagnato, six miles west of Brescia.

Simini and Gessi have both pronounced for the national cause.

Prince Napoleon has commenced the movement of his troops; 8,000 Tuscan troops and 200 horses are ready to depart with him.

Scavenered has pronounced for the national cause, and a manifesto has been published declaring the adhesion of that town to the Central government established at Bologna, which is to be placed under the dictatorship of the King of Sardinia.

The manifesto also express an unanimous wish to be enabled some day to form a part of a monarchy worthy of Italians.

BERNE, June 17.—A telegraphic dispatch from Coire announces that numerous Austrian corps coming from Stokvio have arrived at Grantola in the Valtelline, and advanced toward Livonia.

PARIS, June 17.—The Bourse is flat and rentes are quoted at 62f. 60c. for money, and 62f 55c. for account, being a decline ⅛ for the former, and ⅛ for the latter since yesterday.

Liverpool Market.

Breadstuffs—The weather is favorable for crops and the approaching harvest. The quotations for Breadstuffs show an advance. Flour is dull, and offered by holders at 10s. 6d.a13s. 6d. per cental.

Wheat is quiet, but for French lots there has been a speculative demand at 1a2d. advance. Western Red quoted at 8a9s. 10d.; White 9s. 6d.a10s. 6d. Corn quiet; mixed at 6a6s 3d.; Yellow, 6s. 1d.a6s. 6d., and White, 8a8s. 6d.

Provisions—The market shows a declining tendency. Lard heavy, and offered at a decline Beef heavy and quotations nominal. Pork dull; prices easier, but quotations unchanged.

London Money Market.

LONDON, June 23.—The money market is heavy, owing to the increasing apprehensions of a general European war. Consols closed to-day at 92⅛a93¼. American securities unchanged.

ANOTHER REVOLUTIONARY HERO GONE.—The Mansfield Herald chronicles the death of James McDermott, of Mifflin township, Richland county, aged over one hundred years. The deceased was a soldier of the Revolution, and served as sergeant for the last two years at Fort Duquesne. He removed to Richland from Lancaster county, Pa., in 1816, and had at the time of his decease eleven children (some of them quite advanced in years); seventy-nine grand children, and one hundred and thirteen great grand children.

☞ A remarkably handsome and dashing young lady, belonging to a wealthy family in Boston, was married in a hurry by her parents to a merchant in Iowa, in order to keep her out of the hands of the keeper of a faro bank and the owner of a trotting horse, with whom she was in love; but as soon as they got settled in their Iowa home, the sporting man came around, and she has now eloped with him. Another down east young wife has gone crazy about a circus rider whom it seems she had known before her marriage and followed him to another town. "The de'il's in the lassies, they gang now sae braw."

☞ On the 30th of June, 1856, the Pension Office had on its roll the names of 253 revolutionary heroes. Information has been received that during the succeeding half year 46 went to their long home, leaving upon the 1st of January, 1859, only 207 survivors. The ages of some of these relics of a past generation are stated to have been 100 to 103 years. On the 1st of July, 1858, there were on the pension rools the names of 4,209 widows of revolutionary soldiers, which number, on the 1st of January, 1859, had been decreased by 295. Of those living at the commencement of the present year, 45 were the wives of revolutionary heroes prior to the great struggle.

☞ The Navy Department has just made a discovery of the manner in which liquor is smuggled by ship's crews on board ships. Bread is made into regular ship loaves, inside which are tin cans, holding about a pint, filled with liquor. The last Pacific mail brought one of these boxes filled with bread, inside which is a can filled with whisky. It is certainly a very ingenious contrivance.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The stream where the accident occurred on the Michigan Southern railroad last night is naturally but a rivulet, and was swollen by the extraordinary rains the previous afternoon. In the evening the floodwood probably choked the culvert, converting the embankment into a dam, and the great weight of water, with the concussion of the crossing train caused the sad calamity. About one hundred and fifty persons were on the train. Thirty of these were taken from the ruins as dead, and fifty or sixty wounded. The rest not heard from.

Killed—as far as we have been able to ascertain the names—Bartwell, Express messenger; engineer and fireman, both named Chulp; Bobbington, baggage master; C. W. Smith, road master; Mrs. E. P. Gittell and child, Stone Mills, New York; Thomas Mitcham, Michigan City; J. McCarthy, Holmesville, Ind.; Mary Curran, Mr. Walworth, Adrian; Mrs. Sumner, Chicago; man unknown, marked right arm U. S. H; S. S. McWeaty, Fon du Lac county, Wisconsin; Richard Muldary, Calumet, Ind.; Mr. Streeter, Sparta, Wisconsin; Henry Flickenger, Reading, Pa.; S. P. McCullough, Lawrenceburgh, Pa.; two boys named Tiderwell.

There are seventeen others so disfigured that it is impossible to identify them. Thirty-four bodies were found up to ten o'clock. The other passengers missing are supposed to be drowned.

Wounded—Fred. Miller, Augustus White, Holmesville, Indiana; E. M. Knap, Hudson, Wis.; Miss Hattie Knapp, Auburn; J. K. Gardner, Jonesville, Mich.; Chas. Sherman, Boston; Wm. Flannen, P. Myers, P. Quinn, C. Anderson, W. B. Anderson, all from Ainsworth, Ill.; A. D. Piser, Chicago; D. P. Rhodes, Cleveland; Miss Moore, Freeport; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Gerry, Brooklyn; C. Jackson, Miss.; C. N. Rider, Waukesha, Wis.; C. Bennett, Adrian, Oscar Warpeton, M. H. Regan and lady and daughter, Rockford, Ill.; S. C. Rose, Coldwater; M. J. Hawk, Charleston, Va.; C. Yaw and lady, N. Y. State; A. Van Sycke, wife and four children, Warren Co., Ohio, himself and one child seriously; Stephen H. Arnold, Decatur, Ind.; Mary Coates, Youngstown, Ohio; Miss D. A. Porter, Hudson, Mich.; R. W. Tait, Susquehanna, Pa.; S. A. Garley, Addison, Vt.; Henry Crasse, Phila.; Calvin Hogan, Milwaukee.

The train was running at the rate of ten or twenty miles an hour. The train coming west passed over the embankment safely three hours before the accident.

Those injured, and not expected to live, are Mrs. Regan, Rockford, Ill.; John D. Wise, Patrick Mien, Ainsworth, Ill.; E. G. Smith, banker, Wall street, N. Y.; another M. Walworth, of Adrian.

No fault is attributed to the officers of the train by the passengers.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The proposition for a lease of the Erie R. R. was this day submitted to the executive committee, accompanied with a request that the Board of Directors appoint a committee to confer with the parties proposing. The offer is to take the road for ten years, paying one million five hundred thousand dollars for the first year, one hundred thousand to be added each succeeding year for four years, and two millions per year for the remaining five years, with the privilege of renewal of another term of ten years, at two millions five hundred thousand per annum.

The proposition is made by an individual formerly identified with the company, on behalf of himself and others.

It is now ascertained beyond a doubt that Edward Griffith, who a year ago was sentenced to prison for ten years for shooting and wounding a policeman, is entirely innocent. The two burglars (Kelly and Gordon) arrested last night confess to having committed that crime, and that Griffith is a stranger to them.

The match between Bill Cheatham and Tar River, three mile heats, came off over the Fashion Course yesterday. Cheatham won in two straight heats. Times 5:42; 5:38. The trot on the Union Course, two mile heats, in harness, between George Patchen and Lady Woodruff, and Brown Dick, was won by Patchen in two straight heats. Times 5:01½; 5:03.

There were yesterday two stabbing cases among schoolboys, one in Brooklyn, in school No. 10, where John Shannon, aged eight years, stabbed Eliza Thetford, aged nine, inflicting a serious wound in the back. The other case happened in Cherry street, in this city, where a lad twelve years of age, named Kane, was stabbed in the neck by a school-mate named Casey, and severely wounded.

The stockholders of the Tecumseh Railroad, are to have a meeting to raise money to carry on legal proceedings against Mr. Chamberlain the President of one of the Boards elected at the time of the annual meeting. Mr. Cleveland proposes fifty cents per share contribution for this purpose. This upon the 180,000 shares reported to have been issued would yield $90,000.

The bank statement is not calculated to make money easier. The loans are but little lower, and the shipments of coin have gone from petit deposits.

The steamers of Saturday will take out quite a large sum in bars.

The Express says private letters by the California mail report that Monsieur Belly the famous French man had died of a fever, but the rumor needs confirmation. It is hardly likely that so important an event could have transpired without becoming at once generally known.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Attorney General Black has decided that there is no form of certificate in the nature of a passport which a State officer may lawfully issue. He says the impositions practiced upon the illiterate and unwary by the fabrication of worthless passports led to the passage of a law confining their issue to certain legally authorized agents. A dispatch from the American Consul at Hamburg, shows how frightfully innocent men have been robbed by the sale of these spurious passports, and the Attorney General advises that the notary who signed the paper which accompanied the dispatch be prosecuted, he being clearly within the penal provisions of the law.

NEW ORLEANS, June 29.—The steamship Philadelphia, with dates from Havana to the 25th inst., has arrived below. Freights have slightly declined. Sterling Exchange 15@16 per cent. premium. Exchange on New York 3½@5½.

The British steamer Tevibt had arrived at Havana from St. Thomas, but Santa Anna was not on board as expected, unless concealed. Much disappointment was manifested at Havana on account of his non-arrival.

WASHINGTON, June 28, 1859.—A letter was received here this morning from the Governor of Kansas by one of the members of the Treasury Department, from which I have had the privilege of copying a portion of it, the rest being strictly private. It is dated:

LECOMPTON, K. T., June 25, 1859—DEAR SIR,—We have had a very close election here—neither party had a certain majority. There are a number claimed as Republicans who are pledged against the whole negro theory. But how they may vote in organizing the Convention is not so certain.

We lost 3 Democrats by 3 votes only, and 2 by 1 vote—close work—when 11 votes would have given us a clear majority in the Convention.

It is really a Democratic victory, and the Republicans are terribly down in the mouth. They cry fraud! but I never saw a fairer or more peaceable election anywhere.

Very truly, S. MEDARY.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Our Ex-minister to Spain Mr. Dodge has published a card in which he says that while the prospect of acquiring Cuba by purchase under the present circumstances is inauspicious, that he has never even intimated that the proposition in any way involved the honor of Spain or that the purchase might not at a future period be effected. He believes the course recommended by the President will lead to the consummation of that object by honorable negotiation.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The ship Fleetwood of Boston, which sailed from that port 5th of February, for the Society Islands, was lost off Cape Horn, on the 6th May, by running foul of an iceberg. The ship sank in a few hours, compelling her officers and crew to take to the boat. The Captain had his wife and child on board. The mate, Mr. Bobson, and four seamen were fallen in with and carried to Pernambuco, all badly frost-bitten.

The Captain and sixteen of the crew took to another boat, and it is hoped were picked up.

WASHINGTON, July 1st.—The Post Master General has ordered of G. F. Nesbitt, of New York, one million stamped envelopes, with the new self-sealing improvement. They will be furnished to the public at five cents per hundred more than are charged for the present patterns.

The statement contained in a letter from Secretary Floyd, charging the Secretary of War with being interested in the contracts with Holliday and others for supplying flour to the troops in Utah, is destitute of truth. The arrangement for this service was made in the regular course of business, after advertisement, and by which contracted with the former mode at least $100,000 are saved to the Government.

BOSTON, July 4.—The wife of the Hon. Edward Everett died in this city on Saturday night.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Hon. W. O. Goode, member of the last Congress from Virginia, died near Boydtown, Va., on Sunday morning, from consumption.

CLEVELAND, July 4.—The barque Sunshine was capsized on Saturday afternoon off Fairport. The captain, first mate, four of the crew and two children were lost. The captain's wife, second mate, and six of the crew were picked up on Sunday morning.

The barque S. A. Standard, of Buffalo, bound to Chicago, capsized on the north shore on Saturday. The two mates were drowned.

Markets.

CINCINNATI, July 5.—Flour unchanged, demand moderate; sales of 300 bbls at $5 90@6 for superfine. Whisky dull; 400 bbls sold at 28c. Provisions—No sales to-day; prices nominally unchanged. 70 hhds sugar sold at 7¼@7½c for good fair and prime. 1,000 bbls molasses at 37c. Coffee unchanged. Wheat dull and drooping, prices about 5c lower; we quote red at $1 13@1 15. Corn firm at 80@83c. Rye remains steady at 83c. Barley dull at 59@62c. Oats dull; prices tending downward. We quote 48@50c.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Flour has advanced 5c; sales of 5,000 bbls at $5 50@5 80 for State and $6 05@6 75 for Ohio. Wheat quiet and unchanged in price, sales of white at $1 74@180. Corn held firm 5 c dull; mixed at 86@86½. Oats firm at 52@48c. Pork dull at $15 87½ for mess and $12 50 for prime. Lard heavy at 11@11½c. Whisky steady at 26½.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See Advertisement.

☞ A British officer, writing from Teheran, Persia, to the London Times, remarks:—"A Cathartic Pill, manufactured by 'an American chemist,' (Dr. J. C. AYER, of Lowell, Mass.,) has cured the Shah of a Liver Complaint that threatened his life. This simple fact, as might be expected, renders the Americans immensely popular here, while we English are overlooked. Doubtless our own scholars made the discoveries which he employs, and thus it is in everything: we do the labor, then the mousing Americans put their mark on it and take the reward. Dr. AYER is idolized by the Court and its retainers here, which will doubtless be reflected to him on a gold snuff box or diamond hilted sword, while not the name even of DAVY, CHRISTOSON or BRODIE, the great lights by which he shines, is known.—New York Sunday Paper.

CITY NOTICES.

COLUMBUS, July 6th, 1859.

We perceive that J. C. Woods still continues his libellous notice in the "Journal," notwithstanding we have branded the same as defamatory and false. We had supposed that, after a flat denial on our part of his assertion that the "Knabe" is an imitation and copy of the "Steinway," he would not longer persist in deceiving the public; but, like an honorable dealer, have withdrawn that portion of his advertisement. It seems that we have mistaken the man.

We now state that there is no comparison whatever between the "Knabe" and "Steinway" piano. The "Knabe" has an improved English action which is not only easy and brilliant, but lasting. The "Steinway" has a French action lasting much less than the English, but which, however good at first, will not wear one-fourth as long as the English action will. Purchasers have but to examine and compare the two, to become convinced that the action of the "Knabe" far surpasses, and will endure until the action of the "Steinway" will have ceased to be remembered, save in the reminiscences of old players.

We also see it stated in J. C. W.'s advertisement of the 6th inst. that "Chickering has received thirty-eight medals—the first premiums over all other competitors in the United States." Now, we challenge J. C. W., or any other dealer, to procure one single instance where "Chickering" has been awarded the premium when brought into competition with the "Knabe" piano.

If Chickering is your favorite, say so; if Steinway, make it known; name the time and place and we will give you "one more" chance to make good your reputation you have struggled so hard to maintain. We intend you shall acknowledge "Knabe" has no competitor in this country, and stands alone in his proud position without a rival.

SELTZER & WEBSTER.

☞ Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at RUSSELL'S if you want a superior article.

☞ PARSONS' Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and fashionable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. G. CHITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ ROBERTS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "John" says that he don't care if potatoes do three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

G. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition," No. 23 East State Street.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, if equaled.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been prepared at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ CHARLEY BRENTPOOLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring suits for summer wear should look in.

☞ FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

POCKET BOOK LOST.

On the morning of the 4th, was lost a pocket book containing one $5 note, Virginia, $1 Ohio, and a $3 note on some other bank, together with a number of papers, memoranda, &c. The finder may retain the money for returning the pocket book, at the Post office, or to the [illegible] Robinson & Dickinson's.

July 7. JOHN O'HANLON.

McCOY'S
COMMERCIAL COLLEGE!

CARPENTER'S BUILDING, COLUMBUS, OHIO

THE MOST THOROUGH AND PRACTICAL INSTITUTION FOR YOUNG MEN PREPARING FOR BUSINESS IN THE COUNTRY.

S. I. McCOY - - - Principal.

S. I. McCoy, Teacher of Book-keeping and Practical and Ornamental Penmanship.

Dan'l Worley Teacher of Book-keeping, Mathematics and English Grammar.

[illegible] Esq., Lecturer on the Laws of Business and Political Economy.

TERMS—Payable in advance.

For a full and unlimited course in all the departments, with the privilege of review at the student's option $35. Students taken for a special course by the month, as per agreement.

The Principal has obtained the first premium for specimens of Practical and Ornamental Penmanship at many State and County Fairs, and at the O. S. Fair. He presents to the Public specimens of penmanship, and invites criticism and comparison with all other. He also invites the attention of those desiring a business course, to the superior facilities which have prepared to offer students in all the departments essential to a thorough business man's training.

Rooms Open Day and Evening.

Send for Circular and Specimens of Writing.
Address, S. I. McCOY,
Columbus, Ohio.

E. BASSETT LANGDON,
Attorney at Law.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
☞ OFFICE—25 West Third street.

COOKE & TAYLOR.

WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Columbus and vicinity that they have opened a CUSTOM SHOP, and are now prepared to do business in all branches of Tailoring. We earnestly solicit the patronage of our old Customers as well as new ones. TERMS LOW. No. 208 South High street.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves are aware of this fact on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the

Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at [illegible] accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts,

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferers. That

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost magical rapidity under their invigorating operation. That scrofulous disabilities are removed by their cordial and purifying properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried with and also that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the source of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system every taint of disease, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice, and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Room, No. 6 East Fourth St. 2d Building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory, No. 9 Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY BY [illegible]

And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.

AYER'S
Ague Cure.

FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC,

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.

☞ For sale by Roberts & Samuel, So. [illegible] North High St., Columbus; Suire, Eckstein & Co., Cincinnati; Wm. Fisher, Cleveland; W. A. Graham, Zanesville; and by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine everywhere.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1859.

E PLURIBUS UNUM:

AN AMERICAN NATIONAL SONG.

BY CAPT. G. W. [illegible]

Though many and bright are the stars that appear,
In that flag by our country unfurl'd:
And the stripes that are swelling in majesty there,
Like a rainbow adorning the world:
Their lights are unsullied as those in the sky,
By a deed that our fathers have done
And they're leagued in as true and as holy a tie,
In their motto of "Many in One."

From the hour when those patriots fearlessly flung
That banner of starlight abroad,
Ever true to themselves, to that motto they clung,
As they clung to the promise of God
By the bayonet traced at the midnight of war,
On the field where our glory was won—
Oh! perish the heart or the hand that would mar
Our motto of "Many in One."

Mid the smoke of the contest—the cannon's deep roar—
How oft it had gather'd renown!
While those stars were reflected in rivers of gore,
When the cross and the lion went down,
And though few were their lights in the gloom of that hour,
Yet the hearts that were striking the blow,
Had God for their bulwark, and truth for their power,
And they stopped not to number the foe.

From where our Green Mountain-tops blend with the sky,
And the gallant St. Lawrence is roll'd,
To the waves where the balmy Hesperides lie
Like a dream of some prophet of old,
They conquer'd and dying, bequeath'd to our care—
[illegible]
But that banner whose loveliness hallows the air,
And their motto of "Many in One."

We are "many in one," while their glitters a star
In the blue of the heavens above;
And tyrants shall quail 'mid their dungeons afar
When they gaze on that motto of love:
It shall gleam o'er the sea, 'mid the bolts of the storm,
Over tempest, and battle, and wreck,
And flame where our guns with their thunders grow [illegible]
'Neath the blood on the slippery deck.

The oppress'd of the earth to that standard shall fly,
Wherever its folds shall be spread,
And the exile shall feel 'tis his own native sky,
Where its stars shall float over his head;
And those stars shall increase, till the fullness of Time,
Its millions of cycles has run—
[illegible]
And the nations of earth shall be "one."

Though the Old Alleghany may tow'r to heaven,
And the Father of Waters divide;
The links of our destiny cannot be riven,
While the truth of those words shall abide.
Then, oh! let them glow on each helmet and brand,
Though our blood like our rivers, shall run;
Divide as we may in our own native land,
To the rest of the world we are "one."

Then up with our flag—let it stream on the air;
Though our fathers are cold in their graves,
They had hands that could strike, they had souls that could dare,
And their sons were not born to be slaves:
Up, up with the banner! where'er it may call,
Our millions shall rally around—
A nation of freemen that moment shall fall,
When its stars shall be trail'd on the ground.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs.

[From the Cincinnati Gazette.]

At the close of a parting lunch, which was set out on Friday at 11 o'clock, the day after the Springs' opening, to those of the Ohio State Medical Society yet remaining, Prof. S. M. Smith, of Columbus, offered the following sentiment:

"Alex. A. Wilson, of the White Sulphur—we fully and gratefully appreciate his generous hospitality, and earnestly wish the highest success to his worthy enterprise."

Dr. Robert Thompson, of Columbus, who had just entered the room, responded to the above as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen:—It is doubtless known to most of the present company that the Ohio State Medical Society, by invitation, made a part of the vast assemblage who were participants of the magnificent entertainments of yesterday, and which have continued with their unsurpassed collateral and varied enjoyments up to the present moment, and to those of you who remain, and from whom we are sorry to part, these promises to be perpetual.

In what words shall we present all that we have seen, partaken of, and enjoyed, within and without, at the festive board, and in the halls of recreative exercises? All faces, brightened with excitement, sustained by the generous bounty of our host, whose deserts are above all feeble praise, and gave evidence, by varied expression, of but one more wish to be gratified—the wish that all the rest of our medical brethren and friends were with us, participants of the seemingly inexhaustible means of enjoyment provided for us.

Ladies and gentlemen—it has been the good fortune of the State Medical Association to hold its annual sessions in various pleasant cities of our State, from which kind invitations have from year to year been extended, each of which, vieing with the others through a most liberal hospitality, and from a proper appreciation of the intrinsic value of the regular medical profession, in every walk of life where humanity has a sufferer. From such sources, and through the operation of such motives, have we as a body been, not only invited, but urged and importuned to hold our meetings in all the principal cities of Ohio.

As a body, therefore, we cannot be ignorant of such high appreciation, or of its outflowing consequences; nor do we wish to disparage, by comparison, any acts of generous hospitality received elsewhere, when we declare that no establishment of a common character can require or sustain such ample and various means of comfort, enjoyment and recreation as have been placed within our reach on this enchanting spot.

It would be difficult to express in adequate form or convey to the mind our appreciation, as medical men, of what we have enjoyed and have seen on this occasion—not only of what this place now is, but of the future promise which the White Sulphur has in store for humanity.—Words, I say, are feeble utterances, but acts are things of substantial importance; hence we, as an association, as an earnest of what we anticipate of the future of this as a watering place in a legitimate sense, and in its proper relations to the cure of disease, and to our profession, to evince our seasonable anticipations of its destiny in this regard on the second day of our session, by a unanimous voice, adjourned to meet at this place, to hold our next annual session on the 2d Tuesday of June, 1860. Again on last evening after having examined the place, each one for himself, the President called us together, and we re-affirmed this decision.

The sentiment which caused me to rise, and this act of adjournment to this place, do not flow from a wish to glorify a vain thing, nor as a whim for that act of unexpected kindness which first called us to this delightful retreat, but from thus being here as observers of this natural gift of Providence to the chronically afflicted, we may, on another occasion, another more protracted sojourn, afford ourselves, and others who will then meet with us in increased numbers, opportunities of becoming wiser advisers of those who under our advice, and through our influence may seek this curative agency, and that renovating balm, which the air, the waters, the associations, and good cheer so essential to the restoration of enfeebled bodily powers, inspire. Those depressions of spirit so slow to disappear within the same influences and scenes of their incubation which such an Institution as this place has been made, will be able to relieve effectually, whilst the patient is placed under the most delightful surroundings.

For, be assured, ladies and gentlemen, that wherever the learned and scientific physician may be found, there you will see an inquisitor of nature, with his reagents, his tests, his alembic, his crucible, if you please to extort from nature her confession of uses which she cannot withhold from his scrutiny, but which he drags forth from her solids or their solutions as found either in the juices of plants, her gushing and inexhaustible artesian fountains, or in the waters of her high mountain springs. Such then being the character of the members of that body, the State Medical Society, on whose behalf I now address you, it is meet that we should look into the crystal mirror of these beautiful waters to discover there the reflection of manhood once wan and dejected, the restored, the once again vitalized man of action and of use; and the face of beauty retouched and rejuvenated. Although it is not in the nature of things possible, that we should live always, or always enjoy that heavenly condition called health while on earth, yet it is the duty and should be the business of every rational creature to use all proper means for as near an approach to that blessed condition as possible.

Then let the sordid lay up wealth for the base love of its unused vulgar enjoyment, while the man of science, for the love of science, and the welfare of his kind is using his faculties in the glorious pursuits which result in utility and in good. All classes of men hold conventions and have their organizations, and for what? With the exception of the medical profession, all for selfish ends. This cannot be true of our association, as of all men in proportion to our labors, we are least liberally sustained and will be, so long as the veriest quack is preferred by many, to the most scientific physician.

While science in her beautiful and useful refinements, bestows blessings on man, scarcely surpassed by the heaven-born miracle; yet, all men cannot, ought not follow in her wake.

Some, nay a mighty multitude, must fill up the other useful offices of life, whilst the general glory and good of the world is only to result from the activities of all. Nor is it necessary to attempt to either classify or divine to each his kind or attainment of duties, as every one will in due time find out his own proper destiny and office.

It is not necessary, on this occasion, to more than give assurance to the world of our high appreciation of the happy fitness of our present surroundings, and of our trust and confidence in the virtues of these springs. In conclusion let me add to the toast the following: "And may the Creator of the various medical agents found in the great White Sulphur Springs, and its co-fountains of health, bless and prolong the life of their worthy proprietor, that he may have time for the fulfillment of his health-giving mission—that of making the Ohio White Sulphur the great watering place of the West."

The Next State Fair—The Committees.

[From the Zanesville Courier.]

We are in receipt of the Premium List and Regulations for the next State Fair, to be held in this city on the 20th, 21st, 22d and 23d days of September next. We presume they will be generally circulated between this and that time, but meanwhile we may extract some facts from it that will be interesting to the reader.

The following is a list of the members of the different awarding committees chosen from this and the neighboring counties:

FIRST DEPARTMENT. — Cattle. — On shorthorns, Daniel Kutz, of Lancaster; devons, Wm. Nathans, Etna, Licking Co.; herefords, James M. Burt, West Layfayette, Coshocton Co.; ayreshires, Wm. R. Putnam, Marietta; milch cows, G. W. Adams, Dresden; Isaac Claypole, Lancaster. Horses, &c.—Thorough-bred horses, David Barber, Hamar; horses for general purposes, A. C. Howard, Zanesville; G. W. Barker, Marietta; draft horses, Alvah Perry, Lancaster; matched horses and mares, James Buckingham, Duncan's Falls; geldings and mares for harness, saddle, &c., C. Beymer, Washington, Guernsey Co.; trotters, W. D. Terry, Wheeling; A. Applegate, Lancaster; James Wylie, Newark; jacks and mules, John T. Brasee, Lancaster. Sheep.—Saxons and grades, E. Keller, Newark; Hugh Wilson, Cambridge; merinoes and grades, S. Caldweld, Caldwell, Noble Co.; long wool, Jas. A. Taylor, Newark; middle wool, S. Fraser, Irville. Swine.—Large breeds, D. W. Carlisle, Lancaster; W. B. Culbertson, Zanesville. Poultry.—A. P. Pritchard, Granville.

SECOND DEPARTMENT. — Machinery, Engines, &c., Mark Lowdas, Zanesville; agricultural machinery, R. H. Dodge, McConnelsville; F. J. Boring, Lancaster; C. P. Buckingham, Mt. Vernon; agricultural implements, Shelton Sturges, Duncan's Falls; plows, Joseph P. Northover, Zanesville.

THIRD DEPARTMENT.—Silk and mill fabrics, Joseph Black, Zanesville; needle, shell and wax work, Mrs. Dr. Morehead, Mrs. J. J. Ross, and Mrs. Wm. Galigher, Zanesville; household fabrics, Mrs. G. N. Guthrie, Putnam, Mrs. J. T. Fracker, and Mrs. J. P. Barton, Zanesville; stoves and iron and brass castings, John McClure, Newark; S. B. Philpot, Summerfield, Noble Co.; philosophical and other scientific instruments, M. D. Leggett, Zanesville; John Wilson, Newark; cooper, carpenter and basket ware, Henry Smith, Newark; book-binders' and paper manufacturers' products, hats, caps, furs, and tailors' and upholsterers' work, James L. Cox, Zanesville; glass, crockery, &c., A. McFadden, Zanesville; chemicals and products of chemical action, Alfred Merrick, Zanesville.

FOURTH DEPARTMENT.—Flour and grain, S. Scott, McConnelsville; butter, bread and lard, H. Ball, Zanesville; honey, sugar, preserves, pickles, &c., Henry Fearing, Harmar; Mrs. J. Hollingsworth, Zanesville; Mrs. A. C. Ross and Miss Amelia Guthrie, Putnam; natural minerals, E. B. Andrews, Marietta, Israel Dille, Newark.

FIFTH DEPARTMENT.—Flowers, professional list, Mrs. Dr. Hildreth and Mrs. Isaac Dillon, Zanesville; amateur list, Mrs. James Buckingham, Duncan's Falls; Miss Betty Goddard, Zanesville; fruits, Dr. S. P. Hildreth, Marietta; John Fetters, Lancaster; vegetables, roots, &c., Joseph Sigler, McConnelsville.

SIXTH DEPARTMENT.—Fine arts, Mrs. C. C. Convers, Putnam; Miss Fanny Nevitt, Zanesville; musical instruments, H. D. Munson, Putnam.

A lawyer, on his death-bed, willed all his property to a lunatic asylum, stating that he wished his property to return to the liberal class who patronized him.

The greatest instance of impudence on record, is that of a Yankee, who, in an Italian city, stopped a religious procession, in order to light his cigar from one of the holy candles.

—Rev. Mr. ———, an eccentric preacher in Michigan, was holding forth not long since in Detroit. A young man arose to go out, when the preacher said:—"Young man, if you'd rather go to hell than hear me preach, you may go!" The sinner stopped and reflected a moment, and saying, respectfully, "Well, I believe I would," went on.

The individual who always sifts things to the bottom, has been engaged by Mrs. Partington to repair her wash-boiler.

The Zouaves—Tyrolese Sharp-Shooters—King Emanuel made Corporal—Zouave Kindness and Activity—The Turcos.

"Malakoff," the capital Paris correspondent of the New York Times, writes on the 9th that to see the Boulevards in the evening is worth a trip across the Atlantic. The streets are illuminated, all countenances are animated, every body talks of war, but it is all done quietly and with decorum. There is none of that yelling, shouting, drunkenness and extravagance of joy, which would be manifested in Broadway if the American arms had won a great battle.

The Zouaves, especially since the affair of Palestro, have become the lions of the day in Italy. Their feats in the field, and even their words, are the constant subject of conversation and repetition. During the fight at Palestro, a certain detached body of Zouaves which had to pass through several deep and muddy canals in their impetuous charge on the enemy's artillery found their fleetness more impeded by the weight of their immense baggy trousers, soaked with water and mud, than by the balls of the enemy's guns. To disembarrass themselves of this impediment was but the work of a moment, and thus the Zouaves appeared on the field with a flag at half-mast, which might have been taken by the Austrians as a demand for quarters; but their actions in no manner corresponded with the color of their flag, and the grape and cannister continued to mow down their ranks until they reached and bayoneted the artillery men on their guns. It was not till then that their Sergeant bethought himself of the fact that his men were in the undress uniform not recognized by the code, and that he suggested to them the propriety—to use a French phrase—of entering into order again.

The Tyrolese sharp-shooters in the Austrian army wear on their bonnets a tuft of plumes which resembles very much that of the Piedmontese sharp shooters. At the battle of Palestro a regiment of these Tyrolese were hidden in the wheat, and the Zouaves deceived by the plumes, and approaching with confidence, received at thirty steps a most murderous discharge of balls along the whole line. The surprise lasted but a moment. "Sacre terre!" cried the Zouaves in one voice: "A la baionnette!" Their Colonel did not try to oppose the torrent; the smoke of the discharge was not yet dissipated when the Tyroleans received the human avalanche, preceded by its thousand steel points, and were thus precipitated into the canal, where many hundreds were drowned or bayoneted. Not a single Tyrolean would have escaped, perhaps, if the Zouaves had had their linen instead of their woolen pantaloons, for they could not swim with these and the enemy had thrown away their guns.

The Patrie relates the manner in which the King, Victor Emanuel, was named Corporal (an honorary title the reader will understand) in the Third Zouaves, after the battle of Palestro. The Zouaves had been interring their comrades who had been killed. A deep trench was dug on an eminence, and when the bodies had been deposited and the trench filled up, all present bent on their knees, and after a short prayer retired, bidding adieu to their dead brethren in arms. "Comrades!" exclaimed a Sergeant, as a funeral oration, "May God receive you! It was your turn to-day—to-morrow it may be ours!"

After this short and touching ceremony, the Zouaves, about four hundred in number, collected at a farm house and were enjoying themselves with the abundant provisions they always know how to procure for themselves independent of their ordinary rations. The King's great bravery during the battle naturally came up for discussion, and various modes were proposed for properly informing his Majesty of their high appreciation of his valor. At last the proposition was made that he should be made Corporal of the Third Regiment of Zouaves. This was unanimously agreed to, and then the nomination was made with great formality.—The oldest Sergeant standing up, solemnly proclaimed in a loud voice: "In the name of the Third Zouaves, Victor Emanuel, King of Sardinia, is named to the rank of Corporal in the said Regiment!" The next day a memorandum of these proceedings was drawn up, signed by all the Zouaves, and sent to the King, who accepted the title as a high compliment.

The courage displayed by Victor Emanuel was indeed well calculated to excite the enthusiasm of such soldiers as the Zouaves; seeing that they could not restrain him at Palestro, they adopted the plan of running before him. Thus his person was in some measure protected from harm.

The Zouaves are as kind and magnanimous to their prisoners as they are unequaled and admirable in their fighting qualities. An enemy who no longer resists is for the Zouave an object for protection and commiseration, and one can conceive of no nobler quality in a soldier than this. He takes pride in binding up and relieving the wounds he has just made. An Austrian officer at Palestro was seriously wounded; his horse carried him close to the French, where with difficulty he was clinging to his saddle. A Zouave stopped his horse and righted him in the saddle, when the Austrian repaid this act of kindness by placing his pistol against the Zouave's head and blowing his brains out. The officer was carried a prisoner to the French hospital, where great care will be taken to cure him in order that he may be passed before a court martial and in his turn shot.

One of the circumstances to which the Zouave is indebted for his remarkable fighting qualities is the severe education through which he passes in the barracks. The gymnastics imposed upon him are something formidable. He is made to run by the hour at the top of his speed; he jumps, climbs, runs on his hands and feet, and is taught to do all this day after day, with musket and fixed bayonet in his hand. He is taught also to fence with his bayonet, and while he is thus fencing he actually leaps upon his enemy and stamps him to the ground. They do not care much about firing, preferring the bayonet and their rapid charges.

A story is told in the papers which illustrates this fact. Just before one of the last combats they were distributing the cartridges to the different companies. When it came the turn of the Zouaves, they showed all the prudery of a young girl to whom one offers a present. They shrugged their shoulders, sidled away, said they didn't care about them, and they had to force them to accept. Then they took a cartouche delicately between the ends of their fingers, and said, carelessly, "Pardon, Sergeant, I'll only take one!" What need, in effect, have they of cartouches? They go almost as rapidly as their balls, and they have their bayonets [illegible]ide.

The Turcos have excited as much curiosity as the Zouaves. Their commander says that with the bayonet or in face of a battery of artillery they are splendid soldiers; their only fear is of mounted men; they do not stand well when threatened with cavalry. It is the habit of these savages in their native country to cut off the heads of their prisoners and the wounded on the field of battle. They have been taught by their French commanders that this will not be permitted under the French flag. At Magenta they were among the first in the action, and their mode of attack is represented as something peculiarly wild and savage.—They attacked with loud cries, uttering all the oaths in the Mohammedan language. When they took prisoners they danced and yelled around them, putting them down on the ground—blasphemed outrageously over their heads, pronouncing in Arab all sorts of curses against their army and country—all of which must have astonished not a little the stoical Germans. The French commanders seem to be well satisfied, however, with this first trial of their half-tamed Kabyles. Their costume is the same as that of the Zouaves, only it is entirely green, and very picturesque. Like the Zouaves, they wear beards with shaved foreheads.

When the people in certain districts saw the regiment of Turcos arrive they barricaded themselves in the houses, uttering fearful cries. They avowed subsequently, when interrogated on the subject, that the Austrians had told them there were soldiers in the French army (referring to the Turcos) who lived only upon the meat of Christians! While one may be astonished that the Austrians should resort to such means of intimidation, it is not at all astonishing that the Turcos should have been recognized at first sight by the those alarmed people, as the promised cannibals.

Death of Prince Metternich.

The last steamer brings intelligence of the death of Prince Metternich, long Premier of the Austrian Government, and the great champion and upholder of absolutism in Europe. Since the revolutions of 1848–9, when the Prince was compelled to resign, he has only been connected with the Government as a confidential adviser.

Metternich, whose baptismal names were Clement, Wenceslaus Nepomuk Lotharius, was born at Coblentz, on the Rhine, May 15, 1773. His father, the Prince of Metternich, filled many high posts of honor and responsibility under the Austrian Government. The son entered the University of Strasbourg at the age of fifteen, and after studying law at Mentz, traveled in England in 1794, became Austrian Ambassador at the Hague, and married, in 1795, Elenore, granddaughter of the renowned Prince Kaunitz. In 1801, he became the Austrian Minister at Dresden, and played a leading part in bringing about the coalition of Russia, Prussia and Austria, against Napoleon, by the treaty of Potsdam, in 1806. This service was rewarded by the cross of the order of St. Stephen. The expected advantage of this treaty, was lost by the battle of Austerlitz. Metternich (as yet only Count) went as Ambassador to Paris in 1806, and renewed in 1808, his efforts to bring about a strong alliance to put down the French Emperor. After the opening of the campaign of 1809, having returned to Vienna, he was made Minister of Foreign Affairs.—After another humiliation of his government he accompanied Maria Louisa to Paris, when, for "reasons of State," she became the wife of Napoleon. In the delicate position of Austria, during the crisis of 1813–14, Metternich managed the affairs of that government, in the attitude of "armed mediation," with great skill and success. On the eve of the decisive battle of Leipsic, the Austrian Emperor bestowed on him the title of Prince. He signed the convention of Fontainbleau, and the peace of Paris, in May, 1814. He performed a similar service, Nov. 20, 1815—thus ending his long struggle with the power of the first Napoleon.

In 1816, he was made Duke of Portella by the King of the Two Sicilies, and received a variety of additional honors at home. All these he peaceably enjoyed, taking a prominent part in all the great political movements of Europe, and always a rigid and adroit defender of absolutism, until the great popular rising at Vienna, on the 13th of March, 1848. Metternich was then compelled to yield his long arbitrarily exercised power, and to escape from the capital, to avoid the rage of the populace. The new Austrian Emperor, Francis Joseph, having perfidiously refused the concessions promised to the people, to appease them, and quiet having been generally restored in Europe, the Prince regained his influence at the Court, but occupied no public official position. Although, at his advanced age (eighty-six), his services in counsel must have become far less indispensable than in former years, his loss at this juncture will be severely felt, and deeply mourned by the Imperial household and their earnest adherents.

CUT THIS OUT—paste it up—read—learn it, and when the occasion calls, save human life:

RULES FOR RESTORING THE DROWNED.

The following rules are the result of half a year's investigation of apnoea and asphyxia—a subject which I propose to prosecute still further, knowing that truth only comes of long continued labor and research. I wish to put to the test of careful experiment the correctness of the dogma that, if the heart has once ceased its action can never be restored—a dogma calculated to paralyze our efforts in many cases in which hope may not be totally extinct:

First—Treat the patient instantly on the spot, in the open air, except in cold weather, freely exposing the face, neck and chest to the breeze.

Second—Send with all speed for medical aid, and for articles of clothing, blankets, &c.

Third—Place the patient gently on the face, and with one arm under the forehead, so that any fluids may flow from the throat and mouth, and without loss of time.

I.—TO EXCITE RESPIRATION.

Fourth—Turn the patient on his side, and—(1st—apply snuff or other irritant to the nostrils. (2d)—dash cold water on the face, previously rubbed with whisky until it is warm. If there be no success again lose no time; but

II.—TO INITIATE RESPIRATION.

Fifth—Replace the patient on his face; (when the tongue will fall forward, and leave the entrance into the wind-pipe free;) then

Sixth—Turn the body gently, but completely, on the side, and a little beyond. (when aspiration will occur) and then on the face, making gentle pressure along the back, (when inspiration will take place) alternately; these measures must be repeated deliberately, efficiently and perseveringly, fifteen times in the minute only; meanwhile—

III.—TO INDUCE CIRCULATION AND WARMTH.

Seventh—Rub the limbs upward, with firm pressure and energy, using handkerchief, &c., for towels.

Eighth—Replace the patient's wet clothing by such covering as can be instantly procured, each bystander supplying a coat, waistcoat, &c.

These rules are founded on physiology; and while they comprise all that can be immediately done for the patient, exclude all apparatus, galvanism, the warm bath, &c., as useless, not to say injurious, especially the last of these, and all loss of time, removal, &c., as fatal.

The Absent Mother.

BY MRS. WOMSON.

It is the twilight hour,
The day light fall is done,
And the last rays are departing
Of the cold and wintry sun.
It is the time when friendship
Holds converse fair and free;
It is the time when children
Dance around the mother's knee.

But my soul is faint and heavy,
With a yearning sad and deep,
By the fireside lone and dreary
I sit me down and weep!
Where are ye, merry voices,
Whose clear and birdlike tone
Some other ear now blesses
Less anxious than mine own?

Where are ye steps of lightness,
Which fell like blossom-showers?
Where are ye sounds of laughter,
That cheered the pleasant hours?
Through the dim light slow declining,
Where my wistful glances fall,
I can see your picture hanging
Against the silent wall.

They gleam athwart the darkness,
With their sweet and changeless eyes,
But mute are ye my children,
No voice to mine replies.
Where are ye! Are you playing
By the stranger's blazing hearth;
Forgetting in your gladness
Your old home's former mirth?

Are ye dancing? Are ye singing?
Are ye full of childish glee?
Or do your light hearts sadden
With the memory of me?
Round whom, oh, gentle darlings,
Do your young arms fondly twine?
Does she press you to her bosom,
Who hath taken you from mine?

Oh, boys, the twilight hour
Such a heavy time hath grown—
It recalls with such deep anguish
All I used to call my own—
That the harshest word that ever
Was spoken to me there
Would be trivial—would be welcome—
In the depth of my despair.

Yet, no! despair shall sink not,
While life and love remain—
Though the weary struggle haunt me,
And my prayers be made in vain,
Though at times my spirit fail me,
And the bitter tear-drops fall,
Though my lot be hard and lonely,
Yet I hope—I hope through all!

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

GOOD WHEAT.—Mr. T. G. Austin, of Charleston, has left upon the "round-table" a sample specimen of Mediterranean wheat in the stalk, that has a plump, full berry. On the morning of the 5th of June, to all appearance the field from which this was taken was entirely blighted—but has rallied, and will harvest nearly a full crop. Mr. Austin lives two miles east of Charlestown Centre, and his land lies rather high. The fruit upon this farm is but little injured. We learn that in this town the fruit and grain yield will be pretty fair—notwithstanding the frost.—Ravenna Dem.

TO CLEAN BRASS WORK.—Take one ounce of oxalic acid, three quarters of a pint of New England rum, three quarters of a pint of oil; put the mixture in a bottle, cork it close, and let it stand two or three days before using it. It should be shaken occasionally. Rub the brass with a clean woolen cloth dipped in a small quantity of this liquid, then rub it with dry rotten stone with another cloth.

SCOURING KNIVES.—The Scientific Artisan says that a small, clean potato, with the end cut off, is a very convenient medium of applying brick dust to knives, keeping it about the right moisture, while the juice of the potato assists in removing stains from the surface. We can get a better polish by this method than by any other we have tried, and with less labor.

CLEAN MILKING.—It is sometimes forgotten that the last gill of milk drawn from the cow's udder is the best part of every milking. Careful experiments made in England show (according to a report lately published) that the quantity of cream obtained from the last drawn cup from most cows, exceeds that of the first in the proportion of twelve to one." The difference in the quality also is considerable. Hence, a person who carelessly leaves but half a pink of milk undrawn, loses in reality about as much cream as would be afforded by six or eight pints at the beginning, and loses, too, that part of the cream which gives the richness and high flavor to his butter.

CORN FOR CATTLE.—A farmer who has had much experience in wintering stock, says, if you feed corn in the ear to cattle during the day, they will not digest it well; but a few nubbins fed at night, after the animal has eaten hay and is ready to lie down, will all be rechewed with the cud and throughly digested; adding profitably to the keeping of the animal.

TOMATOES.—The Scientific American advises us to "take good, ripe tomatoes, cut them in slices, and sprinkle over them finely pulverized sugar, then add claret wine sufficient to cover them. Tomatoes are sometimes prepared in this way with diluted vinegar, but the claret wine imparts to them a richer and more pleasant flavor, more nearly resembling the strawberry than anything else."

The Toledo Blade, however, believes it knows better; and, "to render the dish one of great delicacy," gives the following: "Cut the tomatoes upon your plate as you want them, and sprinkle over them the pulverised sugar, and you will have a dish almost as delicious as strawberries. Let those who doubt try it."

We prefer our tomatoes in the old fashioned way, with a little pepper, salt and vinegar. As for making them resemble strawberries, it is like fooling a horse with shavings and green spectacles.

CUT WORMS IN CORN.—Mr. Charles Betts, in the Ohio Farmer, says there is remedy for the cut worm in green sward corn, but killing the varmin separately—a tedious and repulsive operation; that "it is worse than a waste of time to apply any nostrum, however strongly advised and recommended." I hold a different opinion, and ask those who may this year be troubled with cut worms, to give the "nostrums" each a fair trial. Horace Greeley recommends the following:

The moment you perceive that the cut worm is at work in your young corn, ride to the nearest point where salt can be had—fine, I should prefer, but a dirty, refused article will do as well as the cleanest and dearest—and with this salt sow your corn-field lightly, avoiding the tender corn blades so far as practicable. Treat half your corn fields in this way, the residue as Mr. Betts advises, and await the result. If the salted corn should seem burnt at the ends of the leaves, never mind that—the corn will be good, notwithstanding. When you come to hoe, if you find any wire worms in the salted corn, give your corn-field another moderate sprinkling with salt.—Charge the cost of the salt and the sowing to the land covered by it, and the cost of worm-killing to the other piece in like manner. If you find some stalks killed by the salt, when you come to hoe the first time, replace them by replanting.

Measure the product of the two fields separately, at or after. If the salted portion does not yield more and better corn than the other, say I was mistaken, and that Mr. Betts understands killing wire-worms better than Horace Greeley.

Mr. Greeley is doubtless right, but if he would use the lime and salt mixture, instead of salt, the cut worms would be removed without losing or injuring any part of the corn.

DROWNED.—A lad, named WILLIAMS, nine or ten years old, was drowned at Cleveland, on Friday, while bathing.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.
A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Saloon and Restaurant supplied with the best of every thing. June 16.

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers.
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially Tiles; including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse-keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

LATEST BOOKS.—
Mosaics. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Barra Brandon.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Caird's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

PROPOSED
AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.
RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.
Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October State election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of this State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."
WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.
[illegible]
Secretary of State's Office,
Columbus, O., April 7, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.
A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.
Auditor's Office, Franklin County, Ohio.
Columbus, April 18, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.
JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.
june16-td

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Chintz, Satins, Bareges, Lawns, Calicoes, Robes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles,
Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
may 12. J. C. CHITTENDEN.

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS.
BLANK BOOKS,
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices,
supplied with any article, in the line of Stationery, on the best terms, and all Works warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
JOB PRINTING, BOOK BINDING.
A full supply, at all times, of Valuable Standard Works Foreign and American Editions.
A good stock of valuable Mechanical and Scientific Works at all Times. All the new Books received direct.
French, English and American Stationary
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.
Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors, from 3 to 8ft.; French Plate, Oil Paintings and Engravings, Portrait and Picture Frames always on hand and made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens; Work Boxes and Dressing Cases, Card Cases and Porte Monnaie; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Pocket Books, Wallets, [illegible] &c., &c. june16

New Books.
FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
VIEWS and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederick S. Cozzens.
SEACLIFF, or the Mystery of the Westervelts. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Africa, Asia and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland. (7 vols., cloth 8 vo.)
The Life of William von Stenben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novellette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Southwold (a Novel.) By Mrs. Lillie Devereux Umsted.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Works of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt, 4 vols.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.
June 16, 1859,-tf J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.
DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law, from 7th London Edition.
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, New Ed. with additions.
Spain. By Wm. Cullen Bryant.
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Onward.
Sixty Years' Gleanings.
The Foster Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Tresilian and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Aaron's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus
For sale at the New Book Store.
June16 J. H. RILEY & Co.

Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Agnew's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Kinney's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Mudson.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.
CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10½ a. m. to 12 m.
One of [illegible] Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make the Saloon one of the best in the city. [illegible]

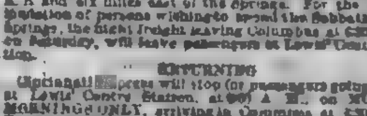
THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $204,000.
Offices 267 Broadway, 30 Wall Street N. Y.
This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President,
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent.
may20tf Columbus Ohio.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.
THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.
The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.
The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.
An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.
Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
mar1817.

1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs,
Open to visitors seeking Health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.
The Ohio WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles North of Columbus, (the Capital of Ohio) on the Scioto River, 12 miles from Delaware, [illegible] Valley of Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad.
The medicinal qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States. [illegible]
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio.

E. CORNELISON,
TUNER
AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO-FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
[illegible]
Orders left at Kelner & Webster's Music Store, will meet prompt attention. [illegible]

C. A. WAGNER,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN ALL KINDS OF FIRE WORKS, FIRE BALLOONS, FLAGS, MOTTOES, &c.
Exhibition Fire Works for Cities Towns and Villages, prepared at any prices from $50 to $500, and the necessary directions given for [illegible] the same.
[illegible] State Street, Columbus, [illegible]
June-15th



FRESH MEATS! FRESH MEATS!!
D. W. HILL,
Columbus Meat Market,
North East Cor. of Spring and High Sts.
Has constantly choice fresh and salted Beef, Veal, Mutton, Lamb, &c., which his Ice chests enable him to keep sweet in the warmest weather.
Market attended regularly, where his customers will be served with the choicest meats to be procured in the country.
Thankful for the liberal custom he has enjoyed, his endeavors will be to merit its continuation.
June10.

DESHLER ICE.
Charles G. Deshler is serving his numerous customers with Superior Ice. He attends to its delivery in person, and the sun is not more punctual. His carriages will run throughout the season.
June23.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT,
In the Basement of "the Goodale House."
By JOHN O'HARA,
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
Every luxury brought to this market, constantly received, and prepared in the most acceptable manner.
He has a French Cook,
Who has had long experience and the best instruction in his business.
The Capitol Saloon,
Connected with the Restaurant, is a favorite resort, and where every variety of wines and liquors are kept of the very best quality.
The cigars have been selected with great care, and are of the choicest most expensive varieties.
June 23.

COLUMBUS
Machine Manufacturing Company,
MANUFACTURERS OF
STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,
CASTINGS,
MILL GEARING, MACHINERY,
—ALSO—
RAILROAD WORK.
P. AMBOS, Treas. CHAS. AMBOS, Supt.
June 19-tf

Ohio White Sulphur Springs
VIA THE
CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.
To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 6:00 A. M., and 1:30 P. M., daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis' Centre Station, which is situated sixteen miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the Springs. For the accommodation of persons wishing to spend the Sabbath at the Springs, the night freight leaving Columbus at 6:20 P. M. on Saturday, will leave passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.
RETURNING
Cincinnati Express will stop (for passengers going south) at Lewis' Centre Station, at 9:00 A. M., on MONDAY MORNING ONLY, arriving in Columbus at 8:30 A. M. The Mail train will stop daily at [illegible] P. M. arriving in Columbus at 5:30 P. M.
Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages to run hacks at all times to convey passengers between the cars and Springs. Passengers can rely upon being taken to the Springs promptly on arrival of trains.
The citizens of Columbus will find this the most convenient way to go to the Springs.
Tickets for the round trip to the Station and back during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.
For further information and tickets, inquire at the ticket office in the Depot.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.
Columbus, June 23, 1859—3m.

DR. STEWART
WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, and CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success is curing many of the most hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.
He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on being almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by travelling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are the next hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact.
Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.
Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a malady, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.
[illegible] worse, cause themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!
Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease.
Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.
DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.
CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.
Cases given up by others solicited. He will forfeit $100 for any of the following he cannot cure: Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 30,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.
A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.
Office hours 9 a. m., to 6 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.
Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.
June23

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,
The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are quickly and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.
The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing
Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of Confirmed Consumption.
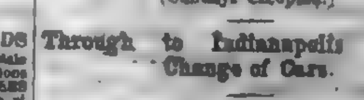
A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.
These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.
In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.
mar18

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.
Great Northern & Eastern Route,
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati



RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad,
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.
THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sundays) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.
FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 3:35 a. m. [illegible]
SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 10:35 a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Switch, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Wellington, connecting at Crestline with the 12:15 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 8:10 p. m., arriving at Cleveland 3:20 p. m. connecting at 6:30 p. m., with the fast Express on Lake Shore road for the East arriving at Erie at 9:20 p. m., Dunkirk 2:00 p. m., Buffalo 12:30 p. m., New York 1:30 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of any other line, Boston 6:00 p. m. eight hours quicker than any other line.
THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at 1:30 p. m., stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:30 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline, for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 6:15 a. m. at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston; arriving at Erie 1:15 a. m., Dunkirk 3:30 a. m., Buffalo 4:45 a. m.
Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.
RETURNING.
Night Express, arrives at Columbus 2:30 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 9:30 a. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 6:30 p. m.
Fare as low as by any other Route.
For further information, and Through and local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. & C. & X. Railroads.
E. S. FLINT,
Sup't. Cleveland Ohio.
H. C. MARSHALL,
Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent,
Columbus, Ohio.
Columbus, May 12, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads,

To the South and West.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.
FIRST TRAIN.
(DAILY)
NIGHT EXPRESS—At 3:05 A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:30 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, Athens and all points on M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and Mail Boat for Louisville.
SECOND TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
NO. 1 EXPRESS—At 6:40 A. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 11:25 a. m. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c.
THIRD TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At 2:40 P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Loveland, [illegible] arriving at Cincinnati at 7:40 P. M. connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., &c., and at Cincinnati with evening train on O. & M. R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.
FOURTH TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
MAIL—At 4:40 P. M., stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Xenia, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, or at Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 10:45 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.
RETURNING.
Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 6:45 A. M., No. 1 Express 12:50 p. m. No. 2 Express 6:20 p. m. accommodation [illegible]
For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, [illegible]
[illegible]
Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER,
General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY,
Agent, Columbus, O.
Columbus, May 16, 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST
Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily.
(Sundays excepted.)
Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25 Trains will leave Columbus as follows:
FIRST TRAIN.
Leaves at 3:05 a. m., on the arrival of trains from Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Arrives at Indianapolis at 4:00 p. m.
This train connects at Milford with trains for Marysville, etc., for Mechanicsburgh, Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati, direct without change of Cars.
Also connects at Urbana with trains north on the S. & U. R. R. for Bellefontaine, Forest, Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. Connects at Piqua for Greenville, at Anderson for Kokomo and Peru.
At Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette & Chicago also, with trains for Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis, connecting at St. Louis with Trains and Steamboats [illegible] KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.
Also, connects at Indianapolis for Jeffersonville, Louisville, Madison and Peru.
SECOND TRAIN.
Leaves Columbus at 2:40 p. m., on the arrival of Trains from Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Arrives at Indianapolis at 11:30 p. m.
This Train connects at Milford for Mechanicsburgh and Springfield; at Urbana with trains south on S. & C. R. R. for Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. At Piqua with trains north on D. & M. R. R. for Sidney, Lima, Delphos, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and at Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette, Chicago, Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis.
THE WAY FREIGHT.
Leaving Columbus at 5:30 a. m., will carry a Passenger Train for the Accommodation of Way Travel.
Be sure to see that your Tickets read VIA THE COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE, and see that you do not have Tickets sold you by other and Inferior Routes.
Tickets for all Western Routes for sale at all the Principal Rail Road Stations in the East.
H. WALKUP, W. F. SLATER,
General Ticket Agent. Superintendent.
Columbus, Ohio, May 12, 1859. mn26

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!

A Democratic Newspaper,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O

By J. Birney Marshall,

At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic truths and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statements relied on for their unfailing veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliquery factions, but consistently pursue the object for which it is established: that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disruption—whilst it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the door, (it must know that it is Democratic and not a false light held up to blinds, perhaps to betray)—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and uses every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year..$2 00

A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; 12½ per cent on clubs of twenty, 15 per cent on clubs of thirty, and 20 per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 20, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS

Received for six months at ONE DOLLAR in advance.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

Will be sent for the campaign, to subscribers, at FIFTY CENTS for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS

May be formed for the Press at the following rates:

Five Copies	2 00
Ten	3 50
Twenty	6 00
Fifty	14 00
One hundred copies	25 00

State Library

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1859. NUMBER 10.

PEOPLES PRESS.
J. SIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion	$1,00
Each additional insertion	30
One square 3 months	5,00
" " 6 "	8,00
" " 12 "	15,00
One fourth of a column per year	40,00
" half " " "	60,00
" column " " "	100,00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year $10,00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements must be paid for in advance.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress, and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1792 and 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominion it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the rights of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and be administered, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

MR. DOUGLAS IN TENNESSEE.—Gov. Jas. C. Jones, of Tennessee, declares in a letter published in the Memphis Bulletin his position in regard to the Presidential election in 1860. He says:

I speak for myself—I am for Stephen A. Douglas for President of the United States in 1860. I seek to saddle him on nobody or party. The time has passed when the people will permit any man to saddle himself or any one else on them. While I repudiate the charges that I seek to saddle Mr. Douglas on the Democratic party, yet I am for him, because after a long and intimate association with him, I know him to be honest, sound, conservative and national, true to the Constitution and all its requirements. And yet, further, I think it impossible to elect any man residing in the South, and I believe that he is the only man North of Mason and Dixon's line who can be elected.

☞ We are no organ. The tunes we play are of our own selection. We assail what is obnoxious, and applaud what we approve. We have not sold our right to defend our friends or expose our enemies, as the Statesman did to the government, to which a few scraps of government advertising, the Post-Office for Tom Miller, a bone out of the perquisites of the Pennsylvanian, or a part of some other secret service fund, with Cox's vote for the Lecompton Conference bill thrown in, were a full equivalent for the most menial and degraded service, which is a stench in the nostrils of the Democracy, and renders the Statesman a by-word and reproach among its own professed party.—[Fact.

☞ MRS. EVERETT, wife of Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, who died, after a lingering and painful illness in Boston on Saturday, was the daughter of the late PETER C. BROOKS, of that city, the richest man in New England. Two sisters survive her—the wives of the Rev. Dr. FROTHINGHAM, of Boston, now in Europe, and of CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, the son of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, and representative to Congress from Massachusetts.

☞ When the Allies entered Milan, a little girl, aided by the crowd, approached Gen. McMahon, and presented him with a bouquet nearly as large as herself. The gallant General took her on his horse, and the incident created great applause.

Mr. Douglas and his Letter.

The Philadelphia Press speaks thus cordially of the position of Mr. Douglas, and approvingly of his letter:

There is a gallantry in this letter which, we are not surprised to see, has aroused the admiration of political opponents and excited the enthusiasm of political friends. Judge Douglas proposes no act of disorganization to the Democratic party. He plants himself upon the recognised and accepted principles of that party, and although he abstained from saying the word, the whole tenor of his communication is to the effect that when the doctrines of a great political party are rejected and betrayed, it is idle to plead in its behalf the skeleton of a mere organization. This declaration of principle on the part of Stephen A. Douglas should go forth among the Democracy as an olive branch of harmony. To us of the free States it offers victory in every Representative, Senatorial and Congressional district. To the South it proposes no injustice; for the double reason that he who offers it has been the life-long champion of Southern rights, and because the principle itself has been endorsed and approved by every conservative Southern statesman, beginning with Henry Clay, of Kentucky, and ending with Robert M. T. Hunter, of Virginia. If the Charleston Convention is not the mere echo of custom houses, post offices and navy-yards, United States marshals, and Cabinet Ministers, it will rejoice in the opportunity presented by the proposition of Stephen A. Douglas to consolidate the Democratic party upon a platform which will be the gospel of our political salvation for generations to come.—Judge Douglas, if we know the man, does not ask as a "condition precedent" that he should be the candidate. All that he desires is that the pledges and principles of the Democratic party should be religiously observed. This done, the selection of a standard-bearer will be a secondary consideration.

The New Orleans Bee, endorses the letter with a hearty approval. It says:

The letter of Senator Douglas received by telegraph and published in yesterday's papers undoubtedly possesses one prominent merit, viz: extreme frankness. This is a feature in the character of Mr. Douglas which commands the respect even of those who, politically speaking, are at total variance with him. There is no ambiguity in his opinions; no carefully considered reticences; no phrases of dubious meaning, leaving purposely a loophole open for manifold interpretations. The Senator speaks his mind openly and boldly, and if he is misunderstood, the fault is certainly not his own.

In the epistle under consideration he addresses himself, without the slightest circumlocution, to the question propounded to him, and says, in condensed and laconic language, that he is willing that his name should be submitted to the Charleston Convention, provided the Democratic party shall adhere to the principles proclaimed by it from 1850 to the election of Mr. Buchanan in 1856. What these principles are everybody comprehends. They embrace what is popularly styled the doctrine of non-intervention, and constitute the ground-work of Democratic faith as expounded by the most approved commentators up to a comparatively recent period. With equal plainness does Senator Douglas declare that if the party think proper to repudiate these principles, and in lieu of them to interpolate such new issues as the revival of the African slave-trade, or a Congressional slave-code for the Territories, or the recognition of the power of Congress either to establish or protect slavery in the Territories, beyond the power of the people legally to control it, he will not accept the Charleston nomination if tendered him.

We are very far from being a partisan of Senator Douglas, but we confess to an admiration of down-right, manly and honest plainness of speech. It is refreshing in these days of vague generalities and endeavors to cover up and conceal thought beneath a multitude of tawdry phrases.—Senator Douglas is both sincere and intelligible in what he says. In our opinion, too, he is something more—he is perfectly consistent. He never maintained any other doctrine than that now professed.—He stands where the Democratic party stood a few years ago, and where it uniformly planted itself until South Carolina and Georgia fire-eaters began to devise new and more stringent tests of political allegiance. Let any man refer to the Congressional Globe, and examine the debates which occurred in both branches of Congress pending the repeal of the Missouri Compromise and the passage of the Kansas Bill, and he will not fail to perceive that every Democratic supporter of these measures made "non-intervention" the burden of his song, and that their adoption was hailed at the South—just as was the Compromise of 1850—as a triumph of the principles of non-intervention.

There was no talk then of the power of Congress to establish or protect slavery in the Territories, but much of the right of the people to frame their own social and domestic institutions. It may be that the new theories of Constitutional construction are the best. It is possible that Congress may rightfully exercise a power which was not dreamt of being delegated to her by those who sustained the Kansas bill; but there is no doubt that Mr. Douglas has not been guilty of any tergiversation. If his present views are erroneous, they were equally so when his communion with the Democratic party was unchallenged, for they are the same.

The Boston Courier, the organ of the conservatives, contains the subjoined notice of Senator Douglas. It is liberal and truthful—as our readers will confess when they remember it is from an opposition paper:

Mr. Douglas, it cannot be denied, is endowed in a large measure with those qualities which awaken a certain measure of admiration, irrespective of the particular end towards which they are directed. He is a man of courage, energy, self-reliance and indomitable will. These are attractive traits of character, and will always command the applause of mankind, and win for their possessor some share of influence, if not of confidence. The relation in which he has lately stood towards the Democratic party, is one which has commanded the sympathies of outsiders and spectators; and the spirit with which he has defended and sustained himself has caused the rigor of many to relent who had determined never to forgive him.

The letter of Mr. Douglas, which we published in our paper, is marked by his best qualities. No one can deny that it is a manly and straightforward document. It has the great and peculiar merit of being short, and yet it says all that the occasion calls upon him to say. It seems to be an unpremeditated effusion; and yet we have no doubt that it has been the result of careful deliberation and much consultation. And we have no doubt, too, that the Democratic party, or a decisive majority of them, will be found walking in the path which he has indicated. The future course and policy of the Democratic party are matters of much interest, not merely to the members of the party themselves, but to all persons who wish to see the country at internal peace; because the march of political events has devolved upon the Democratic party the duty and responsibility of governing the country; and how that trust is to be discharged is matter of grave concern to all who are on board the ship, whether passengers or crew.

We do not deem it worth while to speculate upon what would be the consequences if the Democratic party should be insane enough, under the lead of some of its factional abstractionists, to incorporate into its creed a declaration in favor of the slave trade, or a resolution that it is the duty of Congress, by positive legislation, to uphold slavery in the territories; because we do not believe that they will do either the one or the other. Certainly, if they should, it would subject not merely the party, but the Union, to a severer strain than either has yet sustained. Just at this moment, Mr. Douglas seems likely to be the coming man, politically speaking.

The Anti-Weevil Candidate.

We were sure that the Hon. SAMUEL S. COX would start the anti-weevil and anti-frost wheat, as a platform on which he could stand against PUGH, PAYNE, or anybody else, for the U. S. Senate.

We thought it would be seriously claimed for it that it was anti-frost. The Statesman is already singing its unparalleled virtues. Listen to its harmonies! The organ grinds the wheat most melodiously:

"The anti-weevil wheat which Mr. Cox distributed among his constituents, and which caused the Republicans of the District so much trouble last year, seems to be in their way again now that the harvest has come. It seems that the wheat is not only anti-weevil, but also anti-frost, and therefore to be appreciated at this time and highly valued."

How is it with you, farmers? Are you to be caught with such chaff? Will you, upon such a basis, instruct your Representatives in the next Legislature to vote for SAM COX for U. S. Senator?

We perceive that the State Journal and Commercial speak of an equivocation of the Statesman in reference to the charge that it was in the pay of the government, the result of a bargain consummated by Cox. We have not noticed nor seen a denial, and the State Journal is struck by the fact that the Statesman avoids a denial of the charge. [illegible]

In reply to a suggestion by the Newark Advocate a week or two ago, that we had supposed Cass at the last Congressional election, we produced the following, to which we have seen no answer from either the Statesman or from Cox. Is it that they dare not give a categorical answer?

That was because we heartily despised Cox and knew him to be untrustworthy—the factotum of Tom Miller—a mere office hunter and contract-seeker for the Miller family—a pertinacious jobber for the Statesman—a mean, contemptible, little trickster and demagogue, unscrupulous of word, promising to everybody, a Judas smile forever on his lips, and the venom of a Cobra in his heart. He it was who swore that his right arm should wither before he would support the Lecompton iniquity, and that the English Conference bill was a d——d sight meaner than Lecompton, yet he made terms by which he became patriotic enough to support the English Conference bill. Dare he deny that, as a condition precedent, Tom Miller was to have the Post-Office from which he was turned out? Dare he deny that, as a condition precedent, the Statesman was to have a share of the government patronage, (a slice out of the Pennsylvanian's perquisites, alluded to by Senator Cameron and others,) while rendering no service but to sink the question of popular sovereignty and say no more of Douglas? Dare he deny that he was very busy hunting up an Indian contract for the Millers, and was informed that there was a penalty for the name of a member of Congress to be found in such connection? Dare he deny that the bargain, by which the Statesman was bought up, Medary was sent away in "honorable exile," Tom Miller, who called President Buchanan "a d——d old fool and scoundrel" was re-appointed, and his own vote cast for the conference bill, was negotiated by him?

It may be that Cox flatters himself that GRANVY JONES, who had something to do with the bargain, is out of the country; but there are others, not so far off, who know all about it, and will tell, whenever he makes a square denial.

This is the "anti-weevil candidate" for the U. S. Senate? Well, it is just that such a candidate should have such a platform. Do you stand on it, Mr. CONVERSE, or Mr. EDWARDS, or Mr. DURANT? Will you vote for Cox for U. S. Senator? Can you pledge yourselves to any such ridiculous folly, amounting almost to crime? If so, (we understand the Miller Post-office clique have determined to take two of you, who will be most amenable to their dictation,) can the Democrats of Franklin county engage in any such nonsensical juggling?—Bring out your candidate; bind his brows with anti-weevil wheat; let it be at once known that he is the Democratic choice for U. S. Senator, and Franklin, for one county, will take good care that you do not misrepresent her in the next Legislature.—[Fact.

A MAN MURDERING FOUR PERSONS.—The Court of Assize of Corsica lately tried a man, named Andreani, of Isola, for four murders, committed under circumstances almost incredible. After serving some time in the army in Africa, he returned to his native village and married a widow named Bossi; but as she was unfaithful to him he soon separated from her. He afterwards conceived a passion for a girl named Bernadini, and wished her to live with him; but one of her female friends, named Perinetti, earnestly exhorted her to have nothing to do with him. This caused him to conceive a bitter animosity against her, and on the 2d of November last he went to a field in which she and several other persons were gathering chestnuts, and called her aside. He then reproached her for keeping the girl Bernadini from him, and before she could answer, seized her by the head and plunged a dagger into her throat, killing her on the spot. He then declared to the people standing near that if they dared to go to the village to give an alarm they should incur his vengeance. He next went to a field where his wife was at work with some other persons, and without saying a word, plunged a dagger into her throat, causing her to fall dead also. The horrified spectators made no attempt to seize him, and he went to a place at a short distance, where one of his relatives, Ricciardi by name, was at work. This man he shot dead. He then went away to the mountains, and five days after, returning to the village, seeing at work in her house his brother's wife, against whom he had long entertained ill-will, he murdered her likewise. He then took to flight, but a few days after he was captured. He was, without hesitation, declared guilty, and condemned to death.

A Presidential Document.

The Washington correspondent of the North American mentions the existence of another letter from President BUCHANAN, on the subject of the right way to dispose of the Public Moneys, or a certain portion of them, that may one day see the light. It is is said to be addressed to or in the possession of CYRUS WENDELL, and, unlike the Du Quesne letter—that inveighed against "bribery and corruption," it recommends the proper mode of applying money for party purposes. It will be seen that a paper in "COLUMBUS," is interested, which we presume is not the Journal or Gazette, and we know it is not the CITY FACT, and the Statesman would take it in high dudgeon to be classed among "lesser organs." What paper can it be? Perhaps the Statesman, which seems to be posted in the working of cabinets and marching of armies, could throw some light on the subject, which perhaps is not new to it. The North American's correspondent says:

"Talking of letters, it appears that Mr. Wendell, public printer, has in his possession another Presidential document which has occasioned a good deal of discussion and consternation in certain circles in this city. I am not of those who have been permitted a sight of this precious missive, but I feel authorized to say that it is in existence, and that its contents would throw far into the shade the celebrated and affectionate epistle of the President to Robert J. Walker, as also his letter to the Du Quesne celebration, and those other documents connected with his name, which awakened so much interest and curiosity during the investigations of the last Congress. In the Wendell letter it is asserted that Mr. Buchanan over his own signature, does not hesitate to recommend the disbursement of a large amount of public money to certain favorites concerned with newspapers in different parts of the country. The subsidy to the journal now conducted by the German-Austrian in your city, [the Pennsylvanian,] which, it is alleged, passed through the hands of the Collector of your port, is set down at a large figure, while the gilded crumbs, thrown to lesser organs in Philadelphia, Columbus, and elsewhere, enter into an aggregate which, if presented to the country, will occasion some trembling in high quarters. Mr. Wendell finds it impossible to indemnify himself for all his advances. His share of the public printing will not justify it, and the President continues to refuse to open his private purse to make good the liberal payment to his private supporters, made by those who, on the strength of his assurances, expected to be reimbursed. I feel that I do not make any improper allusion to this delicate subject, inasmuch as Mr. Wendell is very free in conversing about it himself and will no doubt deny it if it is a misrepresentation."

More of the Pike's Peak Humbug—A Citizen of Columbus Stabbed and left in a Famishing Condition.

Through the politeness of Mr. E. W. MATHES, of this city, we are permitted to lay the following extract of a letter written by his brother, who, not satisfied with the comforts of a home and the associations of the family circle and friends, left here on the 21st of March last, to seek his fortune in Pike's Peak. The simple narrative of facts given by the writer, with the sufferings of Mr. HAYDEN, a gentleman well known in this city, should serve as a caution to young men to "look before they leap" from comparative affluence into misery and destitution. But to the extract—here it is:

"DENVER CITY, May 20.

"DEAR ROSSA:—I may be in the States before this letter shall have reached you. The future looks dark and dreary to me, and but for the hope I have of getting home, I to-day would be miserable. To tell you that Pike's Peak is a humbug, would be only repeating your words. That there is gold here no one doubts, but not in quantities to pay the people for working the mines. Twenty-five cents per day is the average amount to a man. Denver city and Auraria city, are made up of two hundred and seventy five log cabins, the half of which are entirely deserted. Cherry Creek runs between them, a small, sandy stream.—There is not a shingled roof on a cabin—all are covered with sod or sand. There is no business done here—everything has been waiting in expectation of rich diggings to make the city, but none has as yet been found. Gregory, from Cardington, has returned home, sick enough of the land of Ophir; he will tell more than I can possibly, in a letter. His brother is camped near us, and is going to start for California on Tuesday, the 24th of May. If I thought you would be willing I would go with him; he will give me a good chance. Over one thousand wagons have went on to California and ten thousand have returned to the States. Tell Charley I found Dave Hayden here in a perishing condition; he was stabbed three times, and had had nothing to eat for two days. He is from Columbus, and has wealthy parents. We took him to one of our camps and fed him and gave him some clothes, since which time he has found some one to take him home, and is now on the road. Thousands are almost starving, and are willing to work for their board, but there is nothing to do. There never was such destitution in any city in the world; it is all a humbug. We are going to satisfy ourselves as regards the gold in the mountains; and to do so we must go up to them; we intend to start to-morrow. The mines are some forty miles from Denver city. We have to pack our provisions on our backs and carry it all the way; we intend taking no more than will last us this week. I can give you no experience of my own up to the present time, but will be able to do so next Sunday. We arrived here on Saturday, the 30th of May. I found Jim Crawford here, and stayed with him last night. Tell his folks he is well, and is going to California a week from to-morrow. Two of our oxen died, leaving us but one small yoke.—The yoke that gave out cost ninety-five dollars. We were within twelve miles of Denver; they were all alkalied, and nothing we could do would relieve them. Oxen are selling here at from $15 to $30 per yoke; flour $20 per sack; corn $12 per bushel, and there is none to be had at that. One day last week there was not a pound of flour in town. This letter I send to Omaha by some fellows who have made a skiff to go down the Red River. Should they be drowned it will probably go with them.—After I have been in the mountains I can write you a better letter; I only write you now to let you know we arrived here safe, and are in good health and tolerable spirits. Ten cents a day is better in the States than five dollars here. You can tell all that as far as my experience goes, it is a humbug. Whether I shall come home or not is to be decided hereafter.—I hope for the best, and shall trust in Providence till the breaching breaks, and expect all will come out right. B. W. M.

"P. S.—I will write again next Sunday, 5th of June."

ANOTHER FIRE AT EATON.—The citizens of Eaton, Preble county, are peculiarly unfortunate with regard to fires. Just one month ago (June 5) a most destructive fire laid waste a considerable portion of the town. On the 4th inst. they suffered from another conflagration, which destroyed property amounting to $10,900. The following list of the sufferers we copy from the Cincinnati Commercial of this morning:

Masonic Hall, a three story brick, loss $2,500, Murphy's Hall, offices, &c., $3,000, David Stillon's building, $1,500; National Hotel, $2,500; Jefferson lessor, lost goods worth, $500; John Harlick lessee, lost goods worth, $300; King & Comfort lessee, lost goods worth, $250; Sam, McLaness lessee, lost goods worth, 200; German, unknown, in Masonic building, $150.

SUSPENSION.—The old and respected firm of CHAMBERLIN and CRAWFORD, forwarding and commission merchants, and agents of the Northern Transportation Line of Propellers at Cleveland, has suspended payment. The assets of the company, which are said to be largely in excess of their liabilities, have been placed in the hands of Mr. PHILO CHAMBERLIN to liquidate the demands against the firm. We have no doubt that the suspension will be only temporary.

☞ The family of General Scott were about to leave Rome for this country on the 12th inst.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ In New York, on Wednesday, the thermometer marked 96°.

☞ It is expected that Spain will have an overplus of wheat to export this year.

☞ A bear attacked Cyril Randall, his keeper, in Providence, R. I., recently, and nearly tore his leg off.

☞ Princeton College celebrated its one hundred and twelfth anniversary on Wednesday.

☞ Professors Wise, Gager and La Mountain leave St Louis on Friday, in their great balloon expedition to the Atlantic coast.

☞ Gov. Morgan, of New York, is said to aim at occupying Seward's seat in Congress, when Seward ceases to fill it.

☞ As many as seventy Wisconsin editors have been on an excursion to the Grand Rapids, Michigan.

☞ The recent English papers announced the death of the Rev. Dr. Burns, who was known as "the father of the Free Church of Scotland."

☞ The wheat harvest in Maryland will become pretty general during the present week, and from all accounts, the crop will be a fine one.

☞ An effort is made at present by the clergy of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland to revive the habit of kneeling at public prayer.

☞ The work of decapitation is going on amongst the Custom-House Officers of New York. Some ninety-five heads were taken off yesterday.

☞ The Indianapolis Chess Club have had a tournament, the best player to be President. Mr. Wofsinger, son of the Ex-Treasurer of State, won.

☞ An English missionary, now in Sumatra, lately wrote home that he "had the melancholy satisfaction of examining the oven in which his predecessor was cooked."

☞ The banks of Philadelphia have decided not to receive, after the 20th inst., the notes of such country banks as have not made arrangements there for keeping their notes at par. [illegible]

☞ The grasshoppers, in certain parts of Virginia, have taken to chewing tobacco. They have also commenced depredations upon the wheat, corn, &c.

☞ One of agricultural papers declares that the most prevalent disease among the farmers—the one most fatal to our country's prosperity—is the willing ness to "sell out."

☞ A friend of the Custis family says the will ordered the manumission of the slaves of the estate five years hence. If so, the recent runaways had no legal right to run away.

☞ "Pink," the New York correspondent of the Charleston Courier, says that Capt. De Rivière left for Europe on Saturday on the Ariel, to join the allies in the Italian war.

☞ The Court of Appeals at Albany, N. Y., on Thursday, decided unanimously in favor of the claim of the Atlas and Argus to be the State paper.

☞ A prisoner in Trenton, N. J., escaped on a railroad on Saturday, by hiding on the cow-catcher, under the lamps. The officers searched the train but did not find him.

☞ The French Minister of Marine has decided that one of the line of battle ships, now on the stocks, shall be called the Magenta, in honor of the late battle.

☞ The united salaries of the ninety-five clerks discharged from the New York Custom-House on Thursday make over $100,000 a year.

☞ The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says that the Mexican President Juarez has authorized Vidaurri to accept the services of three thousand American volunteers.

☞ There are nine pair of twins within three miles of the village of North Troy, Vermont, four of which are in one school district, and three of them were born within the last twelve months.

☞ The first Ambassador to the country from Japan was expected to have arrived by the last California steamer, but it appears by a letter from Japan that he has postponed his visit till next February.

☞ The total vote of Virginia, in the late election, was only about 150,000. The vote of Ohio, which, some years ago, was a county of Virginia, is about 460,000. Illinois, another old Virginia county, polls about 250,000.

☞ The ginseng excitement exists in Wisconsin as well as in Minnesota. It is estimated that $100,000 will be paid to the inhabitants of Bad Ax and Richmond Counties, Wis., this season, for the root that will be gathered.

☞ An accident occurred at seven o'clock, Sunday evening, on the train from Washington for New York, ten miles north of Baltimore.—Senator Douglas was on board, and the N. Y. Herald says, "had a narrow escape from being killed."

☞ Mr. Antonio Oscalea, a well-known fruiterer of Charleston, South Carolina, who recently sent three hundred bales of cotton to Genoa, by the bark Hollander, has been impressed into the Sardinian army while in Genoa on business connected with the shipment.

☞ Miss Maggie Mitchell, the charming little actress, was presented with a valuable riding horse a few days since, by her admirers at Richmond, Virginia. She has just concluded a brilliant engagement, and returns to New York to enjoy the pleasures of home.

☞ The proposition of certain New Yorkers to loan money to Mexico, provided payment be secured by treaty, is pronounced by President Buchanan to be nonsense. Treaties, he says, are to subserve great public purposes, and not to protect private speculators. Senor Mata thinks his Government would decline loans on any such conditions.

☞ The $100,000 verdict in the Breach of Promise case in St. Louis, was set aside because Miss Carstang's letter to Mr. Shaw, which was excluded by the Court, was published in the newspapers before the Jury had decided on a verdict.

☞ Two infants, supposed to be twins and born alive, were found drowned in the canal at Buffalo, on Wednesday. The Commercial says: One bore the appearance of strangulation by water or otherwise, the other's head was crushed in. They were wrapped in white table linen, and were probably thrown into the water shortly after birth.

☞ A correspondent of the Trinity (Cal.) Journal says: It is rumored that when the express arrived at one of the Stations on Lower Trinity, with a blooming widow in charge, a Justice's Court, then in session, was adjourned for ten minutes, to give the attorneys and jury a sight at crinoline.

☞ A child in Albany was kicked by a horse, whose vicious habits were known to the owner. The child died, and the cause came up before a coroner's jury, who looked into the statute book, and rendered a verdict of "guilty of manslaughter in the third degree" against the owner of the horse.

☞ The Constitution calls the bust of Mr. Buchanan, recently executed by Mr. Henry Dexter, of Boston, an "animated bust," and an excellent likeness; adding that "the members of the Cabinet, and all others who have seen it" are of the same opinion.

☞ The Twyford House, the post office, Thompson's book store, the residence and store of R. Frazier, and two barns were destroyed by fire in the village of Georgetown, Vermillion, Ill., county, on the 28th June. Loss estimated at $10,000. Mr. Frazer's stock and a portion of the contents of the post office and book store were saved.

☞ The Philadelphia Bulletin announces the death of the Hon. James Burnside, Presiding Judge of the Twenty-fifth District of Pennsylvania. Judge Burnside was the son of the late Hon. Thomas Burnside. He was sent several times to the Legislature, where his services were highly valuable, and where, among other good causes he espoused, was the law for the erection of the State Lunatic Hospital, in which there is now such admirable provision for the insane poor of the State. He was elected Judge of his District in 1853.

☞ A Newark, N. J., dispatch, June 30, says, a bright looking little girl, about two years of age, who was playing on the track, was run over by a train on the Bloomfield Railroad to-day, and both her legs horribly mangled and cut off. She died after lingering a few hours. The parents are German, and the mother was working near by when the accident took place; she, together with the maimed child, was hastily put into the train and brought here.

Mexico.

A correspondent of the New York Times writing from the city of Mexico under date of June 5th, says:

Nearly two months have elapsed since the last interior campaign commenced, and as yet we have no results whatever. Towns and cities change hands like moving at a noontable. From an officer just in from the Constitutional camp, near Toluca, I learn that they are now preparing another descent upon this capital, as they say to take it this time. But this is the old story, and no person of reasonable intelligence need believe them. He tells me the demoralization all over the country is daily growing worse, and in some of their large bodies of men it is hopeless to try to introduce discipline; and that instead of getting better, they are certain to get worse—especially the officers, who are nearly all working to make money, and do not care a straw for political questions. Should the present war be allowed to continue by foreign governments for a few years more, this country will be entirely in the hands of open and avowed robbers, and in taking such a turn (of which there is little lack now,) Mexico will be suffering the regular curse of Spanish revolutions. How was it with Mexico eight years after the war of Independence began? How is it with Peru now?

The late seizure of $175,000 in the Mint of Guanajuato, by the Constitutionalists, is, to say the least, rather free practice. The clergy can call it "robbery," but the clergy are prejudiced. I believe there was some excuse for the seizure. However, a year hence they will not want an excuse if they find an equal amount in their reach.

There are several political plots on the carpet in this city. They may all end where they are, or we may have a complete change of government any day. All these schemes are against the Constitutionalists, and none in favor, and all having for their object the plundering of the wealth of the clergy by being their friends.

AFFAIRS IN THE INTERIOR.

Late advices to the 18th state that the same strife and disorder continue to exist here that we have had since the return of Miramon and the dreadful day of Tacubaya. In the meantime robberies are daily becoming more and more frequent on the highways, unheard of exactions are made upon the people in the city, while the chiefs, Zuloaga, Miramon, Padre, Miranda, Azcarate and Bonilla are filling well their purses from both sources.

A curious event in the ever-bubbling political world of Mexico is the organization at the capital of what is called the "Conservative Society," similar in its objects and rules to the celebrated Escoceses and Yorkinos societies, which so many years divided this always distracted country. Outside of the Miramon government, it is nevertheless composed for the most part of members of it, whose object is thereby the more firmly to cement their power. The leading article subjects the whole society to the authority of five individuals residing at the capital, who are of course to be Miramon and his satellites.

It may interest some of his acquaintances in this city to learn that Gen Mariano Salas has been appointed chief of the staff in Mexico. Sr. D. Pedro Garay has been appointed Treasurer of the Vera Cruz Custom House, and D. Rafael Cevallos, chief of the police during the temporary absence of Senor Vila.

According to the Vera Cruz Progreso, Gens. Coronado and Pesqueira, of Sonora, have both recognized Gen. Zuazua as Commander-in-Chief of the constitutional army. This at once does away with the rumor we had by way of Arizona, that they were about to set themselves up as a great northwestern republic. The same paper mentions the departure from Monterey of 600 Tamaulipas riflemen, and two regiments from New Leon, with a well appointed battery, to reinforce the constitutional army at San Luis Potosi.

THE FIVE MILLION CONDUCTA.

A conducta of $5,000,000 specie left the city of Mexico on the 28th of May for Vera Cruz. About one third of the money belonged to American, the rest to French, English and German merchants.

The conducta was detained at the city of Puebla two days, for what reason is not stated, but arrived at Jalapa on the 10th of June. There it was detained for the space of seven days by General Robles, "for examination," as he asserted.

On the 16th the conducta again started, with a permit from Robles to proceed without further detention to Vera Cruz. It was attended by an armed escort, and proceeded the first day as far as Corral Falso.

On the 17th the conducta left Corral Falso for the Puente Nacional (National Bridge,) where it had been arranged to the escort sent to receive it by the Juarez government, the money having thus far been under the escort of the opposition church party.

The conducta, however, was still several leagues distant from the National Bridge when it was overtaken by Robles, at the head of an armed force, and ordered to return to Jalapa. This order was given, as asserted, in pursuance of fresh instructions that morning received from the Miramon government at the capitol.

The conducta, however, refused to turn back. Robles then ordered it to proceed to the Mopambo Beach, outside the walls of Vera Cruz, opposite the Island of Sacrificios, but by no means to enter the city or receive an escort from the liberal government. At Sacrificios it was to be shipped on board the English men-of-war there anchored. These were the orders from Mexico.

When this became known there was great excitement at Vera Cruz. A meeting of the merchants was at once called and held on the 20th. It was there resolved to send a deputation to Robles to treat with him to permit the conducta to pass.

In the meantime the French and English commanders at Vera Cruz had been consulted on the matter, and refused permission to have the specie taken on board their ships.

This being known, the French and English joined the deputation of merchants, and proceeded direct to Robles' camp.

On the 21st, also, the United States Minister, Mr. McLane, ordered Captain Farragut, of the United States steam sloop-of-war Brooklyn, accompanied by his lieutenant, to proceed at once to Robles' camp to demand the release of the money belonging to the American and Hanseatic merchants, amounting to one-third of the whole, or upwards of $1,500,000.

On the 22d an express arrived at Vera Cruz with official despatches from Robles to the English and French commanders, with the special orders to the English and French Ministers to the commanders to receive the specie of the conducta on board their ship, at Sacrificios.

The commanders however still persisted in their refusal to have anything to do with the money, and the English fleet subsequently moved up to the city. [illegible]

At last accounts, the conducta was still at the post village of Riconada under the orders of Robles. [illegible]

Capt. Farragut was expected back to Vera Cruz on the 23d or 24th. Nothing was known of Robles' final determination in the matter up to the hour of the departure of the Tennessee.

Gen. Pat has been stationed at the National Bridge, at the head of a large force, with orders from the Juarez government not to allow Robles to pass that point.—N. O. Picayune, June 28.

ANOTHER FIRE IN MARIETTA—EFFECTS OF THE STORM.—A correspondent writing from Marietta to the Cincinnati Commercial, June 30, says:

A fire occurred in our city at half past one o'clock this morning. I give below a list of the principal sufferers, with loss and insurance. Wm. Kaylers, drug store; loss $1,500; fully insured in Ætna and Phœnix Co's, Hartford. G. Brockmier, clothing store; loss $400; insured in Ætna, Hartford. Van Bergen & Co., groceries and liquors; loss $2,500; insured in Quaker City Co., Philadelphia, for $1,400. H. Gherkin, groceries and liquors; building and stock a total loss, $4,000, no insurance. Bizzants & Bro., dry goods, groceries and liquors; loss $8,000; insured $2,000 in Cleveland, Ohio, Companies. Same building loss $1,500; no insurance. Webber & Co., merchant tailor stock, mostly saved; loss $500; no insurance. Phillip Thiss, boot and shoe store; stock mostly saved, loss light. Wm. Styer, two buildings; total loss $2,500; insured for $1,300 in Washington County Mutual Company. The fire originated in Gherkin's grocery. Cause unknown. We had a terrific storm last evening, leveling the fields to the earth.

☞ Gabriel Sayer, one of the most wealthy citizens of Waverly, N. Y., committed suicide on Friday by cutting with a razor the blood vessels in his arm, while temporarily deranged. He was widely known and greatly respected.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., July 1.—All of the passengers who were aboard the steamship Argo, which was wrecked in Trepassy Bay a few since, have arrived here safe. The steam tugs left again to-day to bring up the crew and what was saved from the wreck.

The following are the particulars of the disaster: Between three or four o'clock on Tuesday morning the Argo made Cape Pine, bearing twelve miles distant from the coast. The pilot, captain, crew and all the other officers were called on deck. At the sight of land the course was changed and made S. E. by E. This should have cleared her fifteen miles from Cape Race. About quarter past four o'clock a very dense fog came up. At half past five the captain spoke a fishing schooner. He stopped the engines and reversed them, and hailing the schooner he asked "Where are you fishing?" Answer—"On the eastern side of Trepassey Bay a mile and a-half or [illegible] off."

The Captain ordered the helm to be put hard a port, the engines to go on in full speed, and the vessel to be kept S. S. E. by the standard compass. This should have taken her clear off the land. The Captain and all the officers were on deck. The officer in charge at the wheel gave the order "steady," as the ship was brought up to a S. S. E. course. At that moment breakers were seen and the engines stopped and reversed, at full speed, before the ship got sternway upon her. She grounded her bow on the rocks of Freshwater Point, eight miles from Trepassey. The boats were lowered and got ready, when the passengers embarked with but little confusion. The women and children being cared for first, anchors were then passed out the stern, the coals thrown overboard, the forward boilers blown off and every exertion made to get her off, but without avail. The Captain now sent off the pilot to Trepassey to get assistance, when the steamers Dauntless and Blue Jacket were dispatched immediately. Sails, &c., were sent ashore and tents made to protect the passengers, and when provisions and luggage could be got at they were also sent.

The fishermen plundered the ship. A hundred came around her on hearing the signal guns. They cut away her masts and completely skinned her. At 4 P. M. the ship filled, fell on her beam ends and sunk in six fathoms water. The baggage belonging to many of the passengers was lost. There was no house within eight miles of the shore where she struck. At 5 P. M., a boat returned from Trepassey with assurances that two steamers were on their way to St. Johns to assist them. Tuesday night was passed in tents with a tolerable degree of comfort. On Wednesday the steamers arrived and brought off the passengers and a part of the baggage. They return this afternoon for the crew, taking with them soldiers and police officers to recover what portion of the property was stolen from the ship they can get. Divers also go to get out anything that can be recovered from the wreck. The passengers are all quartered and provided for here—they will be sent on as soon as arrangements can be made.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—A special dispatch from New Orleans to the Charleston Courier, dated 29th ult., says, that on the 11th Minister McLane addressed a remonstrance to Miramon's Minister of Foreign Affairs in the name of President Buchanan, expressing his great indignation at the withdrawal of the exequaturs from the American consuls and the murder of peaceful American citizens by Miramon's soldiers at Tacubaya. The massacre is characterized as a violation of national rights and treaty stipulations, and Miramon is warned that it will be remembered, and redress be demanded, and ultimately obtained. Whatever may be the result of this remonstrance the sloop-of-war Saratoga has returned from Vera Cruz to Tampico.

BANGOR, Me., July 1.—The Democratic State Convention, which met here yesterday, nominated Manasseh Smith, Administration, for Governor, the vote stood—Smith, 354, Smart, (Douglasite) 256; Scattering, 53. The delegates to the Charleston Convention were George Shipley and E. Wilder Farley, Administration, and A. M. [illegible] and [illegible], Anti Administration.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—The Leavenworth [illegible] Constitutional Convention, assembles at Wyandotte on Tuesday next. The Republicans claim a majority of 12, but as certificates will not be issued until the day of the Convention, its absolute political character cannot be stated. It is understood that in any event a Constitution will be framed prohibiting slavery, and an effort be made to engraft a provision excluding negroes from the State, also prohibiting the incorporation of banks of issue. An action will be taken with reference to the claims of sufferers during past troubles in the territory. A proposition to annex southern Nebraska to the State will be considered, delegates from Nebraska will be present, and the project has been favorably received thus far.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—The Salt Lake correspondent of the Republican says that Judge Cradlebaugh had returned from a tour of his circuit. He issued warrants during the trip for the arrest of nearly one hundred persons engaged in the massacre at Mountain Meadows and various other murders. He says no Church officials along the route. He reports that for eighty miles before reaching Santa Clara, his company found human skeletons at most every camping ground, many probably murdered by the Indians last winter. He says that upwards of eighty white men [illegible] at the Mountain Meadows' massacre.

ST. LOUIS, July 4.—The Overland mail with dates to the 10th ult., arrived last night. The Republicans nominated Leland Stanford, of Sacramento for Governor, J. F. Kennedy, of Santa Clara, Lieut. Governor B. D. Baker, of San Francisco, P. H. Libby, of Placer for Congress. Business was inactive.

Capt. Simpson of the exploring expedition reached Walker's river. The route surveyed by Mr Simpson shortens the distance from camp Floyd to Genoa 200 miles.

The Arizonian of the 16th says Capt. Ewell's party arrived at Fort Buchanan having been driven out of Sonora by Governor Pesqueira. Stone proceeds to Washington.

A revolt of the Opata and Yaqui Indians was creating great consternation in Sonora. The Indians defeated the Government troops in five engagements and were marching on Guaymas where the foreign residents were taking refuge on board the vessels Sylvester and Mary.

QUEBEC, July 5.—The ship Sullivant owned in New York and bound from New Orleans to Liverpool, was completely burned at sea. The captain and crew had arrived at Queenstown. She had a cargo of 2,800 bales of cotton. The vessel was fully insured in New York, Philadelphia and New Orleans offices.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Rev. A. Kingman Nott Pastor of the Brown street, Baptist Church in this city, was drowned in the Raritan river to-day.

LEAVENWORTH, July 4.—The express from Denver City with dates to the 23d ult. arrived yesterday. A large conflagration had occurred in the Pineries on Divide between Gregory's and Jackson's diggings. Twenty lives are reported lost, and five bodies recovered—the names were not ascertained. Considerable dust was waiting shipment at Denver City. Specie was in great demand, which makes purchases slow.

ST. LOUIS, July 4th.—Leavenworth dates to the 2d are received. The Times publishes a communication from the gold region to June 17th, considerably later than previous advices, also a private letter from Horace Greeley, who says there is no mistake about the existence of gold in paying quantities. The last three days' working in Defrees, Barber and Stanton's claim produced $1,700, estimating gold at $18 per ounce—$100 per day to the sluice.

New rich discoveries are every day made by large prospecting parties being organized, and a thorough examination of the mountain district as far as Medicine Bow on the north and great basin on the west has been made.

Activity prevailed at Denver City. The effects of the late prostration had entirely disappeared.

Discoveries of rich solid gold-bearing quartz were made. The Express which left here to-day was crowded with passengers.

NEW YORK, July 5.—The steamer Bay State met with an accident near Hurlgate yesterday, only two persons were injured, a passenger and the engineer.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7th.—The Steamer W. H. Webb is below, with San Francisco dates to the 20th ulto. The Sonora and Uncle Sam left San Francisco for Panama with two millions in the treasury, and 600 passengers. Business was better. Coffee, Rio, 16c. Money tight, politics exciting. The anti-Lecompton Democrats nominated Curry for Governor, McKibbon and Booker for Congress.

The five millions Conducta had arrived at Vera Cruz, and the treasure was awaiting shipment.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

The Tendency of Republicanism—Judges Swan and Gholson.

It has been always contended that the principles (?) of the Republicans not only tended to, but were sure to result in abolition, and placing the negro precisely on the same level with the white citizen. This has been denied, and we have no doubt conscienciously too; but is it not as visible as the hand-writing on the wall? The status of the negro is above that of the white citizen, in the estimation of the bone and sinew, the soul and muscle of the Republican party.—Is it not time for those who are not besotted with the zeal and fanaticism of the Abolition wing of their party, to pause and reflect before they are precipitated into a vortex from which there is no redemption? It cannot be sufficient for them merely to oppose the Democratic party, and thereby find themselves cheek by jowl with those who would trample under foot every safeguard of the Constitution, every guaranteed right that stands in the way of a false philanthrophy, under cover of which political power and the gratification of unhallowed ambition are unceasingly sought.

The manner in which an able member of the Supreme Court was set aside, because he regarded his oath to support the Constitution of the United States, must bring home to the conservative portion of the "opposition" that they have been associated with a band of law-deriding, constitution-hating fanatics and desperadoes, who are willing to follow no counsel but their own despotic will. Inch by inch, step by step they have been urged along a tortuous pathway, until the abyss to which it leads, is not far off. It is time yet to turn, and retrace the dangerous road—but how much farther may they go in safety?

We regard the superseding of Judge Swan, merely as a sign, an evidence of the intention of the so-called Republicans. The contrariety of opinions expressed in defense of the nomination of Judge Gholson, by some, that of locality, who contend that his opinions concur with those announced by Judge Swan in his decision, by others that pledges were made for him that he was "all right upon the goose" and would sustain the Republican dogmas, do not free the public mind of apprehension, that in their success, (which heaven forefend!) there is great danger.

We seek to make no political capital out of the defeat of Judge Swan, or the acceptance by Judge Gholson, after having ordered that his name should not be used to defeat the other.—The party convention had a perfect right to act as it did but will the people sustain that action?

The organ of Giddings says that—

"Through the whole of Wednesday, until late at night, the contest was maintained with firmness. Each party appeared confident. The radical Republicans offered the nomination to those of the central or southern portions of the State, provided they would name a 'reliable' man. Several named were entirely acceptable to the more devoted friends of liberty; but they were already in better positions, and would not accept the nomination. Judge Gholson was named, and such assurances of his position given that the friends of freedom agreed to accept him, if the party should re-affirm their hatred of the Fugitive slave Law, and Judge Gholson accept the nomination with the example of Swan's repudiation before him."

This might be satisfactory to those who sought to punish Judge Swan for his tenacity in pronouncing an opinion in the face of the demands of the fanatics of the Reserve, who forced the case upon the Supreme Court, to have their dogmas sustained, or in the event of their losing the game, that they might punish the Judge. It would have given them cause for loud gratulation and excessive joy to have had an opinion in their favor from such a man as Judge Swan; and the corresponding disappointment and chagrin, in their fall from such a hope, can only be imagined.

It is not to be expected that a man of Judge Gholson's prudence would give any pledge, or forestall any decision that he might be called upon to make, in the event of his election, but we have thought without a moment's hesitation, notwithstanding the pronunciamento of Giddings' paper, that in a similar case as that presented to Judge Swan, he would pronounce a similar opinion. This is strengthened by a letter from S. C. Gholson, son of Judge Gholson, to the Oxford (Miss.) "Mercury," in which he says:

"I would willingly stake all I hold dear, dearer than life itself, that, if elected, he will perform his duties to the true letter and spirit of the law, even to the surrender of a negro lawfully claimed to his master, without deviating to the right or to the left, for or against the rules, regulations, tenets, doctrines, or platforms of any nation, sect, party or organization under the sun."

This, which we sincerely believe to be true, only places the conduct of the Convention in a stronger light, as superseding Judge Swan, and taking a new man whose decision has not been announced, that they may belabor the public ear a little longer with their sounding phrases and empty tirades about human freedom, "the oppressor's wrong," and the rights of the down-trodden slave!

The younger Gholson denies that his father affiliated with the Know Nothings, or was one, although they elected him Judge of the Superior Court of Cincinnati, and that "he repeatedly expressed his disapproval of secret political organizations."

That is of much less importance than the fact that he is expected to operate in conjunction with the fanatics who set aside an upright Judge, because he would not dishonor his fair name, he would not prove a traitor to his country, and to his oath, to aid and abet them in carrying out their pernicious doctrines.

THE HAMILTON MEETING.—In our paper, this week, will be found the proceedings of a large meeting of the citizens of Butler county, which inaugurated a proposed change in our fundamental law, which claims the attention of the politicians. It is proposed to introduce an issue in the approaching election, which might have been worthy of consideration by the State Convention, when embodying the issues for the campaign. How generally it may be observed, it is impossible at this time to foresee. Our friend "C. K. S." will see that we have published his brief note on the subject, which was more intended for our own eye than that of the public. We shall be pleased to hear from him more fully on the subject, or from other gentlemen who may feel disposed to express themselves on either side of the question. It is a subject on which much may be said, pro or con, and if it is to enter into the canvass, it should be calmly and dispassionately argued. Other States have adopted a similar or kindred provision; and it is a matter upon which the public mind of Ohio should be fully advised, before undertaking to incorporate it into the organic law.

The Cry of Protection.

From the South we now hear the cry of "protection." How long since the Southern ear was pleased with the word? Time has been when it was not so grateful a sound, and "protection of American industry" found little favor there. They would secede, sever from the Union, if the iniquitous tariff policy were not modified; and to propitiate them, Mr. Clay introduced his compromise with the gradual reduction to twenty per cent AD VALOREM.

Time flew by and when the tariff was to be adjusted on the twenty per cent AD VALOREM principle, in accordance with the Southern demand, it was discovered that it would not do, and the tariff was arranged to meet the exigencies of government in 1842 and somewhat modified in 1846, on the basis of a revenue tariff with certain discriminations. The country has settled down upon that policy, the tariff having been again modified as experience pointed out. It is the policy of our government to raise its revenue to cover its expenditures in this indirect manner, the consumers bearing the burden. It is probably the most agreeable although not the cheapest way of paying taxes, and not always the most equitable. Still it is not expected that the policy will be changed in a life-time. Were the government supported by a direct tax, there might be a closer scrutiny into the expenditures and considerable curtailment of those which are useless, or worse than useless, in corrupting newspapers, pampering favorites and pensioning politicians—"a custom more honored in the breach than the observance."

Now, the word "protection" is not so discordant to the Southern ear. They must have "protection" for their slave property in the territories. What territories? What part of the present public domain is likely to become slave States? Where do slave-holders propose to remove with their slave property? Kansas will shut them out very shortly as a State. They have no affection for Nebraska which is too cold. New Mexico offers no inducement with its sterile wastes. Indian Territory is principally occupied by the Red men, although they may make a lodgement there. Utah is too remote, and they may not like the Mormon institutions and notions of religion. Washington is in the same category with Nebraska. Where are they to go?

The owners of slaves are not in the habit of removing with their property where that property becomes, to a considerable extent, valueless. The planting States offer greater inducements to the Slaveholder than those where agriculture in its broader sense, is cultivated, and where the negro figuratively "eats his head off." Negroes are not valuable in pastoral life, where flocks and herds are to be tended. They belong just where they are needed,

"Among the cotton and the cane," and the Sugar plantations of the South. If this country should acquire more territory in that sunny region,—if it were there, unpeopled, to be acquired,—there would be no interference with their removal there and the establishment of slave States. They could have it their own way. There would be no "Massachusetts aid Societies," no "Beecher and Silliman rifles" no "shrieking" to set the country in a ferment.

They might quietly and uninterruptedly take their time to lay off their plantations, erect their gins and cane mills, their dwellings, and cultivate their fields, and form their constitutions in their own way, unless indeed they bring the subject again into the halls of Congress, under the empty and idle plea of "protection," in which event God only knows the consequences. We do not care to contemplate the worst, and are not expectant of less, and therefore turn to the conservatism and patriotism of the Democratic party, which, under the statesmanship of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS inaugurated a wise system by which such fearful apprehensions were allayed, the difficulties so threatening were avoided; and if that party remain true to itself, and do not prove recreant to its past glory, the integrity of the nation will be preserved, and every territory manage its own affairs in its own way, without the intervention of Congress, (a most hazardous experiment) and subject alone to an appeal to the Courts under the Constitution of the United States.

Charleston Convention.

When Charleston was selected as the place of holding the Democratic National Convention, it was in consequence of the party standing upon National principles, "knowing no North, no South, no East, no West," but alike embracing the whole Union. It was considered that, at least, as far as the party was concerned, the question of slavery in any and every shape had been settled—that the subject had been withdrawn from Congress, and under no circumstances, was to be introduced there by one claiming to be a Democrat. To show the harmony and good feeling—the faith which the North had in the South, the proposition to hold the Convention at Charleston was met with ready acquiescence. The integrity and honor of the chivalrous South were implicitly relied on without hesitation. It was an endorsement and ratification of the satisfaction with which the principles of the settlement by the Kansas-Nebraska act had been received; and it was thought that this would strengthen that settlement by a show of confidence which was sincerely entertained.

We trust that nothing may transpire to show that this confidence was misplaced. We hope that the South may prove true to its prestige of integrity and good faith—that it will prove true to its own interests, to which the Democracy of the North, within the constitutional sphere, have been always faithful.

The fierce and vindictive reflections of newspapers, and political demagogues at the South who aspire to station, we hope and trust may not misdirect the feeling of the masses, whose true interest lies in the undisturbed harmony and success of the Democratic party. It is natural that they should be solicitous to bring forward for Presidential honors, their own distinguished citizens, but not at the expense of those principles standing by which the party can alone be successful.

We regard these ebullitions of the press and aspiring politicians, if persisted in, as dangerous to that harmony without which success is not to be expected. While we prefer that premeditated treason should show itself at the earliest stage, that it may be met and counteracted, instead of playing its low and furtive game to explode at a late and fatal hour, we have too much confidence in their sincerity and patriotism to believe that the people can be led astray to any dangerous extent, by designing agitators and infatuated zealots. Yet the experience at the North, where one by one the outposts of conservatism have been driven in by the continued assaults of Abolitionism, should warn us of the injury that may be inflicted by the impulsive and unrestrained extremists of our own party. Our solace is in the deep and abiding interest which those concerned in the welfare and happiness of the Union must feel in the integrity and success of the Democratic party.

THE OTHER VIEW.—The Springfield, (Ohio) "News," which is not intemperate in its zeal, but a determined Republican paper, will not accept Judge Spalding's interpretation of the action of the Republican Convention in nominating Judge Gholson, but differs from a number of its co-workers and "brethren in the spirit," most materially and essentially. It says:

"If the issue had been the approval or disapproval of Judge Swan's decision, there would have been a majority in its favor. We do not claim that the approval would have been unanimous, but if there had been an opportunity for expressing it, it would have prevailed triumphantly. In reality the action of the convention, in nominating Judge Gholson, sustained Judge Swan, for it is well known, in all portions of Ohio, outside of 'benighted Ashtabula' and the 'skull' of Joshua R. Giddings, that Judge Gholson is just another such a man, in sentiment, in talent, and in high moral worth, as Judge Swan."

The True Reason.

The Republican newspapers have given various reasons for setting aside Judge Swan, and a friendly controversy arose between the Buffalo Express and the Washington City Republic upon the subject: the former claiming that the true reason was the decision he had given in the "habeas corpus" case, while the latter contended that it was on account of his residence being in Columbus, from which point other candidates were drawn. The Ashtabula Sentinel, the paper of which Mr Giddings is corresponding editor, announced that the true reason was that Judge SWAN had disappointed his party, who entertained a different opinion. The true reason was well known here, where the Convention was held, and the opposition to SWAN on account of his opinion was not concealed. Several of the Republican papers, which are more frank than the rest, have not availed themselves of the subterfuge behind which many of them desired to conceal the true motive for setting aside Judge SWAN, and proclaimed that it was in consequence of his decision, agreeing with the Ashtabula Sentinel, whose language cannot be mistaken:

"He could have retired quietly and the matter might have dropped there; but after the high anti-slavery ground taken by the Republican party, it was an outrage to press such an issue upon the Convention. The Court was divided, and some of the ablest jurists and statesmen of the country are with the minority. Insisting upon his nomination then was but asking the Convention and the people to act upon the very case just passed on by the Court. Well, the Convention did act upon it, and reversed the decision; and the people will seal that reversal in October."

The position assumed by the Washington Republic drew the following letter from Judge SPALDING, who being a prominent member of the Convention, and a candidate for the nomination, is presumed to be well-informed upon the subject; and to set all doubts aside, and remove all mystery, he gives the true reason. His letter is addressed to one of the editors of the Washington City Republic:

CLEVELAND, O., June 28, 1859.

GEO. W. WESTON, Esq:

DEAR SIR:—I beg leave to call your attention to an editorial in your paper, (weekly,) of the 25th inst., under the title or heading of "Judge Swan, of Ohio," and in doing so to say that the writer is deceived if he supposes Judge Swan was left off the ticket on account of his residence in Columbus. HE WAS DROPPED FOR THE REASON THAT HE, AS A JUDICIAL OFFICER, RECOGNIZED THE FUGITIVE SLAVE ENACTMENT OF 1850 TO BE OF BINDING FORCE IN OHIO; AND THE OTHER TWO JUDGES WHO WERE WITH HIM IN OPINION WILL BE DROPPED IN THE SAME WAY, SO SOON AS THEY ARE REACHED IN THE ORDER OF TIME. WE DO NOT RECOGNIZE MEN TO BE REPUBLICANS, HERE IN NORTHERN OHIO, WHO WILL, FOR A MOMENT, SUSTAIN THAT MISERABLE ENACTMENT.

They were not so recognized at Philadelphia in 1856.

I know there are politicians in our ranks who aim to emasculate the Republican organization with a view to their individual aggrandizement.

Let them beware; and let us beware of them.

Take from the Republican party its Anti-Slavery element, and you leave it a lifeless corpse.

If it were possible to accomplish a victory by any such "getting down stairs," I would greatly prefer a defeat, and thousands and tens of thousands, who, like you and me, came from the line of the old Democratic party, would bow their heads with shame if they found they had aided in restoring the old Whig dynasty at the expense of freedom.

I pray you to publish this communication in your next paper.

I am, very sincerely, your friend,
R. P. SPALDING.

We have before remarked that it created no surprise in us that the Republican Convention should set aside Judge SWAN.—He had decided against their only plank as unworthy to stand upon, and to take him for a candidate after that, was to acknowledge that, like the fellow who walked off the cart, they were standing on nothing.

The Mad Attacks on Mr. Douglas.

The Cincinnati Enquirer reads the Washington Constitution a proper lesson. It is not a little singular that the vision of the government paper at Washington should be so oblique, or its senses so obtuse, that it does not perceive it is sticking the venerable Secretary of State, and not MR. DOUGLAS, in attributing to the latter doctrines which he has not advocated, but which were entertained by Gen. CASS. These malevolent attacks upon the Senator from Illinois will fall harmless, from his well-known escutcheon, but should recoil upon his assailants, and cover them with confusion:

MR. DOUGLAS AND THE CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

The Washington "Constitution" appears to be employing its summer leisure (pardon the paradox) in slandering distinguished Democrats. For instance, in a carefully-prepared article on Friday last, it accuses Judge Douglas and his friends of "demanding at the hands of the Charleston Convention that there shall be incorporated into the platform of our party by that body a plain and unequivocal recognition of the peculiar doctrines held by that Senator in reference to the question of slavery in the Territories. They demand that the Charleston Convention shall unequivocally admit the right of the first settlers of a Territory to decide the question whether or not a Southern man with his slave property shall be permitted to go into that Territory under the protection of the Constitution of the United States. In other words, they demand that the National Democratic party shall solemnly announce to the country that the power exists in a Territorial Legislature to deprive the people of the Southern States of the right guaranteed to them by the Constitution of going into such Territory with their peculiar property."

Without arrogating any right to speak for Mr. Douglas, we hazard nothing in saying that the position imputed to him by the "Constitution" is an unjustifiable and inexcusable calumny. He has never asked for any interpolation of the Cincinnati platform. He has never assailed the Southern construction of the Nebraska Bill. He has only claimed the right to put his own interpretation on it, by virtue of the compact by which the extent of Territorial power was made a judicial question. When the doctrine of the slave code was broached in the Senate last winter; when grave Southern Senators signified a purpose to tear down the old "Democratic embankment" of non-intervention; and, by the way when the editor of the Washington "Constitution" kept a padlock on his lips, Mr. Douglas defended and sustained the Cincinnati platform.

The "Constitution" has come to his position of non-intervention—that is all there is in it—and assigns him one he has never assumed.—Why cannot the "Constitution" do this eminent statesman justice? Why this eternal disposition to pick at him? Why these inexcusable slanders on his public position, with which the whole country is presumed to be familiar? The "Constitution and its allies have already made him strong enough by their abuse and persecution. In the interest of all his competitors for the Charleston nomination, we protest against it making him any stronger. The "Enquirer" is not committed to Judge Douglas for President, or any body else. But it loves to see justice done a man to whom the Democratic party—we care not what may have been past differences of opinion—is under such a weighty load of obligation. It is quite time all this nonsense was at an end.

The "State Journal," a day or two since, copied a paragraph from the Memphis "Avalanche," relative to the acceptability of MR. DOUGLAS to the people of Tennessee. As the "State Journal" relied upon the credibility of its witness, it will scarcely introduce testimony to prove that its witness is not trustworthy. Well, the "Avalanche" "says of Judge Gholson that in 1845 he sold his slaves at auction," at Pontiac, in the State of Mississippi, and with the proceeds emigrated to Ohio, where he is now the accepted candidate of the "Sons of Liberty." We think Judge GHOLSON had a right to sell his negroes in any way he pleased, and to get the best prices for them; but is this a recommendation for a Judge in the opinion of the "State Journal" and its "higher-law" confederates? [illegible]

"Extremes Meet."

[From the Marietta (Ohio) Intelligencer.]

How truly is this old saw illustrated by the present position of parties. While the Democracy of this nation are firmly planted upon the eternal rock of non-intervention, the Republicans of the North are in league with the fire-eaters of the extreme South, pandering to the local prejudices of either section for Congressional intervention. Without the shadow of warrant in the Constitution, each seeks arbitrarily to use the limited powers of the compact to keep up domestic broils, to incite their fellows to treason and acts of violence, instead of exercising their powers "to insure domestic tranquility," as our fathers in the Constitution, declare to be its object.

Is this war never to end?—are we never to have peace? Is there no manner of solution of this everlasting question of slavery consistent with reason, with justice and with the genius of our government? It seems to us there is; and it is so plain and simple that it must be obvious to every man. We mean every man who is capable of divesting himself of party prejudices and looking the question straight in the face. There are those, we know, who cannot see at all except through a kind of political goggles which discolor everything, and give even a snowy whiteness a tinge of somber or a shade of ebon. To such it were useless to appeal.—Their gaze is fixed, and you might as well attempt to move the sphinx of Egypt.

But there are those who are willing to reason. They are getting tired of this eternal jargon about slavery, and are willing that the question should be settled in any honorable way. To such we would appeal. We would ask them in all candor, if it would not be reasonable, if it would not be just, to leave this question like all other domestic concerns, wholly to the people of each territory to settle for themselves? Would this not be better, bating all questions of constitutionality, than for Congress as a majority might happen to be, to prohibit or establish the institution in a territory regardless of the wishes of the people? This is the sum and the substance of the whole question. It is a plain proposition; it is a question between the people and despotic power. The Democracy are where they have always been, on the side of the people.—They have demanded, and still demand non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in State or Territory, and demand that it shall be left to every people to determine their own institutions for themselves.

This is the policy of the Democratic party, and this once settled as the policy of the government, will solve the slavery question, and Ethiop will be at rest. It is simply minding our own business, and permitting others to do the same, within their own borders. This was the doctrine of the Nebraska Bill, of the Cincinnati platform, and of the Ohio resolutions, and it must be the doctrine of the Democratic party everywhere and through all time. It was the platform of the Revolution.—It saved us from British tyranny then. It saved us when our Constitution was being formed by incorporating the reservation of power to the people into the articles of compact. Those reservations which say non-intervention by Congress, have saved us ever since from anarchy and oppression. They have kept the Constitution whole, its powers intact and the people free.

Non-intervention has been our watchword from the first. It is the rock of salvation upon which the pillars of the Union stand. It is the Gibralter of the American Democracy. They have inscribed the name upon their banners, and have planted themselves upon the rock forever.—Winds from the North may come—they may blow from the South, but the waves they bring will all end in foam. They will fret themselves for a time against the rock, and then subside into harmless breakers.

Extremes may meet and combine their forces. Puritan and fire-eater may ally their powers, but while the people are omnipotent, the Democracy are eternal, Popular Sovereignty will vindicate itself, and the doctrine of non-intervention will prevail.

Candidates for the Presidency.

In the following list we present the names of the most prominent candidates for President in the various parties, placing them, according to the best of our guessing ability, in the order of their chances for the nomination:

DEMOCRATS.
Stephen A. Douglas, Ill.	Howell Cobb, Ga.
R. M. T. Hunter, Va.	John Slidell, La.
James Guthrie, Ky.	Horatio Seymour, N. Y.
J. C. Breckenridge, Ky.	Joseph Lane, Oregon.
Henry A. Wise, Va.	Jefferson Davis, Miss.
D. S. Dickinson, N. Y.	A. G. Brown, Miss.
REPUBLICANS.
Wm. H. Seward, N. Y.	N. P. Banks, Mass.
S. P. Chase, Ohio.	Abraham Lincoln, Ill.
John McLean, Ohio.	Simon Cameron, Pa.
J. P. Hale, N. H.	W. Fessenden, Me.
KNOW NOTHINGS, AND OLD LINE WHIGS.
J. J. Crittenden, Ky.	John Bell, Tenn.
Edward Bates, Mo.	Edward Everett, Mass.
J. M. Botts, Va.	Thomas Ewing, Ohio.
ABOLITIONISTS.
Gerrit Smith, N. Y.	J. R. Giddings, Ohio.

We have omitted Mr. Buchanan's name from the above list for the reason that he is said to have positively declined being a candidate.—[Spirit of Democracy.

Our friend "Jeremiah" is a pretty good hand at "guessing." He places MR. DOUGLAS in the lead, "according to his guessing ability." He has a goodly array of great names, but we agree with him that the name of MR. DOUGLAS is first and will be first to the end. We shake hands with him on that; and trust that he will give his "best licks" to send a DOUGLAS delegate from his Congressional District to the Charleston Convention.

THE "NATIONAL."—The Allen County "Democrat" has been re-christened by MACKENZIE, and is now called the National. There were so many Democrats, it ceased to give the paper "a distinctive character," and MACK wanted a name. He says:

"We think the name of a paper, like that of an individual should be distinctive. The large family of "Smiths," has been a standing joke, which even the "Johnsons" and the "Thompsons" indulged in. "Democrat" and "Republican" form the "Smith" and "Brown" of newspaper distinctives. We wanted a name—we consulted a friend who suggested "The National," as not common. We adopted it. It has something too of a Democratic taste and indication about it. The Democratic party are the only National party in the Union; and the advocate of principles requiring breadth of mind and patriotism enough to extend over a mighty union may claim to use the name."

Good for you. Nobody has a better right to the title; for in every sense you are a National man and your paper a National paper. We hope the National may have a long and prosperous career, and that its influence may spread far and wide. There can be no doubt of its Democracy—every number speaks for itself. Neither are its hands nor feet nor tongue tied, but like a true Democrat it utters its sentiments

"Unaw'd by power, unbought by gain."

READ OUT!—Judge Swan, Scott and Peck are being read out of the Republican party by Spalding, Chase & Co., on the Reserve. They say they intend to punish any Judge hereafter, by dismissal from office, who has more regard for law than he has for the Republican party. They want a Judge to decide for party advantage, and they claim to have selected a candidate who will be "all right for them," in the person of Judge Gholson!—Seneca Advertiser.

For the People's Press.

Public Meeting at Hamilton, Butler County.

At a largely attended celebration of the Fourth day of July, last Monday, in the City of Hamilton, Ohio, the following preamble and resolutions were introduced for the consideration of the meeting by C. K. SMITH, Esq., and unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The Declaration of Independence, the National and State Constitutions recognise the right, "That all men are by nature free and independent, and have certain inalienable rights, among which, are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and seeking and obtaining happiness and safety." In the early days of our Government, stringent measures were adopted to guard against apprehended malicious influences from abroad, through the agency of a vast emigration, as well as through other channels. But now in the strength and manhood of our country, those measures are unnecessary and injudicious. The United States claim to be the "home of the brave, and the land of the free," and the "haven of rest," to the spirit of liberty. To all who choose to come and dwell among us, the rights of liberty and equality, should be gladly extended. Our country is broad and wide and deep enough to afford a shelter, to all who seek an asylum from the oppression and injustice of the old world.—Here industry finds its reward, and social and political rights are guaranteed, virtue and intelligence meet with no cold averted look, or a reception which chills the blood. A people who staked their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor in resisting a duty of three pence on a pound of tea, ought to be capable of appreciating the value of civil and religious liberty and willing to extend the privilege without stint to others.

AND WHEREAS, The qualification of voters for Federal and State Officers, is by the Constitution of the United States, left to conform to, and be governed by the existing diversities of the several State Constitutions and laws, and as every American freeman should be opposed to the principle of the recent action of the State of Massachusetts, in requiring of a naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years. Yet this power undoubtedly exists in the State Governments, and may be extended AD INFINITUM. The right to establish the qualifications of voters for National and State elective officers, belongs to the several States and not to the general Government. A man need not necessarily be a citizen of the United States, to be a voter in any of the States, so that Aliens intending to make this country their home, must look to the State governments for the protection of their rights, and not to the government of the United States.—Therefore, be it

Resolved, By this large assemblage, met together in celebration of the Natal day of freedom, that they pledge themselves to each other, to use all legal and reasonable means to produce such change in the Constitution and laws of this State, in regard to the voting privileges, as will conform to the spirit of our form of Government and insure to every white person the inalienable rights of man.

Resolved, That the fifth article and first section of the Ohio Constitution ought to be amended, so as to read, "Every white male person of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year next preceding the election, and of the county, township or ward in which he resides, such time as may be prescribed by law, shall have the qualifications of an elector, and be entitled to vote at all elections.

Resolved, That it is not assumed that a State can exercise the power of naturalization, but that it has the exclusive right to prescribe the qualification of all voters, whether NATIVES OR ALIENS; and that naturalization is of little value or protection of the rights of the naturalized.—The privileges afforded, however, by most of the States of the West, invest the alien with all the immunities of a freeman.

Resolved, That William B. Vanhook, James K. Webster, N. C. McFarland, John W. Sohn and John McElwee, be and they are hereby appointed a committee to address, in writing, the candidates at the next October election for Governor of Ohio, and such other candidates for State offices as they may think expedient, and also the candidates for Senator, Representative and Judge of this election district, and lastly, in like manner, the candidates for each county office as they may deem proper, asking their opinion of the proposed amendments to the constitution and laws of the State, as hereinbefore specified; and a refusal of any candidate to answer in writing shall be construed that such candidate is opposed to said amendments.

Resolved, That the foregoing be published in the papers of the city and county, and that the "People's Press" and "Ohio Statesman" at Columbus, the "Enquirer" and "Commercial" of Cincinnati, and the Cleveland "Plaindealer" be requested to publish the same.

J. WM. SOHN,
President of the Day.

Hamilton, Ohio, July 6, 1859.

Hon. Stephen A. Douglas.

[From the Boston Herald.]

The press have of late undertaken to define the position of Judge Douglas in the contest for Presidency in 1860. Some even undertake to say that he and President Buchanan have had a set down and talked matters over, and that each has agreed to let up a little on their notions of party faith, and will, for the future, pull together, etc. Another position assigned the distinguished Senator from Illinois is, that he and Forney cannot agree upon a union of purpose in future, and so on to the end of the chapter. These speculations come from presses and individuals who are either unfriendly to the Giant of the West, or who are afraid of his power and hold upon the affections of the people. We undertake to say, and we do not speak unadvisedly, when we pronounce all these stories magnificent humbugs, there being no truth in them whatever. Judge Douglas is not engaged in any paltry intrigues with any man or set of men. He has boldly and squarely laid down his views as to what he considers his duties under the constitution, and before the summer is ended will give to the people of this great confederacy still stronger reason for the faith that is in him, and which we predict will scatter to the winds all the fine-spun theories of political demagogues, both North and South. Let no man or set of men lay the "flattering unction to their soul" that Judge Douglas, having conquered his combined opponents in Illinois, will stop there. We predict that both he and his friends will be heard and felt in the Charleston Convention; and further, that the success or defeat of the Democratic party in 1860 depends upon the heed which that convention gives to him and the great doctrine which he advocates.

Shortly the battle will commence between the two great parties, and success will attend that party which exhibits the greatest amount of wisdom. The defeats which the Democrats have experienced in the elections which have been, and are now being held, should teach them a lesson of humility, and warn them not to be too sanguine, or they may find themselves defeated in the Nation as they have been in some of the States. The next Presidential battle is to be fought upon principle, and anything short of that will not avail. The people believe in the great doctrine of popular sovereignty and non-intervention on the part of Congress in regulating the domestic affairs of the States and Territories, and will not tolerate Congressional interference, either to protect or prohibit slavery in the Territories any longer, and whenever the people assemble either in the primary or delegate convention, let them proclaim and enunciate this great fundamental principle, the politicians will soon bend that way.

MADISON COUNTY.—From the Assessor's returns of Madison county, as published in the National Democrat, we make the following summary of stock and its value returned for taxation this year: Number of horses 6,381, value $448,546; cattle 34,396, value $563,360; mules 214, value $14,860; sheep 59,093, value $132,894; hogs 34,763, value $63,183. Number of sheep killed and injured by dogs last year 1,034, value $1,657. Agricultural products last year—wheat 189,699 bush, rye 6,233 bush, barley 1,600 bush, buckwheat 4,269 bush, corn 714,946 bush, oats 7,844 bush, hay 16,059 tons.

There were nearly one hundred accidents in New York City and suburbs on the Fourth from powder.

The Naturalization of Foreigners—How Senator Douglas Responded to the Swedish Minister and the Russian Nobleman.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes:

Apropos to the controversy arising out of the Cass-Le Clerc letter, upon the subject of naturalization, I will give you an incident related by Senator Douglas on his return from Europe in 1853. He entered the bay of Smyrna in an Austrian ship the day that Captain Ingraham sailed out after releasing Koszta. As soon as he landed he made himself acquainted with the facts and communicated them to President Pierce, with a warm recommendation that Captain Ingraham should be sustained. During the remainder of his trip over the Continent, the Koszta affair, and the principles involved in the controversy were the leading topics of conversation in all circles. A few months afterward Senator Douglas took the Russian steamer from St. Petersburg to Lubec, and when a few miles below Constadt, in the Gulf of Finland, a conversation arose between quite a number of gentleman upon this Koszta question, which finally settled down into a discussion between Senator Douglas and the Swedish Embassador at St. Petersburg, who was also a passenger upon the same ship.

In the course of the conversation the Swedish Embassador declared with emphasis that every crowned head in Europe would respond to the Austrian circular denying that any government upon earth had a right to naturalize the subject of another government without the consent of that government where such person was born. Senator Douglas inquired of the Swedish Embassador whether his august master, King Oscar, would join in such a declaration; to which the latter replied unhesitatingly in the affirmative, and that he would maintain it at all hazards. Senator Douglas then said that there was a brief chapter in the history of Sweden which, if satisfactorily explained, would go a great way to reconcile the American people to that doctrine; and that, as it was desirable so to preserve peace, he hoped the Swedish Embassador would explain it. The latter said he would take pleasure in doing so, and inquired what it was.

Senator Douglas stated that the American people had heard that about the year 1807, (he would not be positive as to the precise date,) a French army, commanded by Marshall Bernadotte, captured a large number of young Swedish noblemen in a battle in Pomerania, whom he treated kindly and then released them. About the time that these young noblemen arrived home, the Crown Prince of Sweden died, leaving the old King without any heir to the throne. The old king immediately summoned the nobles of the kingdom to elect a Crown Prince as heir to the throne, and when thus assembled, to the surprise of every body, they elected Bernadotte, a Frenchman by birth, and the son of a lawyer in the south of France, who was then in command of the French armies under Napoleon, as Crown Prince and heir to the throne of Sweden. They naturalized him on the spot, without the consent of France, where he was born, and in opposition to the known wishes of the Emperor Napoleon himself.

The people of America had also heard that when the old King died, this same Bernadotte became King of Sweden by virtue of that naturalization, and that he held that throne until his death, and that he was succeeded by his son Oscar, the present King, who held his throne by virtue of that naturalization. Mr. Douglas then asked the Swedish Embassador if he would be so kind as to explain to him upon what principle of public law Sweden had naturalized Bernadotte without the consent of France, where he was born?—The Swedish Embassador was somewhat embarrassed, and the passengers raised a hearty laugh at his expense. A Russian nobleman, of large distinction in the financial world, told the Swedish Embassador that he must stand aside, having been crippled in the contest and placed hors de combat, and that he would take up the contest on behalf of Russia. He asserted the same principle, and invited Mr. Douglas to respond to him as a Russian.

Mr. Douglas then said that there was a brief chapter in the history of Russia, which also required explanation before that doctrine could be satisfactorily maintained; and being asked what it was, he said that when he entered Russia for the first time, at Odessa, on a steamer from Constantinople, and when they came to anchor in the harbor of Odessa, the first object which particularly attracted his attention was a beautiful statute at the head of a long stone stair-case, which stretched from the sea-side to the boulevards. As soon as Mr. Douglas had served his allotted time in the Quarantine prison, he repaired to that statue and ascertained that it was a monument erected to the Duke de Richelieu. Not remembering any family of that name in Russia, nor recognizing that as a Russian name, he looked into his guide book to know who was the Duke de Richelieu. There he found he was the head of the noble and distinguished family de Richelieu of France, and that when the French Revolution broke out he had fled to St. Petersburg, where he was welcomed by the Emperor Paul and immediately naturalized, without the consent of France, where he was born, and made a General in the Russian army; that when the Emperor Alexander succeeded to the throne, he appointed the Duke de Richelieu Governor of Odessa and Vice Regent of the Russian dominions upon the Black Sea; and that upon the death of the Duke de Richelieu, the inhabitants of Odessa had erected this monument to him in gratitude for his services. Mr. Douglas then stated to the Russian Baron that we would be under obligation to him if he would explain upon what principle of public law, or by what right, Russia had naturalized the Duke de Richelieu without the consent of France, where he was born, adding, that such explanation would go a great way to reconcile the American people to that principle. The only reply the Russian nobleman made to this inquiry was to invite the entire company to join him in a glass of champagne.

OCCASIONAL.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER.—The county Auditor, Recorder and Probate Judge met yesterday, and appointed Thomas Sparrow, Esq., County Commissioner, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of David L. Holton, Esq. The appointment of Mr. Sparrow is a good one, he being an honorable, clear headed gentleman who will do exact justice in all cases.—[O. S. Jour.

This is a merited compliment to MR. SPARROW from a political opponent. He will make a most efficient and excellent Commissioner, just and discriminating in the discharge of his duties, and conscientious in every thing. We congratulate the Auditor, Recorder, and Probate Judge, upon the wisdom of their choice. They could not have improved upon it, if they had searched the county over. The fact of MR. SPARROW being a resident of the city is an advantage, as the other Commissioners are from the country, and the convenience of having one always on hand will increase the interest the county has in the appointment of MR. SPARROW. It is to be hoped that he may accept; not that the remuneration is any object; but unless decidedly conflicting with his business it is to be hoped that MR. SPARROW will not decline the appointment.

Extracts from the Recent Speech of the Hon. A. H. Stephens.

THE POWER OF CONGRESS OVER THE TERRITORIES.—He believed truth would triumph; all the South wants is decision, union, patriotism. He believed in the power and omnipotence of truth, and would ask for nothing wrong. The great principle to be carried out is expansion—the right of the people of the South to go to the territories with their slave property, protected by the Constitution, on a platform of equal rights.

The questions were fully settled as a principle that Congress should make no discrimination in regard to sectional rights in the territories, but that the people of each territory, when about to form a constitution as a State, should decide for themselves whether they should come into the Union as a free or slave State.

The Missouri Compromise doctrine, the Taxas doctrine, the Territorial doctrine of Rufus King in 1817, have all been abandoned. In the admission of this principle, it was not a triumph of the South, but a triumph of justice, truth, and right. The settlement was fully up to the demands of the South. She never asks but for what is right. The principle is now settled that Congress shall abstain from all legislation on the subject of slavery in the Territories, whether as to the North or the South; and the Territories are now open to all sections, and have the privilege of adopting slavery or not, as the people may choose when they come to form a constitution. These measures, however, did not go as far as he wished; he would have Congress give protection to slave property in the public domain as long as it remained in a Territorial condition.

A majority at the South differed with him—not more than twenty five men in Congress agreed with him; but he finally agreed to the doctrine of non-intervention, because it was not agressive; and because it secured for all practical purposes what we wanted. If climate and soil do not favor slavery, it will not go into the Territories.

Many had asked him what he thought of public sentiment on this question (slavery?) He would reply that the institution of slavery is now stronger than it was sixteen years ago, when he entered Congress. Nothing improved like it—and it is now fixed firm and secure in its position.

THE PROBLEM OF THE NEGRO.—Negro slavery is but in its infancy—it is a mere problem of our Government; our fathers didn't understand it. I grant that all the public men of the South were once against it; but they didn't understand it. It is for us to meet questions with the firmness they did. The problem is yet unsolved. Ours is not only the best, but it is the only Government founded upon the principles of nature. Aristotle and other ancient philosophers had failed in their theories of government.—Gradation is seen in everything in nature—in the flowery world, from the japonica down to the violet, in the vegetable kingdom, in the stars, and even in men. All government comes from the Creator.—Statesmen never looked to this principle of gradation, but our government is the only one founded on it, and our policy, our institutions, and African slavery are founded on it. It is not for us to inquire into the great mysteries of nature; and it is most foolish to attempt to make things better than God made them. [Applause.]

THE DUTY OF STATESMEN—THE SAFETY OF THE SOUTH.—Statesmen and private men should take things as God founded them, making the greatest amount of happiness out of the elements which we possess. We ought to increase and expand our institutions. If they do not increase the amount of happiness to all—black and white—then they ought to be abandoned. He repudiated the doctrine of the greatest happiness to the greatest number. One hundred persons have no right to have happiness at the expense and injury of ninety-nine. If slavery is not best for the African, and doesn't increase his happiness, it ought to be abolished. If it does, then our institutions are founded—we are fulfilling our destiny, and we should stand upon this higher law. He wouldn't support a Constitution that was inconsistent with this higher law of nature. And until the "leopard can change his spots, or the Ethiop his skin," don't tell me, he said, that it is unlawful to hold slaves.

He had been asked, with these views, what is to become of the country? Fanaticism might be spreading at the North, but slavery is getting stronger, and will continue to get stronger, whether in the Union or out of it.

If the worst must come, let it come—he was not afraid of the consequences. In or out of the Union, slavery will grow strong as time goes on.

When he entered Congress the Missouri Compromise excluded slavery from the Territories; now it is not excluded from a portion of land over which floats our national flag!

He alluded to the anti-slavery sentiment which prevailed in Virginia in the early days of the commonwealth, and argued that it is useless to war against the progress of events. Every restriction has been taken off slavery; a Fugitive Slave Law has been granted. There are more men at the North to-day who believe in the social and moral condition of slavery than when he went to Congress. Wilberforce's theory has failed; Carlyle has repudiated his abolition doctrines; and even the London Times has partially kept up with him in his opinion. Freedom for the negro has been tried in the West India Islands, and failed, and the defect is now attempted to be remedied by the introduction of Chinese Coolies, under the title of "apprentices." They had better resort to the original state of things.

All, he continued, depends upon ourselves for the future. With our constitutional rights, and with the present principles of political policy, in his judgment, we are just as safe, and even safer than we ever were. We must remain united; if we are ever divided our day of doom will surely come.

ABOUT FACE!—Just about this time, some of the Administration papers are very much pleased with certain high-flown articles from the pen of EDMUND BURKE, of New Hampshire, in which the Administration (and especially the President) is very highly lauded. It is not a great while since this same EDMUND BURKE was not so complimentary to the Administration. In a leader of the Democratic Standard, a paper which just now is very popular in some quarters, MR. BURKE held the following language:

"Administrations owing their existence to the Southern Democracy, have not sustained their friends in the North. The countenance and the patronage of the Democratic Administrations have been given almost exclusively to the demagogues, and to the demoralized Democracy of the North. It is so, now, as it ever has been. While holding out measures to the South, where Democracy is strong and does not need friends, it attempts to secure the support of corrupt demagogues of the North by patronage, for ulterior purposes—perhaps to purchase re-nominations, or to secure the succession to a favorite. Thus have the Administrations established by the South, encouraged the demagogueism of the North, and scattered the seeds of demoralization among its Democracy. We do not except the PRESENT."

What has caused a change to come over BURKE'S dream, we are not apprised; but it is barely possible that his case has been attended to.

St. Louis Correspondence—No. II.

ST. LOUIS, July 7, 1859.

Since my first and last communication we have enjoyed an average allowance of items. Murders are quite beneath notice in general, but the shooting of Mr. Charlem by Thornton created some temporary excitement. Under the usual construction placed upon the requisite of impartiality in jurors, it must prove difficult to obtain a panel in this case. Our statute, however, does not permit a change of venue from this county, but only from the Criminal to the Circuit Court. Then we have [illegible] a few fires, innumerable police cases, a new street railroad, imported horse cars, squabbles in the city government, and the Fourth of July. Your eloquent Kentuckian attracted and delighted large and appreciative [illegible].

A certain and somewhat numerous class of adopted citizens here appear much exercised about the government position on the "Military Service" question; but the more cool and conservative class perceive that it is not exactly desirable, even if practicable, to manufacture our cis-Atlantic constructions of allegiance and expatriation into international law, at the cannon's mouth, in the absence of treaty stipulations. [illegible] a suitable matter for diplomatic arrangement; and what more can reasonably be expected? Are we to set up a Procrustean standard for the civilized world? Some of the most [illegible] have doubtless "left their country for their country's good," and it would be rather a high-handed measure to authorize them to return flaunting the American flag in audacious defiance, in the faces of their former authorities. But I do not care to argue the subject at any length, especially as I observe you have seized it as a handle of animadversion on the administration, and it would scarcely be fair to attack your positions under the guise of friendly correspondence.

Our local elections are coming on August 1st, and I do not know how far the feeling alluded to may injure the Democracy on that occasion. The most important offices to be elected, are a Judge of the Supreme, and one of the Circuit Court, vice Hon's John C. Richardson and James B. Lockwood, resigned; and two members of the House of (State) Representatives, to fill the vacancies arising from the appointment of Hon. William F. Blackwood as U. S. District Judge in New Mexico, and the lamented death of the young and promising Hon. Richard H. Bowlin. The other offices, viz: clerkships of Courts, &c., are more lucrative than eminent. We Nationals, as you will have seen, have made full nominations, except for the Judgeship. Our candidates for the Legislature, are citizens of experience and standing in the business as well as the political world. The Americans will probably make no nominations. Hon. Samuel M. Breckinridge, a son of Old Kentucky, who was candidate for Congress a year ago, will probably have a "walk over" for Circuit Court Judge without opposition. It will gratify his numerous personal friends of all parties to record their votes in his favor, for a non-political office, and one which should never, anywhere be desecrated by partisan influences, either in the electors or the elected. Mr. Breckinridge is a conservative citizen, a good lawyer, a [illegible] gentleman and an honest man; qualifications not always united in candidates for the bench of justice.

Great anticipations are entertained for our Fourth Agricultural Fair, to commence September 26th, with a Premium List of $30,000, and no entry fees. Three premiums of $1,000 each, for the best thorough bred Bull, the best Roadster Stallion in harness, and the best thorough bred stallion, without limitation as to the age, have been subscribed by citizens. Messrs. E. M. Williams, of [illegible], and John Reber, of Lancaster, O., are appointed on the Committee to award these magnificent premiums.—Your readers and friends might spend a few moments profitably in studying the Circular of the Association, of which Hon. J. Richard Barret M. C. is President. Your neighbors could scarcely pass a week more pleasantly than by attending this Exhibition.

Without being desirous of making any invidious distinction, but believing it only just to state public facts for public convenience, I remark that our friends of the Terre Haute, Alton & St. Louis Rail Road Company, are now in the field for the business of Central Ohio. This Route, via Indianapolis, is the shortest to Columbus, by some twenty to thirty miles, and since the change of Gauge on the Indiana Central, via Dayton, and the completion of the new Route, via Union and Piqua to your city, offers superior advantages to the traveler and shipper, and must prove a most formidable competitor to the Cincinnati Route with its two or three miles of omnibus riding. Since the recent change in the officers of the Terre Haute R. R., a better feeling is evinced towards it, and it is fast gaining in popularity. The track is now in superior order and trains are running promptly on time, making connections with [illegible]. Under the able management of W. D. Griswold, President and General Sup't., we have no fears of the success of this Road financially, and he will insure every member and [illegible] to this well known Line. Fare thee well. W. C.

(For the People's Press.

HAMILTON, (O.,) July 7, 1859.

DEAR SIR:—I sent you a day or two ago a preamble and resolutions, which I wish you to publish.—The publication can do no harm. The alien has all the privileges extended to him that belong to a freeman, except the voting privilege, which is withheld for five years. I can see no good reason for this; if a man, an alien, is not qualified in one year, he never will be. You allow him to hold land immediately, and compel him to pay taxes, &c. An alien comes here to enjoy liberty, and if he gets all the privileges of the State as soon as one coming from Pennsylvania, or any other State, then he has all the responsibilities of a citizen. You have more control over him with these privileges, than you will after naturalization; for if he become rebellious before naturalization, the United States may order him out of the country: a naturalized citizen of the United States may never become invested with the privileges of any State. Negroes vote in some of the States, and they are not citizens of the United States. Our State has more Know Nothingism in its laws and constitution than any other State in the Union. An alien can't be a juror, can't vote for the election of a school director, &c., &c., because he happened to have been born out of the United States; they are put on a footing with negroes; deprived of their full rights for a time.—They can enter government land, buy and sell land as other men. "All white male persons," &c., will not revive the question decided by our old Supreme Court, "More white blood," &c. We have progressed since then, and can define a white man.

I have consulted Walker's American law, p. 3[illegible], 8, 9 and 31; Kent 1, p. 68; Kent 2, p. 60, 70 and 72, Story on the Con. Vols., 2 and 3, &c., &c. The Democrats have no time to lose by meeting this question, if it should be presented to them. The preamble and resolutions were adopted here at a large celebration. All marched in procession together, and afterwards divided into two bodies.—At one, where Judge Kinder made the speech, at the close of his speech I offered them, and they were adopted. Afterwards, Mr. Willet, editor of the German "Republican" of Cincinnati, made a German speech. His paper yesterday or day before reports the number present to be 1500. I wish you to publish without fail. Yours respectfully,

C. K. S.

The Louisville Democrat nobly speaks out in favor of Judge Douglas's letter. It says: "The letter of Douglas is not in the taste of the interventionists. We did not expect that anything from him would be. He occupies, however, the position the Democratic party has occupied for the last twelve or fifteen years, North and South. He speaks according to the record, and there is not the slightest probability that he will change. He stood just where he does now when the abolitionists called him Stephen Arnold Douglas, and burned him in effigy. He stands just where he stood when nearly the whole Southern Democracy voted for him for the nomination for President. This policy can't be changed any more than the slave trade can be re-opened. It is unalterably fixed, and these agitators had as well make war against fate. They had as well make up their mind now as to what they will do about it. This letter embodies what we shall hear from the whole Democracy of the North, with no dissenting voice."

PRESIDENTIAL PROSPECTS.—The Washington correspondent to the Cincinnati Enquirer, of a very recent date, says:

"Presidential prospects may be said at present to comprise the heaviest item of metropolitan gossip. By long odds Judge Douglas is considered to be ahead of his competitors in the race. His late letter, while it has not damaged him at the South, compacts his strength at the North. Indeed, it is questionable, from the signs of the times, whether he will encounter a serious struggle in any free State for the delegates to Charleston. The conventions that lately came off in Maine and Vermont, though evidently held at a great disadvantage to his interests, resulted in the most positive and unequivocal triumph of his friends. It is evident the tide setting all over the free States in his favor is too strong to be resisted. Pennsylvania, Indiana and Minnesota are relied on confidently as States that will probably send Anti-Douglas delegations. It is admitted that the people in these States are for Douglas, but it is rumored that the politicians who hold the "ribbons" have taken a contract to carry them against him."

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1859.

OUR ST. LOUIS CORRESPONDENT.—We have the pleasure of presenting the second of the series of letters promised by our St. Louis friend, whose pen is racily, and observation wide and comprehensive. It will be seen that he does not concur with us in something, and regards our comments upon the positions of the Secretary of State as rather stringent. We have no objections to any correspondent taking as broad a range as his own judgment may direct; nor do we hold it necessary that our correspondents should be restricted to our opinions. We are governed by our own judgment; and hold it no good rule, to confine writers for our own paper to a uniformity with our own views. In admitting to our columns communications conflicting with our views, if we cannot confute them, why, we must in honor be bound to agree that we were on the wrong track—that's all. We think that whatever may have been the former policy of our government, it is time that it should assert the independence of all other governments, naturalized as well as native-born citizens. Our opinions on the subject have heretofore been quite elaborately expressed.

MELANCHOLY CASE OF DROWNING.—The Chicago Times of the 6th inst. contains the particulars of the accidental drowning of ROYES H. DAVIS, Esq., on the 4th inst., a gentleman of refinement, education and genius, a friend of the editor, and a frequent contributor to the columns of the Times. The circumstances of his death are thus narrated:

"The accident befell him near Waukegan, and happened, as near as we have been able to learn, as follows: A portion of the party, of which the deceased was one, had been dancing on deck. During the intervals between figures, sprightly conversation, and a variety of harmless and playful movements were indulged in. The deceased, who was an excellent conversationalist, was even unusually buoyant. At one of these intervals, he had been performing some mock military evolutions with a broomstick, to the great amusement of the ladies; when a new set was called, he retreating to the side of the boat. The deck was crowded, and a general movement was occasioned by the selection of partners for the dance. It is not known whether he had sat down on the edge of the boat, but in a moment the cry was raised of a man overboard! Immediately the captain reversed steam, and the crew lowered boats as soon as possible at the same time passengers threw out chairs and benches, and life preservers. He struck the water head-foremost; he sunk out of sight but came to the surface instantly, when he swam vigorously towards the boat. He is said to have kept breast-high out of the water, but, unfortunately, he did not keep his presence of mind, and instead of seizing on the boat fortunes thrown out to him, he followed the boat straight in the wake. The tug was going fifteen miles an hour, and the boats lowered for his relief had not time to reach him before, exhausted, or perhaps taken with a cramp, he went to the bottom."

The many beautiful poems that float through the newspapers "by B. H. BACON," were from his pen, and we learn from the Times that during the last few months he was engaged in arranging a volume for publication. The deceased was 37 years old, and was a graduate of Hamilton College, N. Y.

As long as the press is timid, careless or feeble in the discharge of its duties, it is the especial object of admiration to the corrupt and unscrupulous.—Statesman.

Then should the Statesman be of exceeding popularity, for a more "timid" or "feeble" specimen of pretension is not extant. Why, in the Douglas letter, which the Washington Constitution thought a cool piece of impudence, and an attempt to dictate terms—that the Chicago Herald says fairly and squarely reads the author out of the Democratic party—that the [illegible] wresting in Congress or out of it [illegible] of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made. [illegible] to [illegible] the Democratic party and dishonorable to [illegible] by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and to be supported Mr. Madison in the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adapt to those principles as not appearing one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in sincerity." Plain meaning and import. [illegible]

And thus we can more distinctly meet the [illegible] which a sectional party, subsisting entirely [illegible] on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and adopting the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution, as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treasonable resistance to law in the Territories, and which avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea filled the people of this whole country can repose in its determined consecration of the Union—NON-INTERVENTION BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1859.

SONNET—EARLY MORNING.

Crowned with thy new pearls, lo! the jewelled morn
Peeps coyly o'er the mist-crowned eastern hill;
I wot ere long she'll make the silvery rills,
That now lie sleeping 'neath pale maids forlorn
Smile as young mother when her firstling's born
And lay her finger on each flowret's lip
Softly as swallow in the pool doth dip
Its airy wing, till blushes rich adorn
Their tingling cheeks, and Flora sings for joy
Sweet morn! I would not now be dead in sleep,
[illegible] in crimson chariot fair,
For all the treasures of yon dim sea deep
O view sublime! O incense laden air!
With these compared wealth seems an idiot's toy

☞ We like a clever parody, and this is one. It very happily takes off Tennyson's "hideous form" [illegible] very open to ridicule:

THAT WAR.

There is a sound of drummin' away,
Sound in the streets at bright midday
Clang of kettle and thunder of brass.
D—d if it do not come our way.
Boom! boom! boom-a-lang, boom
Boom! boom! boom, boom, boom!
Boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom!

Peal your ears to the sound of boom!
Be not tossed by a tiger fiend!
Is wine of bravo, or oil of clams?
How about a lobster set down free.
Boom! boom! boom-a-lang, boom:
Boom! boom! boom, boom, boom!
Boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom!

Let your young ones a moment go:
Look to your cornsticks, bring 'em in line:
Better a kitten, [illegible]
Than a sardine rooted by foreign swine!
Boom! boom! boom-a-lang, boom:
Boom! boom! boom, boom, boom!
Boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom!

March, be ready to stew or fry;
March, though it may be all for greens:
True that we have a faithful fryer.
But the Devil knows if he knows beans!
[illegible]
Boom! boom! boom, boom, boom!
Boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom-a-lang! boom!
[Boston Post.

A Tight Place.

The last steeple-chase heard of, is that between an intoxicated Irishman, one Patrick Ryan, at Rockford, Illinois, and a young lady named Le Roy, of that place, which occurred on the 18th. It seems that Miss Le Roy, who keeps house on Main street, near the hill, for her brother, James Le Roy, the attorney, was seated in the kitchen on Saturday morning, about half-past 9 o'clock, when she heard the sound of a person chopping wood in the yard. On looking out of the window, she discovered a man, stripped entirely naked, walking toward the door, with a large ax in his hand, and acting in a wild and exciting manner. Notwithstanding her alarm at the unwonted sight, she retained presence of mind enough to lock the front and back doors, and to run up stairs to her bedroom, where she locked herself in. Presently she heard the madman—for such she was now convinced he was—breaking in the back door, a job he accomplished in a short time. Once in the house, he went around in an aimless manner to upset everything he could lay his hands on. He ramaged the drawers, overturned the chairs, tore papers, set things out of their places, but without any apparent intention either to rob or destroy. He entered Mr. Le Roy's bedroom and broke open a satchel containing some law papers, which he tore; he pulled out the drawer of the washstand, the contents of which he threw about, and committed other similar follies. All this time Miss Le Roy sat in her bedroom, trembling with terror, and hoping against hope that he would pass by her door without attempting to enter; but it seems that the lunatic, with a cunning not unusual in such cases, was all the while aware of her whereabouts, and finally came to her chamber door and demanded admittance. She not answering, he again called upon her to open the door, or if not he would break it down, and kill her when he got inside. The terrified woman kept still, and was almost frantic with terror at the prospect before her. At length the mad man, grown impatient, dashed in the chamber door, and sprang into the room, ax in hand. Miss Le Roy, scarcely knowing what she was about, opened the window and jumped to the ground below, a distance of some twenty feet, and ran for the fence, which is some four feet high, and with an agility that is truly surprising, as she is a small, delicate woman, sprang over it with a bound, and ran across the cornfield toward the river, calling for help. The madman had cunning enough not to follow Miss Le Roy out of the window, but ran down stairs, on which he dropped his ax, but on arriving in the yard he procured a club and gave chase to the flying woman. She kept on running, the naked madman at her heels, until she got across another fence, when she fell on a heap of sand, and her would-be murderer on top of her—the blow he had intended for her, falling on the sand. He recovered himself immediately, and was about aiming another blow at her head, when several men who were in an adjoining field came to her assistance, and seized the lunatic before the blow fell.—It was almost a miracle that Miss Le Roy was not brutally murdered. He has been building a house on some property owned by Mr. Jesse Blinn, but for the last ten days he has been on a drunken spree, which had given him a fit of delirium tremens. On Saturday morning, while still laboring under the effects of his debauch, he went to get his tools at Mr. Leonard's, and then proceeded to a piece of plowed ground on Main street, stripped all his clothing from his person, and naked as when he was born, proceeded to Mr. Le Roy's house, where the scene we have described took place.

Milan.

Milan, the capital of Lombardy, has a population of about 160,000 persons, not including the Austrian garrison and the strangers temporarily resident there. It is situated in a wide open plain, between the Olona and Saveso rivers, tributaries of the river Po. It has been the scene of many a conflict of arms between rival nations, and has, at different times, been under the dominion of Spain, Austria and France. It was twice captured by the French, and in 1805 the first Napoleon made it the Capital of the Kingdom of Italy. By the treaty of 1818, it was restored to Austria, with the adjoining territory.

Milan is a very ancient city, being founded 400 years before the Christian era. It was inhabited and embellished by many of the Roman Emperors, and has been the birth-place of many eminent men, including a number of Popes. It was several times almost destroyed during the wars which desolated the European Continent. It now contains many fine public buildings, and the Cathedral, begun in 1836, is one of the finest in the world. It also contains the Church of St. Ambrogio, where the Emperors of Germany were crowned. The city is nearly of a circular shape, enclosed on three sides by a wall, surrounded by ramparts, nearly eight miles in circumference, and entered by ten gates. It is distant from Vienna about 400 miles.

☞ Sympathy is much more catching than intelligence. Anybody can feel, but everybody cannot understand. Hence, pity for a person brought into distress by his own acts, often outweighs all the conviction produced by a knowledge of his crimes.

The Procession.

For a week past there have been vague rumors in circulation of a contemplated demonstration of some kind by the mysterious Maltese Order; and, within a day or two, these reports had assumed a character sufficiently definite to enable us to announce, on last Wednesday morning, the mystic brotherhood would appear upon our streets in full uniform that night.—Accordingly, at half an hour before the "noon of night," the Sons of Malta, (or, at least, who we suppose were such—everything was so much under cover, we have no surety) sallied forth from their Lodge Room in Timpany's Block, to commemorate by a solemn procession, as we have since learned, a momentous epoch in the ancient history of the Order; one of the most brilliant of its old-time military demonstrations—achieved, unfortunately, at the cost of the lives of many of its noblest coofreres, and among them its chief, in whose honor the annual remembrance of the day was decreed by the Supreme Council of Ten. The procession pushed its way through the chief thoroughfares of the city, accompanied by dense masses of men, women and children, who thronged every street from side-walk to center through which it passed. The dirge notes of the band of the Order—the singular uniform and trappings of the mounted Marshals—the richly ornamented robes of the dignitaries, contrasting with the ghostly monotony of the alternating black and white robed brethren; taken altogether, rendered the affair to outsiders a strange compound of the weird-like, grotesque and impressive. The procession numbered some three hundred, and was formed as follows:

Marshals on Horseback.
Banner.
Guards in white robes with scarlet facings.
Band.
Maltese Book and Seal, guarded by Knights with drawn swords.
Banner.
Guards. Grand Commander. Guards.
Council of Ten in white robes and cowls.
Pall Bearers. { Coffin containing relics of Vallette. } Pall Bearers.
Banner.
Guards. Vice Grand Chancellor. Guards.
Brethren alternately in white robes and black cowls and black robes and white cowls.
Banner.
Guard. Chancellor. Guard.
Brethren as Before.
Guards.

They paraded down town to Chestnut street, and up town to the Oliver House, where they were greeted with a salute of 13 guns from the Artillery Regiment of the Order. Returning to the Collins House a splendid collation was served in the spacious dining-room of that popular hotel, and the manner in which the viands disappeared showed that the long walk had given the Sons a good appetite.—Toledo Herald, June 24.

Avoiding the Responsibility.

Brothers Crump and Noel were members of the church, and both clever, honest men, who paid their taxes and debts, as the same annually occurred, with a regularity at once Christian and commendable. If, when the settling day came round, Brother Noel was "short," Brother Crump was sure to be in funds, and, on the other hand, it almost seemed Providential how, if Brother Crump fell "behind," Brother Noel always had a surplus. Thus, borrowing from and lending to each other, worshipping at the same church and living a mile apart, an intimacy gradually ripened between them; so at last they did not hesitate to speak in the frankest and most familiar manner to each other, even in regard to their respective foibles.

Now, it came to pass that Brother Crump during the liveliest period of the cotton season, drove into Wetumpka and disposed of his crop of ten bales, at the very fair price of twelve and a half cents per pound. It was more than he expected, and, as the world was easy with him, he determined to invest, and did actually invest a portion of the proceeds of the sale of the cotton, in a barrel of Western whisky, paying therefor at the rate of precisely two pounds of middling cotton for one gallon of "do" whisky. Of course it was known in the settlement that old Crump had bought a whole barrel, and after a few weeks, people began to observe that his nose grew redder and his eyes more moist. The idea that Brother Crump was drinking too much, diffused itself in the neighborhood, until, as one might say, it became epidemical. People talked and talked—more especially what few of other denominations of Christians there were thereabout.

Brother Noel was sore troubled at the scandal, and especially regretted the injury it brought to society at Sharon. So one morning he stepped over to Brother Crump's and found the old man in a doze on the little porch.

"Won't you take a dram?" asked Brother Crump, as soon as he was made aware of the presence of his neighbor. "Why, yes; I'm not agin a dram when a body wants it."

Brother Crump got his bottle, and the friends took a dram apiece. "Don't you think, Brother Noel," said Crump, "that sperits is a blessin'?" "Yes," replied Noel, "sperits is a blessin' that some of us abuses." "Well, now, Brother Noel, who do you think abuses the blessin'?" "Well," it is hard to say—but people talk—don't you think that you drink a little too much, Brother Crump?" "It is hard to say," returned Crump. "Sometimes I've thought I was a drinkin' too much, and then agin I'd think maybe not. What is man? A weak worrum of the dust! So I left it to the Lord to say whether I was a goin' too far in sperits. I put the whole 'sponsibility on him; I prayed, ef I was drinkin' too much, for him to take away my appetite for sperits." Here Brother Noel groaned piously, and asked, "What then, Brother Crump?" "And," replied Crump, "I've prayed that prayer three times, and he hain't done it. So I'm clear of the 'sponsibility, any way."

"The Lord's will be done!" ejaculated Noel, and, after taking another dram, he went home, thinking all the way how cleverly Brother Crump had cleared the responsibility.

The Italian Quadrille.

AS DANCED BETWEEN THE FRENCH AND AUSTRIAN ARMIES.

The following have been the movements of the two armies for the last ten days:

The Austrians advance.
The French retire.
The French advance
The Austrians retire.
They change sides and repeat.
They fire down the middle.
They join arms, cross bayonet, seize each other in the best way they can, and chasses croisee.
Both balances to take breath.
Opposite sides advance, meet halfway, salute, and retire.
Cavalier seul by Louis Napoleon.
Cavalier seul by Victor Emanuel.
Cavalier seul by Gen. Gyulai.
General Ronde d'hilarite.
Grand galop round the country.

As soon as the quadrille is over, they begin again.—Punch.

We rather think the more recent quadrilles have included a pas seul by Austria.

☞ To owe an obligation to a worthy friend, is a happiness, and can be no disparagement.

Cost of Russian Furs.

We now alight at one of the 650 shops of the Gastinoo Dvor. It is a furrier's—a good looking man, in the prime of his days, comes forward with a graceful slide, and a bow, and a smile, and opens the door from within. He wears the national caftan and beard, and his hair is parted down the middle of his head, and he altogether looks exactly like what our fashionable "men about town" may be supposed to look in their dressing-gowns, for the style of the chevelure and beard of both are the same, and, in conjunction with a flowing garb like the caftan, is highly becoming. This furrier is intelligent; he speaks German and French fluently, and appeared "well up" in the literature of both. He is, beside, a first rate Sclavonic scholar, and possesses some valuable manuscripts in that language, as well as several exquisitely illumined works on parchment, which are very old. He was very particular in explaining the difference in the dressing of Russian and foreign furs. It appears that the Russians redress all furs that they import.—This magazine seemed to be the head depot of fine furs. Here were Russian sables at a truly imperial price, but of a quality one rarely sees exposed for sale out of Russia. Sables of different kinds is the fur most in vogue with the nobility for cloak linings. The next in favor is fox. But the very beau ideal of good taste and extravagance in the way of a winter luxury of this kind is a plain, dark velvet or brocade exterior, with a sable lining and a collar (or rather a small cape) of silver grey fox. I have seen such a cloak, the lining composed of sable tails—the cost of which was 900 guineas! A very common price for a winter cloak, among both sexes of the nobility, is £100. A superlative fox lining may be purchased at from ten to sixteen guineas, and a rich Siberian squirrel, with the fur long, thick and soft, and consisting of about 200 skins, for five guineas. Inferior fur of this description is much used to line the winter great coats of footmen, and is proportionably cheaper. The English generally have an idea that the Russian in his winter garb is a moving mountain of fur. Nothing can be more erroneous. Scarcely is fur to be seen but in the collar of the cloak or mantle, the narrow strip round the cap of the priest or child, and round the sledge covers, though a few of these are used with the bear's fur outside—as also are the hamer-covers. All Russians, from the Czar to the poorest peasant, wear the fur side of their winter wraps next to the person.—Six Years Travel in Russia by an English Lady.

Guillotine Execution in Paris.

The Paris correspondent of the Boston Traveller, gives the particulars of the execution of Nicholas Parons by the guillotine: [illegible]

It was painted red throughout, and consisted of a staging accessible by a flight of stairs, and rising some six feet from the ground, the summit surrounded by a low rail. In the center of the floor thus offered were planted two stout uprights, a foot and a half apart, and eight or ten high. These were grooved for the passage of the knife—a broad, dull blade, weighing, as I was informed, one hundred and fifty pounds—which was drawn up and attached to the cross-piece above, ready to descend on the pressure of a spring. On the floor, and facing the interval between these posts, is placed a long, low frame-work or car, which runs forward on grooves, and a plank hinged to one extremity of this car falls forward upon it. In preparing for an execution, this plank is raised so as to be at right angles to the car, and the criminal, on ascending the steps, is marched forward against the plank. Being suddenly pushed from behind, he falls with the plank upon the car, and the pressure of his body causes clamps to spring over him from below, effectually restraining all movement. The same impulse gives motion to the car, which glides rapidly forward, and the lunette (a half circle of wood) at once imprisoning the neck, the axe descends.

As the clock struck eight, the gates of the prison opened and two men in black came forward, supporting between them the criminal—a short, athletic man—his throat and chest bared, and his head uncovered. He mounted the scaffold with an uncertain and faltering step, fell for a moment on his knees, and then, rising, was marched up to the upright plank.—The execution and his assistant took hold of him from behind, and, at a given signal, pushed him forward on the car. We heard the rumbling of the wheels, the click of the lunette, and saw a man standing behind the posts grasp hold of the head, to steady it. The dull fall of the knife next reached our ears, and we saw a headless body lifted into a box, which stood ready to receive it. This was at once lifted into a cart and driven from the ground. I have described the deed minutely, but the length of the account gives no idea of the actual rapidity. Not a minute and a half elapsed from the time that the criminal appeared at the gate of the prison before his body was hurried from the spot.

About Gold.—The Russian gold mines extend over one-third of the circumference of the globe, between the parallels of 50 deg. 58 min. north latitude. Those of North America extend from 34 to 42 deg. of north latitude, upon the Pacific coast. Those of Australia extend from 34 to 37 deg. of south latitude. The Russian mines were discovered in 1819; the California in April 1848, and the Australian in February, 1851. The finest gold is obtained at Ballarat, and the largest nugget in the world weighs twenty-two hundred and seventeen ounces, and is valued at forty-one thousand dollars. In shape it resembles a continent with a peninsula attached by a narrow isthmus.

Of the $3,000,000,000 of gold now in existence, twenty-five hundred millions is estimated to be in gold coin and bullion, and the remainder in watches, jewelry, plate, &c. The product of the Russian mines, since their discovery to the close of 1858, has been estimated to amount to six hundred and seventy-two millions of dollars, of which three hundred and two millions have been obtained since 1850. The product of the California mines to the same period, has amounted to seven hundred and forty-eight millions of dollars, and of the Australia to six hundred and forty-two millions.

From experiments made at the United States mint, it has been ascertained that the wear and tear of half-eagles ($5 pieces) is a tenth of one per cent per annum; eagles ($10 pieces) exhibit less, and quarter-eagles ($2½ pieces) exhibit more.—Boston Transcript.

Subtract from a great man all that he owes to opportunity and all that he owes to chance—all that he has gained by the wisdom of his friends and by the folly of his enemies—and the giant will often be left a pigmy.

"What is the best guard against an adversary?" said a pupil in the art of self-defense to his teacher, a noted pugilist.—"Keep a civil tongue in your head," was the unexpected and significant reply.

A physician told his patient that he could cure his toothache by simply holding a certain root in his right hand. "What root?" asked the sufferer. "The root of the aching tooth." [illegible]

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

THE HEROES OF INDUSTRY.

BY G. P. B.

Let others write of those who fought
On many a bloody field—
Of those, whose daring deeds were wrought
With sword, and spear, and shield.
But I will write of heroes bold,
The bravest of the brave,
Who fought for neither fame nor gold—
Who fill an unmarked grave.

Heroes who conquered many a field
Of hard and sterile soil—
Who made the sturdy forest yield
To unremitting toil;
Heroes who did not idly stand,
But dealt such fearful blows,
That acres, broad, of worthless land
Now blossom like the rose

The heroes of the plow and loom,
The anvil and the forge;
The delvers down amid the gloom
Of yonder rocky gorge
Heroes who built you lofty tower,
And forged its heavy bell,
Which faithfully proclaims the hour,
And marks its flight so well.

Heroes who brought from every clime
Rich argosies of wealth;
Heroes of thought and deeds sublime,
Who spurned what came by stealth;
Who won a garden fair and bright,
And left no blood-stain—
No hearth profaned—no deadly blight—
Upon God's wide domain.

These world-wide common workers have
No laurel wreath of fame—
No monument above their grave
They toiled but for a name
Among the lowly ones who plod
Their weary way along,
With faith and confidence that God
Correcteth every wrong

Curing Green Corn.—The following is the Indian method by which they treat green corn for making succotash, &c., during winter. When the green corn is fit for use, a pit is dug from two to three feet in diameter at top, and gradually enlarging it at bottom, say five feet down, from six to eight feet in diameter. A large fire is then built near by, on which stones are heated, and when red-hot the stones and live coals are shoveled into the bottom of the pit, and sprinkled over with fine loose dirt. The corn is then thrown in with the husks on, just as it is pulled from the stalk, until the pit is nearly full.—Then comes a thin layer of loose dirt, then hot stones, (enough to close the pit,) and the whole covered with earth to retain the heat. When the whole cools off, (which takes several days,) the pit is opened and the corn is found to be most delightfully cooked. When cool, the husks are stripped off and the corn dried in the sun; when thoroughly dried the corn is shelled off easily, and is then packed away in bags for use.

Fire Grates and Chimneys.—A commission, appointed by the Board of Health in England, consisting of Mr. Fairbairn and Professors Wheatstone and Playfair, have made a report on grates and fire places, in which they recommend some changes. They urge for all parlor grates the use of a greater amount of reflecting surface, to direct more heat into the room, and they advise the flue of the chimney to be much smaller than those in common use—a reform which we have also frequently advocated. They state that the flue of a chimney does not require to be made more than nine inches in diameter at its widest point; a narrow chimney diminishes the quantity of ascending air and a tendency to smoke. Chimneys always draw better when they are kept warm; therefore, wherever it is possible, they should not be built on the outer walls of houses, such as gables. As a general rule the grate should be situated at such a position in the fire-place where it can be seen from the greatest number of points in the room, and a good frontage of fire-surface should always be exposed.—Scientific American.

Coal Ashes as Manure.—Thousands of tons of ashes might be obtained in cities, where coal is extensively employed as fuel, which, when applied to the soil, would doubtless greatly augment its productive powers. It is stated in "Faulkner's Farmers Manual," an English publication on manures, that coal ashes contain a sulphate of lime with some potash and soda, all of which are known, when separately applied, to produce a good effect on clover crops, and to constitute an important part of the food of all grasses.

The following experiment by an English farmer, may shed some light on the subject: The ground selected contained three perches of clover; the first had no manure, and produced thirty-eight pounds when cut in full head; the second, where four quarts of sifted coal ashes, which had not been exposed to the weather, were applied, the produce was fifty pounds; on the third perch, one quart of plaster was sown, and the crop weighed fifty-four pounds. It will be seen that the ashes increased the clover nearly one-quarter, above that on which no manure was applied which goes to prove that this substance is a valuable fertilizer. Coal is said to be of vegetable origin; therefore, we can see no reason why its ashes should not contain the food of plants. Experiments on various soils and crops might be made by any farmer at a small expense, as coal is employed as fuel in nearly every town.

Salt as a Fertilizer.—We have often used salt as a fertilizer, but have not pursued the experiment with sufficient accuracy to make them worthy of note.—So we refer to others, and find plenty of evidence that salt may be used as a fertilizer where it can be obtained at low rates, where it is dirty or in a damaged state so as to make it unfit for common purposes.

Salt renders dry loams more susceptible of absorbing moisture from the air, and this is of great importance, because those soils which absorb the greatest proportion of water from the atmosphere, are always the most valuable to the cultivator. On heavy undrained lands it would not act beneficially.

When sprinkled slightly over manure heaps it checks the escape of the carbonate of the ammonia, and tends to prevent undue fermentation. It not only acts on vegetation as a stimulant, but serves as a direct constituent or food of some kinds of plants.

Applied to grain crops on light soil, at the rate of 560 pounds to the acre, salt increases the produce of seed, and very much improves its weight to the bushel, and quality. On grass land and clover, salt has a good effect, rendering the herbage more palatable to stock.

Mangold wurtzel, manured with salt mixed with farm-yard dung, at the rate of ten or twelve bushels, or even more an acre, grows luxuriantly. It would undoubtedly be useful on a barley crop, because the soil adapted to that plant, is the kind of soil most benefited by salt.

We do not doubt but that salt at twenty cents, and air-slacked lime at eight cents a bushel, would be profitable on land where they are actually needed.—N. B. Farmer.

The Oil of Peppermint.—There are several plants which yield fragrant oils when distilled with steam. Among this class peppermint holds a high place on account of its exhilarating as well as its aromatic qualities. About three thousand acres of it are under cultivation in this country, viz., 1,000 in New York and Ohio, and 2,000 in St. Joseph's County, Michigan, which appears to be its head-quarters. It is raised exclusively for its oil, about 7 lbs. of which is the average yield for an acre of plant, the price being $2,60 per lb. The roots of the peppermint are planted thickly in rows, between which spaces are left for the cultivator to pare. The plant is generally cut about the latter part of August, and placed in small cocks like those of hay, which are allowed to stand in the fields some days before being taken in for distillation.—Great care is exercised to prevent weeds growing among the plants so as to ensure a pure article of oil. The fields are plowed up and changed every five years; the first year's crop being generally the most abundant and the purest.

The apparatus for distilling peppermint oil consists of a boiler for raising steam, a still made of wood for receiving the charge of peppermint, a cooler for condensing the oil and a receiver into which it flows.—The whole apparatus is exceedingly simple. The plants are packed into the wooden still and trampled down with the feet; when a full charge is thus ready, the lid of the still is put on and steam admitted at the bottom by a pipe from the boiler. When the peppermint is heated to about 212° Fah., its essential oil passes over with the steam into a worm which is placed in a cooler; and as it condenses into oil and water, it then passes out of the worm into a connected receiver, where the oil, as it floats on the surface, is lifted out with dippers, placed in cans and is ready for sale.

The refuse mint taken from the still is placed in piles, dried, and then becomes tolerable fodder for sheep. About 12,000 lbs. of peppermint oil are shipped to England per annum, and the profits are about 18 per cent upon the capital invested and the labor required to carry on the entire business.

At the great French Exhibition of Industry held in Paris in 1855, samples of the oil of peppermint made in this country were exhibited, and were considered the best on exhibition.

POCKET BOOK LOST.

On the morning of the 4th, was lost a pocket book containing one $4 note, Virginia; $1 Ohio, and a $2 note on some other bank, together with a number of papers, memoranda, &c. The finder may retain the money for the returning the pocket book, at the Press office, or to the owner at Robbins & Dickinson's. JOHN O'HANLON.
July 7.

E. BASSETT LANGDON,
Attorney at Law.
CINCINNATI, OHIO,
☞ OFFICE—West Third street. [illegible]

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.

A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Bar and Restaurant supplied with the best of everything. June 2.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers.
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially Tiles, including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse-keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

LATEST BOOKS—
Results. By the author of Salad for the Solitary
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Steuben.
[illegible]
[illegible] Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Chintz, Delaines, Lawns, Bareges, Calicoes, Robes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles, Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets. J. C. CHITTENDEN.
May 12.

M. C. Boyer

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE!
CARPENTER'S BUILDING, COLUMBUS, OHIO
THE MOST THOROUGH & PRACTICAL INSTITUTION FOR YOUNG MEN PREPARING FOR BUSINESS IN THE COUNTRY.
S. I. McCOY - - - - Principal.

P. T. McCoy, Teacher of Book-keeping and Practical and Ornamental Penmanship.
Dan'l. Wheeler, Teacher of Book-keeping, Mathematics and English Grammar.
S. W. Andrews, Esq., Lecturer on the Laws of Business and Political Economy.

TERMS—Payable in advance:
[illegible] and unlimited course in all the departments, with the privilege of review at the students option [illegible] Students taken for a special course by the month, at per agreement.
The Principal has received the first premium for specimens of Practical and Ornamental Penmanship at many State and County Fairs, and at the U. S. Fair. He presents to the Public specimens of penmanship, and invites criticism and comparison with all other. He also invites the attention of those desiring a business course to the superior facilities which have prepared to offer students in all the departments essential to a thorough business-man's training.

Rooms Open Day and Evening.
Send for Circular and Specimens of Writing.
Address, SAM'L I. McCOY, Columbus, Ohio.

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS.
BLANK BOOKS,
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices,
supplied with any article, in the line of Stationery, on the best terms, and all Works warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
JOB PRINTING, BOOK BINDING.
A full supply, at all times, of Valuable Standard Works Foreign and American Editions.
A good stock of valuable Mechanical and Scientific Works at all Times. All the new Books received direct.
French, English and American Stationery
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.
Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors, from $ to $3; French Plate; Oil Paintings and Engravings, Portrait and Picture Frames of [illegible] made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens; Work Boxes and Dressing Cases, Card Cases and Porte Monnaies; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes; Pocket Books, Wallets, Bill Holders, &c., &c. June 16.

New Books.

FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
VIEWS and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederick Cozzens
SEACLIFF, or the Mystery of the Westervelts. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Asia, Asia and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland, (7 vols., cloth $ 00)
The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novelette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Southwold (a Novel.) By Mrs. Lillie Devereux Umsted.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Works of Micheal De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt, 4 vols.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.
DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law, from 5th London Edition.
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, New Ed. with additions.
Spain. By Wm. Cullen Bryant.
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Onward.
Sixty Years' Gleanings
The Foster Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Trevelian and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Arago's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store. J. H. RILEY & Co.

1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs
Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.
The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles North of Columbus (the Capital of Ohio) on the Scioto river, 10 miles from Delaware, 5 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburgh Railroad, and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Rail road.
The medical qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States.
For Room or other information, address
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio
June 16

DESHLER ICE.
Charles G. Deshler is serving his numerous customers with Superior Ice. He attends to its delivery in person; and the ice is not more punctual. His carriages will run throughout the season.
June 16.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs
VIA THE
CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.
To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 4:30 A. M., and 1:30 P. M., daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis Centre station, which is situated fifteen miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the springs. For the accommodation of persons wishing to spend the Sabbath at the Springs, the night freight leaving Columbus at 6:30 P. M. on Saturday, will leave passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.

RETURNING.
Cincinnati Express will stop for passengers going south, at Lewis Centre Station, at 8:00 A. M., on MONDAY MORNINGS ONLY, arriving in Columbus at 8:30 A. M. The Mail train will stop daily at 4:35 P. M., arriving in Columbus at 5:30 P. M.
Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages in readiness at all times to convey passengers between the cars and Springs. Passengers can rely upon being taken to the Springs promptly on arrival of trains.
The citizens of Columbus will find this the most convenient way to go to the springs.
Tickets for the round trip, to the Station and back during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.
For further information and tickets, inquire at the ticket office in the Depot.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.
Columbus, June 22, 1859—3m.

PROPOSED
AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.
RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.
Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October State election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of this State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."
WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.
April 5, 1859.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
Columbus, O., April 7, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.
A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO,
COLUMBUS, April 12, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.
JOHN GRAHAM,
Auditor of Franklin County.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual Diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

DR. STEWART
WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, and CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of these so-called hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.

He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are then some hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact.

Columbus is a centre location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian tribes, when this continent was discovered.

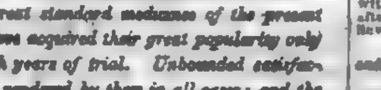
Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a remedy, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable inks, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection; or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!

Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.

DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any Physician in the State. Particular attention given to Leucorrhea, and Discharges from the Ear, and affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.



Cases given up by others solicited. He will forfeit $100 for any of the following he cannot cure:

Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 25,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from Cold in the Bowels.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called Everybody's Almanac, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Agnel's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Missoury's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.
CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10½ a. m. to 12 m.
One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make the Saloon one of the best in the city.

Fever and Ague,
from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the Chill. But in this effort it fails. Then the Fever follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory — the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of Fever and Ague. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,

Ayer's Ague Cure,
which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "Ague Cure" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "Ague Cure" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
Price One Dollar per Bottle.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral
has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

For Costiveness;
For the Cure of Dyspepsia;
For Jaundice;
For the Cure of Indigestion;
For Headache;
For the Cure of Dysentery;
For a Foul Stomach;
For the Cure of Erysipelas;
For The Piles;
For the Cure of Scrofula;
For all Scrofulous Complaints;
For the Cure of Rheumatism;
For Diseases of the Skin;
For the Cure of Liver Complaint;
For Dropsy;
For the Cure of Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum;
For Worms;
For the Cure of Gout;
For a Dinner Pill;
For the Cure of Neuralgia;
For Purifying the Blood.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our American Almanac in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand Ayer's, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by
☞ For sale by Roberts & Samuel, No. 34 North High St., Columbus; Boyd, Ruckert & Co., Cincinnati; Wm. Franks, Cleveland; W. A. Graham, Zanesville; and by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine everywhere. feb1-1y.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them, has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose evidence carries weight to the judgment and philosophy, after the conviction weight to the community, men who observe, reflect, and make assurance doubly sure, are now testifying, approving and urging the use of these Scandinavian Preparations. All who trouble to the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.
These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:
That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;
That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,
with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,
and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,
who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,
however they may have been tried with undermined, that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,
and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,
and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,
And that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and, (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victim of ill health. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and to expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1, per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In all cases of complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, No. 6 East Fourth St., 3d building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY
Roberts & Samuel, Columbus.
Aug. J. Schueller, Columbus.
J. Denig & Son, Columbus.
[illegible], Canal Winchester.
Isaac Thompson, Worthington
R. B. Johnson, Reynoldsburg.
[illegible], Clintonville.
[illegible], Westerville.
Henry Miller, Harrisburg.
John Mason, Grove City.
Geo. W. Evans, Dublin.
And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.
[illegible]

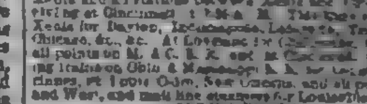
Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.
Great Northern & Eastern Route,
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore,
Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad.
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 2:35 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of Galion, stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and at stations north of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7:10 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh arriving at Pittsburgh at 5:30 p. m. Also with same road at Crestline, with the 6:30 a. m. Express for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 8:40 p. m. Also at Galion with Toledo road for Toledo, [illegible] at Cleveland at 10:30 a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 10:30 a. m. stopping only at Delaware, North Lewisburg, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Olmsted, connecting at Crestline with the 1:05 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh arriving at Pittsburgh at 8:10 p. m.; arriving at Cleveland 2:30 p. m., connecting at 3:20 p. m. with the fast Express on Lake Shore road for New York arriving at Erie at 6:45 p. m., Dunkirk 8:30 p. m., Buffalo 10:30 p. m., New York 1:00 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of any other line, Boston 4:00 p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.



THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at 1:00 p. m. stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:30 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 11:15 a. m. at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston, arriving at Erie 1:15 a. m., Dunkirk 2:10 a. m., Buffalo 4:00 a. m.

☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.
Night Express, arrives at Columbus 1:30 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 8:30 a. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 4:35 p. m.

Fare as low as by any other Route.
For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty, Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. & X. Railroads.
A. H. FLINT,
Superintendent, Cleveland, Ohio.
H. C. MARSHALL,
Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent,
Columbus, Ohio.
Columbus, May 12, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.
ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11 1859, Four Trains Daily, Sundays excepted, from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling

FIRST TRAIN
(DAILY)
NIGHT EXPRESS—At 2:15 a. m., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 8:00 a. m. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland for Cincinnati, Hillsboro and all points on M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and mail line steamers for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
NO. 1 EXPRESS—At 10:40 A. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Loveland (and on signal at Milford,) and Plainville, arriving at Cincinnati at 1:45 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c., &c.

THIRD TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At 2:40 P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Loveland, Milford, and Plainville arriving at Cincinnati at 7:15 P. M. connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., &c., and at Cincinnati with the evening train on the [illegible] for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
MAIL—At 4:00 P. M., stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at 10:00 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.
Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express 4:00 A. M., No. 1 Express 1:00 p. m., No. 2 Express 10:20 p. m., accommodation 5:30 p. m.
☞ For further information and Through Ticket apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.
J. DURAND,
Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER,
General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY,
Agent, Columbus, O.
Columbus, May 12, 1859.

[illegible] from 1,500 tons to [illegible] the [illegible] which he was to be [illegible] proved voyages.—London Times.

The Sickles Case Again—The Husband's Sickles and Wife have resumed their Relations.

The Hon. Daniel E. Sickles has made known to his most intimate friends, informing them that he has resumed his marital relations with his wife. The letters were written [illegible] and to-day, and in consequence of the story that months ago he resumed the relation in the most intimate form. The story, which we have excellent authority, is that

Mrs. Sickles, during and since the trial, resided at her outraged husband's own house, situated on Fifteenth avenue, [illegible] from Bloomingdale road, between Eighty- and Ninetieth streets, and overlooking the river. Thomas C. Fields, the Public Administrator of the city, and intimate friend of Sickles, took a house about June 1st, within three-quarters of a mile or so above Sickles' village, and on a private avenue leading from Bloomingdale road. Mr. [illegible] had not been long in his new quarters before his friend Daniel requested the privilege of occupying a room there, which [illegible] granted.

It was, however, soon observed that he was in the habit of leaving the house when lodged, late at night and returning early in the morning. How often he did this it is impossible to say. But at length suspicion was aroused, and fixed in the right direction. A few mornings ago Mr. Field happened to meet with Mr. Emanuel B. Hart, whom you remember as a fast and tearful friend of the husband's side during the trial; whom should they see but Mr. Sickles on his return from his morning walk. They asked him where he had been. His friends de. He fixed up, and gave answer, reporting that it was none of their business [illegible] Fields, "it is my [illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., The People's Press, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

The People's Press will inculcate Democratic truths and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statements relied on for their undeviating veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, but consistently pursue the course for which it is established: honest government, the maintenance of [illegible] contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disruption—while it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the duty, (it must know that it is Democratic and not a false light held up to illude, perhaps to betray)—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, The People's Press presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and uses every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to secure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year $2 00
A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; 12½ per cent on clubs of twenty; 15 per cent on clubs of thirty, and 20 per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address. J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March 23, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS
Received for six months at One Dollar in advance.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS
Will be sent for the campaign, to subscribers, at Fifty Cents for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS
May be formed for the Press at the following rates:

Five Copies	$2 00
Ten	3 00
Twenty	5 00
Fifty	[illegible]
One hundred copies	[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1859. NUMBER 11.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL, Editor.

TERMS — $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 6 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion	$1,00
Each additional insertion	[illegible]
One square 3 months	[illegible]
" " 6 "	[illegible]
" " 12 "	[illegible]
One fourth of a column per year	[illegible]
" half " " "	[illegible]
" column " "	100,00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements headed and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year $10,00

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the People of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintainance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, [illegible] a fugitive slave from the South the highest office in one [illegible] and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

Naturalization.

The letter of Gov. WISE, which we gave to our readers last week, takes the American ground of the controversy, and it seems to us, the only ground upon which an American statesman can stand. He shows that the naturalized American citizen can owe no allegiance to his native government—that he can owe no military service, which is purely political, and that he is not more amenable to the municipal laws of foreign governments than a native American, and that in consideration of his oath of allegiance, the full protection of this government is due him. He says that Gen. CASS has adopted the old Federal Whig doctrine advanced by Mr. EVERETT, on the authority of Wheaton, and that it is Anti-Democratic. He dissents in toto, and we think very properly.

Our own views have been expressed very fully on the subject, and it is not necessary to repeat them. We were surprised that a Democratic Administration did not avail itself of this opportunity to declare a different policy, and distinctly assert the determination to resent any attempt to force an American citizen who had renounced all allegiance, into the service of a foreign country under the pretext that he owed such service. To have done so, would have been a most popular move, and secured for the Administration the regard of numbers of naturalized citizens who have reason to apprehend that there is a want of disposition on its part to guard and protect their rights to which the government is pledged in requiring the oath of allegiance.

ANOTHER SUPPOSED VICTIM.—It is supposed that G. W. MOORE, who resided in the vicinity of Richmond, Va., was one of the victims of the late disaster near South Bend, on the Michigan Southern railroad. He left Rock Island for the east in time to connect with the train of the night, and has not been heard of since. In the list of the unknown is a very perfect description of him.

☞ The dividend of 5 per cent., declared by the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad Company, will be payable on the 1st of August.

Millerism.

The State Journal ought to know something of Millerism. It was erewhile under MILLER auspices, which was considered a good arrangement—the MILLERS grinding the organs of the two parties at the capital of the great State of Ohio! But the State Journal was not making money fast enough to satisfy the Brothers MILLER who were joint proprietors, and it did not look well for the Statesman under TOM, to be disputing the ward of the Journal under JOHN and HARRY and the latter turned their attention to something else. In the necessary intercourse with the MILLERS the State Journal should be supposed to know something about Millerism. We will take it for granted. That paper thinks the Millerites (that is TOM's portion of them) will throw JOHNNY PHILLIPS overboard because he acquiesced in giving to Franklin county one of the very best Commissioners it could possible have, in THOMAS SPARROW. It says:

"The Coxites are furious, and the Millerites, who have done so much for both Phillips and Cox, are in a quandary which of the two to throw overboard. They can't with any degree of consistency adhere to both. Phillips will probably be the victim, for his concurrence in the appointment of Mr. Sparrow has satisfied them that he cannot be relied upon in an emergency. They will probably try to defeat his renomination in Convention. If he should be nominated in spite of them, we imagine he will get but little aid and comfort from them."

It is thus that Coxism and Millerism enter into the affairs of the whole county. Cox and TOM MILLER both hate Mr. SPARROW with a most evident and unmitigated hate. They have done what they could to injure him, and therefore hate him. He stands aloof from them and treats them and their schemes with contempt and they hate him. He is a just and true man and they hate him. Cox lied to him, pretending to be his friend, when he was teasing BUCHANAN to appoint TOM MILLER in his place! Therefore Cox will never forgive him for detecting the rascality of the unscrupulous little trickster!

The Millerites will not attempt to throw either Cox or PHILLIPS overboard. Our morning cotemporary is in error. Cox is "one of 'em," and is a necessary partner in all their schemes. He belongs to them body and breeches, for soul he has none. But while they cannot spare Cox, who is their lead dog, they will not openly break with PHILLIPS. They would like to resent this contumely on his part, this departure from the traces, but they can't do without his popularity. They can't defeat his nomination; for it will be doubtless made, however much they would like to defeat it. But they will never forget or forgive. JOHNNY PHILLIPS in making an inventory of his effects may include among the items TOM MILLER's legacy of implacable hostility and determined vengeance. His name will be scratched; and hereafter if he can hope for success, TOM MILLER will be found playing a similar game to PHILLIPS that he did to DR. MOLLEER, whose nomination he and his clique opposed, and then opposed him after he was nominated. Yet this is the leader of the Democratic party of Franklin!

There will be nothing overt in the Millerite opposition to PHILLIPS—but there will be lots of underhanded opposition. Mr. PHILLIPS may congratulate himself that this show of independence on his part of the Miller influence, will relieve him of the suspicion that some entertained that he was too much under their control and dominance, which was seriously damaging his prestige. He can laugh to scorn TOM's present vengeance.—[Fact.

Leasing the Public Works.

The time is rapidly approaching when the Public Works of Ohio are to be put up at auction on the steps of the Capitol and knocked down to the highest bidder, provided a previous contract shall have been entered into, that the bid shall be bona fide, and its terms punctually adhered to. That there are parties ready to undertake to discharge the obligations now devolving upon the State, and pay the State a bonus for the privilege, we shall not undertake to assert, but the Statesman was engaged last Spring in reading prominent Democrats out of the party, because they were unwilling to throw away this important State interest, or let TOM MILLER & Co. have them for a song. Whether the terms are such as will satisfy the grasping avarice of the unselfish and public spirited Democrats who manage the Statesman, we are not apprised. Nor do we know that they will have competition. The Legislature wisely provided the minimum at which they would be let, and make the Board of Public Works the umpire as to the nature and sufficiency of the security. The last notice the Statesman took of the subject was to quarrel with the Board about the kind of security demanded, and threatening to make them take such as TOM MILLER & Co. were ready to offer.

There is a fortune in the Public Works, if parties with sufficient capital choose to make the investment. There is some risk, and that is what the Statesman follows hate. They would grab all, if they could so manage it, without risk. If private enterprise and attention can carry on the Public Works and make all necessary repairs so much more cheaply than the Board of Public Works, there is a fortune to those who may choose to undertake their management.

We hope that the subject may not be permitted to pass entirely out of the public mind, although we as sincerely wish that no disposition may be made of them.—[Fact.

SCREWED DOWN A LITTLE.—Ichabod Corwin, Esq., who was spoken of by certain country Republican papers for Lieut. Governor, has at last concluded to run for Prosecuting Attorney of Champaign County. If he is elected, we hope he will confine himself to his own business, and not get up any more run-away nigger scrapes, to involve the people of this County and Champaign in another difficulty with the United States authorities, by which they were made to pay over a thousand dollars taxes for expenses. He, in common with a few Republican politicians of Clark county, was the gentleman who participated so actively in those rescue cases.—Ohio Press.

One of the present editors of the Statesman wanes deep in the mud as Ich. CORWIN, and contended that the "Clark County rescuers" were right. When he exhorts so justly against the Oberlin rescuers, we cannot help thinking that circumstances do alter cases, and the Austrian editor of the Statesman is a nice discriminator to distinguish between one set of rescuers and another.—[Fact.

The Legislature of the Sandwich Islands at its late session appropriated $5,000 towards the establishment of a hospital for the sick natives in Honolulu, and the King, yielding to the urgent request of his wife, started around town with a subscription book to try to add to this fund. A letter says:

"It was a novel sight, a king begging for his subjects, but Kamehameha did it in a kingly way, and the result was a noble subscription. Foreign residents principally were those asked to subscribe, and they did so liberally, as Honolulians always do for 'sweet charity's sake.' The King's subscription had amounted to about $13,000 the last I heard of it—and this in Honolulu alone. The other Islands are yet to be visited by the king, when a large addition may be expected to this already respectable fund. The result will be that a hospital for sick natives will be established on each island of the group."

War and Speculation.

When the war in Italy broke out, speculation was very rife, especially in breadstuffs and provisions. The short-sighted and thoughtless, like the farmer who was frightened by the frost and feared there would be a famine, assumed at once, that, in view of such immense armies being in the field, there would be a great, if not unparalleled rise in such articles as would be necessary for army supplies. The more mature and experienced merchant knew this to be a fallacy, and that the consumption would not enhance the demand, unless the war became general, so as to involve all Europe, and should be protracted to such duration, as materially to affect the productions of the nations involved. Besides, the immediate necessities of their armies are always provided for by prudent governments; nor is the consumption greater in time of war than of peace. True, it is deemed necessary to destroy supplies sometimes to embarrass the enemy, or to prevent them from falling into the enemy's hands; but then storm, conflagration, or accident in time of peace, may dispose of quite as large a surplus of the raw material. Soldiers in time of war consume no more than in time of peace; in fact, if anything, they eat less; and the commissaries may be expensive in the way of transportation, but will have very little or no influence upon the prices of grain and provisions. Many inexpert and ill-informed traders have doubtless already experienced some knowledge of these things, very much to their surprise, in the short time since the gauntlet was thrown down by FRANCIS JOSEPH. They have discovered that some preparation was made for the feeding of armies, as well as their fighting; and that nothing short of a protracted and general war, the laying waste of fields, the devastation of whole provinces in the agricultural districts, or short crops from natural causes, could affect the prices of breadstuffs and provisions here.

The abundance which swells the garner with an overflowing harvest must bring down prices, and it will be useless to expect the inflated rates that apprehensions of a short crop, or the general rush of ill-judging speculators caused a few weeks back; which no doubt left many high and dry, if they succeeded in venturing far enough out of the proper channel of trade, and were reckless of the experience of thousands of others who stranded in the same way.

It is always best to sell with a rising market. The prudent speculator does not wait for the highest point the market may reach, but is satisfied with the profit that remunerates all risk and affords a reasonable surplus. None but a reckless trader will wait for the turning-time of the market, frequently leaving him among the wrecks with which the sea of speculation is strewn.

WHEN HOMICIDE BY A POLICEMAN IS JUSTIFIABLE.—The case of policeman SAMUEL M. CUNNINGHAM, in Philadelphia, has just been decided by Judge ALLISON. The rulings of the Court in this case are important. CUNNINGHAM, a member of the police force of Philadelphia, was detailed on the 18th of April last to arrest one JAMES MCGRORY, the keeper of a cigar store on Seventh street. McGrory refused to submit to the arrest, picked up a knife, and [illegible] by CUNNINGHAM, who called upon him to surrender and on his failure to do so drew his revolver, fired, and killed him. Having been arrested on a charge of murder CUNNINGHAM's trial took place last week. Judge ALLISON charged the jury that, if they believed the prisoner had, under the circumstances, a well grounded apprehension that the next step taken by the deceased would be fatal to himself, the law gave him the right to take life.

The rights of a policeman, under such circumstances were further defined by the Court as follows:

"If as an officer, charged with the duty of arresting McGrory, he attempted to make that arrest, and McGrory endeavored to escape by the back passage, he was right in attempting to head him off. That would not only be justifiable, but it was his duty. It is the duty of an officer to face danger, and he is not bound to retreat when in performance of his duty. According to the duty taken up himself he was bound to endeavor to make that arrest, and he was bound to endeavor to make the arrest, and he was bound to go forward and not retreat, and if it became necessary for him to use his pistol in the defence of his life, while in the discharge of that duty, it would be justifiable."

Under these instructions, CUNNINGHAM was acquitted.

SATISFACTORY.—The Stark County Democrat is almost as condescending as the Statesman. It says:

"The letter of Judge Douglas will be found on the first page. It has been commented upon, by some papers, with great severity. We have our own opinion about it. As every man has the right to think as he pleases, we will allow our readers perfectly free to judge for themselves."

Now, the Statesman's opinion was that "no Democrat need take exceptions" to anything in it; which advice the Stark County Democrat possibly takes, and refrains from oppressing its readers with its "own opinion," leaving them "perfectly free to judge for themselves," a privilege of which we have no doubt they are very glad to have an opportunity of availing themselves! We would suggest that they might have enjoyed the privilege, even had Mr. BEEN concluded to be more communicative.—[Fact.

PROPER SPIRIT.—We like the spirited retort of the editor of the Huntingdon, (Pennsylvania) Globe, to a dastardly taunt of one who had not a tithe of his manliness, and who like some others that we wot of, no doubt would crawl and fawn to be restored to office, even by the hands that had withdrawn it. But of such is not the editor of the Globe, who speaks like a man:

The Huntingdon Globe, edited by a dismissed Postmaster.—Hollidaysburgh Standard.

That's so, Bro. Trough. Dismissed through the influence of Brawley, Plumer, Porter, Judge Black and Buchanan; because we would not yield to their dictation and oppose the sale of the Main Line of the Public Works. Yes, sir, dismissed because we would not shut our eyes to the fact that the tax-payers of the State were yearly plundered to the amount of thousands of dollars, to fatten a set of corrupt politicians. Yes, sir, dismissed because we would not be used by the corrupt men who are now the leaders of the Buchanan faction. It is about as well that we were dismissed then, as it is very certain we would have been dismissed since, for refusing to desert Democratic principles, and be led by the nose any direction your masters may see fit to lead you. How humiliating the position of a white man when compelled to follow leaders right or wrong.

BIBLE SHOTS.—A barrel of best rifle brand whisky was brought to town last week, by Tom Murphey, which has already caused him to get a sound beating by a woman, and to drive his wife out of doors, besides numerous other little disturbances.—Xenia News.

That was a bad barrel, and no mistake. He should have been more careful in the selection. That must have been pure tanglefoot.

☞ CHARLES W. BLAIR, Esq., formerly of this State, will make his home in future at Fort Scott, Kansas, where he will practice his profession.

Excursion of the Sons of Malta.

Tuesday the Sons of Malta of the Valetta Lodge of this city, according to previous arrangement, proceeded to Circleville to install the officers of the Scioto Lodge of that place, and inaugurate the Lodge. Despite the intensely hot weather, there was no remissness on the part of "the Sons," and they turned out in numbers, on their errand of adding another branch to the wide-spreading institution. Stage, carriage and buggy were put under contribution, and a large party chartered the canal packet "J. B. Bortle," of whose superior accommodations we shall speak in another place.

The following gentlemen of Circleville had applied for and obtained a charter for a separate Lodge, and the occasion was the installation of the same—Messrs. A. F. Newman, Ira Rush, Harley H. Sage, Romulus Rogers, Daniel McPherson, Jacob Gastner, Henry B. Reed, C. S. Mason, Chester Olds and Alonzo Wentworth—many of which names will be recognized by our readers.

The Valetta Lodge No. 3 of Columbus was represented by its officers, and about one hundred and twenty-five members. Newark, Zanesville and Chillicothe had representatives, and there was a large deputation from Lancaster, McVeigh, G. C., being of the number.

Being of those who proposed to navigate the "raging canawl," we entered our names upon the boat list.

The ride on the canal was more agreeable than had been anticipated—the effects of the sun being less fierce, and the extreme neatness of everything around giving the "Bortle," an air of comfort not always met on canal packets. The approach was announced by a paper balloon, which was sent up by that master of pyrotechny and invocation, CHARLEY WAGNER, who let off a number of rockets and roman candles, the boat entering Circleville with flying colors, and drums beating. The bridges were thronged with boys and children of a larger growth, and the boys and girls anticipating the arrival of the boat and doubtless hearing the martial music, to which the American is prone, had proceeded some distance up the canal, and kept pace with the boat to the landing place.

The rockets of Mr. WAGNER were very brilliant, and the balloons he sent off went gracefully over the town.

On reaching the landing a procession was formed, and with music and banners moved to the Hall, in the rear of the "National." The streets, though not lighted, had the advantage of a bright moon and cloudless sky, and had a goodly amount of interested spectators of both sexes. The shadow prevented a fair view of the "ladies fair of Circleville," but we could see that they were there.

The occasion was one of labor and not of amusement. There was no time to appropriate to those little conventionalities that are very pleasant, and give zest to the monotony of every-day life. When it is announced that the lodge instituted last night had forty-four working members, at the close of the ceremonies, with several others offering, some idea may be formed by those in the secret of the business transacted.

It was a source of deep regret that the crowds of persons on the streets, who [illegible] of the morning, were doomed to disappointment. The amount of business to be transacted, the excessive oppressiveness of the weather, and the lateness of the hour precluded a midnight parade, which was very anxiously expected.

The ceremonies of installation, being ended, the canal packet J. B. Bortle afforded a comfortable night's sleep to its passengers, and a most sumptuous breakfast.

This morning, the meeting of the Sons of Malta held on board the J. B. Bortle, Mr. John Geary of the EAST was called to the chair, and CHARLES A. WAGNER was appointed Secretary.

On motion of Judge W. R. RANKIN it was unanimously

Resolved, That the care, kindness and unceasing attention to the wants, comforts and conveniences, of "the Brothers," by Capt. M. A. FAIRCHILD, on this excursion, are entitled to their thanks, and they take the greatest pleasure in recommending the Canal Packet "J. B. Bortle," under his management, to the confidence of the public, as having very superior accommodations, and affording a most agreeable and convenient mode of traveling.

On motion it was resolved to request the publication of this resolution in the Columbus newspapers.

We congratulate the Sons of Malta on their having executed their purpose so successfully and agreeably, and expect the Scioto Lodge will take rank among the most useful institutions of the country.

A few West-End beauties, of Cincinnati, have left for "Indiana Springs," Indiana, hoping to divert the aristocracy to a Hoosier Watering Place. The Ohio White Sulphur Springs, we believe, will not lose their prestige by the absence of a few gazelle-eyed beauties.—Cincinnati Press.

But what absurd taste in those "gazelle-eyed beauties" to go off in search of some nook in Hoosierdom, when there's the Ohio White Sulphur, with its variety of fountains, its deep shades, its shining river, its pagodas and cottages, its green hills and grassy glades, its glorious dinners, most delectable suppers, and breakfasts that do not summon the sluggard in vain. No, the Ohio White Sulphur Springs will not lose their prestige, but the West-Enders of Cincinnati show themselves of rather questionable taste. There is not a watering place in Indiana, or any other State, comparable to the Ohio White Sulphur; and then for accommodations, comforts, luxuries, nobody could want them superior, and wouldn't get them if they did.

☞ Mr. James Williams, of New Jasper township, reports to us that John Harris cut one-half an acre of average wheat with a cradle in thirty minutes—and did it well—on the Fourth of July. Who can beat that?—Xenia News.

We shan't try—especially during the present "heated term."

☞ The political and social circles at Albany, N. Y., were greatly stirred by a matrimonial affair—PETER CAGGER, the well-known politician and lawyer, was married yesterday to the sister of WM. CASSIDY, the equally well known editor of the Atlas and Argus.

☞ We are astonished at the great concern for the negro manifested by the State Journal. Why not at once confess to the support of the doctrine of equality. It might just as well, for it amounts to nothing else.

SONS OF MALTA.—We are informed that a lodge of this noble order will shortly be instituted in our town. Success to it, say we.—Hillsboro Gazette.

That's right, welcome it. The poor need have no apprehension of winter, where the "Sons" have planted their banner.

CONVENTION OF DENTISTS.—The National Convention of Dentists will be held this year at Niagara Falls, commencing on the 2d proximo.

A farmer up at Appleton, Wis., writes that he has a field of wheat which can beat Morphy blind on chess—Exchange.

Yes, but cheat in' is expressly forbidden.

Description of the Late Battle by an Eye Witness.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—The New York Times publishes a letter from the battle field of Solferino, giving accurate details.

The battle commenced at a little before five o'clock in the morning, not far from sunrise. Just back of Castiglione rises a high range of hills which project a mile or thereabouts into the plain, and then breaks off towards the left into a wide expanse of smaller hills, and so on into the roaming surface, which makes that portion of the plain. The Austrians had taken their position upon these hills, planting cannon upon those nearest to Castiglione, which they would approach, all the French army was in full force and around that little village, and had stationed their immense army all over the surrounding plain. As nearly as we can now learn, the Emperor Francis Joseph had collected here not less than 225,000 troops, and commanded them in person; his evident purpose was to make a stand here and risk the fortunes of the war upon the hazards of the day. Napoleon promptly accepted the challenge, and commenced the battle as soon as it was light this morning, by placing cannon upon the hills still nearer the Castiglione than those held by the Austrians, and opening fire upon them on the heights beyond. He took his own stand upon the highest of these, a steep, sharp backed ridge, which commands a magnificent view of the entire circuit of the plain, and from that point directed the entire movements of his army during the early portion of the day. The French very soon drove the enemy out of the posts they held nearest to the town, and followed them into the small villages of the plain below. The first of these was Solferino, where they had a sharp and protracted engagement. The Austrians disputed every inch of the ground, and fought here as they did throughout the day with the utmost desperation. They were three times driven out of the town before they would stay out. The people of the village moreover took part against the French, upon whom they fired from their windows, and the French were compelled, in self defense, to burn the town. When they found it impossible to hold their ground any longer, they fell back slowly and steadily until they reached the village of Volta, directly south-east from Castiglione, and it is only about a mile from the river Mincio, from which, however, it is separated by a range of hills. Upon these hills in the rear of the town, and overlooking it on the south and south-east sides the Austrians had planted very formidable batteries. When I arrived upon the field and went along to the height where the Emperor had stood at the opening of the engagement, but which we had left an hour before to follow the victorious troops, these batteries were blazing away upon the French who were stationed on the plain below. The general result was soon made evident by the slackening of the Austrian fire, and by the falling back of their smoke, and a corresponding [illegible] from the French artillery. The commanding at that point lasted for over an hour, but in precisely what direction Austrians retreated it was not possible from the position I occupied to see. Part of the Austrian force probably crossed the Mincio river, which flows southward from the lower end of Lake Garda, and empties into the Po, but the battle continued to rage all over the region northwest of it, [illegible] the towns of Cavriana, Solferino and Volta, and at one point after another a sharp commanding would arise and continue for half or three quarters of an hour, and after each succeeded engagement of this kind the result became apparent in the retreat of the Austrians and the advance of the French troops. During all the early part of the day the sky had been clear and weather hot, but clouds began to gather about noon, and at five o'clock, while the cannonade was at its height, a tremendous thunder storm rolled up from the northwest. The storm lasted for about an hour, and the cannonading, so far as we could distinguish, was suspended. Then the rain ceased, the clouds blew away, and the sun shone out again and the air was cool and perfectly delightful. Though the [illegible] part in it, the fight had meantime gone on, and when I again reached my post of observation, from which the storm had expelled us, the commanding continued again on the extreme left of the entire field, and on the very borders of the lake northeast from Castiglione and west of Peschiera. The Piedmontese troops, under the king, who commands them in person, had been posted there and received the Austrians as they came around. From about seven o'clock until after nightfall an incessant and most terrible combat was here kept up. The batteries of the two armies were apparently about half a mile apart, and the cannon they were both served with nearly equal and effective vigor, but the Austrians gradually slackened their fire and took up new positions, while the Sardinians poured a rapid and uninterrupted shower of balls upon them, suspending only for a few minutes at a time, and then renewed it again with redoubled fury. The wind had now gone down, the air was still, and the sound of musketry as well as of cannon was distinctly heard—sometimes only a single shot would be heard, then two or three at once and sometimes half a dozen would break forth in instant succession. It was beginning to be dark when I turned to descend the hill, and all the way down I still heard the roar of the cannon and the clattering of the guns of the infantry. The Austrians have sustained an overwhelming defeat, and it seems to me not unlikely that the Emperor may now be induced, by the representations of the Neutral Powers, to accept the peace which Napoleon will be very likely to tender him. I am afraid to venture upon any conjecture as to the number killed and wounded in this battle, but from the nature of the case it must be enormous. I am confident that not less than ten thousand wounded have been brought into this village alone during the day, to say nothing of those that were left on the field or taken to other places.

California Items.

A San Francisco correspondent, under date of June 20, reports that Martin Gallagher, late of New York, a low rowdy politician, had been stabbed in a street quarrel by Thomas Roche, from the effects of which Gallagher subsequently died. Roche was arrested.

A quarrel occurred in Sacramento on the 16th of June, between the Hon. James C. McKibben (late Member of Congress) and the Hon. James W. Coffroth, late of the California Legislature. A meeting for a duel had been arranged for the following day, the weapons pistols, at ten paces. McKibben was on the ground, but Coffroth, in consequence of being arrested, did not appear. Subsequently McKibben was arrested and declined giving bail to keep the peace. Coffroth was the challenger, and his friends would not allow him to withdraw his challenge, and so the matter stood.

It was reported at Sacramento that Ex-Senator Gwin[?] Griffith had sent a belligerent note to J. W. McCorkle, Ex-Member of Congress. Griffith is friend and backer of Coffroth; while McCorkle is on the other side.

At Sacramento, Col. Richard Snowden and Col. E. C. Whiting had a fight. Whiting got a bloody nose, Snowden not much hurt. [illegible]

The Anti-Lecompton [illegible] are very confident of carrying the State. An attempt to effect a fusion with the Republican party, especially on the Congressional ticket, failed.

A man named Kirby was instantly killed in the Ordnance Department, Benicia, on the evening of June 15, by the premature explosion of a blast. A great number of persons were on the ground at the time. No others were injured.

A young man named Francis McKinley, aged about 19 years, the son of Wm. McKinley, an old and respected citizen, was instantly killed by the premature discharge of his gun. The whole charge entered the brain, and carried away part of the skull.

Two men, named Tom Connors and Mike Cassels, were instantly killed on the 15th near Weaverville, by the caving in of a bank in a mining claim.

Governor Weller has drawn up himself some severe strictures by respiting Henry Wagner, a German, a condemned murderer, until the 8th day of July, in order to allow friends of the condemned to file testimony which they think will reduce his crime to the grade of murder in the second degree. It was suspected that the Governor was actuated by a desire to curry favor with the German element with a view to securing its services in the approaching nominating convention.

Arrangements were making at San Francisco and at Sacramento for the reception of Horace Greeley upon his arrival, and to welcome him to the State on behalf of the Press.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Mr. Seamon, former Superintendent of Public Printing, now under indictment for malfeasance in office, has returned to this city.

A special dispatch from New Orleans, published in the Charleston Courier, of the 9th, says that Gen. Woll has defeated the liberal forces under Gen. Zuloaga, at Guanajuato, and proclaimed Santa Anna dictator. This affair has caused great confusion at San Louis Potosi. Ex-Governor Barreza had attempted a revolution in the province of Campeachy, which was followed by similar demonstrations in the other provinces.

The Government was making vigorous efforts to suppress the [illegible].

The State Department has recently had under consideration the subject of the Hudson's Bay and Puget Sound Agricultural Companies, in connection with their privileges in Washington Territory, and it is understood that its action thereon is to the effect that their possessory rights ceased by the limitation of their charters on the 30th of May last as well as under the Oregon treaty.

It will be recollected that these companies some years ago offered to sell their rights to the United States for $1,000,000, and subsequently expressed their readiness to be satisfied with $650,000, for their possessions. The Catholic Missions at Vancouver, and other claims are involved in this decision, which now falling under the administration of the Interior department, is likely to present some important features if not controversy, concerning the titles to valuable lands.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The Bank statement for the past week shows the following result: Decrease in loans $775,000; decrease of nett deposits $1,140,000, increase of specie $55,000, increase of circulation $183,000.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The steamship Star of the West has arrived, with the California mails of the 20th ult.

She brings nearly a million and three quarters in gold.

Among the principal consignees are the following: American Exchange Bank $166,000; Wells Fargo & Co., $344,000; Freeman & Co., [illegible]

The Star of the West left Aspinwall on the 3d, and Key West on the 8th inst.

The U. S. frigate Roanoke was at Aspinwall, all well. The steamship North Star was also in port awaiting the arrival of the steamer Orizaba.

The California advices have been anticipated by the arrival of the Tehuantepec steamer at New Orleans.

The trial of Wm. Williams, at Panama, for the murder of Capt. Junius Otis, of Boston, has resulted in a verdict of homicide in the first degree.

FROM SOUTH AMERICA

Advices from Peru mention another revolution under the lead of Zeballos Castillo Echique and others.

The revolution in Equador, under General Moreno, has become quite threatening. The regular troops are going over to the insurgents, and the defeat of the government was considered certain. Guayaquil was still blockaded by the Peruvian fleet.

The United States frigates Merrimac and Saranac were at Callao.

The Medical survey held in the case of Commander John C. Long, flag officer of the Pacific squadron, has resulted in his being condemned. He will return home immediately, and will probably be a passenger on the United States frigate Saranac to Panama.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The late Congress appropriated only $15,000 as a preliminary to the making of the next census, for the preparation of blank forms, instructions to marshals, &c; ample time will be allowed for the selection of reliable deputies, and such arrangements will be made by the Secretary of the Interior as will secure the prosecution of the work with more perfectness than heretofore.

Many applications have been made for employment as clerks, but the census bureau will not be organized until next year, when the [illegible].

There is authority for the assertion that however desirable the acquisition of Lower California may be to the Administration, no such proposition is now pending between the governments of the United States and Mexico, as has been stated.

Secretary Floyd's health is slightly improved. He will return to Washington to accompany the President to Bedford Springs on Monday.

The President has recognized Frederick Kuhne as Consul of the Grand Duchy of Hesse Cassel at New York.

The Mexican Minister is ill.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—A special dispatch to the Democrat says, the Nebraska delegates to the Kansas Constitutional Convention were admitted to-day, with the privilege of speaking, making motions and questions, connected with their mission.

A petition from the New England Emigrants' Aid Society, asking indemnity for the destruction of the Free State Hotel at Lawrence, was referred.

The Nebraska delegates presented a memorial praying the Convention to take measures to extend the northern boundary of Kansas to the Nebraska River.—Referred to Special Committee.

BALTIMORE, July 13.—A shocking murder occurred in South Baltimore last night. Two rowdies, named Thos. Eaton and Geo. Burke, demanded of Wm. H. Taylor, a peaceable citizen, that he should go into a tavern and treat them. Mr. Taylor refusing, was seized by Eaton and knocked down; when Burke put a pistol to the back of the prostrate man's head and blew out his brains. The murderer escaped, but Eaton was arrested.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—The Omaha Nebraskian, is giving an account of depredations recently committed by the Pawnee Indians, says $15,000 worth of property had been stolen from the settlers.

Gen. Black is in the field at the head of 250 men and 75 dragoons. The Indian number 2,500.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—The Leavenworth Express has arrived from Denver city, in an unprecedented trip of six days, with several passengers and $5,500 in gold dust.

ROME, N. Y., July 13.—The woodshed on the Watertown, and Rome R. R., at this place, was destroyed by fire to-day. The loss is $6,000—on which there is no insurance.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Dates from Elpaso to the 28th of June, state that the Apache Indians had stopped and robbed the overland mail coach near Tucson. They had also robbed the Patagonia mining Co., of several thousand dollars worth of property besides committed a murder at Copper mines, and other depredations.—A detachment of troops was ordered out by Col. Bonneville, but he had not men enough at his disposal to make an effective campaign. He recommends the establishments of four new military posts in Arizona.

There was much consternation at Sonora at the rise of the two Opata and Yaque Indians who are defeating the Mexican troops and advancing on the settlements.

A bitter contest is anticipated in New Mexico between Mr. Otero and Judge Watts for the congressional delegateship.

Since the capture of Lagulas by Pesquiera there has been shipped to San Francisco from Mazatlan, Guaymas and Manzanillo silver to the amount of $1,100,000.

Half as much more has probably been smuggled away by the British war vessels on the coast.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Constitution this morning contains a copy of a dispatch from the State Department, recently sent to our minister at Berlin, on the subject of naturalization. The case is that of a naturalized citizen of the United States, who is a native of Hanover, and who, when he left his native country was neither in the actual service of the Hanoverian army, nor had been drafted to serve in it; but who was, upon his return to Hanover, deprived of his liberty and compelled to perform military service. The President and cabinet concur in the views expressed, taking the ground that the moment a foreigner becomes naturalized his allegiance to his native country has ceased, and he is no more responsible for anything he may say or do or omit to say or do after. Assuming his new character then, if he had been born in the United States should he return to his native country he returns as an American citizen. In order to punish his original government to punish him for an offense, this must have been committed whilst he was a subject and owed allegiance to that government. The offense must have been complete before his expatriation. It must have been of such a character that he might have been tried and punished for it at the moment of his departure. Our minister is instructed to demand the release of the naturalized citizen in question.

Foreign Items.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post, under date June 21st, says:

Very brief accounts have reached Paris of the frightful massacre at Perugia. It was, it appears, Cardinal Antonelli who gave orders to the so-called Swiss to take the town. The Pope, according to official dispatches, is deeply afflicted at what has taken place, and expressed himself in that sense to the French Embassy at Rome. A commission was to be appointed to investigate this cruel act committed under the government of the head of a Christian Church. The affair of Perugia strongly proves the necessity of reforms in the States of the Church. It is with a government of cardinals alone that such infamous cruelties could be committed as the murder of women and children.

MR. COBDEN'S ARRIVAL IN ENGLAND.

Mr. Cobden arrived at Liverpool. Letters for Lord Palmerston and Lord J. Russell are on board the steamer. He was conducted to the Adelphi Hotel, where a deputation from Rochdale, for which borough he has been returned, waited on him, and addresses were presented from the Reformers of Liverpool. Mr. Cobden replied, and said he had found a most cordial appreciation of the free trade principle in the United States. There was a cordial feeling towards Great Britain. With respect to war, he would be believed England was as well able to maintain a neutral position as the United States.

The American sympathy was in favor of the Italians. Mr. Cobden declined to say anything of his appointment to the Board of Trade till he had first acknowledged Lord Palmerston's letter, offering him the post. Referring to fiscal and customs reform, he was in favor of their complete abolition and of substitution at no distant day of a direct tax on property and a moderate tax on labor, which he thought would make the country far more prosperous. Replying to a deputation from the Peace Society, he expressed his firm adhesion to the principle of peace.—Cork Constitution.

EFFECTS OF THE WAR ON THE TRADE OF FRANCE.

There is, however, a reverse to this medal, and it is so to be seen in the decrease of trade. Although the embarkation of so many troops and of such enormous quantities of material and provisions has proved a source of great profit to some, yet I am assured that the general commerce of Marseilles has suffered considerably during the last week or two. There have been fewer English ships arrive than for a long time past, and the publication of the Custom house returns for the month of May fully confirms the allegation of a falling off. As they have been anxiously scanned here I may be permitted to refer to them. The tables show for the month of May, 1859, as compared with those of the month of May, 1858, a very unfavorable standard of comparison, a decrease in the importation of coffee from from 7,713 tons to 4,923 tons, [illegible] from 24,641 tons to 10,472 tons, of [illegible] from 449 tons to 430 tons, of grease from [illegible] to 191 tons; of oils, from 3,991 tons to 3,382 tons (the last two being great staples of manufacture in Marseilles;) of wool, from 3,317 tons to 2,041 tons, of [illegible] from [illegible] tons to 362 tons; of pig iron, from 17,784 tons to 3,706 tons of [illegible], from 1,269 tons to 1,318 tons; of pepper, from 667 tons to [illegible] tons; of cocoa, from 480 tons to [illegible] tons, [illegible] paid on unenumerated articles, from £178,173 to £76,769. There has been an increase in the importations of lead, copper, and other materials for war.

If we turn to the tables of exportations we shall find no less striking evidence of the depression occasioned on trade by the war. Articles of dress—modes—which may be said to be the staple manufacture of Paris—fell off, as represented by the declared value from £[illegible] 598 in May, 1858, to £14,984 in [illegible] machinery, from £[illegible] to £[illegible]; refined sugar, from 6,[illegible] tons to 4,417 tons; cotton fabrics, from [illegible] tons to 547 tons; [illegible] from 1,[illegible] tons to 828 tons. There was [illegible] decrease in the exportation of [illegible] and spirits, [illegible] new vintages.—London Times.

The Sickles Case Again.—The Honorable Daniel Sickles and Wife have resumed their Marital Relations.

The Hon. Daniel E. Sickles has sent letters to his most intimate friends, informing them that he has resumed his marital relations with his wife. The letters were written yesterday and to-day, and in consequence of the discovery that months ago he resumed the relations in the most intimate form. His story, for which we have excellent authority, is these:

Mrs. Sickles, during and since the trial, has resided at her outraged husband's country house, situated on Private street, leading from Bloomingdale road, between Eighty-fifth and Ninetieth streets, and overlooking the river. Thomas C. Fields, the Public Administrator of the city, and intimate friend of Mr. Sickles, took a house about June 1st, which is three-quarters of a mile or so above Mr. Sickles' villa, and on a private avenue leading from Bloomingdale road. Mr. Field had not been long in his new quarters before his friend Daniel requested the privilege of occupying a room there, which request was granted.

It was, however, soon observed that Mr. S. was in the habit of leaving the house where he lodged, late at night and returning early in the morning. How often he did this it is impossible to say. But at length suspicion was aroused, and fixed in the right direction. A few mornings ago Mr. Field happened to be with Mr. Emanuel B Hart, whom you remember as a fast and tearful friend of the homicide during the trial; whom should they meet but Mr. Sickles on his return from his morning walk. They asked him where he had been, as friends do. He owned up, and gave answer importing that it was none of their business.

"But," said Mr. Fields, "it is my business, if you have been having clandestine intercourse with a dishonored wife, and living in my house the while, because it sets your morals [illegible]." The upshot of the matter was, Mr. Sickles informed his friends that [illegible] to be done openly henceforth which had been hitherto done clandestinely. It is well understood that Mr. S. could never have made out a case justifying a divorce, on the ground of his wife's adultery. But this news will surprise some persons.—Cin. Commercial.

☞ Alluding to the late balloon voyage from St. Louis eastward, the Philadelphia Ledger says: "A short time ago, M. Gervrai, a Parisian, traveled in an aerial machine, part balloon and part flying machine, to Algiers and back, fifteen hundred miles from the starting point, in eighteen hours, or eighty-three miles an hour. These facts would indicate that the power of controlling the direction of the aerial machine is being acquired by balloonists, and that we may yet find a much greater increase to our powers of locomotion than is afforded by the railroad."

☞ Geo. W. Arnold, of Clarion county, Pa., was robbed on board the steamer Forrester while en route from Buffalo to Cleveland, on Monday night, of about $160 and a gold watch worth $150. Arnold was sleeping on the floor of the ladies' cabin, with his pantaloons containing the property under his head, at the time the robbery was committed. On the arrival of the boat at Cleveland, six persons suspected of the theft were arrested and lodged in jail. None of the property was recovered.

☞ The Philadelphia P. O. Department has established over 300 iron P. O. boxes attached to the lamp posts of the city, into which letters destined for the Post-Office are dropped. The lid will always close by its own weight to keep wet out, and by a casting inside the iron tube, the letter, when once dropped in, cannot be seen or extracted until the box is opened by the proper key. There are four collections a day, and one on Sunday.

☞ The Archbishop of Paris (Cardinal Morlot) has refused to attend the Te Deum in honor of the battle of Solferino. He protests that I cannot join in thanksgiving for the murder of fifteen thousand human beings, nor raise a hymn of joy founded upon the pain and misery of others; but I will sing a De Profundis and Requiem for the souls of the departed."

RAPID TRAVELING.—On Saturday we received by way of the Post-Office a Jacksonville paper of March 19, and the day after [illegible] a Pennsylvania paper, reached us after a long journey of more than a month. Its date is June 8. Its items were hardly as fresh as they were three or four weeks ago.

☞ The site of Iranistan, Barnum's country villa, at Bridgeport, Conn., has been sold to Elias Howe, Jr., the sewing machine [illegible].

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of [illegible]
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar, and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unswerving, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—exclusive privileges to none."

CHEAPEST IN THE STATE.

THE CAMPAIGN PRESS,

PUBLISHED AT COLUMBUS, OHIO,

Will be sent to subscribers at the Low Rate of

25 Cents Each !!

until after the October Election, being the CHEAPEST CAMPAIGN PAPER in the State. This will enable the

CAMPAIGN PRESS

to reach all classes, and entitle it to

A Most Extensive Circulation.

20 Copies for $5 !

☞ Our friends of the press in this State will please give this a few insertions or call attention to the fact.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL.
July 21st, 1859.

Democratic Meetings.

At the recent meeting of the State Central Committee in this city, the following appointments were made, commencing the canvass in the North West and the Southern counties at the same time.

Hon. Geo. E. Pugh and Gen. Joseph H. Geiger will address the people as follows:

Batavia, Clermont Co., Monday, August 15.
Georgetown, Brown Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
West Union, Adams Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Hillsboro, Highland Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Washington, Fayette Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Wilmington, Clinton Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

Wm. H. Safford, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Major D. W. Stambaugh of Tuscarawas County, will address the people as follows:

Bryan, Williams Co., Monday, Aug. 15.
Defiance, Defiance Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Paulding, Paulding Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Napoleon, Henry Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Ottokee, Fulton Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Perrysburgh, Wood Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.
By Order of the State Central Committee.

The Presidency and the State Canvass.

The Bucyrus "Forum" of last week says:

THE PRESIDENCY is just now troubling some of our Democratic cotemporaries in Ohio unnecessarily. The staunch Democracy of the Union will attend to all that in due time, through judiciously selected delegates. In the meantime let our friends devote all their energies to redeem from the grasp of the enemy our noble Ohio. There are some counties too in our State which may be benefited by the policy thus suggested. Let Presidential scheming sleep and attend for a few months to home affairs. Battle to redeem the State and let Presidential aspirants seek intriguing tools elsewhere than in Ohio. We have no candidate as yet for the next presidency, and shall have no other than the Charleston nominee. Being no man's man we speak thus.

The Hillsborough "Gazette," of about the same date, says:

We notice that several of our Democratic cotemporaries are zealously engaged discussing matters relative to the Presidential campaign of 1860, and urging the claims of their favorite candidates to a nomination by the Charleston Convention; and in doing this they seem to have entirely forgotten, or purposely ignored, as a thing of minor importance, our State ticket—This should not be. The presidential campaign is yet a long way off, and it will be time enough to agitate it after our State election is over. To do so now only lessens our chances of success in the State canvass. The best way, in our opinion, to advance the claims of your choice for President, is to first help carry the State for the Democracy. That accomplished, you will have added much to the prospects of success of your favorite candidate, should he be the nominee.—As it is, nothing is to be gained by discussing the issues which may likely be brought into the Presidential canvass, to the almost entire neglect of our local election,—but, on the other hand, everything may be lost. Let the success of our State ticket, then, be the all engrossing subject. Let us work for it, write for it, and talk for it. Let us open upon the enemy—charge along their lines; nor cease our fire until the conflict is over and a glorious victory won.

There is a remarkable coincidence that this thought should have occurred to two different Democratic editors at the same instant. The "Statesman" in noticing the letter of Mr. Douglas, expressed some such idea, and the seed then thrown out seems to be sprouting freely.—Our Democratic brethren of the Ohio press, are free to act as they please. We are are a careful reader of their papers, and are surprised that they should be charged with remissness in conducting the State canvass. We have not seen one which has not given it marked attention.—While the active campaign is not to commence until August, the press, without exception that we have seen, have exhibited unusual energy in commending the Democratic ticket to the consideration of the people, and pointing a lance at every unclosed rivet of their adversaries.

We cannot perceive the force of the argument that it would be advantageous to the Democracy of Ohio to let the Presidential question sleep.—It is an indifferent cause that fears daylight; and a candidate is not worth supporting whose name must not be mentioned, or at most be only muttered in mysterious whispers. We say this is the time when the Democratic papers of Ohio should speak out boldly, and not by their silence permit unscrupulous politicians to desecrate with impunity their platform by false construction, or misrepresent their favorite statesman, by imputing to him motives and principles that are foreign to his nature, and which he does not entertain.

While we urge and implore them to do all in their power, to omit nothing that will advance the cause of Democracy, and the election of their State ticket, yet we warn them that there is danger in silence as to their Presidential preferences. He may be a most excellent Democrat who is willing to announce that he will "go it blind" for the Charleston nominee—he may be of strong faith, and to him it may matter little what platform may be adopted, or what person designated as the champion of that platform, but, from unmistakable indications, there are schemes on foot which the Democracy of Ohio cannot consistently endorse, and which had better be nipped in the bud, than be permitted to gain strength by seeming acquiescence and silence. The persistent attacks upon Senator Douglas by the Government organ at Washington, its misconstruction of the Democratic platform, its presentation of false issues, its misrepresentation of the principles of Mr. Douglas its abandonment of the great principle of Popular Sovereignty, are sufficient to cause each Democratic press in Ohio to speak out and defend the right. Who is to be injured? What Democratic candidate for a State office is to suffer loss if not defeat, by an expression by the Democratic newspapers of their preference for the Presidency? But us not like craven cowards tremble at the thought that our preference may be known. The Democratic candidate should be a consistent representative of principles.—He should inspire confidence by his past life. He should be one who could bring strength to the Democratic ticket everywhere. He should be a man like Stephen A. Douglas, whose record is patent, that he will not misinterpret Democracy or misconstrue the platform; upright and steadfast in his political principles, unswayed by pestiferous influences, unswerved by flattery, straightforward, earnest, determined and frank. It is not indispensable, in manifesting our preference, that others should be disparaged; but it is indispensable that the platform be adhered to. We may differ honestly about men, but about principles there can be and should be no mistake. We are not willing to take our chances and proclaim in advance that the nominee of the Charleston Convention is good enough for us. We want to know the man, and the platform on which he stands, and if he is likely to stand squarely on that platform. If the Administration had bought up no paper and established no paper to be used for a certain anti-democratic purpose; if its purpose had been concealed from all, as it seems to have been from those who wont see, the recommendation of silence might not be so objectionable. But to be silent is to acquiesce; and to tamely and ignominiously submit, is to be gifted with more pusillanimity than is characteristic of the Democratic party.

What is to prevent a blending of our national interests with those of the State, in the canvass? Are they so separate and distinct that they are not to be named in the same breath?—Will none of the national issues be introduced in the State canvass? Pudge! The canvass will principally turn upon national issues.—State issues will be a mere drop in the bucket. The Presidency will be the theme, and the steps by which it is to be attained, be the ladder by which the State offices are to be reached. Just at this time it is inconvenient for the Ohio "Statesman" to take sides with the Administration, or announce its determination to support Mr. Douglas, but because that paper should be in a quandary, it is no reason other papers, not so situated, should put their fingers on their lips. The Democratic party in Ohio do not expect to succeed by a ruse or trick; or by hood-winking and abusing the confidence of the people. They expect to succeed by boldly proclaiming their principles, and defending them in the presence of the people. They do not expect to have one set for one section, and another set for another section. Bush-fighting may do for guerrillas, but they will take the open plain, and meet the adversary like men, not with the feline stealthiness, that lurks in some covert to spring upon its prey unawares.

How an expression by the press on topics connected with the Presidency is to "lessen the chances of success in the State canvass," we are at a loss to perceive. Will our good friends of the Bucyrus "Forum" and Hillsborough "Gazette" enlighten us on that point? or will the "Statesman," which is father to the thought, descend to an explanation? We most sincerely and earnestly wish the success of the State ticket; nor would we throw a straw in its way to impede its triumphal progress. We are prepared to labor as untiringly as any Democrat in the State for its success, but always honestly, honorably, and with the approbation of our own conscience. We expect to do as good service as any, but shall never disgrace our party by pernicious counsels or by conniving at fraud upon the people. Our flag for the Presidency in 1860 is unfurled—Stephen A. Douglas—and upon the Cincinnati platform without moving a plank. Let those who are timid pursue their own way as they may judge best. Our party adopted the platform on which Mr. Douglas stands, and as an earnest supporter of that platform, we are proud to uphold the name of its great champion.

Judge Ranney and the Power of Congress in the Territories.

The Republican papers are busily engaged in examining the political record of the Democratic candidate for Governor, and are very much shocked to find that in 1848 he was adverse to the Fugitive Slave law, against which they are hypocritically beating now. It has been represented by them, that he took part in a meeting in Mahoning county, in opposition to the law at the time of its passage, strongly denouncing it. They likewise refer to the letter written by him, when a candidate for Congress, in 1848, to S. F. HOFFMAN, in which he used the following language:

"I am in favor of maintaining the freedom of the territories of New Mexico and California in their whole extent, and utterly opposed to authorizing slavery or involuntary servitude of any kind within them, or to any compromise which shall doom any part of them to the curse of human bondage. * * * * * * *

It is conceded that these territories are now free. They must remain so until changed by positive law of the sovereign power. No question is better settled in this country than that slavery exists in a country by virtue of the local law. It is clear that it can no more exist in a territory without such law, than a man can breathe without air. Neither Congress nor a Territorial Legislature, in my opinion, possess the power to establish it. It can only be done by the people when admitted as a State under the general principles of the Constitution. I have no doubt of the power of Congress to erect Territorial Governments, and to provide for the prohibition of slavery within the territories, and I am in favor of and would support such prohibition."

The first charge was met by a point blank denial by the Cleveland "Democrat," which, while admitting that Judge RANNEY was present at the meeting by accident, represented that he spoke but a few moments in opposition to the incendiary resolutions offered on the occasion, and advising moderation and obedience to the law. We re-published the article relying upon its accuracy, which has since been denied by the Republican papers. As the two candidates for Governor will shortly commence the campaign in company, we shall soon know from Judge RANNEY himself, how far he was involved in the proceedings as reported. His connection with the meeting may have been greatly exaggerated, or it may have been as represented by the Cleveland "Democrat," that he counseled forbearance and moderation.

With regard to the letter to Mr. HOFFMAN, the extracts from which, as given by Republican papers, we publish in this article, we may consistently say a word or two. He might have entertained the sentiments expressed as to freedom in New Mexico and California, without a shadow of inconsistency with his present position. It is only the latter clause regarding the power of Congress "to provide for the prohibition of slavery within the territories" that seems in antagonism to the Democratic platform. This letter was written prior to the compromises of 1850, and consequently anterior to the Kansas-Nebraska act in conformity to those compromises, which furnish the substratum of the Democratic creed. It was settled by those compromises and by the Kansas-Nebraska act, that Congress should not exercise this power; but that the settlement of the slavery question should be left to the people of the territories, themselves.

What is said about freedom existing in New Mexico and California, when annexed to the United States, is true. But the principle will not be assailed by the Republicans, when applied to the Louisiana purchase. The excitement growing out of the contention of North and South for the establishment of this very principle, that the law of the former government should attach to the ceded domain, resulted in and produced the compromises of 1850, and relieved Congress from its further consideration.

Before those compromises were established, the Democratic party were very much divided upon the question—the opinions of individuals depending in a great measure upon their location. There were other questions of difference between the parties which were at that time unsettled, and claimed the attention of politicians. That of the negro had not been made paramount to all others. That Judge RANNEY'S views and opinions may have undergone modification since the compromises were effected, does not detract from his firmness of purpose, his attachment to freedom or his integrity as a statesman. It is the settled policy of the government that the whole subject should be referred to the people themselves; which, in 1848, he recognized as belonging to them to determine, when they should come to form a State Constitution, but which in the Kansas-Nebraska act, and in the Cincinnati Platform was left with the people of the territories through their respective legislatures, and the Courts, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.

Judge RANNEY, then, in maintaining the Democratic platform, is not inconsistent; but he would be as inconsistent as the Republicans, if he were to resist the settled policy of the country, as contended for and sustained by the Democratic party.

The Colored People.

On the evening of the Fourth, as we are informed, a few of our colored people, with their wives and sweethearts, sought admittance to the Promenade Concert, and were refused, whereat they are highly indignant. The wiser and better mannered portion stayed away, well knowing that any attempt, on their part, to mingle in a purely social assemblage of this kind, would be felt and treated by those who got it up for their own entertainment, as an impertinent intrusion.

Independently of all theoretical questions of individual right and equality, the white people of Xenia choose to recognize, in their social capacity, the practical fact of the distinction which Nature has fixed between the two antipodal races. Our colored people ought, by this time, to know—they have surely had hints enough—that they are never invited to any of our social parties, either private or public, simply because their presence is not desired; and that, if they persist in intruding on such occasions, they may expect a rebuff—possibly, sometime, with such an emphatic significance as will effectually check all similar impertinences in the future.—[Xenia News.

Now, this will not be very acceptable news to the Giddings and Spaldings and Bushnells and [illegible] of the Reserve. They would simply regard it as an outrage upon human nature—upon decency, upon good breeding, upon the rights of the negro. Nor are they as fastidious as the more reserved inhabitants of Greene, who think there is yet some social disparity between the two races. And here is the paradox—one in which the friends and sympathizers of Tom Corwin find themselves involved. Tom, himself, is ashamed of the party with which he is acting. He takes every occasion to refer to his own swart complexion as indicative of the affinity between the negro and himself—a joke of which he never wearies, and the applicability of which his political allies receive with apparent satisfaction.

There are a great many patriotic and well-disposed people, who act against the Democracy, but claim to believe with them that the two races should, for their mutual advantage, be kept separate and distinct. They take every occasion to assert that while they oppose the extension of slavery, they are adverse to the equality of the negro with the white, as frankly admitted upon the Reserve.

This demonstration at Xenia is illustrative of the feeling. The "News" is a strong conservative Republican paper, and we imagine is a fair reflector of public sentiment in its meridian. It seems to be unwilling, while "theoretical questions of individual right and equality" are indulged in, to recognize the same right and equality in socialities, and gives a fair warning of what may be the consequences of future attempts to assert this "right and equality."

We are surprised at the practical proscription by the people of Xenia, or at least that portion of them who act in full communion with the people of the Reserve.

They should show less stringency and more forbearance toward their colored brethren, for whose political equality they are daily laboring in their full fellowship with the fanatics who are above all distinctions of color and race, and who would not consider the participation in their Fourth of July or any public demonstration, by the colored people, "an impertinent intrusion."

The "News" admits that the classes of Northern enthusiasts and theories about equal rights, is all wrong, for it asserts "the practical fact of the distinction which Nature has fixed between the two antipodal races." (There is some difference in the formation of the foot, it must be acknowledged, but that is not the fault of the negro.)

We have heard Mr. CORWIN impressively and eloquently appeal to the voters of Ohio, to ponder well, how they exercise this dearest privilege of freemen—the basis of their freedom, the foundation-stone of their government; and exhort them not to cast their suffrage lightly and without mature reflection. He has disclaimed the theory of the mad fanatics, whose whole tendencies go to the equalization of the races politically, and as a consequence, immediate and of necessity, socially; and yet he acts with them. The people of Xenia, and that region, naturally admire and respect him, and are very much guided by his example; and they too swell the columns of the grand army, just now led off by such men as GIDDINGS, WADE, and those who invite the negro to a full participation in the practical workings of the government. They are opposed to the Democratic party, and doubtless find many points of difference; but none so broad and deep as their essential distinction which they assert to exist between themselves and their co-laborers. They apologise for being found in the same love-feast with their fanatic friends, but there they are. They pretend to expect to improve the rising with their leaven. But all former efforts have proved abortive. The Republican party have gone on and on, until they rule with their own expansion, and conservatism has been blotted from their vocabulary. Within one year the stride they have made could not have been anticipated six months ago. As well might the frail vessel that is hurried down the rapids of Niagara attempt to arrest the mighty cataract, as for Mr. Corwin, or his friends and admirers, and followers if you will, while co-operating with the Republican party of Ohio, endeavor to stop its wild and wicked and fanatical career.

We admire Mr. CORWIN—his genius, his attainments, his eloquence, his goodness of heart, but we cannot refrain from an expression of discontent, of reproach rather, that he should act with a party with which, according to his own showing, he has so little affinity, and which does not sympathise with him.

☞ The Statesman talks of some one performing the part of Judas "in the heat of the struggle"—a very inconvenient period, a part which that concern takes care to perform before the struggle when, it can safely bestow the thirty pieces.

☞ The Statesman may call names "like a very drab," but it cannot conceal its ignorance. It calls a gentleman a skunk and talks of the skunk's "jackal bay." Well posted in natural history!

There is a paper in this city called the Fact. [illegible]

The people of "this city" are well aware of it, as its readers greatly exceed those of the Statesman in number.

The Galled Jade Winces.

[From the Fact.]

The Statesman squeals this morning. Somebody is twisting its tail. It is down upon the "Democratic county officials," Messrs. Champion, COLE and ALBERRY for the appointment of THOMAS SPARROW, Esq., as Commissioner. It says:

"This act of our Democratic county officials has furnished the morning and evening organs of the Republican party, with material for original articles, almost daily ever since the thing happened."

There, now, gentlemen, see what you have done! You have not consulted "the Democracy of Franklin county," which means "us," and the Post-Office clique. While we politely inform the Statesman that it does not regard the truth in speaking of this paper as the "evening organ of the Republican party," we admit that the appointment of Mr. SPARROW gave us the liveliest satisfaction. We know him to be intelligent, industrious and incorruptible, and beyond the influence of the "Tom Miller clique," whose usurpations have wearied the patience of the people of this county. We expressed our approbation of this appointment, and it gave us pleasure to do so, and it is equally pleasing to know that there could not have been a more popular appointment made by the "Democratic county officials," notwithstanding the mean and contemptible insinuations of the Statesman.

When the affairs of the Treasury relating to the stupendous defalcation were to be examined, and other pressing business precluded Mr. DENNISON from acting, Gov. CHASE, had confidence in the integrity and capacity of Mr. SPARROW, and assigned to him the task, which he performed with industry, care and to the satisfaction of all, except those moussing politicians who desired to deceive the people by subterfuge and false allegations. Mr. SPARROW'S report was much more intelligible than that of the subsequent committee, invested with full power to send for persons and papers, (which authority he had not,) and quite as satisfactory, although it did not swell into an enormous volume. It was not relished by the Miller clique because the basis of the campaign had been arranged by them, through Cox, their representative, upon a deception, that all the money had been abstracted by the successor of BRESLIN, except that portion which the latter had accounted for as deposited in broken banks, some by Gov. CHASE'S advice. Mr. SPARROW, to meet the impatient expectation of the public, fulfilled his duty without delay; and, without attempting to give a party tint to his investigations. He said what has been endorsed by the subsequent commission, that the bulk of the defalcation transpired in Breslin's term, and that GIBSON had endeavored to conceal the frauds by falsehood, and had "disregarded truth and his sworn official duty."

This is about all that the Edgerton-Morgan-and-Kesselle report afterwards disclosed, except that the latter was more copious in details and more confused in arrangement, and besides, it weakened its own force by attempting to involve others in the original defalcation by an exhibit which merely showed that the finances of this great State had been very loosely kept, and the people's confidence very badly abused.

But this is foreign to our purpose. Mr. SPARROW did his duty—he did not fall short of, or go beyond it. He did not bend to the pressure of unprincipled and tricky politicians, and that was an unpardonable offence in their estimation.

Our present business is with the Statesman's tortured version of "the appointment of THOMAS SPARROW." It says:

"The motive which governed the county officers in appointing Mr. Sparrow is unknown to us, and therefore we are unable to speak with certainty in reference to it. All will grant that he is qualified to discharge the duties of Commissioner, but we apprehend he is not the only man in the county who is capable."

The qualifications of Mr. SPARROW are thus reluctantly admitted; and although "not the only man in the county who is capable," we might readily conceive that the fact of his being "qualified" was sufficient "motive" on the part of the "Democratic county officials," knowing the respectability, and integrity of the gentleman, to make the appointment. It has not been denied, that we have seen, that there are other capable men, but that fact did not disqualify Mr. SPARROW. But here is the "rub." The Statesman says:

"Bolting the ticket is not considered a passport to party favor. He has not felt himself bound to sustain the organization or vote the ticket, for several years past, and his report on the Treasury Defalcation has met the universal condemnation of the party, not only in this county, but throughout the entire State."

Mr. SPARROW would not vote for COX for Congress, because he had good cause to know that he was not reliable. Cox had pretended to be his friend and advised him that he would not be removed as Postmaster, when he had urged the President and obtained his promise to remove him and appoint TOM MILLER. Does anybody blame him for bolting Cox? Nay, he did not bolt him, for he could not swallow the little trickster.

As to the condemnation of his report by the party, it amounted to this. Cox and MILLER had insisted that the idea should be sedulously inculcated that GIBSON was the defaulter; and the report stood in the way of enforcing the charge, which was to a great extent untrue, as the bulk of defalcation transpired during BRESLIN'S term, whatever band GIBSON may have had in the use of part of the money. These little politicians were frustrated in their knavish scheme by the integrity of Mr. SPARROW. They desired to abuse the public mind by falsehood. Mr. SPARROW said it had been abstracted before Mr. GIBSON'S term of office; and that GIBSON thought not responsible for the defalcation of half a million or more, was untrustworthy, because he had forfeited his official oath.

But, says the Statesman: "the Democracy of the county have not had anything to do with the appointment and are in no wise responsible for it. It is the act of the Auditor, Probate Judge and Recorder.

The Statesman further adds:

"A little careful consideration and reflection on the part of the county officers, would have induced them to have acted differently, and thus saved themselves and their Democratic friends from the mortifying effects of an act which cannot be regarded otherwise than a blunder.

The Auditor, Probate Judge and Recorder are sworn to discharge their duty, and have faithfully discharged it. The "little careful consideration and reflection" mean a consultation with the Miller clique and nothing else, for they have constituted themselves "the Democracy of Franklin County." We are confident the appointment was made by the proper officers after due deliberation and in the faithful discharge of their duty. One more acceptable to the people of Franklin could not have been made. If the Miller clique are "mortified" by such a "blunder," it is not the last mortification to which they will be subjected until the people of Franklin County shake off this "old man of the Sea."

In the heat of the struggle he performs the part of Judas, and when the fight is over his jackal bay is heard.—Statesman.

You had better take care or he may perform the part of Peter, who left a certain odious character minus an ear.

You can see Marshall holding up his hand to see which way the wind blows.—Statesman.

The case is different with the scrub of the Statesman, who holds up his [illegible]

—We learn by the Toledo Blade that a brute calling himself Philip Gardner, of Cleveland, has been arrested at Sylvania, charged with outraging the person of a little girl, aged 12, by the name of Emma Bagge. She was in a field gathering blackberries.

The First Ward Election.

The Statesman is crest-fallen, dumfounded, out of condition, evidently "squelched." The election in the First Ward did not go to suit the Millerites. Millerism is on the decline. Its tricks cannot hold out forever. For one the Post-Office swag the multitude, who are not to be gulled any longer by promises of appointments and places. The First Ward is but one of the symptoms. Let it be borne in mind that whatever TOM MILLER touches turns to [illegible]. The people will not be governed and driven by an unscrupulous clique with MILLER and Cox at their head. The ticket that MILLER will get up for the county will be beaten. Mark that!

Yesterday, in the First Ward, the election, as we anticipated, resulted in favor of G. W. OGDEN by a majority of 64 over HONORIUS CRARY. We thought Mr. CRARY was entitled to his seat after the April election, but the proposition came from his counsel to leave the matter with the people; and although in the meantime the city was subjected to expense and the parties to trouble, the matter was left to the people who decided that they preferred another. The Ward is Republican by from thirty to fifty votes. A good deal of sympathy was felt for Mr. CRARY and he obtained votes because of the decision of the Council, which under other circumstances he would not have obtained. It was injudiciously used, and made to his advantage. The "Ted Hall" party is totally "played out" in the First Ward. Their identification with Millerism is well understood, and the generous, Hibernian phalanx so confiding heretofore, will have their eyes opened to the influences which have misled them.

True there are Democrats, who hold to the true principles of the Democratic party, who will not touch any thing which TOM MILLER recommends because however coated it may be, there is corruption beneath.

The election was conducted very orderly and no votes were allowed without rigid scrutiny. It is believed that not a spurious vote was received. Very few ill may were offered. The number of votes polled was 500 against 611 in April. It is possible that several Democrats abstained from voting, which would make up one third of the seeming disparity. Very great exertions were made by the friends of CRARY; but in vain. We have already shown why.

The Statesman yesterday claimed CRARY'S election. It said:

"We understand that the Tousey clique are making desperate efforts to defeat Mr. Crary but they will doubtless fail."

He was clearly elected before by the legal voters of the Ward, and if there is a sharp look out kept by Democrats for frauds to-day, he will be elected again. Let the judgment of the people be re-affirmed with redoubled emphasis."

"A sharp look out" was "kept," and he was not elected, despite the Statesman's prophecy. Even the Statesman confesses that

"There was very few illegal votes polled, notwithstanding a vain effort made by the Penitentiary folks to "run in" men from other wards, or who had not been in the city a week."

Let the Statesman point out one illegal vote polled, if it can. Its ungrammatical defiance of truth, is not unexpected; let it make its charge explicit. Who tried to run in illegal votes?

The Statesman this morning says of the election:

"This result was not altogether unexpected for the unequal odds against which the Democracy had to contend, makes it almost impossible on a test vote, as that of yesterday was, to carry the precinct. The Penitentiary, Lunatic Asylum, and Gas Company, are the institutions that defeat the Democracy there as they have done since under the control of the Republicans."

Contrast this with the extract we give from the Statesman of yesterday, which claimed that CRARY would be elected, but says now its defeat was not unexpected! What confidence can be reposed in the statements of such an arrant liar with such peculiar brevity of memory?

The cause of defeat is set down to the Penitentiary, the Lunatic Asylum and Gas Company. Why, those institutions were all there when the Statesman claimed a triumph. We heard nothing of the convicts or lunatics voting, and the force in the Gas Works was not increased for the occasion. The Republican majority in the ward, which is small, and anti-Millerism will defeat Millerism in that ward at any time.

Of the 500 votes polled, CRARY had 218, and OGDEN had 282 giving the latter a majority of 64. The Republican majority in the ward does not exceed fifty, but anti-Millerism did the rest. We want other candidates in time.

The Statesman's Tactics.

The tactics of the Statesman must be admired, in setting down the First Ward as having been always Republican, which is well-known to be false, but under the MILLER regime it bids fair to be so henceforth. The Statesman will tell any kind of a lie to shelter itself. The people have not forgotten that two years ago, at the general election, the Ward was carried by 18 majority for H. B. PAYNE, when hostility to TOM MILLER cost the Democrats some twenty or thirty Irish votes! Other instances might be cited of the First Ward being Democratic, only it is unnecessary. In 1858 Cox was beaten by CASE in that Ward one hundred and eleven votes, but Cox was not considered the Democratic party, but regarded as TOM MILLER'S creature. The CITY FACT exposed the way in which he had sold himself and the Statesman to get government patronage and the Post-Office for TOM MILLER. The ill treatment of Col. MEDARY which subsequently transpired would have increased the majority against Cox another hundred in the Ward, but very few believed that such an outrage would be perpetrated until it had actually transpired. Good, sound, honest, reliable Democrats would not go Cox. Like Mr. SPARROW, they bolted him, but that did not make the Ward a Republican Ward. In 1855 the majority of MEDILL over CHASE in the First Ward, was 64—just what the majority of OGDEN now is over CRARY—yet the Statesman says the Ward was always Republican. When the Ward went for PAYNE, in 1857, the Lunatic Asylum, Penitentiary and Gas Works were in the Ward, and Mr. CHASE was Governor; but Millerism had not shown so bold and impudent a front as it assumes now. Perhaps the recollection of defeat for Sheriff, falling far behind the party ticket, had not then quite faded from TOM MILLER'S memory. Nor had the illustrious exhibitions of MILLER and Cox as Postmaster and Congressman filled the Ward with such wondrous admiration for their sagacity as statesmen and disinterestedness as patriots.

We rather think the MILLER dynasty is about playing itself out; and from the estimation in which the Statesman is held here at home, that feeble instrument of unscrupulous demagoguery is rapidly playing itself out, too. A mere engine, to assail members of the party who will not bow to MILLER and COX supremacy, and acknowledge MANYPENNY'S infallibility, it is losing all consideration and respect, as well as subscribers, who at best, in the city of Columbus, are few and far between, and although known to the "small by degrees" are constantly growing "beautifully less." Feeding on ill-gained government patronage, it has no sympathy in common with the people of Columbus. A mere leech on the Democratic party—dependent solely upon its position as government organ—there is precious little respect entertained for it out of the very narrow and limited circle whose machinations and intentions it in part represents.—[Fact.

The Falsehoods of the Statesman.

The ridiculous personal abuse of Mr. MARSHALL by the Statesman, this morning, shows the utter recklessness of the Central organ, and the absurdities and falsehoods to which it is driven in the blind folly of impotent rage. For several months past, it has, on repeated occasions, applied all manner of epithets to Mr. MARSHALL, calling him "imbecile," "stupid," "blockhead," "fool"—in fine, exhausting the vocabulary of slang picked up before the mast, or at Billingsgate, or in the purlieus of some low sailors' boarding house. We might imagine the editor of the Statesman to have dwelt long among the demi-savages of the frontier, where the debasing influences of whisky and vile association have done their worst in corrupting and destroying the entire elevation of character of the untutored man—where language suited to polite ears is rarely heard, and the tongue becomes familiar with low and vulgar phraseology.

We have before informed the Statesman that Mr. MARSHALL does not edit this paper. The name of the editor is announced in its columns. It stands as responsible for what appears in the FACT, as the name of GEORGE W. MANYPENNY for what may appear in the Statesman.

If satisfaction were demanded for the contemptible and paltry falsehoods, which are current in the Statesman, and the vulgar epithets which it so lavishly employs, would MANYPENNY skulk behind the mean subterfuge that he didn't write the article, but that it was written by one of his coalition? While we are for a large liberty to the press, there should be responsibility somewhere, and when an editor's name is announced, he is, and should be responsible for what appears in his paper. MANYPENNY may not write all that appears in the Statesman, but if by accident an able article should appear in its columns he would get the credit of it. But that is not likely to happen often.

The article in this morning's Statesman referring to Mr. MARSHALL as editor of the FACT is so replete with bald and [illegible] shows a reckless malignity that passes for nothing—is so palpably and glaringly a mean, dirty concatenation of lies, that it hardly merits wasting a breath or thought upon it. Mr MARSHALL has his own paper to edit—is responsible for what appears therein, as the editor of the Statesman will find whenever he calls upon him, but we take the liberty to represent the responsibility of the FACT, and so distinctly assert that in the thirty or forty lines in the Statesman's article in reference to this paper, involving several charges, there is not one particle of truth from beginning to end, nor even the remotest shadow of the truth.—[City Fact.

The Statesman's Efforts to be Harmonious.

The charge made in the Statesman of Saturday against Mr. SPARROW, to exculpate itself for its undiguished hostility to that gentleman, that for several years he had disregarded the Democratic organization, caused quite a sensation among the Democrats of the city, who knew the charge to be untrue. A Democrat who had stood at the polls for seven years with Mr. SPARROW, assured us that he had never faltered in that time; but when Cox was a candidate for re-election he declined aiding his accustomed assistance at the Ward polls, because he did not, himself, intend to vote for Cox and would not advise others to do so. He had lost all confidence in Cox, who had meanly deceived him, and was unwilling to endorse the anti-vouvil candidate by his suffrage.

Mr. SPARROW would not, in conformity with the wishes of MILLER and Cox, take the ground that Mr. BRESLIN was [illegible] with the treasury of the State when he believed it to be false, and this is [illegible] by the Statesman disregarding the party organization.

Like other Democrats, Mr. SPARROW is unwilling to be dictated to by unscrupulous and selfish knaves who undertake to conduct and control the Democratic party of Franklin county, for which he is set down by the Statesman, (which is all the time prating about harmony) as a disorganizer.

If the Democratic party can long survive such generalship as is evinced by the Statesman in reading out of the party such old, long-tried and respected Democrats as THOMAS SPARROW, and to cover its assault, misrepresents him grossly and wantonly, it is indeed immortal.

A MODEST REQUEST.—Won't the editor of the Statesman please deny the charge that he was in favor of withdrawing the name of Judge Whitman from the Democratic State Ticket and substituting that of Judge Swan therefor? Several days since, it will be remembered, we stated that we had good Democratic authority for saying that he was in favor of such a change; but instead of denying the charge, that brilliant military and political strategist contented himself with calling us all manner of hard names and broadly asserting that we had "no authority, responsible or otherwise," for the statement. Now, if Mr. Manypenny was not guilty, why did he not say so in so many words, and demand our authority for the charge, so that he and ourselves could be placed fairly before the public, instead of making himself more contemptible by dodging the issue and indulging in low, abusive language without cause?

The truth is, the "Colonel" has placed himself in a very awkward and reprehensible position; and to escape therefrom he has adopted the tactics of a certain fish which emits a dirty and offensive substance that discolors the water and hides it from its pursuers. Such a course may possibly save him from the condemnation of his leaders, but it will not satisfy the public. For the purpose, therefore, of doing himself a substantial favor, we again ask him to deny the charge. Won't he please deny it?—"just this once." Do, now—good boy!—Zanesville Courier.

Whenever MANYPENNY is cornered, he maintains a "dignified silence" or pours out a torrent of epithets whose flow causes astonishment that one poor head could contain them all.

The Zanesville Courier, it will be remembered charged, on the authority of a well-known Democratic correspondent, that MANYPENNY during a visit to Zanesville, or passing through the town, made arrangements for swapping off Judge WHITMAN for Judge SWAN. The "Colonel" attempted to exculpate himself out of the scrape, and although detected himself in furthering the proposition, cried out to the Cincinnati Enquirer "the shame! you are very wrong to entertain any such preposterous idea!" Instead of denying the charge of the Courier (the Zanesville Democratic paper is also down on MANYPENNY) the editor of the Statesman threatens to make Mr. BENNETT remember (a threat which he has no idea of making good) if he should endorse the articles which are set down as written by MANYPENNY? Is not the editor of the Statesman responsible for what appears in his paper, and if he desires to hold Mr. BENNETT responsible for what appears in the Courier, can he not do so or cause him to disclaim?

PAPERS IN OHIO FOR STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Cincinnati—Enquirer.
Cleveland—Plaindealer.
Columbus—People's Press.
Toledo—Herald.
Allen County—National.
Delaware—Standard.
Clermont—Sun.
McArthur—Democrat.
Van Wert—Constitution.
Sandusky—Democrat.
Logan—Gazette.
Monroe—Spirit of Democracy.

We shall continue our list from time to time, as we receive unmistakable evidence of preference.

Judge Gholson among his Friends.

Judge SPALDING holds this language, in speaking of the SWAN imbroglio.

He was dropped for the reason that he, as a Judicial Officer, recognized the Fugitive Slave Enactment of 1850 to be of binding force in Ohio; and the other two Judges, who were with him in opinion, will be dropped, in the same way, so soon as they are reached in the order of time. We do not recognize men to be Republicans, here, in northern Ohio who will, for a moment, sustain that miserable enactment.

The Ashtabula Sentinel, of which J. R. GIDDINGS is corresponding editor, says:

The writer of this article was a delegate; he conversed with delegates from almost all parts of the State, and heard no other objection to Judge Swan than his decision in the case alluded to. Indeed most of them appeared surprised and mortified that his name should be pressed upon the convention after making that decision.

And further, the same paper, and we believe GIDDINGS himself, a delegate, says of Judge GHOLSON:

It was because Judge Gholson believed his slaves had been endowed by their Creator with the right to liberty that he emancipated them and came to Ohio with them.

And yet the Memphis Avalanche and other southern papers, charge that instead of manumitting his slaves, he put them on the block and sold them at auction. This had better be examined into by those who consider it an unpardonable sin to "TRADE IN HUMAN FLESH;" and who would not regard a life-time of atonement sufficient expiation for so hideous a crime!

The Sentinel and Mr. GIDDINGS further add [illegible]

"His friends asked his nomination because he was devoted to the very doctrines which Judge Swan discarded. In avowing these principles, he proclaims his intention to support them. He is pledged to them. He has the example of Judge Swan's rejection before him. As he takes the oath of office he reads the resolution of the convention that nominated him, declaring the fugitive act not merely unconstitutional, but proclaiming it subversive of the rights of the States, the liberties of the people, and abhorrent to the moral sense of the civilized world."

We really think that comment is unnecessary; and that Judge GHOLSON will indeed be a favored mortal; if he can satisfy these friends as well as those who entertain different views.

☞ James Birney Marshall, the nephew of his uncle, who had a brother in Congress, and who graduated at an Ohio College, now editor of the Columbus "Press," has a fashion of publishing garbled extracts from this paper.—If he can make any capital for the cause he has espoused, that of making Douglas President, by such a course, why let him rip. When Stephen A. Douglas invested his money to establish a paper for such small potatoes as Jeems to conduct he made a huge blunder. That's all.—[Circleville Herald.

Mr. Bremigam, it is very easy for you to say that we have "garbled extracts" from your paper; it is very easy for you to play the blackguard and betray your folly; it is very easy for you to make an insinuation which to you made little difference, whether true or false; but it would be a difficult task to show that we have "garbled extracts;" it would be difficult to make any capital out of you, if ground into guano and converted to its purposes; and, above all, it would be difficult for you to be anything else but an unmitigated jackass, whose "ears" betray the animal.—We garbled no extracts. We quoted correctly from the Herald; not that it was of the least importance that we should have quoted from the Herald at all, and if its editor says to the contrary, we wish him to understand that we are not at all surprised at his denial of the truth. As for Mr. DOUGLAS having invested his money to establish this paper, the idea would never have entered other than the noddle of an idiot. It is entirely original with long-eared Bremigam, who may rest under the shadow of his laurels for a week!

[illegible]—We are not the only Ohio editor who is afflicted with the Postmaster disease. Friend Rhoades of the Morrow County Democrat has given great offense to the Mt. Gilead incumbent.—Who knows but the order has gone out from Columbus head-quarters! We should infer that the Postmaster who discharges his duties as described by the Democrat in the following paragraph, needs a successor.

UNPARDONABLE MEANNESS.—Those of our subscribers, who have been getting their papers at the post office in this place, will please call at the "Democrat" office for their papers hereafter. The Postmaster of this place refuses to deliver our paper. Our pack for Merritt's P. O., in this county, was sent to the Postoffice in this place, last week, and has not been heard from since. Complaints come to us from all parts of the county which satisfies us, that Postmaster High, (as he delights to call himself,) is playing a deep and villainous game with us, which may, probably, lead to serious consequences to himself. We are laboring under great disadvantages, and we ask Democrats to remember the men who are laboring to ruin us, and at the same time professing to be Democrats.

GIDDINGS GIVES FURTHER DEFINING JUDGE GHOLSON.—Joshua R. Giddings considers the election this fall as of the utmost importance for the purpose of determining the proper character of the Republican party—whether it is actively and decidedly anti-slavery, or merely sentimentally so. And that it is to be determined by the boldness, prominence and clearness of the issues acted on—the utter repudiation of the Fugitive Law being one of them. With that idea, he does not mean to allow Judge Gholson to "ignore the main issue under cover of a "dignified silence." He, therefore, presses, on every suitable occasion, the fact, that the Reserve considers Judge Gholson under pledges to sustain Brinkerhoof and Sutliff in declaring the Fugitive Act unconstitutional. In a speech at Oberlin, the other day, he said:

"Mr. Gholson was pledged, strongly pledged, to the deciding of the law unconstitutional, for his friends from Cincinnati had so pledged him, and he was again pledged by being the candidate on the platform, which repudiated the law If he remained a candidate, determined, if elected, to declare the law constitutional, he would be a base man for thus violating pledges strongly made."

That is pretty strong talk, and under which Judge Gholson cannot rest in silence. Indeed, Judge Spalding, on the same occasion, said Mr. Gholson was to be ostracised, and if he did not pledge himself to hold, if elected, the Fugitive Law unconstitutional, he (Spalding) and thousands of others would refuse him their votes.—Cin. Enquirer.

DOUGLAS'S POSITION.—In another column we publish a letter written by Hon. S. A. Douglas in answer to certain inquiries by his friends, in regard to presenting his name before the Charleston Convention in 1860. He adheres with his accustomed tenacity to the great principles of Popular Sovereignty — takes nothing back that he said during the Senatorial campaign in Illinois. He stands to-day as he has ever stood upon the slavery question. The same platform in regard to slavery that Douglas stands upon, Clay and the old Whig party stood upon. He is opposed to a slave code to protect slavery in the territories, so is the Democratic party. He differs with the leaders of the Black Republican party in this wise; He believes this government can exist half slave and half free, and also believes that this government was made by white men for the benefit of the white man.—He is opposed to the right of suffrage being granted the negro. On these questions he differs with the Republican party.—Coles Co., (Ills.) Ledger.

☞ In Austria no one can receive a license to marry unless he is able to subscribe his name with his own hand to the certificate.

Maine Convention.

The following are the resolutions adopted by the Democratic State Convention, held at Bangor:

Resolved, That all political power is inherent in the people; that all free governments are founded in their authority and instituted for their benefit; that the right of self-government is the fundamental idea of our republican institutions, and the doctrine of the capacity of the people to govern themselves the corner stone of our political fabric, applicable alike to the States and Territories of our Union.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Maine re-assert the great principle of self government, or Popular Sovereignty, as the basis of their policy in reference to the organized territories of the United States.

Resolved, That acting upon the principle of absolute "non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories," which we recognise as eminently just and wise, we are opposed to any legislation by Congress to establish, abolish, regulate or protect slavery in the Territories.

Resolved, That we hold it to be the duty of the Democratic party steadfastly to adhere to the principles embodied in the Compromise Measures of 1850, and ratified by the people in the Presidential election of 1852, and re-affirmed in the Kansas-Nebraska act of 1854, which is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and in accordance with them, has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits, and incorporated into the Cincinnati platform of 1856, and to resist all attempts to interpolate into the creed of the party such new issues, and pledge ourselves to resist any attempt to re-open the African slave trade or a Congressional slave code for the Territories, or the doctrine that the Constitution of the United States either establishes or prohibits slavery in the Territories beyond the power of the people to control it.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federation Constitution; and that we invoke a more fraternal spirit between the remote sections of our common country.

Resolved, That in the two years' amendment in Massachusetts, under which naturalized citizens are cut off from the exercise of the elective franchise for two years after they have complied with all the conditions of citizenship, we recognize in the self-styled Republican party the proscriptive spirit of undisguised Know Nothingism; and we denounce this attempt to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro, by allowing the fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and withholding the same right from a white man.

Resolved, That the annexation of the Island of Cuba to the American Republic is imperiously called for by the interests of commerce and the demands of free trade, while the geographical position of that Island as the "Key to the Gulf," renders it a necessity with our government to prevent its passing under the dominion of any other European power.

Resolved, That we cordially exchange congratulations with our Democratic friends in other sections of the Union upon the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain in regard to the right of search in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion of Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and in the steady endeavor to retrench unnecessary expenses and to practice a wise economy. With these gratifying results before them of Democratic supremacy we appeal to the people of Maine to sustain, in their future elections, that great party by whose wise statesmanship such results have been accomplished.

WILL THE DEMOCRATS CARRY THE STATE?—We sincerely believe they will Two months ago we thought, as did many others, that our party had scarcely a ghost of a chance; but appearances are very different now. The Republicans have managed the campaign thus far in the most stupid and blundering manner.

They feared the effects of the Massachusetts constitutional amendment on the naturalized citizens, and put a little sugar in their platform to coax them back with. But the Know Nothings considered themselves insulted, and refuse emphatically to aid the Republicans, whatever may be the result.

They made a weak ticket,—one without force and without prestige. The best man before the convention was slaughtered to appease the Oberlinites, and his friends will remember his treatment at the election.

The Republicans of Ohio have become too much abolitionized. They are now led and controlled by Giddings and others of the same stamp. No man can deny that it was this element which sacrificed Swan. Nothing can be more certain than that Ohio is not an abolition State, and this constant tendency of the Republicans to merge into abolitionists has for several years been driving the more conservative from them. Now it has been clearly demonstrated that the Western Reserve abolitionists control the party against the Republicans of Eastern and Southern Ohio. This cannot fail to restore Ohio to the Democrats, and we have an abiding confidence that it will be done this fall.—Spirit of Democracy.

SENATOR DOUGLAS AND THE RIGHTS OF NATURALIZED CITIZENS.—A gentleman of this city inquires the position of the Illinois Senator in regard to the duty of our Government to protect naturalized citizens travelling in European countries. We assure our correspondent, (from the words of Mr. Douglas himself,) that he is distinctly opposed to the doctrine enunciated in the letter of General Cass; that he is in favor of protecting, in every land, the adopted as well as the native citizen. In support of his opinions, he instanced several remarkable cases in which the most powerful nations of Europe have asserted and recognized, among themselves, the absolute right of expatriation.—Cincinnati Times.

☞ Mr. Giddings was heard to declare on the streets in Columbus, recently, that he did not care anything about the ticket nominated by the Republicans, but he was determined to have the platform right. In other words, he was determined to abolitionize the Republican party.

He went to Columbus swearing vengeance against Judge Swan, demanded his head, and the demand was acceded to. He next demanded a platform to suit his views, and he got it. His next move will be to get Tom Corwin out of the ranks, which will be hard to do.—Ohio Press.

☞ At Worcester, Mass., on Tuesday, C. Edward H. Brummaway, President of the People's [illegible] company, a [illegible] and [illegible] man, committed suicide. Cause, temporary insanity, caused by ill health.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.
TERMS - - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
[illegible]
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar; and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unswerving, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

CHEAPEST IN THE STATE.

THE

CAMPAIGN PRESS,

PUBLISHED AT COLUMBUS, OHIO,

Will be sent to subscribers at the Low Rate of

25 Cents Each!!

until after the October Election, being the CHEAPEST CAMPAIGN PAPER in the State. This will enable the

CAMPAIGN PRESS

to reach all classes, and entitle it to

A Most Extensive Circulation.

20 Copies for $5!

☞ Our friends of the press in this State will please give this a few insertions or call attention to the fact.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
July 21st, 1859.

Democratic Meetings.

At the recent meeting of the State Central Committee in this city, the following appointments were made, commencing the canvass in the North West and the Southern counties at the same time.

Hon. Geo. E. Pugh and Gen. Joseph H. Geiger will address the people as follows:

Batavia, Clermont Co., Monday, August 15.
Georgetown, Brown Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
West Union, Adams Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Hillsboro', Highland Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Washington, Fayette Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Wilmington, Clinton Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

Wm. H. Safford, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Major D. W. Stambaugh, of Tuscarawas County, will address the people as follows:

Bryan, Williams Co., Monday, Aug. 15.
Defiance, Defiance Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Paulding, Paulding Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Napoleon, Henry Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Ottokee, Fulton Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Perrysburgh, Wood Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

By Order of the State Central Committee.

The Presidency and the State Canvass.

The Bucyrus "Forum" of last week says:

THE PRESIDENCY is just now troubling some of our Democratic cotemporaries in Ohio unnecessarily. The staunch Democracy of the Union will attend to all that in due time, through judiciously selected delegates. In the meantime let our friends devote all their energies to redeem from the grasp of the enemy our noble Ohio. There are some counties too in our State which may be benefitted by the policy thus suggested. Let Presidential scheming sleep and attend for a few months to home affairs. Battle to redeem the State and let Presidential aspirants seek intriguing tools elsewhere than in Ohio. We have no candidate as yet for the next presidency, and shall have no other than the Charleston nominee. Being no man's man we speak thus.

The Hillsborough "Gazette," of about the same date, says:

We notice that several of our Democratic cotemporaries are zealously engaged discussing matters relative to the Presidential campaign of 1860, and urging the claims of their favorite candidates to a nomination by the Charleston Convention; and in doing this they seem to have entirely forgotten, or purposely ignored, as a thing of minor importance, our State ticket—This should not be. The presidential campaign is yet a long way off, and it will be time enough to agitate it after our State election is over. To do so now only lessens our chances of success in the State canvass. The best way, in our opinion, to advance the claims of your choice for President, is to first help carry the State for the Democracy. That accomplished, you will have added much to the prospects of success of your favorite candidate, should he be the nominee.—As it is, nothing is to be gained by discussing the issues which may likely be brought into the Presidential canvass, to the almost entire neglect of our local election,—but, on the other hand, everything may be lost. Let the success of our State ticket, then, be the all engrossing subject. Let us work for it, write for it, and talk for it. Let us open upon the enemy—charge along their lines, nor cease our fire until the conflict is over and a glorious victory won.

There is a remarkable coincidence that this thought should have occurred to two different Democratic editors at the same instant. The "Statesman" in noticing the letter of Mr. Dodson(?), expressed some such idea, and the seed thus thrown out seems to be sprouting freely.—Our Democratic brethren of the Ohio press, are free to act as they please. We are a careful reader of their papers, and are surprised that they should be charged with remissness in conducting the State canvass. We have not seen one which has not given it marked attention.—While the active campaign is not to commence until August, the press, without exception that we have seen, have exhibited unusual energy in commending the Democratic ticket to the consideration of the people, and pointing a lance at every unclosed rivet of their adversaries.

We cannot perceive the force of the argument that it would be advantageous to the Democracy of Ohio to let the Presidential question sleep.—It is an indifferent cause that fears daylight; and a candidate is not worth supporting whose name must not be mentioned, or at most be only muttered in mysterious whispers. We say this is the time when the Democratic papers of Ohio should speak out boldly, and not by their silence permit unscrupulous politicians to desecrate with impunity their platform by false construction, or misrepresent their favorite statesman, by imputing to him motives and principles he does not entertain.

While we urge and implore them to do all in their power, to omit nothing that will advance the cause of Democracy, and the election of their State ticket, yet we warn them that there is danger in silence as to their Presidential preferences. He may be a most excellent Democrat who is willing to announce that he will "go it blind" for the Charleston nominee—he may be of strong faith, and to him it may matter little what platform may be adopted, or what person designated as the champion of that platform, but, from unmistakable indications, there are schemes on foot which the Democracy of Ohio cannot consistently endorse, and which had better be nipped in the bud, than be permitted to gain strength by seeming acquiescence and silence. The persistent attacks upon Senator Douglas by the Government organ at Washington, its misconstruction of the Democratic platform, its presentation of false issues, its misrepresentation of the principles of Mr Douglas its abandonment of the great principle of Popular Sovereignty, are sufficient to cause each Democratic press in Ohio to speak out and defend the right. Who is to be injured? What Democratic candidate for a State office is to suffer loss if not defeat, by an expression by the Democratic newspapers of their preference for the Presidency? Let us not like craven cowards tremble at the thought that our preference may be known. The Democratic candidate should be a consistent representative of principles.—He should inspire confidence by his past life. He should be one who could bring strength to the Democratic ticket everywhere. He should be a man like Stephen A. Douglas, whose record is patent that he will not misinterpret Democracy or misconstrue the platform; upright and steadfast in his political principles, unswayed by pestiferous influences, unswerved by flattery, straightforward, earnest, determined and frank. It is not indispensable, in manifesting our preference, that others should be disparaged; but it is indispensable that the platform be adhered to. We may differ honestly about men, but about principles there can be and should be no mistake. We are not willing to take our chances and proclaim in advance that the nominee of the Charleston Convention is good enough for us. We want to know the man, and the platform on which he stands, and if he is likely to stand squarely on that platform. If the Administration had bought up no paper and established no paper to be used for a certain anti-democratic purpose; if its purpose had been concealed from all, as it seems to have been from those who wont see, the recommendation of silence might not be so objectionable. But to be silent is to acquiesce; and to tamely and ignominiously submit, is to be gifted with more pusillanimity than is characteristic of the Democratic press.

What is to prevent a blending of our national interests with those of the State, in the canvass? Are they so separate and distinct that they are not to be named in the same breath?—Will none of the national issues be introduced in the State canvass? Fudge! The canvass will principally turn upon national issues.—State issues will be a mere drop in the bucket. The Presidency will be the theme, and the steps by which it is to be attained, be the ladder by which the State offices are to be reached. Just at this time it is inconvenient for the Ohio "Statesman" to take sides with the Administration, or announce its determination to support Mr. Douglas, but because that paper should be in a quandary, it is no reason other papers, not so situated, should put their fingers on their lips. The Democratic party in Ohio do not expect to succeed by a ruse or trick; or by hood-winking and abusing the confidence of the people. They expect to succeed by boldly proclaiming their principles, and defending them in the presence of the people. They do not expect to have one set for one section, and another set for another section. Bush-fighting may do for guerrillas, but they will take the open plain, and meet the adversary like men, not with the feline stealthiness, that lurks in some covert to spring upon its prey unawares.

How an expression by the press on topics connected with the Presidency is to "lessen the chances of success in the State canvass," we are at a loss to perceive. Will our good friends of the Bucyrus "Forum" and Hillsborough "Gazette" enlighten us on that point? or will the "Statesman," which is father to the thought, descend to an explanation? We most sincerely and earnestly wish the success of the State ticket; nor would we throw a straw in its way to impede its triumphal progress. We are prepared to labor as untiringly as any Democrat in the State for its success, but always honestly, honorably, and with the approbation of our own conscience. We expect to do as good service as any, but shall never disgrace our party by pernicious counsels or by conniving at fraud upon the people. Our flag for the Presidency in 1860 is unfurled—Stephen A. Douglas—and upon the Cincinnati platform without moving a plank. Let those who are timid pursue their own way as they may judge best. Our party adopted the platform on which Mr. Douglas stands, and as an earnest supporter of that platform, we are proud to uphold the name of its great champion.

Judge Ranney and the Power of Congress in the Territories.

The Republican papers are busily engaged in examining the political record of the Democratic candidate for Governor, and are very much shocked to find that in 1848 he was adverse to the Fugitive Slave law, against which they are hypocritically beating now. It has been represented by them, that he took part in a meeting in Mahoning county, in opposition to the law at the time of its passage, strongly denouncing it. They likewise refer to the letter written by him, when a candidate for Congress, in 1848, to B. F. HOFFMAN, in which he used the following language:

"I am in favor of maintaining the freedom of the territories of New Mexico and California in their whole extent, and utterly opposed to authorizing slavery or involuntary servitude of any kind within them, or to any compromise which shall doom any part of them to the curse of human bondage. * * * * * *

It is conceded that these territories are now free. They must remain so until changed by positive law of the sovereign power. No question is better settled in this country than that slavery exists in a country by virtue of the local law. It is clear that it can no more exist in a territory without such law, than a man can breathe without air. Neither Congress nor a Territorial Legislature, in my opinion, possess the power to establish it. It can only be done by the people when admitted as a State under the general principles of the Constitution. I have no doubt of the power of Congress to erect Territorial Governments, and to provide for the prohibition of slavery within the territories, and I am in favor of and would support such prohibition."

The first charge was met by a point blank denial by the Cleveland "Democrat," which, while admitting that Judge RANNEY was present at the meeting by accident, represented that he spoke but a few moments in opposition to the incendiary resolutions offered on the occasion, and advising moderation and obedience to the law. We re-published the article relying upon its accuracy, which has since been denied by the Republican papers. As the two candidates for Governor will shortly commence the campaign in company, we shall soon know from Judge RANNEY himself, how far he was involved in the proceedings as reported. His connection with the meeting may have been greatly exaggerated, or it may have been as represented by the Cleveland "Democrat," that he counseled forbearance and moderation.

With regard to the letter to Mr. HOFFMAN, the extracts from which, as given by Republican papers, we publish in this article, we may consistently say a word or two. He might have entertained the sentiments expressed as to freedom in New Mexico and California, without a shadow of inconsistency with his present position. It is only the latter clause regarding the power of Congress "to provide for the prohibition of slavery within the territories" that seems in antagonism to the Democratic platform. This letter was written prior to the compromises of 1850, and consequently anterior to the Kansas Nebraska act in conformity to those compromises, which furnish the substratum of the Democratic creed. It was settled by those compromises and by the Kansas-Nebraska act, that Congress should not exercise this power; but that the settlement of the slavery question should be left to the people of the territories, themselves.

What is said about freedom existing in New Mexico and California, when annexed to the United States, is true. But the principle will not be conceded by the Republicans, when applied to the Louisiana purchase. The excitement growing out of the contention of North and South for the establishment of this very principle, that the law of the former government should attach to the ceded domain, resulted in and produced the compromises of 1850 and relieved Congress from its further consideration.

Before those compromises were established, the Democratic party were very much divided upon the question—the opinions of individuals depending in a great measure upon their location. There were other questions of difference between the parties which were at that time unsettled, and claimed the attention of politicians. That of the negro had not been made paramount to all others. That Judge RANNEY's views and opinions may have undergone modification since the compromises were effected, does not detract from his firmness of purpose, his attachment to freedom or his integrity as a statesman. It is the settled policy of the government that the whole subject should be referred to the people themselves; which, in 1848, he recognized as belonging to them to determine, when they should come to form a State Constitution, but which in the Kansas-Nebraska act, and in the Cincinnati Platform was left with the people of the territories through their respective legislatures, and the Courts, subject only to the Constitution of the United States.

Judge RANNEY, then, in maintaining the Democratic platform, is not inconsistent; but he would be as inconsistent as the Republicans, if he were to resist the settled policy of the country, as contended for and sustained by the Democratic party.

The Colored People.

On the evening of the Fourth, as we are informed, a few of our colored people, with their wives and sweethearts, sought admittance to the Promenade Concert, and were refused, whereat they are highly indignant. The wiser and better mannered portion stayed away, well knowing that any attempt, on their part, to mingle in a purely social assemblage of this kind, would be vain and treated by those who got it up for their own entertainment, as an impertinent intrusion.

Independently of all theoretical questions of individual right and equality, the white people of Xenia choose to recognize, in their social capacity, the practical fact of the distinction which Nature has fixed between the two antipodal races. Our colored people ought, by this time, to know—they have surely had hints enough—that they are never invited to any of our social parties, either private or public, simply because their presence is not desired; and that, if they persist in intruding on such occasions, they may expect a rebuff—possibly, sometime, with such an emphatic significance as will effectually check all similar impertinences in the future.—[Xenia News.

Now, this will not be very acceptable news to the Giddings and Spaldings and Bushnells and Langstons(?) of the Reserve. They would simply regard it as an outrage upon human nature—upon decency, upon good breeding, upon the rights of the negro. Nor are they as fastidious as the more reserved inhabitants of Greene, who think there is yet some social disparity between the two races. And here is the paradox—one in which the friends and sympathisers of Tom Corwin find themselves involved. Tom, himself, is ashamed of the party with which he is acting. He takes every occasion to refer to his own swart complexion as indicative of the affinity between the negro and himself—a joke of which he never wearies, and the applicability of which his political allies receive with apparent satisfaction.

There are a great many patriotic and well-disposed people, who act against the Democracy, but claim to believe with them that the two races should, for their mutual advantage, be kept separate and distinct. They take every occasion to assert that while they oppose the extension of slavery, they are adverse to the equality of the negro with the white, so frankly admitted upon the Reserve.

This demonstration at Xenia is illustrative of the feeling. The "News" is a strong [illegible] Republican paper, and we imagine is a fair reflector of public sentiment in its meridian. It seems to be unwilling, while "theoretical questions of individual right and equality" are indulged in, to recognize the same right and equality in social life, and gives a fair warning of what may be the consequences of future attempts to assert this "right and equality."

We are surprised at the practical proscription in the people of Xenia, or at least that portion of them who act in full communion with the people of the Reserve.

They should show less stringency and more forbearance toward their colored brethren, for whose political equality they are daily laboring in their full fellowship with the fanatics who are above all distinctions of color and race, and who would not consider the participation in their Fourth of July or any public demonstration, by the colored people, "an impertinent intrusion."

The "News" admits that the clamor of Northern enthusiasts and theorists about equal rights, is all wrong, for it asserts "the practical fact of the distinction which Nature has fixed between the two antipodal races." (There is some difference in the formation of the fact, it must be acknowledged; but that is not the fault of the negro.)

We have heard Mr. CORWIN impressively and eloquently appeal to the voters of Ohio, to ponder well, how they exercise this dearest privilege of freemen—the basis of their freedom, the foundation-stone of their government; and exhort them not to cast their suffrage lightly and without mature reflection. He has disclaimed the theory of the mad fanatics, whose whole tendencies go to the equalization of the races politically, and as a consequence, immediate and of necessity, socially; and yet he acts with them. The people of Xenia, and that region naturally admire and respect him, and are very much guided by his example; and they too swell the columns of the grand army, just now led off by such men as GIDDINGS, WADE, and those who invite the negro to a full participation in the practical workings of the government. They are opposed to the Democratic party, and doubtless find many points of difference; but none so broad and deep as their essential distinction which they assert to exist between themselves and their co-laborers. They apologise for being found in the same love-feast with their fanatic friends, but there they are. They pretend to expect to improve the rising with their leaven. But all former efforts have proved abortive. The Republican party have gone on and on, until they rule with their own [illegible], and conservatism has been blotted from their vocabulary. Within one year the strides they have made could not have been anticipated six months ago. As well might the frail vessel that is hurried down the rapids of Niagara attempt to arrest the mighty cataract, as for Mr. Corwin, or his friends and admirers, and followers if you will, while co-operating with the Republican party of Ohio, endeavor to stop its wild and wicked and fanatical career.

We admire Mr. CORWIN—his genius, his attainments, his eloquence, his goodness of heart, but we cannot refrain from an expression of discontent, of reproach rather, that he should act with a party with which, according to his own showing, he has so little affinity, and which does not sympathise with him.

☞ The Statesman talks of some one performing the part of Judas "in the heat of the struggle"—a very inconvenient period,—a part which that concern takes care to perform before the struggle when, it can safely bestow the thirty pieces.

☞ The Statesman may call names "like a very drab," but it cannot conceal its ignorance. It calls a gentleman a skunk and talks of the skunk's "jackal bay." Well posted in natural history!

There is a paper in this city called the Post—Statesman.

The people of "this city" are well aware of it, as its readers greatly exceed those of the Statesman in number.

The Galled Jade Winces.

[From the Fact.]

The Statesman squeals this morning. Somebody is treading on its tail. It is down upon the "Democratic county officials," Messrs. [illegible], COLE and ALBERRY(?) for the appointment of THOMAS SPARROW, Esq., as Commissioner. It says:

This act of our Democratic county officials has furnished the morning and evening organs of the Republican party, with material for original articles, almost daily ever since the thing happened.

There, now, gentlemen, see what you have done! You have not consulted "the Democracy of Franklin county," which means "us," and the Post-Office clique! While we politely inform the Statesman that it does not regard the truth in speaking of this paper as the "evening organ of the Republican party," we admit that the appointment of Mr. SPARROW gave us the liveliest satisfaction. We knew him to be intelligent, industrious and incorruptible, and beyond the influence of the "TOM MILLER clique," whose usurpations have wearied the patience of the people of this county. We expressed our approbation of this appointment, and it gave us pleasure to do so; and it is equally pleasing to know that there could not have been a more popular appointment made by the "Democratic county officials," notwithstanding the mean and contemptible insinuations of the Statesman.

When the affairs of the Treasury relating to the stupendous defalcation were to be examined, and other pressing business precluded Mr. DENNISON from acting, Gov. CHASE, had confidence in the integrity and capacity of Mr. SPARROW, and assigned to him the task, which he performed with industry, care and to the satisfaction of all, except those [illegible] politicians who desired to deceive the people by subterfuge and false allegations. Mr. SPARROW's report was much more intelligible than that of the subsequent committee, invested with full power to send for persons and papers, (which authority he had not,) and quite as satisfactory, although it did not swell into an enormous volume. It was not relished by the Miller clique, because the basis of the campaign had been arranged by them, through COX, their representative, upon a deception, that all the money had been abstracted by the successor of BRESLIN, except that portion which the latter had accounted for as deposited in broken banks, some by Gov. CHASE's advice. Mr. SPARROW, to meet the impatient expectation of the public, fulfilled his duty without delay; and, without attempting to give a party bias to his investigations. He said what has been endorsed by the subsequent commission, that the bulk of the defalcation transpired in BRESLIN's term, and that GIBSON had endeavored to conceal the frauds by falsehood, and had "disregarded truth and his sworn official duty."

This is about all that the Edgerton-Morgan-and-Reemelin report afterwards disclosed, except that the latter was more copious in details and more confused in arrangement, and besides, it weakened its own force by attempting to involve others in the original defalcation by an exhibit which merely showed the finances of this great State had been very loosely kept, and the people's confidence very badly abused.

But this is foreign to our purpose. Mr. SPARROW did his duty—he did not fall short of, or go beyond it. He did not bend to the pressure of unprincipled and tricky politicians, and that was an unpardonable offence in their estimation.

Our present business is with the Statesman's animadversions on "the appointment of THOMAS SPARROW." It says:

"The motive which governed the county officers in appointing Mr. Sparrow is unknown to us, and therefore we are unable to speak with certainty in reference to it. All will admit that he is qualified to discharge the duties of Commissioner, but we apprehend he is not the only man in the county who is capable."

The qualifications of Mr. SPARROW are thus reluctantly admitted; and although "not the only man in the county who is capable," we might readily conceive that the fact of his being "qualified" was sufficient "motive" on the part of the "Democratic county officials," knowing the respectability, and integrity of the gentleman, to make the appointment. It has not been denied, that we have seen, that there are other capable men, but that fact did not disqualify Mr. SPARROW. But here is the "rub." The Statesman says:

"Bolting the ticket is not considered a passport to party favor. He has not felt himself bound to sustain the organization or vote the ticket, for several years past, and his report on the Treasury Defalcation has met the universal condemnation of the party, not only in this county, but throughout the entire State."

Mr. SPARROW would not vote for COX for Congress, because he had good cause to know that he was not reliable. COX had pretended to be his friend and advised him that he would not be removed as Postmaster, when he had urged the President and obtained his promise to remove him and appoint TOM MILLER. Does anybody blame him for bolting COX? Nay, he did not bolt him, for he could not swallow, the little trickster.

As to the condemnation of his report by the party, it amounted to this. COX and MILLER had insisted that the idea should be sedulously inculcated that GIBSON was the defaulter; and the report stood in the way of enforcing the charge, which was to a great extent untrue, as the bulk of defalcation transpired during BRESLIN's term, whatever hand GIBSON may have had in the use of part of the money. These little politicians were frustrated in their knavish scheme by the integrity of Mr. SPARROW. They desired to abuse the public mind by falsehood. Mr. SPARROW said it had been abstracted before Mr. GIBSON's term of office; and that GIBSON thought not responsible for the defalcation of half a million or more, was untrustworthy, because he had forfeited his official oath.

But, says the Statesman: "the Democracy of the county have not had anything to do with the appointment and are in no wise responsible for it. It is the act of the Auditor, Probate Judge and Recorder."

The Statesman further adds:

"A little careful consideration and reflection on the part of the county officers, would have induced them to have acted differently, and thus saved themselves and their Democratic friends from the mortifying effects of an act which cannot be regarded otherwise than a blunder."

The Auditor, Probate Judge and Recorder are sworn to discharge their duty, and have faithfully discharged it. The "little careful consideration and reflection" means a consultation with the Miller clique and nothing else, for they have constituted themselves "the Democracy of Franklin County." We are confident the appointment was made by the proper officers after due deliberation and in the faithful discharge of their duty. One more acceptable to the people of Franklin could not have been made. If the Miller clique are "mortified" by such a "blunder," it is not the last mortification to which they will be subjected until the people of Franklin County shake off this "old man of the Sea."

In the heat of the struggle he performs the part of Judas, and when the fight is over his jackal bay is heard.—Statesman.

You had better take care or he may perform the part of Peter, who left a certain obnoxious character minus an ear.

You can see Marshall holding up his hand to see which way the wind blows.—Statesman.

The case is different with the scrub of the Statesman, who holds up his snout(?).

—We learn by the Toledo Blade that a brute calling himself Philip Gardner, of Cleveland, has been arrested at Sylvania, charged with outraging the person of a little girl, aged 12, by the name of Emma Suggs. She was in a field gathering blackberries.

The First Ward Election.

The Statesman is crest-fallen, dumfounded, out of condition, evidently "departed." The election in the First Ward did not go to suit the Millerites. Millerism is on the decline. Its tricks cannot hold out forever. For one [illegible] the Post-Office [illegible] the multitude, who are not to be gulled any longer by promises of appointments and places. The First Ward is but one of the symptoms. Let it be borne in mind that whatever TOM MILLER touches turns to [illegible]. The people will not be governed and driven by an unscrupulous clique with MILLER and COX at their head. The ticket that MILLER will get up for the county will be beaten. Mark that!

Yesterday, in the First Ward, the election, as we anticipated, resulted in favor of S. E. OGDEN by a majority of 64 over [illegible] CRARY. We thought Mr. CRARY was entitled to his seat after the April election, but the proposition came from his counsel to leave the matter with the people; and although in the meantime the city was subjected to expense and the parties to trouble, the matter was left to the people who decided that they preferred another. The Ward is Republican by from thirty to fifty votes. A good deal of sympathy was felt for Mr. CRARY and he obtained votes because of the decision of the Council, which under other circumstances he would not have obtained. It was industriously used, and much to his advantage. The "Ted Hall"(?) party is totally "played out" in the First Ward. Their identification with Millerism is well understood; and the generous Hibernian phalanx so confiding heretofore, will have their eyes opened to the influences which have misled them.

When there are Democrats, who hold to the true principles of the Democratic party, who will not touch any thing which TOM MILLER recommends because however coated it may be, there is corruption beneath.

The election was conducted very orderly and no votes were allowed without rigid scrutiny. It is believed that not a spurious vote was received. Very few if any were offered. The number of votes polled was 500 against 611 in April. It is possible that several Democrats abstained from voting, which would make up one third of the seeming disparity. Very great exertions were made by the friends of CRARY, but in vain. We have already shown why.

The Statesman yesterday claimed CRARY's election. It said:

"We understand that the Joany(?) clique are making desperate efforts to defeat Mr. Crary but they will doubtless fail.

He was clearly elected before by the legal voters of the Ward, and if there is a sharp look out kept by Democrats for frauds to-day, he will be elected again. Let the judgment of the people be re-affirmed with redoubled emphasis."

"A sharp look out" was "kept," and he was not elected, despite the Statesman's prophecy. Even the Statesman confesses that

"There was very few illegal votes polled, notwithstanding a vain effort made by the Penitentiary folks to "run in" men from other wards, or who had not been in the city a week."

Let the Statesman point out one illegal vote polled, if it can. Its ungrammatical defiance of truth, is not unexpected; let it make its charge explicit. Who tried to run in illegal votes?

The Statesman this morning says of the election:

"This result was not altogether unexpected for the unequal odds against which the Democracy had to contend, makes it almost impossible on a test vote, as that of yesterday was, to carry the precinct. The Penitentiary, Lunatic Asylum, and Gas Company, are the institutions that defeat the Democracy there as they have done since under the control of the Republicans."

Contrast this with the extract we give from the Statesman of yesterday, which claimed that CRARY would be elected, but says now its defeat was not unexpected! What confidence can be reposed in the statements of such an arrant liar with such peculiar brevity of memory?

The cause of defeat is set down to the Penitentiary, the Lunatic Asylum and Gas Company. Why, those institutions were all there when the Statesman claimed a triumph. We heard nothing of the convicts or lunatics voting, and the force in the Gas Works was not increased for the occasion. The Republican majority in the ward, which is small, and anti-Millerism will defeat Millerism in that ward at any time.

Of the 500 votes polled, CRARY had 218, and OGDEN had 282 giving the latter a majority of 64. The Republican majority in the ward does not exceed fifty, but anti-Millerism did the rest. We warn other candidates in time.

The Statesman's Tactics.

The tactics of the Statesman must be admired, in setting down the First Ward as having been always Republican, which is well-known to be false, but under the MILLER regime it bids fair to be so henceforth. The Statesman will tell any kind of a lie to shelter itself. The people have not forgotten that two years ago, at the general election, the Ward was carried by 19 majority for W. B. PAYNE, when hostility to TOM MILLER cost the Democrats some twenty or thirty Irish votes! Other instances might be cited of the First Ward being Democratic, only it is unnecessary. In 1856 COX was beaten by CASE in that Ward one hundred and eleven votes, but COX was not considered the Democratic party, but regarded as TOM MILLER's creature. The CITY FACT exposed the way in which he had sold himself and the Statesman to get government patronage and the Post-Office for TOM MILLER. The ill-treatment of Col. MEDARY which subsequently transpired would have increased the majority against COX another hundred in the Ward, but very few believed that such an outrage would be perpetrated until it had actually transpired. Good, sound, honest, reliable Democrats would not go COX. Like Mr. SPARROW, they bolted him, but that did not make the Ward a Republican Ward. In 1855 the majority of MEDILL over CHASE in the First Ward, was 64—just what the majority of OGDEN now is over CRARY—yet the Statesman says the Ward was always Republican. When the Ward went for PAYNE, in 1857, the Lunatic Asylum, Penitentiary and Gas Works were in the Ward, and Mr. CHASE was Governor; but Millerism had not shown so bold and impudent a front as it assumes now. Perhaps the recollection of defeat for Sheriff, falling far behind the party ticket, had not then quite faded from TOM MILLER's memory. Nor had the illustrious exhibitions of MILLER and COX as Postmaster and Congressman filled the Ward with such wondrous admiration for their sagacity as statesmen and disinterestedness as patriots.

We rather think the MILLER dynasty is about playing itself out; and from the estimation in which the Statesman is held here at home, that feeble instrument of unscrupulous demagoguery is rapidly playing itself out, too. A mere engine, an small members of the party who will not bow to MILLER and COX supremacy, and acknowledge MANYPENNY's infallibility, it is losing all consideration and respect, as well as subscribers, who at best, in the city of Columbus, are few and far between, and although known to be "small by degrees" are constantly growing "beautifully less." Feeding on ill-gained government patronage, it has no sympathy in common with the people of Columbus. A mere leech on the Democratic party—dependent solely upon its position as government organ—there is precious little respect entertained for it out of the very narrow and limited circle whose machinations and intentions it in part represents.—[Fact.

The Falsehoods of the Statesman.

The ridiculous personal abuse of Mr. MARSHALL by the Statesman, this morning, shows the utter recklessness of the Central organ, and the absurdities and falsehoods to which it is driven in the blind fury of impotent rage. For several months past, it has, on repeated occasions, applied all manner of epithets to Mr. MARSHALL, calling him, "imbecile," "stupid," "blockhead," "fool"—in fine, exhausting the vocabulary of slang picked up before the mast, or at Billingsgate, or in the purlieus of some low sailors' boarding house. We might imagine the editor of the Statesman to have dwelt long among the demi-savages of the frontier, where the debasing influences of whisky and its association have done their worst in corrupting and destroying the native elevation of character of the untutored red man—where language suited to polite ears is rarely heard, and the tongue becomes familiar with low and vulgar phraseology.

We have before informed the Statesman that Mr. MARSHALL does not edit this paper. The name of the editor is announced in its columns. It stands as responsible for what appears in the FACT as the name of GEORGE W. MANYPENNY for what may appear in the Statesman.

If satisfaction were demanded for the contemptible and paltry falsehoods, which are current in the Statesman, and the vulgar epithets which it so lavishly employs, would MANYPENNY skulk behind the mean subterfuge that he didn't write the article, but that it was written by one of his scullions? While we are for a large liberty in the press, there should be responsibility somewhere, and when an editor's name is announced, he is, and should be responsible for what appears in his paper. MANYPENNY may not write all that appears in the Statesman, but if by accident an able article should appear in its columns he would get the credit of it. But that is not likely to happen often.

The article in this morning's Statesman referring to Mr. MARSHALL as editor of the FACT is so replete with bald and unblushing falsehood—shows a reckless malignity that pauses at nothing—is so palpably and glaringly a mean, dirty concatenation of lies, that it hardly merits wasting a breath or thought upon it. Mr. MARSHALL has his own paper to edit—is responsible for what appears therein, as the editor of the Statesman will find whenever he calls upon him, but we take the liberty to represent the responsibility of the FACT, and as distinctly assert that in the thirty or forty lines in the Statesman's article in reference to this paper, involving several charges, there is not one particle of truth from beginning to end, nor even the remotest shadow of the truth.—[City Fact.

The Statesman's Efforts to be Harmonious.

The charge made in the Statesman of Saturday against Mr. SPARROW, to exculpate itself for its undisguised hostility to that gentleman, that for several years he had disregarded the Democratic organization, caused quite a sensation among the Democrats of the city, who knew the charge to be untrue. A Democrat who had stood at the polls for seven years with Mr. SPARROW, assured us that he had never faltered in that time; but when COX was a candidate for re-election he declined taking his accustomed station at the Ward polls, because he did not, himself, intend to vote for COX and would not advise others to do so. He had lost all confidence in COX, who had meanly deceived him, and was unwilling to endorse the anti-weevil candidate by his suffrage.

Mr. SPARROW would not, in conformity with the wishes of MILLER and COX, take the ground that not BRESLIN, but GIBSON had made away with the treasure of the State, when he believed it to be false, and this is considered by the Statesman disregarding the party organization.

Like other Democrats, Mr. SPARROW is unwilling to be dictated to by unscrupulous and selfish knaves who undertake to conduct and control the Democratic party of Franklin county, for which he is set down by the Statesman, (which is all the time prating about harmony) as a disorganizer.

If the Democratic party can long survive such generalship as is evinced by the Statesman in reading out of the party such old, long-tried and respected Democrats as THOMAS SPARROW, and to cover its assaults, misrepresents him, grossly and wantonly, it is indeed immortal.

A MODEST REQUEST.—Won't the editor of the Statesman please deny the charge that he was in favor of withdrawing the name of Judge Whitman from the Democratic State Ticket and substituting that of Judge Swan therefor? Several days since, it will be remembered, we stated that we had good Democratic authority for saying that he was in favor of such a change; but instead of denying the charge, that brilliant military and political strategist contented himself with calling us all manner of hard names and broadly asserting that we had "no authority, responsible or otherwise," for the statement. Now, if Mr. Manypenny was not guilty, why did he not say so in so many words, and demand our authority for the charge, so that he and ourselves could be placed fairly before the public, instead of making himself more contemptible by dodging the issue and indulging in low, abusive language without [illegible].

The truth is, the "Colonel" has placed himself in a very awkward and reprehensible position; and to escape therefrom he has adopted the tactics of a certain fish which emits a dirty and offensive substance that discolors the water and hides it from its pursuers. Such a course may possibly save him from the condemnation of his leaders, but it will not satisfy the public. For the purpose, therefore, of doing himself a substantial favor, we again ask him to deny the charge. Won't he please deny it?—"just this once." Do, now—good boy!—Zanesville Courier.

Whenever MANYPENNY is cornered, he maintains a "dignified silence" or pours out a torrent of epithets whose flow causes astonishment that one poor head could contain them all.

The Zanesville Courier, it will be remembered charged, on the authority of a well-known Democratic correspondent, that MANYPENNY during a visit to Zanesville, or passing through the town, made arrangements for swapping off Judge WHITMAN for Judge SWAN. The "Colonel" attempted to equivocate himself out of the scrape, and although detected himself in furthering the proposition, cried out to the Cincinnati Enquirer "for shame! you are very wrong to entertain any such preposterous idea!" Instead of denying the charge of the Courier (the Zanesville Democratic paper is also down on MANYPENNY) the editor of the Statesman threatens to make Mr. BENNETT remember (a threat which he has no idea of making good) if he should endorse the articles which are set down as written by MANYPENNY. Is not the editor of the Statesman responsible for what appears in his paper, and if he desires to hold Mr. BENNETT responsible for what appears in the Courier, can he not do so or cause him to disclaim?

PAPERS IN OHIO FOR STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

Cincinnati—Enquirer.
Cleveland—Plaindealer.
Columbus—People's Press.
Toledo—Herald.
Allen County—National.
Delaware—Standard.
Clermont—Sun.
McArthur—Democrat.
Van Wert—Constitution.
Sandusky—Democrat.
Logan—Gazette.
Monroe—Spirit of Democracy.

We shall continue our list from time to time, as we receive unmistakable evidences of preference.

Judge Gholson among his Friends.

Judge SPALDING holds this language, in speaking of the SWAN imbroglio.

He was dropped for the reason that he, as a Judicial Officer, recognized the Fugitive Slave Enactment of 1850 to be of binding force in Ohio; and the other two Judges, who were with him in opinion, will be dropped, in the same way, so soon as they are reached in the order of time. We do not recognize men to be Republicans, here, in northern Ohio who will, for a moment, sustain that miserable enactment.

The Ashtabula Sentinel, of which J. R. GIDDINGS is corresponding editor, says:

The writer of this article was a delegate; he conversed with delegates from almost all parts of the State, and heard no other objection to Judge Swan than his decision in the case alluded to. Indeed most of them appeared surprised and mortified that his name should be pressed upon the convention after making that decision.

And further, the same paper, and we believe GIDDINGS himself, a delegate, says of Judge GHOLSON:

It was because Judge Gholson believed his slaves had been endowed by their Creator with the right to liberty that he emancipated them and came to Ohio with them.

And yet the Memphis Avalanche and other southern papers, charge that instead of manumitting his slaves, he put them on the block and sold them at auction. This had better be examined into by those who consider it an unpardonable sin to "TRADE IN HUMAN FLESH;" and who would not regard a life-time of atonement sufficient expiation for so hideous a crime!

The Sentinel and Mr. GIDDINGS further add:

"His friends asked his nomination because he was devoted to the very doctrines which Judge Swan discarded. In avowing these principles, he proclaims his intention to support them. He is pledged to them. He has the example of Judge Swan's rejection before him. As he takes the oath of office he wears the resolution of the convention that nominated him, declaring the fugitive act not merely unconstitutional, but proclaiming it subversive of the rights of the States, the liberties of the people, and abhorrent to the moral sense of the civilized world."

We really think that comment is unnecessary; and that Judge GHOLSON will indeed be a favored mortal; if he can satisfy these friends as well as those who entertain different views.

☞ James Birney Marshall, the nephew of his uncle, who had a brother in Congress, and who graduated at an Ohio College, now editor of the Columbus "Press," has a fashion of publishing garbled extracts from this paper.—If he can make any capital for the cause he has espoused, that of making Douglas President, by such a course, why let him rip. When Stephen A. Douglas invested his money to establish a paper for such small potatoes as Jeems to conduct he made a huge blunder. That's all.—[Circleville Herald.

Mr. Bremigam, it is very easy for you to say that we have "garbled extracts" from your paper; it is very easy for you to play the blackguard and betray your folly; it is very easy for you to make an insinuation which to you made little difference, whether true or false; but it would be a difficult task to show that we have "garbled extracts;" it would be difficult to make any capital out of you, if ground into guano and converted to its purposes; and, above all, it would be difficult for you to be anything else but an unmitigated jackass, whose "ears" betray the animal.—We garbled no extracts. We quoted correctly from the Herald;" not that it was of the least importance that we should have quoted from the Herald at all, and if its editor says to the contrary, we wish him to understand that we are not at all surprised at his denial of the truth. As for Mr. DOUGLAS having invested his money to establish this paper, the idea would never have entered other than the noddle of an idiot. It is entirely original with long-eared Bremigam, who may rest under the shadow of his laurels for a week!

POSTMASTERS(?).—We are not the only Ohio editor who is afflicted with the Postmaster disease. Friend Rhoades of the Morrow County Democrat has given great offense to the Mt. Gilead incumbent.—Who knows but the order has gone out from Columbus head-quarters! We should infer that the Postmaster who discharges his duties as described by the Democrat in the following paragraph, needs a successor.

UNPARALLELED MEANNESS.—Those of our subscribers, who have been getting their papers at the post office in this place, will please call at the "Democrat" office for their papers hereafter. The Postmaster of this place refuses to deliver our paper. Our pack for Merritt's P. O., in this county, was sent to the Postoffice in this place, last week, and has not been heard from since. Complaints come to us from all parts of the county which satisfies us, that Postmaster High, (as he delights to call himself,) is playing a deep and villainous game with us, which may, probably, lead to serious consequences to himself. We are laboring under great disadvantages, and we ask Democrats to remember the men who are laboring to ruin us, and at the same time professing to be Democrats.

GIDDINGS STILL FURTHER DEFINING JUDGE GHOLSON.—Joshua R. Giddings considers the election this fall as of the utmost importance for the purpose of determining the proper character of the Republican party—whether it is actively and decidedly anti-slavery, or merely sentimentally so. And that is to be determined by the boldness, prominence and clearness of the issues noted on—the utter repudiation of the Fugitive Law being one of them. With that idea, he does not mean to allow Judge Gholson to ignore the main issue under cover of a "dignified silence." He, therefore, presses, on every suitable occasion, the fact, that the Reserve considers Judge Gholson under pledges to sustain Brinkerhoof and Sutliff in declaring the Fugitive Act unconstitutional. In a speech at Oberlin, the other day, he said:

"Mr. Gholson was pledged, strongly pledged, to the deciding of the law unconstitutional, for his friends from Cincinnati had so pledged him, and he was again pledged by being the candidate on the platform, which repudiated the law. If he remained a candidate, determined, if elected, to declare the law constitutional, he would be a base man for thus violating pledges strongly made."

That is pretty strong talk, and under which Judge Gholson cannot rest in silence. Indeed, Judge Spalding, on the same occasion, said Mr. Gholson was to be catechised, and if he did not pledge himself to hold, if elected, the Fugitive Law unconstitutional, he (Spalding) and thousands of others would refuse him their votes.—Cin. Enquirer.

DOUGLAS'S POSITION.—In another column we publish a letter written by Hon. S. A. Douglas in answer to certain inquiries by his friends, in regard to presenting his name before the Charleston Convention in 1860. He adheres with his accustomed tenacity to the great principle of Popular Sovereignty — takes nothing back that he said during the Senatorial campaign in Illinois. He stands to-day as he has ever stood upon the slavery question. The same platform in regard to slavery that Douglas stands upon, Clay and the old Whig party stood upon. He is opposed to a slave code to protect slavery in the territories, so is the Democratic party. He differs with the leaders of the Black Republican party in this wise; He believes this government can exist half slave and half free, and also believes that this government was made by white men for the benefit of the white man.—He is opposed to the right of suffrage being granted the negro. On these questions he differs with the Republican party.—Coles Co., (Ills.) Ledger.

☞ In Austria no one can receive a license to marry unless he is able to subscribe his name with his own hand to the certificate.

Maine Convention.

The following are the resolutions adopted by the Democratic State Convention, held at Bangor:

Resolved, That all political power is inherent in the people; that all free governments are founded in their authority and instituted for their benefit; that the right of self-government is the fundamental idea of our republican institutions, and the doctrine of the capacity of the people to govern themselves the corner stone of our political fabric, applicable alike to the States and Territories of our Union.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Maine re-assert the great principle of self government, or Popular Sovereignty, as the basis of their policy in reference to the organized territories of the United States.

Resolved, That acting upon the principle of absolute "non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories," which we recognize as eminently just and wise, we are opposed to any legislation by Congress to establish, abolish, regulate or protect slavery in the Territories.

Resolved, That we hold it to be the duty of the Democratic party steadfastly to adhere to the principles embodied in the Compromise Measures of 1850, and ratified by the people in the Presidential election of 1852, and re-affirmed in the Kansas-Nebraska act of 1854, which is founded upon principles as ancient as free government itself, and in accordance with them, has simply declared that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits, and incorporated into the Cincinnati platform of 1856, and to resist all attempts to interpolate into the creed of the party such new issues, and pledge ourselves to resist any attempt to re-open the African slave trade or a Congressional slave code for the Territories, or the doctrine that the Constitution of the United States either establishes or prohibits slavery in the Territories beyond the power of the people to control it.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federation Constitution; and that we invoke a more fraternal spirit between the remote sections of our common country.

Resolved, That in the two years' amendment in Massachusetts, under which naturalized citizens are cut off from the exercise of the elective franchise for two years after they have complied with all the conditions of citizenship, we recognise in the self-styled Republican party the proscriptive spirit of undisguised Know Nothingism; and we denounce this attempt to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro, by allowing the fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and withholding the same right from a white man.

Resolved, That the annexation of the Island of Cuba to the American Republic is imperiously called for by the interests of commerce and the demands of free trade, while the geographical position of that Island as the "Key to the Gulf," renders it a necessity with our government to prevent its passing under the dominion of any other European power.

Resolved, That we cordially exchange congratulations with our Democratic friends in other sections of the Union upon the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain in regard to the right of search in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion of Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and in the steady endeavor to retrench unnecessary expenses and to practice a wise economy. With these gratifying results before them of Democratic supremacy we appeal to the people of Maine to sustain, in their future elections, that great party by whose wise statesmanship such results have been accomplished.

WILL THE DEMOCRATS CARRY THE STATE?—We sincerely believe they will. Two months ago we thought, as did many others, that our party had scarcely a ghost of a chance; but appearances are very different now. The Republicans have managed the campaign thus far in the most stupid and blundering manner.

They feared the effects of the Massachusetts constitutional amendment on the naturalized citizens, and put a little sugar in their platform to coax them back with. But the Know Nothings considered themselves insulted, and refuse emphatically to aid the Republicans, whatever may be the result.

They made a weak ticket,—one without force and without prestige. The best man before the convention was slaughtered to appease the Oberlinites, and his friends will remember his treatment at the election.

The Republicans of Ohio have become too much abolitionized. They are now led and controlled by Giddings and others of the same stamp. No man can deny that it was this element which sacrificed Swan. Nothing can be more certain than that Ohio is not an abolition State, and this constant tendency of the Republicans to merge into abolitionists has for several years been driving the more conservative from them. Now it has been clearly demonstrated that the Western Reserve abolitionists control the party against the Republicans of Eastern and Southern Ohio. This cannot fail to restore Ohio to the Democrats, and we have an abiding confidence that it will be done this fall.—Spirit of Democracy.

SENATOR DOUGLAS AND THE RIGHTS OF NATURALIZED CITIZENS.—A gentleman of this city inquires the position of the Illinois Senator in regard to the duty of our Government to protect naturalized citizens travelling in European countries. We assure our correspondent, from the words of Mr. Douglas himself, that he is distinctly opposed to the doctrine enunciated in the letter of General Cass; that he is in favor of protecting, in every land, the adopted as well as the native citizen. In support of his opinions, he instanced several remarkable cases in which the most powerful nations of Europe have asserted and recognized, among themselves, the absolute right of expatriation.—Cincinnati Times.

☞ Mr. Giddings was heard to declare on the streets in Columbus, recently, that he did not care anything about [illegible] nominated by the Republicans, but he was determined to have the platform right. In other words, he was determined to abolitionize the Republican party.

He went to Columbus breathing vengeance against Judge Swan, demanded his head, and the demand was accorded to. He next demanded a platform to suit his views, and he got it. His next move will be to get Tom Corwin out of the ranks, which will be hard to do.—Ohio Press.

☞ At Worcester, Mass., on Friday, [illegible] H. [illegible], President of the People's Insurance company, a wealthy and unmarried man, committed suicide. Cause, temporary insanity, caused by ill health.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1859.

We rent a box at the Post Office, and we want papers addressed to us put in that box. Does the Postmaster understand?

An Odorous Article—A Catastrophe.

"O my offence is rank, it smells to heaven."

We are indebted to the Statesman for a rare specimen of a strong article. Its olfactories must have undergone a severe ordeal, unless addicted to civet, and educated for nosing its way through the world. That we should get "between the wind and his nobility" was unfortunate, unless, indeed, it should be reckoned a piece of good fortune to the world to possess so rich and spicy a gale from the refined retort of the Ohio Statesman, before which the perfumes of the East dwindle into insignificant and feeble fragrance. It has been suggested that to Hon. S. S. Cox we owe this douceur—that it was an effervescence from his fountain, girdled with flowers of rhetoric, and flinging odors with unparallelled prodigality. Or that Miller, who on his accession to the Statesman, was duly chronicled by the Washington Union, as "a strong writer," was after a long interval of rest, giving us a taste of his equality. Or that Manypenny, urged by his benevolent hypocrisy and charitable self-esteem, desired to confer a favor that would have a memory:

"Like the vase in which roses have once been distilled—You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, But the scent of the roses will hang round it still."

We accept the tribute in the same generous spirit it was given, whether the emanation of one or of all three. It satisfies us that they intend to keep their distance, lest their tender susceptibilities should be overcome. However, they should know that the incense-bearing animal is not to be driven away by "S'cat!"

Seriously, the Statesman's scurrility will not expunge its many tergiversations and reckless misstatements. Its utter unreliability and frequent perversion of truth have become a by-word. Here, at home, it is regarded with contempt, and its editor, a miserable mixture of feebleness and vanity and a mere tool and willing instrument of unscrupulous knavery. He is malignant too, although he walks in the humility and meekness of the church.

But we did not intend to retaliate in words. We scorn to answer the ribald further than to express our utter contempt for his despicable billingsgate. We have had occasion to show that he is unreliable, and that [illegible] in his malignant heart. We are under obligations to the State Journal for re-publishing in juxta-position extracts from the Statesman, when under the control of gentlemen, with this important outpouring of a blackguard. We are likewise indebted to the Cleveland Leader for a similar reference. We quote from the latter that we may preserve entire the odorous article which deserves to be put up in cologne, as musk is said to be the basis of the rarest perfumes:

How They Speak of Each Other.—When Colonel Medary, the "wheel horse of the Ohio Democracy" left the Ohio "Statesman" in charge of J. Birney Marshall, Esq., he gave him a strong endorsement to the Ohio Democracy, and when Mr. Marshall retired from the Ohio "Statesman," Col. Medary's son-in-law, editor Smith, re-indorsed him in the most flattering terms. In the mutations of the "Statesman" it fell into the editorial charge of Col. Manypenny, a former Government office holder and Ohio politician of some note, and Mr. Marshall, after serving as official Reporter of the Democratic Senate and associate editor of the "Capital City Fact," established a weekly Douglas Democratic journal at Columbus, called the "Press." Since then the Ohio "Statesman" has often spoken contemptuously of Mr. Marshall, and in a late issue disgorges and disgraces itself as follows:

The Skunk of the Columbus Press.—There is a paper in this city called the "Fact," edited by a man named Marshall, who from his personal meanness and the general contempt with which he is regarded has been dubbed "The Skunk of the Columbus Press." He rejoices over the defeat of Mr. Crary; and gives the Democracy of the city to understand that while pretending to go for Crary, he sold himself to the enemy. This is in perfect keeping with the character of the Skunk. When there is a battle to be fought you can see Marshall holding up his hand to learn which way the wind blows, in order to be on the winning side; in the heat of the struggle he performs the part of Judas, and when the fight is over his jackal bay is heard. He has a half dozen "backers" in the city, who urge him on, but who are ashamed to acknowledge his personal acquaintance. His dingy paper for a few weeks past was in the market, and was taken by the Republicans, the Democracy having no desire to be contaminated by the fulsome praise of the Skunk. In his paper of last evening the gallant Democracy of the First Ward are grossly abused and slandered, but which when the source from whence it emanates is considered, is the highest praise they could have. The Skunk has taken the contract to slander and abuse the Democracy from this time until after the election, and he is by his depravity well suited to the job. The public may, therefore, look out for a stream of slanders by the Skunk through the columns of the "Fact."

J. Birney Marshall, of the Columbus "Press," gets off a squib, at the expense of Artemus Ward of the Cleveland "Plaindealer," and ourself. Tom Miller is after you, Birney; look out! Keep your candle from under a bushel, and if the Miller flutters too close, singe it!

Murder that Columbus clique, and you will do great service to the Democratic party and the State of Ohio.—[Morrow Co. Democrat.

If you don't mind, Tom Miller will be after you. His editor spouts largely of his bludgeon and boot-toe. We have always heard that Tom was the very devil, but never knew that he was club-footed before. "That Columbus clique" is a great institution, and no mistake! We cannot undertake to "murder" it, but we shall be found giving it some trouble. It seems at present to be too firmly saddled upon the Democracy of Franklin to be shaken off, without contributing to the success of the Republicans, and that is a wretched alternative, although there are Democrats who will try it. Until the reign of "Millerism" is ended in this county, there is no safety for the Democratic party, for their nomination will surely be beaten, and they wont let any body else make a nomination.

The above was written before the recent election in the First Ward of this city, in which, owing to an erroneous impression that Mr. Crary was a "Miller candidate," a number of Democrats did not vote for him. The fact that Cox had been his attorney in the case, damaged him before the people.

Unconstitutional.

Judge Foote has decided, at Cleveland, that the law of the last Legislature, which was enacted in conformity to the Constitution of Ohio, prescribing that none but white male citizens of the United States shall exercise the right of suffrage, is unconstitutional, and holds to the absurd doctrine that persons who have a preponderance of white blood are white. The decision is based upon the most contemptible quibbles, and will, doubtless, be overruled when brought before the Supreme Court, with Brinkerhoff and Sutliff dissenting.

Hot Weather.—We have had hot weather, and no mistake—such weather as has provoked paragraphs innumerable, and some have spread themselves not under "an umbrage dropping myrrh," but in long articles dished up in the daintiest style. We do not intend to follow the latter example, but content ourself by assuring all those who have weathered the weather of the last week that they need not be very apprehensive of a scorching unless— Well, we leave the rest to their sympathetic imaginations.

Death of Rufus Choate.

The telegraph announced the death of this eminent citizen at Halifax on Wednesday, July 6. He was promising cheerful on the evening previous, but at six o'clock he was seized with the heart disease which lasted until two o'clock in the morning when he expired. He was born at Ipswich, Mass., October 14, 1799. At an early age he entered Dartmouth College, and distinguished himself during the course, by the rapidness of his advance in studies. He graduated in 1819, and for a short time after filled the place of a tutor in the institution. But he soon determined upon the choice of a profession, and entered the Law School at Cambridge. Passing through this, he completed his novitiate studies at Salem, and began practice at Danvers in 1824. The next year he was elected a representative to the "General Court," and in 1827 was sent for a term to the State Senate. In these positions he attained prominence in the State and acquired considerable reputation. In 1832 he was elected to Congress in the Essex District, and after serving a single term declined a renomination. On his return from Congress he removed to Boston, and there laid the foundation of his eminence at the bar. In 1841 he received the distinguished honor of being chosen to the U. S. Senate, in place of Daniel Webster, who had entered the Harrison Cabinet. He filled the seat of the great Massachusetts Senator, until the expiration of the term in 1845. Then he retired from the political field, devoting himself to his profession, and steadily refusing to be drawn into public life again. Since then he has only taken a private part in politics, and that not very actively.

In 1856 he earnestly supported the Democratic cause, and has been regarded as one of that organization up to his death. Mr. Choate retired early from political life, and devoted his whole energies to his profession—of the law.—It was in this that he won his renown, and achieved an eminence which surpasses that of all his professional contemporaries. His intellect and his genius were peculiarly fitted for the calling, and he might probably be accepted as the highest type of a lawyer. Naturally gifted with all the endowments of an orator,—possessed of a rich and splendid imagination, and an eloquence of words which was grand and imposing—he had associated with this gift, the rare adjuncts of a profound and logical reason, and a laborious and studious disposition.

Political.—So far as we are capable of judging, the triumph of the Democratic party in the State of Ohio this fall is certain. Among the Democracy there is less discord among the aspiring men of the party than there has been for a number of years. The party have met in Convention, selected their candidates, and united upon a platform that meets the warmest approbation of every member of the party in the State. The candidates selected are of the best material, and quite acceptable. Union and harmony prevail, and a determination rests in the minds of every one to overrun the Republican fanatics who are seeking to bring our State Government into collision with the General Government. Civil war, with its horrid incidents, may end in dissolution, to be followed by successive wars from generation to generation. Vide, the present war of Italy. On the other side the factions of the opposition are arraying themselves one against the other for the mastery. The Republican Abolitionists have overborne their Know Nothing friends.—At the same time the conscientious Whig element chafes under the necessity of sustaining the bigotry and fanaticism of both these branches which for the present control the policy of the opposition. And many honest old line Henry Clay Whig voters will follow the Hon. Thos. Ewing and others into the Democratic ranks.

Then the Democracy has every element of victory within itself, whilst the constant additions of patriotic voters will insure success.—Guernsey Jeffersonian.

Judge Douglas and the Presidency.—We publish in to-day's paper a letter written by Judge Douglas in relation to the Presidency. He defines his position, which is always occupied by the Democratic party. We have no idea that the Democratic party will suffer itself to be represented in the Charleston Convention by the ultra slave code men of the South, who have no more interest in the Democratic party than their brethren of the North, who believe in Congressional interference in Territorial matters, just as the ultra southerners do. Judge Douglas need give himself no unnecessary trouble about this matter, in our opinion. If he should go into the Charleston Convention, we presume the platform there constructed will not prevent his accepting the nomination. We think there are yet enough Democrats in the country to represent the old and well tried principles of the party properly and to keep the old ship in its proper course.—Clermont Sun.

Hurra for Douglas!

There is a very fine article in the Logan "Gazette" of the 16th inst., which we wish were read by every [illegible] Democrat in the State. Our space and types were already occupied when the "Gazette" was received. It closes, however, with this inspiring cheer:

"Then hurra for Douglas,—Douglas as he stands to-day!"

Douglas's Letter.—Below we give the letter of Stephen A. Douglas in regard to the Presidency. It is written in a plain style without a complication of disjointed words and indefinite phrases which leaves the reader in a midst of uncertainty, but a mere declaration of his purposes and principles. Unlike the Washington Union and another Union of smaller dimensions but less pretentions, we can see nothing in it that smacks of disloyalty to Democracy or the Democratic party. He merely expressed a determination to adhere to the principles of popular sovereignty, as laid down in the Nebraska bill, and re-affirmed in the Cincinnati Platform. Read it.—Van Wert Constitution.

New Paint Shop.—We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Van Buren and Pinkerton, who have established a new and complete Paint Shop, where everything in their line will be executed in the handsomest style. With the former gentleman we have had a long acquaintance, and know that he will give complete satisfaction. Mr. Pinkerton is an artist in his line, and his lettering will demonstrate. Their shop is immediately in the rear of the north-west corner of the Neil House, where those who want work expeditiously and satisfactorily done should leave their orders.

Cobblers.—At the Neil House saloon, Charley Greene continues to manufacture for the souls of his friends, without peg and awl, those renovating principles, native and foreign, which are so conducive to comfort. Quiet, unobtrusive, his ministrations contribute to social health. He touches his instruments with the hand of a master and they jingle the most refreshing music, while "The glasses sparkle on the board."

If there should be any "short-coming" in our paper, we hope it will be set down to the inroad we made upon our usual labors, by accepting a cordial invitation yesterday to the Odd Fellows' Annual Pic Nic by which we gave one day to enjoyment.

A New Invention.—Call at Ritze & Lindeman's and be sure to ask for Catawba soda. William knows the brand.—Talk of champaign!

The Medical Properties of the Ohio White Sulphur Springs.

We have on our table a tastefully gotten up pamphlet entitled "The Ohio White Sulphur Springs, by J. J. Moorman, M. D., with observations at the Ohio White Sulphur, in 1858, by W. W. Dawson, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Physiology in the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery." By this work we learn that the medicinal properties of the far-famed Virginia White Sulphur Springs are possessed by the Springs in question, which afford relief like their namesake, for liver and stomach diseases. From Dr. Dawson we learn that the Springs at this point are the White Sulphur, the Chalybeate, the Magnesian, the Saline Chalybeate, and the Pure Water Spring. The geological composition through which the Scioto at this point passes is similar to the composition of the rocks which underlie a large portion of our own city, and which may be seen in the vicinity of Buck Creek and Mad River. The White Sulphur Spring is deemed of more importance than the others.—The water, in its action, is essentially alterative, but differs widely in its mode of operating with the ordinary drugs of that class. The salts which it contains being highly diluted, enter the system and are carried by means of the circulation to every tissue of the body. The effect of the water is to revive the languishing circulation, renew the vital energies, improve the perspiration, &c., &c. They saturate the sick body, to make use of the energetic expression of a modern author.

The White Sulphur Water is particularly successful in curing diseases of the stomach. It has cured a great number of cases of dyspepsia; inaction of the stomach and acidity of the stomach, are really regulated by it. Its favorable effects upon diseases of the liver are marked. It has also peculiar power in regulating and restoring diseased bowels—and diseased kidneys, diseased lungs, tubercular consumption, rheumatism, dropsies, &c., are also favorably affected by it.

Dr. Dawson, the author referred to, now resides at the Springs, and under his direction, the majority of persons who seek health in addition to pleasure, at the Ohio White Sulphur Springs, would hardly fail of being greatly benefitted.

We have noticed this work, thus at length, in order to answer the queries of numbers of our citizens who have a decided "leaning" "White-Sulphur"-ward and we hope that "these few lines" will induce them to test the virtues of the waters which form the theme of this article.

A pleasant ride of about an hour and three-quarters, on the Springfield, Mt. Vernon and Pittsburgh railroad, to the White Sulphur station, and an additional half-hour's carriage ride, brings the Springfield visitor to one of the most pleasant localities in the world.

The Ohio White Sulphur Springs.

The editor of the Springfield (O.) News & Journal has recently visited the Springs, and the following is the glowing description he gives of that delightful summer resort:

Having visited the Ohio White Sulphur Spring, recently, we are prepared to speak advisedly. For a pleasant, quiet, comfortable, luxurious summer resort, it is unexcelled on the continent. We mean what we say when we declare that every possible facility for physical and mental enjoyment is furnished. The energy and enterprise of the proprietor—Mr. Andrew Wilson, Junior—now one of the notables of the West—are remarkable. Literally, no expense has been spared. The large hotel—all new—the Mansion House, the Cottage Rows, and the other mansion houses, just being finished off, are every way calculated to promote the pleasure and comfort of Mr. Wilson's multitude of guests. The sleeping rooms, parlors, etc., now ready for use, are elegantly finished, fitted and furnished in the most recherche modern style. Indeed, we will say privately (?) that they are ahead of anything of the kind we have ever seen. The grounds are delightful. Within a capital carriage drive, of two miles in length, are the buildings which will accommodate comfortably six hundred guests—a large and beautiful grove of native forest trees, beautiful walks to and from arbors and fountains, extensive and convenient baths, bowling alleys, etc., etc. Guests have the privilege of horses and carriages to suit their convenience, and they may ride and drive for hours on the grounds without becoming tired of the beautiful and varied scenery. The tables at the White Sulphur are supplied with every luxury of every season. You have only speak, or wish, we had well nigh said, and the wealth (in estables) of all countries is placed before you. The army of waiters—headed by an accomplished general—carries at once the Sebastopol of every man's stomach.

We never saw an establishment better regulated throughout. Guests may take "their ease at their inn," indeed and in truth. One may do as and what he pleases. Here fashionable life exhibits only its pleasant features. It imposes no irksome restraints. An air of Democratic equality prevails.

Mr. Wilson deserves the most signal success. What he has done has been so well done, and there was for it so urgent and so general a demand, that he deserves to be hailed as a public benefactor. People are no longer forced to visit Saratoga and Newport in order to be fashionable and miserable—they can visit the White Sulphur and be fashionable and happy.

The Superintendent of the establishment, Mr. Swaynie, is an affable, accomplished gentleman, and his assistant, Mr. McOmber, and the book-keeper, Mr. Spain, also Mr. William Wilson, are all well fitted for a connection with such an establishment. We say to our citizens, visit the White Sulphur by all means, and stay there as long as your purses will let you. You will enjoy yourselves hugely, and your health will inevitably be benefitted.

Canal Steamboat.—One of our exchanges, which we have forgotten, and ask pardon for the lapse of memory, speaks of the "Enterprise" as not having [illegible] every expection, which we much regret. It says:

It was found that the long grass in the canal clogged her wheel to such an extent as to render her progress impossible until the obstruction was removed. Knives were attached with the hope that they would not only answer her purpose but in a measure clear the canal of a great obstruction to navigation, but they did not work as calculated. If her managers can invent some plan to rid the wheels of the grass we presume there is no obstacle in her way, but until this is done her canal trips will hardly prove profitable except early in the spring and late in the fall.

We believe it is to the Zanesville "Courier" we are indebted.

Union.—The Toledo Herald and Times have made a matrimonial arrangement, and will hereafter be one. We congratulate our cotemporaries on their "union," and trust it will be productive of "good fruits." Their expenses will be diminished, and their broadsides against the common enemy be more effective from the united batteries. We hope it will prove a prosperous union, with all our heart.

Two little daughters of Mr. Philip Dorn, of South Boston, one nine, the other thirteen years old, were drowned on Tuesday evening in a sewer, at its junction with the waters of the bay. The older was endeavoring to save the younger.

Western Correspondence.

Fort Laramie, N. T., June 24, 1859.

Editor Press:—It may be of some interest to the readers of your interesting paper to make mention of a few miscellaneous items connected with a trip up the valley of the great Platte.

The subject of the peculiarities of the great Platte River, its important advantages to the wants of man, wild scenery, rugged bluffs, extensive and unfertile plains, has, in comparison with its great importance, received but little attention. The gay and cheerful traveler on the bold waters of the Mississippi, or the proud heart of an accomplished and fashionable tourist upon a New England thoroughfare, enjoying the sweet fragrance of a "Havana," or breathing the pure air of the gentle zephyr, is but little acquainted with the strange and wonderful works of nature in this region. The geologist will here find an extensive field for exploration, while the more accomplished tourist will be content with constantly meeting objects of attraction contrasted with scenes of mysterious beauty, admiration and aversion. I regret that I have not the time at present to give even the most limited description of the various features of this most peculiar valley. This is properly the work of a more experienced investigator.

I arrived here to-day, being four weeks and three days in making the trip from Omaha City. During the whole time it has been exceedingly dry. Never was there better health on the plains than this season. Although the emigration does not rank second to any former year I have learned of only three deaths and some half dozen cases of sickness. It is asserted that over one hundred thousand cattle have already passed Laramie this season to supply the markets of California alone. Doubtless ere this is received you will have heard of the existence of gold in the Black Hills, but I would say to the readers of the Press that it is my opinion, based on close observation, it is as grand a humbug as that of Pike's Peak.

Late news from the Cherry Creek Mines is of the most flattering nature, but fails to meet the confidence of the people.

Till I write to you again, I remain as ever,

H. H. BLACK.

Sons of Malta.

The celebration of "the 4th" by the Sons of Malta at Indianapolis was a grand feature in the grand pageants of the day. We take the following brief notice from the Sentinel:

The evening gun giving the National Salute, or the closing of the fire-works, did not send the crowd to their homes.—The promised parade of the Sons of Malta was yet to come off, and although it was understood that they would not appear until 12 o'clock, the men women and children were determined to wait. It was tedious to many, but the laws of the "Sons" are like those of the Medes and Persians, and no temptation, not even the smiles of beauty waiting in the damp night air with their feet in the gutters, could tempt the Grand Commander to put his watch forward one minute.

The crowd, we say, waited patiently, and every prominent point throughout the long line of march was thronged.

At twelve o'clock we, in common with every other expectant, thought it one or two—a number of prancing steeds were brought in front of the Hall, and the Grand Commander with his Guards and the "Knights of the Lance," mounted. It was so dark that we could only catch a glimpse now and then of the glittering armor, as some tell-tale gas lamp would throw its glare upon the surface.

The footmen, with masks and gowns, bearing Maltese crosses with brilliant lights, formed behind the Knights, with numerous banners, which were Choctaw or Chickasaw to the uninitiated. We picked up, however, in a way that reporters only know how, the following order of march:

1. Grand Director.
2. Band. 3. Grand Commander and Guards. 4. Knights of the Lance, mounted. 5. Grand Keeper of Books and Seals. 6. O. O. S. and J. S., with large keys. 7. G. Council of Ten. 8. Knights of the Cross, mounted. 9. G. R., J. A., and G. A. R. J. A., with their insignias of office. 10. G. Sarcophagus. 11. Knights of the Legion, mounted.—12. G. Chancellor. 13. Vale of Mysteries. 14. G. R. J. A. and G. T. J. A. 15. Builders of the Temple. 16. Wild Children of the Desert. 17. Knight Captives in Chains. 18. Grand Legion of Honor. 19. Vice-Grand Commander, with Guards.

It was a magnificent sight as they wound their way through the streets of the city, having enough of the weird and wizard in its look to send the mind back to the dark ages to dream of the processions through the moldering ruins of decaying chivalry. The crowd followed them through the whole line—women with babies and women without—men, boys and girls, all seemed enchanted with the novelty of the scene. And truly it was grand. We thought the lights were not close enough to reveal as much as we wished to see, but that may have added to rather than detracted from the effect.

The Penny Press.—Our esteemed friends, John D. Caldwell and Andrew J. Francisco, have taken in charge the "Penny Press" of Cincinnati. The former is an retiring "Old Line Whig," with Republican proclivities; the latter a moderate Democrat. Both are genial gentlemen, experienced in newspaper routine, expert and easy writers, industrious and ardent. We wish them unbounded success in their new ministry, and hope in their new undertaking they may [illegible].

Fooling Greeley.—A couple of returned Pike's Peakers at Washington, Fayette county in this State, says that the miners managed to deceive Greeley in respect to the richness of some of the diggings he was examining, by slipping gold dust into their sluice boxes and washing it out in his presence.

Suicides.—John Porter, about twenty four years old, and connected with a highly respected family in Covington, Ky., drowned himself on Saturday last.

Peter Schmidt, who resided in Covington, drowned himself on Monday, deliberately taking off his shoes and stockings and hat before making the plunge.

A Grafter.—In Madison county Indiana, last week, a youth who was driving a reaping machine was thrown under it and mangled in a horrible manner.

Another young man, named Allen was caught by a burning limb and so crushed and burned as to cause his death.

A young woman named Koontz hanged herself the same day in another part of the county.

Correction.—We were absent when the last form of our paper was made up, and proofs read last week, and some inaccuracies appeared, the most mortifying of which was that attributing an excellent article upon the present position of parties entitled "Extremes Meet," from our best friend the Marietta "Republican," to the "Intelligencer."

The Constitution denies the statement that the President wrote Mr. Wendell a letter concerning the distribution of the executive binding and printing. Mr. Wendell has told many that he has such a letter, and that the Constitution receives $8,000 annually under the arrangement.—Buffalo Commercial Advertiser.

This is cutting pretty close. Could not Mr. Wendell tell how much the Statesman of this city gets under the same arrangement?

A Strange Affair—A Man Falls in Love with his own Daughter—A narrow Escape from Marriage.

Some fifteen years ago a man named George Bristol left this city for the shores of the Pacific. At the time he left he had a wife and one child, the latter only three years old. They resided in the town of Westerlo. At that time his wife and child were living with her father. Some two years after, the father and mother of the woman died, their estate disposed of to satisfy mortgages, and Mrs. Bristol and her child were thrown upon the cold charities of the world for a living. She was very feeble of health, and of course was unable to take care of herself.

The mother and child came to this city, where they lived for some five years, at the expiration of which time the mother died and the girl was left alone in the world, to do the best she could. Being now about ten years old, and a smart, active, good looking girl, she soon found a situation in a respectable family. Here she remained till she was fifteen years old, when she bound herself out to a milliner. She served three years at that business, and had become mistress of her profession. Now, the strangest portion of this revelation is to be told. The girl is now over 18 years old, and a perfect model of her sex.

During this long interval it must be remembered that the girl lost all tracks of her father. Her beauty attracted the attention and admiration of a spruce looking gentleman who met her on Broadway. He was a man of about 40 years, but his appearance did not indicate that he had ever seen over 35 summers. An acquaintance was made between her and the gentleman above alluded to, and a final engagement entered into for marriage. The day was set and all the necessary arrangements made for the ceremony.

On the appointed day the pair, accompanied by their respective friends, met for the purpose of having the plighted ones joined in wedlock. Just before the minister commenced the marriage rites an old couple entered. They were formerly neighbors of the Bristol family, and had watched the girl grow up from infancy, and were now anxious to see the choice she had made in a partner for life. Imagine the surprise of all about when the old couple above referred to recognized in the "man of the girl's heart" her own legitimate father.

For a moment all was amazement and sadness, but as the state of things being fully realized the scene turned to one of joy. An absent father had recovered a lost daughter, and the assembled throng of friends were highly delighted that the affair had resulted as it did. The love that had before burned so brightly between the twain had now become a flame as inextinguishable as the fire of Vesuvius. A queer world this.—Albany N. Y., Standard.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs.—It afforded us great pleasure, a few days ago, to embrace an opportunity to make a short visit to this justly celebrated place of varied fountains. Although but a few weeks had elapsed since our last visit, we noticed the march of improvement still going on, so marked were the changes in some localities. Everything to promote pleasure and comfort has been provided through the indomitable energy and taste for the beautiful, possessed by its worthy proprietor, Mr. A. Wilson, Jr. It is acknowledged by persons who have visited other celebrated watering places of our land, that the Ohio White Sulphur Springs has not, at this time, its superior, in every respect.

We are aware that in some localities an erroneous impression prevails in regard to the charge for board; we, therefore, took pains to inform ourselves correctly in reference to the matter. The terms are, single meals: Breakfast, 75 cents; Dinner, $1; Supper, 50 cents. Per day $3.—Per week $12. Children and servants $6 per week.

We were also pleased to notice another agreeable feature, that since the present warm weather the number of visitors are rapidly increasing.

The establishment is creditable to its projector and proprietor, an ornament to our county, and honor to our State, and we hope to see it liberally patronised.—Mr. Wilson is in every sense a gentleman. The Superintendent, Mr. Swaynie his assistant, Mr. McOmber, the book-keeper, Mr. Spain, and Mr. Wm. Wilson, are severally admirably fitted for their stations.—Delaware Standard.

If anybody thinks it is fun to edit a paper, we cordially invite that body to step up and try it. Just as a brilliant idea flits through your brain, a drop of perspiration trickles down your nose, and while in the act of wiping it away, off goes the "idea" on the wings of the wind. With the mercury at 96 in the shade, writing editorials isn't near as much "fun" as eating a dish of ice cream, by a long shot.—[Piqua Reg.

A very fair proposition, if you intend to relinquish the reins at this interesting period. If there only were "wings of the wind" to brush off that drop of trickling perspiration too! We, too, would give the preference to the ice cream at sufficient intervals, but as a business we believe we would stick to the editorials.

We haven't seen a blackberry in this market this season. Other cities are well supplied at 8 and 10 cents per quart.—[Piqua Enquirer.

Your farmers attend to their fence-corners, which produce other fruit than blackberries, which are not profitable in fields, not even in fence-corners, unless properly cultivated. The people of this city like yours will be glad to hear of a supply "at 8 and 10 cents per quart."—The lowest rate we have heard of is 12½ and a very little bruised, withered and pricked at that.

A Nut for the Doctors.—"The opinion of disinterested and intelligent patients as to the beneficial results from the use of a medicine ought to be as good as the opinion of interested physicians, who know nothing about it." The above truthful remark was made in our hearing, yesterday, by Dr. F. Coggswell, of Antiphlogistic Salt celebrity, and we cordially say, Amen to it.—Boston Traveller.

Verdant Rascality.—A stupid horse-thief was last week brought to a relinquishment of a couple of horses by Mr. Lantz, a printer in Xenia, who carelessly asked him where he was going? Instead of answering him, the horse thief asked him if he was an officer? Lantz answered "yes," and taking the horses, and with the aid of the Marshal took the thief, who gave his name as Barnard Cox. The horses were stolen from Robinsontown, not far from [illegible].

The Battle of Solferino.—A witness to the battle of Solferino, on the 24th of June, writes to the Brussels Nord, from which we make the following extract:

The battle of Solferino is the most terrible, for the length and fierceness of the struggle, as well as for the number of combatants, and the important consequences which it will entail, of all that have taken place since 1815.—The battle of Magenta gave Lombardy to the allies; Venetia will infallibly be the reward of the battle of Solferino.

William Haverfield, Sen., an old and highly respectable citizen of Harrison county, died on the 4th inst. He was born in Chester county, Pa., Feb. 16, 1778, and came to Ohio in 1799. He served in the war of 1812.

At Our Word.—The Wilmington Watchman takes us at our word, and shows for one of our clever articles quite a paternal affection. We admire the Watchman's taste. We agree exactly.

Mr. Peter Matterson, of New Munsfords, near Boroughbridge, England, died on the 20th June. He and his ancestry have been the owners and occupiers of the farm on which he died for more than eight hundred years. The farm was not entailed, and the owner has always been a Matterson without adoption.

Mr. B. Thurston, the editor and proprietor of the Temperance Journal, published at Portland, Me., has retired from that paper. He says that he has lost several thousand dollars in the enterprise, and adds: "There are few men who can afford to give their whole time and energies to the temperance cause, and then pay from ten to twelve hundred dollars a year for the privilege."

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

New York, July 13.—The steamship Etna, from Liverpool, with dates to the 2d inst., arrived at this port this A. M. Her advices are the same as those brought by the Canada to Halifax.

At Paris it is believed in some quarters that the French loss at the battle of Solferino amounted to from sixteen to eighteen thousand men, as follows: Gen. Neil's corps 5,000 to 7,000; D'Hilliers's nearly 5,000; McMahon's 2,500; Canrobert's 1,000—besides casualties in the artillery and special corps. The French people are said to be dissatisfied with the scantiness of the details as yet published in the Moniteur. The Patrie says Napoleon had an epaulette shot away. Gen. Dieu is reported among the dead. The Austrians had seven or eight generals and very many of their superior officers wounded. Gen. Greschke was killed. Some of the French infantry regiments were nearly cut to pieces. The Peidmontese suffered so severely as to be incapable of forming in the line of battle.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times writing 28th says, that some days must elapse before the complete returns of the losses of the Austrians could be received.—The same writer says that the Italian regiments in the Austrian army have become very difficult to manage, the men desert by scores and fifties. In the neighborhood of Trieste, a whole battalion had raised the cry in favor of Victor Emanuel.

A vessel on the coast under the American flag had been detected in the act of receiving the deserters on board after dark.

Napoleon was in perfect health, and the sanitary condition of his army was excellent. His head quarters were at Valleggio, where Prince Napoleon was expected to arrive on the 30th ult.

It is reported that at Solferino nearly every officer and man of the artillery attached to the Imperial Guard was put hors de combat. The Austrian accounts of the battle admit their loss to be 20,000, killed, wounded and missing.

The Austrian official report of the battle says the right wing of the army occupied Pozzolengo, Solferino and Cavriana. The left wing marched on the 24th to Guidizzolo and Castelgoffredo, and repulsed the advancing enemy on all sides. As the Imperial army continued its advance towards Chiese, the enemy who had also assumed the offensive with his whole force, pushed forward such bodies of troops that there was a general engagement between the two armies at 10 o'clock or thereabouts, on the morning of the 24th.—The right wing, which was formed of the second army under Count Schlick, maintained the position which it had originally occupied in the first line of battle until two o'clock in the afternoon, and the first army the left wing under Count Wimpffen, continually gained ground in the direction of Chiese. Towards 5 o'clock the enemy made a vehement attack on Solferino, and after several hours hard fighting obtained possession of the place which had been heroically defended by the fifth corps d'armee. An attack was then made on Cavriana, which place was courageously defended until evening by the first and seventh corps d'armee, but was eventually left in the hands of the enemy. While the struggle for Solferino and Cavriana was going on, the eighth corps d'armee, which was on the outer flank right wing, advanced and repulsed the Sardinian troops opposed to it, but this advantage did not enable the Imperial army to recover the positions that had been lost. In the centre the third and ninth corps d'armee, which were supported by the eleventh corps, were engaged on the left wing, and the reserve cavalry attached to this wing made several most brilliant attacks. Unusually heavy losses, and the fact that the left wing of the first army was unable to make progress on the right flank of the enemy, who directed his main force in the centre against Volta, led to the retreat of the Imperial royal army. It began late in evening during a very violent storm.

The correspondent of the London Herald says, so little did the French expect a battle that on the previous night a message from the King, asking for supports in case he should be attacked, was met with a refusal, on the ground that an assault by the Austrians was not probable. At day-break, however, the corps of Marshal D'Hilliers came in sight of Solferino and was immediately set upon by a large Austrian force, which rushed down the hill and fought with the greatest fury. The Marshal resisted the attack to the best of his power, and sent off his aid-de-camp for supports, but it was not before three hours of frightful carnage had elapsed that the corps of Gen. Neil made its appearance. The Austrians were slowly driven back, and every now and then there was a panic, and the French continued to gain ground. Heaps of their own and the enemy's corps marking the fluctuations of the fight. The Austrians were thus slowly driven out of Solferino, but all of a sudden they made a tremendous burst forward and the French were driven down the hill, being admirably supported by their artillery. However, they made a stand and commenced once more to advance. It was like a hail storm of bullets and balls, and whole files were mowed down by a single discharge. In the meantime, at the right and left wing, the Austrians were getting decidedly the best of it. The Piedmontese were being slowly driven back. Gen. Canrobert's corps was also heavily punished, and had there been a skilful general in the Austrian army to collect and concentrate their forces against the weak point of the enemy's line, matters would have had a very different aspect.

The French commander, to whom the credit of the day is entirely due, whether it be Neil, McMahon or the Emperor himself, sent forward the Imperial Guard, and a strong division of the infantry, of the line, against the Austrian Centre, and succeeded for a time in breaking it. Instead of bringing up their forces to repel this formidable attack, the supports were sent to the left and right wings, which did not need them. Desperate attempts were made to re-capture Solferino, but the French strongly held it, and the bugles began to sound a general retreat. An attempt was made by the cavalry to pursue them, which led to an encounter between the French Chasseurs and the Austrian Hulans, in which the former were rapidly put to the right about.

It is stated that not a single Hungarian regiment was allowed to take part in the battle, and that the Italian regiments had all been previously sent to the Tyrol.

England.—In the House of lords, on Friday, Lord Brougham called attention to the war in Italy and asked if there was any truth in the report that the government intended to reduce the navy estimates.

The Duke of Somerset denied the report.

The Earl of Hardwicke eulogised the late government for their efforts to strengthen the navy, and gave various statistics to show that even yet it was not what it ought to be.

The Earl of Ellenborough fully recognised the necessity of placing the navy in a proper condition, but [illegible] that some attention would also be devoted to the army.

In the House of Commons, on Thursday, Lord Palmerston announced the intention of the new ministry to pursue a policy of strict neutrality with reference to foreign affairs. He also announced that a reform bill would be introduced immediately after the meeting of next session of Parliament.

Mr. Baxter gave notice of an inquiry into the advisability of cancelling the contracts of the late government with the Galway line of steamers.

Germany.—The Independence Belge says, that the New England Ministry had addressed counsels of moderation to the German States, cautioning them against the dangers of encouraging a policy which might lead to a general war.

Switzerland.—A telegram from Berne says, that the federal Council had made animadversions to the Sardinian Government on the subject of the ill treatment suffered by the Swiss at Milan. The council had also instructed the Swiss diplomatic agents in England to mitigate public opinion as to the nationality of the foreign regiments in the service of the Pope and King of Naples.

France.—Paris, July 1.—The Bourse opened firm, rentes closed at 63f 10c a fraction higher than yesterday.

A telegram from the seat of war says, that an American, named E. B. Perkins, of Boston, together with his wife and three ladies, narrowly escaped being massacred at Perugia.

A letter from Jeddah says, that a vessel going from Jaffa to Mecca, with 200 mussulmen pilgrims, had foundered near Jeddah. All on board were drowned.

ADDITIONAL WAR NEWS.

Twenty thousand corps are said to have been burried, and many were yet lying in the ditches and cornfields.

The Berlin, and Vienna letters confidently speak of negotiations having been opened by Prussia with England and Russia for the purpose of establishing, if possible, a basis for combined mediation.

The military commission of the Frankfort Diet is said to have approved of the demand to move an army of observation to the Rhine.

The French are making immense naval preparations in the Adriatic. Five ships of the line, eight frigates, six war steamers, thirteen floating batteries, nine gun boats, nine brigs and two or three mortar vessels were to arrive. They have many [illegible] and enormous supplies on board. The admiral was about to open his sealed orders.

The real difficulty is in getting rid of the Austrians without injury to the inhabitants or city of Venice.

The Brest fleet is said to be composed of nine ships of the line, two heavy frigates and one floating battery, two of the Aosta, to return promptly to San Martino and Savier.

Marshal D'Hilliers was at Solferino and marched against Cavriana.

The King having been informed that notwithstanding the third and fifth divisions were engaged, it was difficult to carry the heights of San Martino, ordered a general attack of these divisions with the brigade of Aosta. The first division skirmishes have taken place near Bormio between the French corps of Valtilino and the Austrians guarding the Stelvio Pass.

The Austrians number thirteen companies of infantry and two companies of carbineers. They occupy positions between Glurnus and Trafoi, and a battery had been placed in position to command the road to Stelvio. Barricades have also been erected, and there is great fear of a descent by Garibaldi. The Swiss federal Council has decided in concert with the belligerents that any soldiers seeking shelter on Swiss territory shall be sent back to their country, their governments engaging not to employ them again in the present war.

The garrison of Laviso, and the soldiers of Garibaldi's corps, will consequently be sent back.

It is said that the Austrian monarch ordered the recrossing of the Mincio in opposition to the advice of Gen. Hess.

The Sardinian account of the battle of Solferino, says: On the 24th the Emperor ordered the Sardinian army to occupy Pozzolengo and invest Peschiera, while the French occupied Solferino and Cavriana.

Marshal D'Hilliers met with unexpected difficulties, and the Piedmontese reconnoissance, also encountered great forces of the enemy, while D'Hilliers performed prodigies of valor at Solferino.

The masses of the enemy continued to advance at Castiglione. The Emperor perceiving that he was now contending with the entire army of the enemy, deployed the corps of Marshals Neil and McMahon in place, and ordered Canrobert to rejoin the Imperial Guard. The King had been requested to direct all possible force against Solferino, and accordingly ordered Generals Fanti and Durando to convey succor to the French General. Fanti had already commenced the movement to be made when news arrived that the reconnoissance of the third and fifth division were in danger of being cut off by a superior force. The King recalled Fanti and ordered the brigade under Gen. Della Mormora to the brigade of Piedmont. In spite of the violent tempest Gen. Della Marmora directed his course by Pozzolingo and descended upon San Martino, but was attacked from the side of Pozzolingo. The fourth regiment moving to the left repulsed the enemy, causing great losses with our artillery. In spite of the delay of Gen. Durand's corps, occasioned by the tempest, and ignorance of the guides, the third and fifth divisions and brigade dislodged the enemy from his formidable position, and a brilliant victory ended this contest of fifteen hours, which was sustained with heroic bravery.

The French account of the battle in the Moniteur thus decribes it: At five in the morning the first corps, under Marshal D'Hilliers, began the engagement before Solferino. The heights and village were occupied. After a sanguinary combat during this time, the second corps d'armee, under Marshal McMahon, which was on the right of the first corps in the plain, extended itself to the right to join the column of Marshal Neil, which was marching upon Medole. The Emperor had taken command of the whole army. His majesty caused the infantry and artillery of the Guard to advance and place themselves between the first and second corps and carry San Cassiano. Then, in order to reinforce the right of McMahon's command, which was a little exposed in consequence of the distance which separated them, and the troops of Gen. Neil, his majesty sent all the cavalry of the Guard and two divisions of cavalry of the First and Third corps up. Canrobert had been charged to watch the movements of the Austrians expected on the side of Mantua. During the whole day they fought, advancing slowly, but always in good order, the corps going up toward each other.

The first corps, after taking possession of Solferino seized all the positions, one after the other, in Pozzolingo. Night alone stopped their career. The guard seized San Cassiano and Cavrianna without losing time. The last village was carried with great spirit, under the eye of the Emperor who himself directed the fire of the artillery. The fourth corps, under Marshal Neil, advanced step by step, always gaining ground. There was a time when to cover their retreat, the Austrians made a desperate effort to place themselves between the fourth and second corps. A fierce struggle occurred. [illegible] infantry and artillery took part in the conflict, and the cavalry, by the several charges, decided the success of the day. This was the last account of the battle.

The Austrians began to retreat along the whole line.

This retreat was favored by a dreadful storm, which lasted for more than an hour.—Thunder, hail and wind produced such an effect that nothing could be distinguished on the field of battle. When the weather improved the enemy had disappeared, and the direction they took was perceived when their columns had attained some distance.

The Emperor of Austria, who had lodged at Cavriano, quitted the field at four o'clock and retired towards Goston.

Napoleon was in some degree superior to himself, he was seen everywhere directing the battle. Every one around trembled at the dangers which unceasingly threatened him.—He alone seemed ignorant of them.

London papers state that there has been a meeting at Paris of the inferior diplomatic agents of France in the Levant and that they have been dispatched to their posts by orders from the Emperor. It is presumed that they have orders to aid in getting up an insurrection in Turkey in the interest of Prussia.

General Garibaldi has received orders to occupy the upper Valtelline, and was expected at Torano with 3,000 men, and where 5,000 Piedmontese had already arrived.

Sackville, July 13.—The news by the steamship Canada to Halifax has reached this place by horse express, but is mainly anticipated by the Etna at New York.

The following is the latest received at Liverpool, previous to the Canada's sailing.

Paris, July 2.—The Moniteur contains the following telegram from the Emperor:

Valeggio, Friday.—The army has passed the Mincio. The Sardinians have invested Peschiera. The reinforcement received by the arrival of 35,000 men under Prince Napoleon have enabled me to approach Verona without compromising myself in any way. I have left a corps d'armee at Goito to watch Mantua, and am about to assemble another at Brizzia to watch the passes of the Tyrol.

The Moniteur also contains the following official bulletin of the battle of Solferino. The force of the enemy amounted to 250,000 to 270,000.

The new artillery produced a terrible effect. Its discharges reached the enemy at a distance whence their heaviest guns could not reply, and covered the plain with their dead.

The loss of the French was 720 officers placed hors du combat, including 150 killed and 12,000 privates killed and wounded.

Among the killed are seven colonels and six lieutenant colonels. Among the wounded are five generals.

Vienna, July 1.—An Austrian correspondent says the loss on the 24th, as far as had been ascertained, was 1,300 killed, and 8,100 wounded.

Vienna, July 1.—Since the 24th of June there have been merely unimportant skirmishes between the outposts.

New York, July 14.—The steamship Borussia, from Southampton, on the 4th inst., arrived this afternoon.

The second edition of the London Times of the 4th inst., contains no telegraphic dispatches, but merely letters from its correspondents.

The Te Deum was chaunted at the Notre Dame, on Sunday, for the victory of the French arms on the battle of Solferino. The same thanksgiving was observed in all places of worship throughout France.

Naval preparations continued active at Toulon and Brest. Another division of the army at Lyons leaves for Italy. Immense quantities of projectiles continue to be forwarded to the seat of war.

Prussia had given positive assurances that the recent measures with regard to her military forces are not taken with a view to commence hostilities, and that France may remain perfectly tranquil on that score. Confidence had been somewhat restored in the commercial circles of France, since the victory at Solferino.

A letter from Lyons says that orders had been received by manufacturers from the United States sufficient to compensate them for all they have lost by the war.

It was (sayas) that the failure of the sugar crop will create serious difficulties next year.

The Goshen Democrat, Waterloo Press, South Bend Forum, and Ft. Wayne Republican, give good accounts of the harvest in Northern Indiana. The wheat is abundant and of good quality.

PRICES CURRENT.

CORRECTED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY WALKER & [illegible]

Columbus, July [illegible]

Wheat, red, ⅌ bush.	[illegible]	Hams, country	[illegible]
do white, do	[illegible]	Pork, mess	[illegible]
Flour, ⅌ barrel	[illegible]	Hogs	[illegible]
Corn, ⅌ bushel	[illegible]	Potatoes	[illegible]
Rye, ⅌ bushel	[illegible]	Turnips, ⅌ bushel	[illegible]
Oats, ⅌ bushel	[illegible]	Onions, ⅌ bushel	[illegible]
Clover Seed, ⅌ bush.	[illegible]	Apples, green, ⅌ bush.	[illegible]
Timothy do	[illegible]	Apples, dried, ⅌ bush.	[illegible]
Beans, ⅌ bush.	[illegible]	Peaches, [illegible]	[illegible]
Sugar, ⅌ lb	[illegible]	Beeswax, ⅌ lb	[illegible]
Molasses	[illegible]	Wool, ⅌ lb	[illegible]
Butter, ⅌ lb	[illegible]	Feathers, ⅌ lb	[illegible]
Eggs, ⅌ dozen	[illegible]	Chickens, [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	Chickens, dressed	[illegible]
Lard, ⅌ lb	[illegible]	Turkeys, alive	[illegible]
Tallow, ⅌ lb	[illegible]	Turkeys, dressed	[illegible]
Salt, ⅌ bbl	[illegible]	Whiskey, ⅌ gallon	[illegible]
[illegible] salt	[illegible]	Hay, ⅌ ton	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	Wood, ⅌ cord	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures of dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

A British officer, writing from Teheran, Persia, to the London Times, remarks:—"A Cathartic Pill, manufactured by 'an American chemist,' (Dr. J. C. Ayer, of Lowell, Mass.,) has cured the Shah of a Liver Complaint that threatened his life. This simple fact, as might be expected, renders the Americans immensely popular here, while we English are overlooked. Doubtless our own scholars made the discoveries which he employs, and thus it is in everything—we do the labor, then the scouting Americans put their mark on it and take the reward. Dr. Ayer is idolized by the Court and its retainers here, which will doubtless be reflected to him in a gold snuff box or diamond hilted sword, while not the name even of Davy, Christoson or Brodie, the great lights by which he shines, is known.—New York Sunday Paper.

CITY NOTICES.

McCoy's Commercial College.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort; which, whilst they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated: and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his skill to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

Birmingham Commercial College, June [illegible], 1859.

Prof. Samuel I. McCoy—

Sir: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your course surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the Penmanship department you have no superior and but few equals in the country.

N. [illegible]

Formerly teacher of [illegible], Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is [illegible] building, town street, near Fourth.

Cheap Dry Goods.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. Crittenden on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display [illegible] goods to be found in the city, and the prices such as will suit the times.

C. A. Wagner, dealer in Fruits, Provisions, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also proprietor [illegible] the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which, although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every [illegible] by constant attention. The Saloon is in good condition, No. 81 East State Street.

"It would be the best of [illegible]"

The charms of Music have been sung by the bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest [illegible] and need not be repeated here. [illegible] Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He [illegible] and will visit the neighboring towns and villages if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

The Capitol Restaurant is [illegible], and its Proprietor John O'Hara is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found to gratify his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. [illegible] cannot be surpassed in the city, and his [illegible] been procured at an expense that [illegible] them the best.

The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is so [illegible] drawing-room, which [illegible] Morgan deserves the liberal patronage he has.

E. B. Jennings, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

Soda.—That marble fountain of [illegible] J. M. Denig on Town street, is [illegible] this sparkling beverage to cool [illegible] as ice can make it. How convenient for the [illegible] to "take a glass" on their visits to the [illegible] Block!

Seltzer & Webster [illegible] of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which [illegible] becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed if equaled.

Dr. J. [illegible] has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of the State, and may be consulted at the [illegible] House, where he has rooms.

Hats are of various patterns and fashions. Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at [illegible]'s if you want a superior article.

Fashion Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure [illegible] boots and shoes. They have made a [illegible] for the last two or three years.

[illegible] continues to furnish their customers with delicious bread. [illegible] that he don't [illegible] in three cents a [illegible] more, he will rise in the world [illegible].

Charley Brettfoole is [illegible] one of the handsomest suits we have seen. [illegible] of the Spring style for summer wear [illegible].

SPENCER HOUSE,

By Pratt and Malonie,

COR FRONT & BROADWAY,

jy21] CINCINNATI, O.

New Paint Shop.

THE SUBSCRIBERS ARE PREPARED TO DO

House, Sign, Carriage

AND

Ornamental Painting.

[illegible] Graining, Papering and Glazing; Sash and Blinds for sale. [illegible] colors: Linseed Oil, Turpentine, Varnishes of all kinds, and Japan for sale.

Shop in King's New Building, rear of the Neil House.

jy21-3m] VAN BUREN & PINKERTON.

The Best Pianos

IN THE UNITED STATES ARE

MANUFACTURED BY WM. KNABE & CO.

Of Baltimore, who have always received

THE "FIRST PREMIUM"

Over "CHICKERING," and all other competition. No one doubts this, as the facts are [illegible]

THAT BASE FALSEHOOD

in J. C. Wood's advertisement is still kept before the public, though

WE HAVE CHALLENGED HIM

and have the documents to confirm its falsity. If the Chickering agent is unwilling to accept the challenge of

A Trial of the Instruments and continues his unmanly advertisement, we [illegible] continue to brand him as

A PERVERTER OF THE TRUTH!

jy21] SELTZER & WEBSTER.

OUR UNION.

"THE UNION—it must be preserved."

Dissolve the Union!—let the blush of shame
Rise, with its crimson glow, the brazen cheek
Of him who dares avow the traitorous aim
'Tis not the wise, the wise, the good, who speak
Words of such fearful import; but the weak,
Drunk with fanaticism's poisonous wine,
And reckless of the future, madly seek
To hold their saturnalia at the shrine,
[illegible]

Dissolve the Union!—madmen, would ye rend
The glorious meteor from our country's crest?
[illegible]
Name, food, protection to the world's oppressed!
Have ye no reverence for the high bequest,
That our immortal sires bestowed erewhile?
[illegible] defaced the image God impressed
On your humanity, that ye could smile
To see the lurid flames of Freedom's funeral pile!

Dissolve the Union—in the day, the hour,
So rend the blood-cemented ties in twain
The fearful cloud of civil war will lower
On every [illegible] hill and sunny plain,
From torrid Mexico to frigid Maine,
[illegible]
And pallid women look on kindred slain,
Brothers will battle, and their life-blood lave
The threshold, [illegible] and husbands died to save.

Dissolve the Union!—no, ye cannot part
With [illegible] words the blessed ties that bind
In one the interests of the mighty heart,
That treasures up the hopes of all mankind
A while, perchance, the blind may lead the blind,
And men may follow phosphorescent light
From beaten paths to quagmires, are they find,
The ray that shone so beautiful and bright,
Was but a phantom-lure to deeper, darker night.

Dissolve the Union!—never! Ye may sow
The seeds of vile dissension o'er the land,
That men may reap in sorrow, yet may show
The world your disregard of all its grand,
Eternal interests; but a noble band
Of patriots, tried and true, will still remain,
With heart to heart, and sinewy hand to hand,
To guard, from foul dishonor's cankering stain,
The temple God has reared in Freedom's holy fane.

Dissolve the Union!—no, destroy the page
That gives to human sight the hideous scrawl,
Let not the freemen of a future age,
Read these detested words; they would recall
Shame, madness, imbecility, and all
That mars the noon-tide glory of our time,
[illegible]
To waver now is little less than crime—
To battle for the right is glorious, is sublime.

THE FEMALE BRIGAND; OR, COLT'S PISTOLS AT A PINCH.

It is well known to all in any degree familiar with the history of Mexico, that a regular system of highway robbery exists in every section of that miserably governed country; and that, through a want of interference of the authorities, this has grown up into such a regular and formidable shape that every traveler must be prepared to put his life at hazard at every stage, or be provided with a suitable contribution for los caballeros del camino (the knights of the road,) who will make their levy with a politeness only equalled by the smiling landlord when he receives your overcharged fare for your last night's entertainment. Why such systematic boldness of robbery is allowed—if not with the connivance at least, with rarely any interference of the Government or State authorities—is one of those mystical matters which among many others so puzzles and perplexes the intelligent foreigners; but that such is the disagreeable truth every traveler through the wretched country can bear ample testimony.

Some years ago, having business which first called me to the capital of Mexico, and thence through the interior of the country to the northward, I met with several thrilling adventures, which I have recorded for the benefit of whomsoever may take an interest therein, omitting only the dates, they being non-essential to the interest of the narration themselves.

The first of the series occurred on the route between Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico. In the regular diligencia running between the places just mentioned I had taken passage, and had passed through the beautiful city of Japala, and entered the gloomy town of Perote, without meeting with any unusual incident, though being continually warned to be on my guard against the dangers of the road. At Perote, where we halted for relay and refreshments, all my fellow passengers took leave of me, very solemnly assuring me that, if assailed by the ladrones, or robbers, it would be much better for me to take matters quietly, and suffer myself to be genteelly plundered, than to run the risk of having my throat cut for resistance, as I had somewhat boldly proclaimed it was my intention of doing. I thanked them for their advice, and replied that I would take the matter into serious consideration.

At Perote, I repeat, all who had been my companions from Vera Cruz took leave of me, this being the end of their journey in that direction, but there was one new passenger here to go forward, whom, to my agreeable surprise, I found to be a beautiful young lady, some twenty years of age.

Senorita Paula, as I subsequently ascertained her name to be, was indeed one of those rare beauties seldom met with except in works of fiction—tall, graceful, with a profusion of long, black hair, soft, clear, melting dark eyes, features perfect as ever came from the hands of the sculptor, and with an animation the most fascinating, varying in expression with every changing mood of the intellectual possessor. A glance at her bewitching eyes showed me that she was one who was naturally of a social disposition; and as we rattled away from the gloomy town, I took the liberty of opening the conversation.

"They tell me," said I, "that the route between here and Mexico is a very dangerous one to travel."

"There is little to fear," she replied, with a sweet smile and a melodious tone, "except from the professional robbers, and they seldom harm any one who makes no resistance."

"It seems strange to me," I rejoined, "that you Mexicans should take such a thing as a matter of course, and deem resistance a very impolite way of treating the knights of the road, instead of boldly asserting your rights, and abating the evil by a manly spirit of resistance. For myself, I must consider it the most cowardly of proceedings for any respectable party to set out prepared to quietly gratify the cupidity of the ladrones, and unprepared to treat them to their just deserts."

"Every traveler, Senor," she replied, "should, before setting out, count the cost of his journey, and as, of course, it is natural that he should value his life highly, it seems to be natural that he should rather pay a certain sum for positive safety than put that life in jeopardy. For instance, in traveling from Vera Cruz to Mexico, if he will reckon that so much is the fare by the diligencia, and that so much will be required for entertainment on the way, and so much for the contingency you speak of, he will then have the exact cost between the two points, and if he will look at the whole as the sum total of his journey, he will not seem to be robbed by any party more than another."

"That," I replied, "may be, I believe is, the Mexican mode of doing business, but does not tally with the preconceived ideas of us foreigners."

"But every one," replied the fair speaker, "should conform to the customs of the country he visits."

"And do you then go prepared for this highway robbery? and have you no fear in thus journeying by yourself?"

"Well, Senor, what can I do? I am, as you perceive, an unprotected lady, who for certain reasons, am required to make the journey between Perote and the Capital some twice or thrice a year, and you certainly could not expect me to go prepared to resist an armed band? As to fear, I will not deny I have my share of that, but so far I have never met with any rough treatment, and of course I trust to the saints that my fortune will ever be propitious."

"And you really have been robbed on your journey back and forth?" I inquired.

"I think I have paid my share to the ladrones for my transit through this country!" She laughed.

"And you expect to continue a repetition of the same for the rest of your life?"

"Who knows?" she replied. "At least, I hope to be always prepared."

"And your fellow travelers," said I, "have you seen any disposition to resist these unlawful acts?"

"Once, Senor, an American and an Englishman, who were in the same diligencia with me, fired upon the robbers, killing one and wounding two."

"And did the robbers fire back?"

"Yes, but fled immediately, and fortunately injured none of our party."

"As I should have expected," returned I. "You were not robbed on that occasion, I suppose?"

"We were not, Senor; but the two foreigners subsequently paid dearly for their resistance, for in journeying back both were killed separate and at different times, near the same spot. You see those crosses by the side of the road, Senor?"

"I have observed them frequently, but here they seem to be much more numerous," I replied, looking forth from the vehicle.

"Each stands on the spot where some one has met a violent death," she rejoined; "and as we go along, I will call your attention to those which mark the places where the foreigners met theirs."

"Do you know," said I, "that I am resolved to emulate their example, let the consequences be what they may?"

"Holy saints defend us," she exclaimed; "you are not in earnest, Senor?"

"Seriously so, I assure you."

"You would only bring certain death upon us both."

"Say rather, I should lighten the expense of the journey—for your knights of the road understand how to retreat as well as advance—and you yourself have acknowledged that firm resistance put them to flight for once."

"But there were numbers opposed to them, Senor, and you are only one."

"But fortunately I have a couple of revolvers, which, in two good hands, amount to some ten or a dozen shots, and my friends have repeatedly told me I am not a very bad marksman."

"Ah! Santa Maria! you will think better of this, Senor; the very idea of resistance terrifies me!"

"But not the idea of robbery?"

"Because I never met with violence."

We continued to converse in a similar strain for some time longer—my fair companion gradually changing the subject and seeming much interested in myself. I learned that her family name was Valverde, that she was unmarried, that her father and brother were officers in the army, and so forth, and so on; and in return I gave her my own name, stated something of my history, business and prospects, and altogether became more communicative than I would advise any friends to be with any stranger of either sex in a strange country.

As we continued on our journey, the conversation gradually changing from one thing to another, Senorita Paula suddenly brought it back to the point where it first opened.

"We are coming to a dangerous part of the road," she said, "are you still resolved to defend yourself if assailed?"

"With your permission, Senorita."

"I don't think it advisable," she replied, "but still if such is your intention, I think it no more than right that you should give me a chance to take a part in my defense, since my risk of danger will be as great as yours."

"And have you really the nerve, after all, to defend yourself?" I inquired.

"If I had the means, Senor."

"I have two pistols," said I; "if you will accept one of them it is at your service."

"You are very kind, Senor; but can I fire it?"

"With ease, Senorita;" and producing one of my revolvers, I explained to her the manner in which it was to be used.

"And this, you say, will shoot some half a dozen times?"

"I think it is safe to calculate that five charges out of six will explode, Senorita."

"A very formidable weapon, indeed!" she replied, "and with such I can almost fancy we are safe. You have another, you say, like this?"

I produced it.

"What a beautiful invention!" she observed, reaching over and taking it from my hand. Then extending her hands, one of the revolvers in each, she continued:

"Armed like this, one might almost count himself against a host. You say this is fired in this manner?" she proceeded, cocking one of the weapons as she spoke, and pointing it towards the road.

"Have a care, Senorita, or you will discharge it."

The words were scarcely uttered, when her finger pressed the trigger, and one of the charges exploded with a sharp report. A minute after, and while I was gently chiding her, we heard a loud, quick tramp of horses, and several sharp, rapid exclamations. The next moment our conveyance was stopped suddenly, and we saw ourselves surrounded by some eight or ten mounted men, one of whom, in a loud voice exclaimed:

"Yield you prisoners or die."

"Quick, Senorita," said I, extending my hand; "quick, in Heaven's name! give me one of those weapons! for now is our time for decisive action!"

"Nay," she replied, putting the weapons behind her, "you will be too hasty. Let them suppose we yield—let them open the door!"

"Oh, no! it will then be too late."

As I spoke the door was suddenly thrown open, and three or four swarthy, heavily-bearded men presented themselves to my view.

"Quick, Senorita, for the love of God!" I cried, grasping her arm.

"Hold," she exclaimed, instantly presenting one of my own revolvers to my head. "Resistance is useless—you are our prisoner."

"Good God!" I exclaimed, perfectly astounded; "our prisoner did you say?—It is not possible that one so fair and lovely as yourself is in any manner connected with these banditti?"

"It is even so, Senor," she replied, with one of her most bewitching smiles, still keeping one of my own weapons turned against myself, and significantly pointing the other to the door. "You will oblige us by stepping forth and giving yourself to the care of those good gentlemen, who will see that you are treated as a brave man should be, but who will trouble you in the meantime for any little charge and valuables you might have to spare."

There seemed to be no help for it—the beautiful Senorita Paula Valverde was a spy and accomplice of the ladrones. She had entered the diligencia at Perote for no other purpose than to ascertain the exact condition of things inside, and be able to signalize her associates as she passed along, so that they might know exactly in what manner to conduct themselves and make their work surer without risk. By a simple stratagem she had obtained my arms, just at that point where she knew the attack would be made, and her discharge of the pistol, as if by accident, was the sign to show them that all was secure.

"I acknowledge myself conquered by being outwitted," said I to the Senorita.

Then turning to the robbers, who had now collected in a body in front of the door of the diligencia, I continued:

"Gentlemen, will you permit me to alight and make you some valuable presents? In the language of your country, all I have is yours."

The leader of the party bowed politely in return, and said with a grim smile:

"Si, Senor, we shall be most happy to receive anything which so distinguished a traveler may have to bestow."

With this, I quietly stepped from the vehicle, and one quick, searching glance put me in possession of the whole state of affairs. The diligencia had been stopped in a wild, gloomy place, and the driver was sitting carelessly on his box, taking everything as a matter of course. He might also be an accomplice of the robbers, or he might not, but, in either case, there was little hope of assistance from him—any attempt of the kind would certainly bring upon him a severe punishment sooner or later. I glanced up and down the road, where it wound between dark and overshadowing trees, but discovered nothing to give me any hope.

The robbers, some eight or ten in number, and all well armed, were collected around me, part of them mounted, and the others standing on their feet, holding their mustangs by their bridles. Looking upon my case as a desperate one, so far as being plundered was concerned, I still retained my presence of mind and did not wholly despair. True, I had been outwitted and disarmed, and now stood singly between numbers, but the idea of yielding tamely to this outrage was repugnant to my every nature, and I resolved to put the least favorable opportunity for defense and retaliation to the strongest test.

"Will you accept this purse?" said I, producing one that held several gold [illegible], and handing it to the chief of the ladrones.

"Thank you, Senor, you are very kind," he said, as he took it in his hand, with a polite bow, and chinked the money.

"This diamond pin may prove acceptable to your friend?" I added, as I quietly removed it from the bosom of my shirt, and handed it over to the gentleman on his left, who received it in the same polite manner.

"I beg your pardon, Senorita," I pursued glancing at the Senorita Paula, who, with my pistols still in her possession, was quietly standing within the diligencia, regarding the whole proceeding with one of her sweetest smiles. "I must not forget this beautiful lady. I have here," I went on at the same time producing the article, "a very beautiful gold snuff box—set, as you perceive, with diamonds—will your ladyship honor me by accepting this as a slight token of my regard for the pleasure afforded me by your company and conversation?"

"You are a very gallant gentleman, Senor," she laughed, taking the two revolvers in one fair hand, and presenting the other.

I reached the box toward her—but my hand trembled a little—so just as the present was about to touch her fingers, it slipped and fell between us.

"A thousand pardons, Senorita, for my awkwardness," I said, as I bent down to pick it up.

Now was the all-important moment—the moment of life and death. All were in a measure off their guard; and one quick, furtive glance showed me that the girl still held my weapons carelessly in one hand, with the other remaining extended for the prize. I lifted the box carefully, but as I raised myself, I gave a wild, startling yell; and as the Senorita started back, I, with the quickness of lightning, seized both weapons, and wrenched them from her.

To wheel and commence firing upon the party was only the work of a moment.—The first shot, fortunately, stretched out their chief; the second took effect on the one nearest to him; and by the time the third had been sent to its mission, there arose one simultaneous yell of dismay, and the astounded robbers began to scatter in every direction. I had no disposition to follow them, however; another minute they might rally and turn upon me, and springing forward, I grasped the reins of a freed mustang, and vaulted into the saddle.—One more glance around me showed me the Senorita Paula upon the body of the chief, her laughter changed to grief, and some of the scattered cowards bringing their weapons to bear upon me.

"Adios, Senorita and Senores," said I, bitterly; "he laughs best who laughs last."

The next moment I was dashing away down the road, the half-rallied robbers pouring after me a volley, but fortunately not touching their mark. They would doubtless have followed me in hot pursuit, but for the wholesome dread they had of my still undischarged weapon. As it was, I escaped and entered the town of Puebla in triumph; where, it is almost needless to add, a narrative of my exploit made me a hero and a lion for the time. Here I sold my captured mustang and trappings for enough to indemnify me for what I had disposed of in the way of presents, and the next day saw me an inside passenger of the same diligencia, en route for Mexico, where I arrived in safety, without any further event worthy of note.

What became of the robbers and their beautiful accomplice, I never learned; but the lesson taught me on that journey I have never forgotten; and during the remainder of my stay in that country no pretty woman ever had the honor of being my business confidante, or of getting possession of my trusty and unfailing revolvers.

BONNER AGAIN.—It is reported that Bonner, of the New York "Ledger," has offered Edward Everett $10,000 to stop writing for his journal.

The offer should be accepted. Bonner's readers do not appreciate the classic elegance of Mr. Everett's style, or care a copper about the subjects of which he treats. They prefer vinegar, and pepper, and mustard, and ginger and cloves, to the smoothness of sweet oil, or the delicate crispness of pastry.

DRESSING FOR BURNS.—Doctor P. R. Wornaven furnishes the following recipe for burns to the Cincinnati Press:

The very best dressing for a burn, is made by mixing air slaked lime (passed through a fine flour seive), with flaxseed oil; spread upon muslin and applied to the injured parts, the relief afforded is instantaneous and its healing properties unrivaled. I have used it for near twenty years with astonishing and unvarying success.

☞ Mr. P. St. George Cooke is a generous man. He has presented to the Virginia Military Institute $20,000 for the establishment of an Agricultural Department at that institution.

☞ The foundation of political happiness is confidence in the integrity of man.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

WHEN SHOULD GRAIN BE HARVESTED?—When the is proper period to cut grain? This is an important question with the western farmer at the present moment; for it is one closely allied to his interests, and one which he should carefully inquire into. The best means of deciding the question is to consult the opinion of those, who, by a course of careful experiments, have acquired such experience as entitles their decisions to respect. The weight of opinion seems to be decidedly in favor of early harvesting—before the grain is fully ripe. The most judicious millers and grain dealers are decidedly in favor of early harvesting—and certainly their opinion is worth something. In New York, and, indeed, in all of the great grain-growing States, the practice of cutting grain before it is dead ripe, universally prevails. With them, the exact time when it should be cut is now no longer a matter of doubt; all being perfectly convinced that the right period is indicated by that change which the grain experiences when passing from a milky state to that of complete hardness; or, in other words, when it is in the "dough," and when the kernels without being "sticky," are yet not sufficiently hard to resist the pressure of the thumb and finger.

The advantages of this early cutting are: The grain is heavier, plumper, sweeter and whiter—thereby making it more valuable for the market; there is less loss from scattered grain, either from the high winds which prevail on our prairies, or when the grain is cut with a machine, or in handling when stacking; the straw, particularly when it is an object to feed, is much more valuable, because it will possess a greater proportion of succulence and saccharine sweetness, which render it better food for stock; the farina of the grain being perfected, all that is necessary to render it fit for flouring is the hardening of it, and this, it is abundantly established, may be as well perfected after the straw is cut, as before. Again, grain that is allowed to stand until it is fully, or dead ripe, makes darker flour.

For these reasons, and they seem to be well established by successful practice, it certainly stands the western farmer in hand to consider the importance of harvesting his grain at the right time, that he may have the full benefit of his labor in the harvest field. He should not yield to the tyranny of prejudice, and persistently tread in the same old beaten track, just because "father did so," taking no heed of the improvements and increase of knowledge which are benefitting his co-laborers in the same noble pursuit.—N. W. Farmer.

BUCKWHEAT.—We learn from a number of our farmers in different sections that a large quantity of that most excellent material—buckwheat—is being sown this season. This is a most excellent determination. As an article of food, buckwheat cakes are hard to beat. Some celebrated scientific gentleman has recently been making some investigations on buckwheat, from which we condense the following interesting results: "Buckwheat cakes are equal to pure white bread as regards the phosphates in bone material and nitrogenous principle which they contain, and are superior to bread in fatty matters. The general yield of buckwheat when cooked is about three times the weight of flour used, showing that such flour will retain forty-one per cent. of water. Between different patches of ground buckwheat, there is great dissimilarity of composition—one patch containing nearly seven times as much fatty matter as another. The bran is the richest portion of the buckwheat, but cannot be digested by weak stomachs. The finest quality of buckwheat flour, and the white mill-dust especially, are very suitable for children and persons in delicate health; while the coarser varieties require a strong stomach and much exercise for their perfect digestion."

The Circleville Herald has the following judicious advice as to the best mode of planting trees, recommended by Mr. Jas. Terwilliger:

PROPER METHOD FOR PLANTING FRUIT TREES.—In planting, dig the holes 8 feet in diameter and 2 feet deep, fill in with good soil to the proper depth for the reception of the tree, plant about an inch or two deeper than it originally stood, tramping it in the earth gently with the foot, leaving the earth oval from the collar, rather than dishing into it, and before planting the tree, cut off all the fractured roots with a clean cut, prune off the top more than the roots, put no manure in the filling in planting.

Finish the planting process by mulching 2 or 3 inches thick, as large a circumference as the hole for planting. For mulching use half rotted straw, old tan, old saw dust, or chip manure. It is better to stake each tree and tie with a slack rope.

We would advise fall planting, if as convenient, from the fact that the roots get fixed to start as the spring comes on. It is well known that the roots are not entirely dormant during the winter. If they were, as many suppose, there would be no swell in the buds in winter.

BAD FLAVOR IN MILK.—The flavor of turnips, cabbages, &c., can be neutralized by turning a pint of boiling water in each bucket full of milk.

TO PRESERVE MILK.—Put a spoonful of horse radish into a pint of milk, and it will remain sweet several days.

POCKET BOOK LOST.

On the morning of the 4th, was lost a pocket book containing one $5 note, Virginia, $1 Ohio, and a $2 note on [illegible], together with a number of papers, [illegible]. The finder may retain the money for the [illegible] at the Post office, or to the [illegible] Babbitt & Dickinson's.

July 7. JOHN O'HANLON.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.

A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular boarders [illegible]. The Saloon and Restaurant supplied with the best of every thing. June 3.

E. BASSETT LANGDON,
Attorney at Law.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
☞ OFFICE 23 West Third street. jy7-tf

WM. DENNISON
AND
H. B. CARRINGTON,
Attorneys & Counsellors at Law,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.

☞ Office, Nos. 1 and 2 Odeon Building. Special attention given to the Law of Patents and Insurance. jy16

JOHN H WHEELER,
INSURANCE AGENT,
Notary Public
AND COLLECTOR.
Office 21 High Street, Savage's Block.
☞ First class Fire and Life Insurance Companies represented. All business attended to promptly. jy16

NEW LAW BOOKS.

VOLUME 16 SMITH'S NEW YORK COURT of Appeals.
Vol. 3 Blatchford's Circuit Court Reports.
Vol. 6 Gray's Massachusetts Reports.
Vol. 21 Howard's United States Court Reports.
Vols. 1, 2 and 3 English Bench Reports.
Vol. 8 Ohio Supreme Court Reports.
Parsons' Laws of Business, for Business men.
Matthews' Guardians' Guide.
[illegible] Code, Treatise and Forms.
For sale at the New Bookstore. J. H. RILEY & Co.
☞ A full supply of Law Books of the latest editions on hand. jy16

COOKE & TAYLOR.

WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Columbus and vicinity that they have opened a CUSTOM SHOP, and are now prepared to do business in all branches of Tailoring. We earnestly solicit the patronage of our old Customers as well as the new. TERMS LOW. No. [illegible] South High street.
jy7-tf

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

FRESH MEATS! FRESH MEATS!!
D. W. HILL,
Columbus Meat Market,
North-East Cor. of Spring and High Sts.

Has constantly choice fresh and salted Beef, Veal, Mutton, Lamb, &c., which his Ice closets enable him to keep sweet in the warmest weather.

Market attended regularly, where his customers will be served with the choicest meats to be procured in the country.

Thankful for the liberal custom, he has enjoyed, his endeavors will be to merit its continuation.
June 30.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT,
In the Basement of "the Goodale House,"
By JOHN O'HARA,
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Every luxury brought to this market, constantly received, and prepared in the most acceptable manner.

He has a French Cook,
Who has had long experience and the best instruction in his business.

The Capitol Saloon,
Connected with the Restaurant, is a favorite resort, and where every variety of wines and liquors are kept of the very best quality.

The cigars have been selected with great care, and are of the choicest most expensive varieties.
June 23.

COLUMBUS
Machine Manufacturing Company,
MANUFACTURERS OF
STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,
CASTINGS,
MILL GEARING,
MACHINERY,
—ALSO—
RAILROAD WORK.
P. AMBOS, Treas. CHAS. AMBOS, Supt.
June 23-tf

E. CORNELISON,
TUNER
AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
PIANO AND MELODEON KEYS WHITENED, AND ALL STAINS REMOVED.
Also, particular attention paid to
TUNING AND REPAIRING ORGANS.
☞ Orders left at Seltzer & Webster's Music Store, will receive prompt attention. jy16

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $204,000.
Offices 337 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N. Y.

This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent.
Columbus Ohio.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers!
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially Tiles; including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse-keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

LATEST BOOKS.
Memoirs. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Steuben.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Cobb's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Delaines, Lawns, Robes, Calicoes, Bareges, Challis,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles, Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets. J. C. CHITTENDEN. may 12.

McCoy's
COMMERCIAL COLLEGE!
CARPENTER'S BUILDING, COLUMBUS, OHIO.
THE MOST THOROUGH AND PRACTICAL INSTITUTION FOR YOUNG MEN PREPARING FOR BUSINESS IN THE COUNTRY.
S. I. McCOY - - - - Principal.

S. I. McCoy, Teacher of Book-keeping and Practical and Ornamental Penmanship.
Dan'l. Wooster, Teacher of Book-keeping, Mathematics and English Grammar.
S. W. Andrews, Esq., Lecturer on the Laws of Business and Political Economy.

TERMS—Payable in advance:

For a full and unlimited course in all the departments, with the privilege of review at the student's option, $35. Students taken for a special course by the month, as per agreement.

The Principal has received the first premium for specimens of practical and Ornamental Penmanship at many State and County Fairs, and at the U. S. Fair. He presents to the Public specimens of penmanship, and invites criticism and comparison with all other. He also invites the attention of those desiring a business course, to the superior facilities which he is prepared to offer students in all the departments essential to a thorough business-man's training.

Rooms Open Day and Evening.
Send for Circular and Specimen of Writing. Address, SAM'L I. McCOY, Columbus, Ohio.
Jy7-tf

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS.
BLANK BOOKS,
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices,
Supplied with any article in the line of Stationary, on the best terms, and all Wares warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
[illegible]
A full supply, at all times, of Valuable Standard Works Foreign and American Editions.
A good stock of valuable Medical and Scientific Works at all Times. All the new Books received direct.
French, English and American Stationary
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.

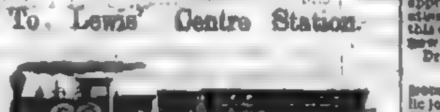
Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors, from 8 to 8ft; French Plate; Oil Paintings and Engravings; Portrait and Picture Frames always on hand and made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens; Work Boxes and Dressing Cases; Card Cases and Porte Monnaies; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes; Pocket Books, Wallets, [illegible], &c., &c. june16

New Books.

FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
[illegible] and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederic S. Cozzens.
SEACLIFF, or the Mystery of the Westervelts. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Asia, Asia and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland (7 vols., cloth $7.50.)
The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novelette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Sontanwold (a Novel.) By Mrs. [illegible].
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Works of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt, 4 vols.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.
June 16, 1859-tf J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.

DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law, from 5th London Edition.
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, New Ed. with additions.
Spain: by Wm. Cullen Bryant.
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Onward.
Ninety Years' Gleanings.
The Foster Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Trend[illegible] and Friends.
Becoming Sorrows.
Arago's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store. J. H. RILEY & Co.
June16



1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs
Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.

The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles North of Columbus (the Capital of Ohio) on the Scioto River, 10 miles from Delaware, 5 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburgh Railroad, and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad.

The medical qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States. For Books, or other information, address
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio.
june16

DESHLER ICE.
Charles G. Deshler is serving his numerous customers with superior ice. He attends to its delivery in person; and the sun is not more punctual. His carriages will run throughout the season.
June 30.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs
VIA THE
CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.
To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 4:20 A. M., and 1:10 P. M., daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis' Centre station, which is situated sixteen miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the springs. For the accommodation of persons wishing to spend the sabbath at the Springs, the night freight leaving Columbus at 6:00 P. M. on Saturday, will leave passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.

RETURNING.
Cincinnati Express will stop for passengers at Lewis' Centre Station, at 8:00 A. M., on MONDAY MORNINGS ONLY, arriving in Columbus at 8:50 A. M. The Mail train will stop daily at 4:30 P. M., arriving in Columbus at 5:00 P. M.

Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages in readiness at all times to convey passengers between the cars and Springs. Passengers can rely upon being taken to the Springs promptly on arrival of trains.

The citizens of Columbus will find this, the best and most convenient way to go to the Springs.

Tickets for the round trip to the Station and back during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

For further information and tickets, inquire at the ticket office in the Depot.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.
Columbus, June 23, 1859—tf.

PROPOSED
AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October State election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of the State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."
WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.
April 6, 1859.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
COLUMBUS, O., April 7, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.
A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO,
COLUMBUS, April 13, 1859.
I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.
JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.
june16-td

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the sexual organs by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail in a sealed envelope, FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
may12

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of them of hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.

He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are then kept wondering what to do) would do well to call on him. [illegible]. Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest [illegible], and can certainly sustain a physician who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and [illegible] in advance of ordinary Practitioners. [illegible] VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.

Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a remedy, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer them selves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave. Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Dysentery, [illegible] by a new plan.

[illegible] Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a Vegetable extract.

Cases given up by others solicited. He will forfeit $100 for any of the following he cannot cure: Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 30,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus' Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 9 a. m., to 8 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.
june23

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC
CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice,
Debility of the Nervous System,
Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhœa proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Murphy in Europe.
[illegible] Chess for Winter Evenings.
[illegible] Manual of Chess.
[illegible] and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
[illegible] Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.

CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland [illegible] always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10 a. m., to 12 m. One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer engaged who will be one of the best in the city. may26-1m

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain writing their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the

Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence is in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral:

That they cure the almost universal complaint

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other remedies have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

[illegible]

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried, with and fire and that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They purify disease in every avenue and organ of the system, and to be purify thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of the Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal office and Sales Rooms, No. 6 East Fourth St., 3d Building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in [illegible] street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY,
Roberts & Samuel, Columbus,
Amos J. Schooley, Columbus,
[illegible] & Bro., Columbus,
S. Amos, Canal Winchester,
Isaac Thompson, Worthington,
R. M. Johnson, Reynoldsburg,
R. N. Beatley, Clintonville,
B. Gaster, Westerville,
Henry Miller, Harrisburg,
John [illegible], Grove City,
Geo. T. Ames, [illegible]
And by druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.
[illegible]

[illegible] Cure,
[illegible]

Intermittent Fever, or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO,
LOWELL, MASS.

☞ For sale by ROBERTS & SAMUEL, No. 34 North High St., Columbus; Suire, [illegible] & Co., Cincinnati; Wm. Firth, Cleveland; [illegible] GRAHAM, Zanesville; and by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine everywhere. 1861-ly

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route,
[illegible]
Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago
Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore,
Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad,
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—Leave Columbus at 4 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of Galion, stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Iberia and all stations north of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the Pittsburgh train for Pittsburgh arriving at Pittsburgh at [illegible] p. m. Also with [illegible] at Crestline, with the [illegible] a. m. Express to Chicago, arriving at Chicago at [illegible] p. m. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for Toledo. Arrives at Cleveland at [illegible] a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.
NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leave Columbus at 10:30 a. m. stopping only at Delaware, North Branch, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London, and Grafton, connecting at Crestline with the [illegible] Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at [illegible] p. m. also with the [illegible] p. m. connecting at [illegible] p. m., with the fast Express on Lake Shore road for the East arriving at Buffalo [illegible] p. m. Dunkirk [illegible] p. m. Buffalo [illegible] p. m. New York [illegible] p. m. eight hour [illegible] ahead of any other line, Boston [illegible] p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.

THIRD TRAIN.
EXPRESS MAIL—Leave Columbus at 2:20 p. m. Will stop at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:20 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at [illegible] a. m. at Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston, arriving at [illegible] a. m., Dunkirk [illegible] a. m., Buffalo [illegible] a. m.

☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.
Night Express, arrives at Columbus [illegible]
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at [illegible]
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at [illegible]

Fare as low as by any other Route.

For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty Ticket agent in the [illegible] depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. & C. & X. Railroads.
E. S. FLINT,
Supt. Cleveland, Ohio.
H. C. MARSHALL,
Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent,
Columbus, Ohio.
Columbus, May 12, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily (Sundays excepted) from Columbus, in connection with trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN.
NIGHT EXPRESS—at 2:45 A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and at Valuable Stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at 7:20 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c. and at Cincinnati with the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad for St. Louis [illegible] Louisville [illegible].

SECOND TRAIN.
[illegible] EXPRESS—at [illegible] A. M., stopping at Wood[illegible], London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Foster's, Loveland, Miamiville, and Plainville, and Dayton, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, [illegible].

THIRD TRAIN.
(NIGHT EXPRESS ONLY.)
NO. 3 EXPRESS—At [illegible] P. M. stopping at Worthington, London, Xenia, Morrow, Loveland and Milford, and Plainville, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. [illegible] arriving at [illegible] Louisville, [illegible], St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN.
(EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)
MAIL—At [illegible] P. M. stops at All stations, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, [illegible], Foster's, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.
Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express [illegible] A. M.; No. 2 Express 10:50 a. m., No. 3 Express [illegible] p. m.

For further information and Through Tickets apply to [illegible] Ticket Agent, Union Depot, Columbus.
P. W. STRADER,
General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
J. W. DOHERTY,
Agent, Columbus, O.
Columbus, April [illegible] 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.
Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily.
(Sundays excepted.)
Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:

FIRST TRAIN.
Leaves at [illegible] a. m., on the arrival of trains from Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Arrives at Indianapolis at [illegible] p. m.

This train connects at Milford with trains for Marysville, and for Mechanicsburg, Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati direct without change of Cars.

Also connects at Urbana with trains for Bellefontaine and Sidney; at Piqua for Troy, Dayton, Sidney, Anderson and Wapakoneta; at Union City for Greenville, at Anderson for Richmond and Peru.

At Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette & Chicago, also, with trains for Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis, Muncie at St. Louis with the Pacific Railroad for Kansas and Lawrence.

Also connects at Indianapolis for Lafayette, Louisville, Madison and Peru.

SECOND TRAIN.
Leaves Columbus at [illegible] p. m., on the arrival of trains from Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Arrives at Indianapolis at [illegible] p. m.

This Train connects at Milford for Mechanicsburg and Springfield; at Urbana with trains north on the [illegible] for Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. At Piqua with trains north on the D. & M. R. R. for Sidney, Lima, Delphos, Fort Wayne and Chicago; and at Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette, Chicago, Terre Haute, [illegible] and St. Louis.

WAY FREIGHT.
Leaving Columbus at 6:00 a. m. will carry a Passenger Car for the Accommodation of Way Travel.

☞ Be sure to see that your Tickets read VIA THE COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE, and see that you do not have Tickets sold you by other and Inferior Routes.

☞ Tickets for all Western Routes for sale at all the Principal Rail Road Stations in the East.
E. WALKER, General Ticket Agent.
M. F. [illegible], Superintendent.
Columbus, Ohio May 12 1859. chs-tf

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established at the city of Columbus, O., THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic doctrine and its columns shall be characterised by frankness and honesty, its standard, suited to their unflinching veracity. Nor shall it be used for ulterior designs, but consistently pursue the object for which it is established of that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the prosperity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and while everything, the [illegible] [illegible] ability can bring to the duty, (a more [illegible] [illegible] and not a false light held up to [illegible] to betray)—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and none every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As no Prospectus can be expected to enter into minute details, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a [illegible] patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year....................................$2 00
A discount of ten per cent on Clubs of ten; [illegible] per cent on clubs of twenty, [illegible] clubs of thirty, and [illegible] per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards, sent to a single address.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March 23, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will oblige us by [illegible] this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.
Received for six months on One Dollar and [illegible].

[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS
Will be sent for the campaign to subscribers at Fifty Cents for the single copy.

CAMPAIGN CLUBS
May be formed for the PRESS at the following rates:

Five Copies	[illegible]
Ten "	[illegible]
Twenty "	[illegible]
Fifty "	[illegible]
One hundred copies	[illegible]

State Library

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1859. NUMBER 12.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion	$1.00
Each additional insertion	[illegible]
One square 3 months	[illegible]
" " 6 "	[illegible]
" " 12 "	[illegible]
One fourth of a column per year	30.00
" half " "	60.00
" column " "	100.00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $10.00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular sovereignty.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who attempt the establishment, limitation, or [illegible] of these principles.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretensions to be the peculiar friends of free labor.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commends our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

Several Black Republican papers, and among them is the one over the way, are peddling a lie, said to have been started in the Zanesville Aurora, that Col. Manypenny, editor of the Ohio Statesman, went into Muskingum county and urged that Judge Whitman should be withdrawn from the Democratic State Ticket to make room for Judge Swan. The charge is a base fabrication and a malicious falsehood, which Col. Manypenny has repeatedly branded as such, through the Statesman. If the editor of the Jeff. has any regard for truth and honesty he would "stop that lie."—Hancock Courier.

We reproduce this that it may not escape the attention of the Statesman and the Zanesville Aurora. The young man who edits the Hancock Courier seems to have become the victim of ungovernable rage, because the low, underhanded scheming of MANYPENNY has been exposed. We wonder if he is afraid of telling a falsehood, or knows when he is in danger of such a catastrophe? Now, where has he ascertained that the charge that MANYPENNY when in Muskingum urged the expediency of withdrawing WHITMAN and substituting SWAN, is "a base fabrication and a malicious falsehood?" Surely not from the Statesman. MANYPENNY has been dared to make the denial, but is as mum as a snail. "The editor of the Jeff." will please note this, and "stop that lie."

Mr. HOLLABAUGH is too fast. He overreaches himself, and treads on his own toes. Let the Jeff.' make him show the branding in the Statesman. The fact is notorious that the Statesman called a meeting of the Central Committee, the object of which was to postpone the Democratic Convention that it might have a chance to adopt SWAN if thrown overboard by the Republicans. MILLER and MANYPENNY were both out, (to use the language of a correspondent of the Cleveland National Democrat) "laying the ropes." The correspondent let the cat out of the bag, for which the Statesman told him he "had better mind his own business!"

We have not seen in the Statesman the denial which has been repeatedly asked for by the Zanesville Courier. It is strange that MANYPENNY is mute, now, when in other instances he has not been so scrupulously silent, and when his departure from this example damaged truth confoundedly.

Naturalization—What Protection is Promised.

The all-wise Statesman is taking to itself great glory for having "persistently declared Gen. CASS had in nowise departed from the ancient, reasonable and American doctrine, which has always obtained among Democratic Statesmen in reference to the right of naturalized citizens abroad." It even anticipated Mr. PUGH's defence of Gen. CASS's position in his letter to HOFRE, for it says:

"Before Mr. Pugh's letter was written we showed that the doctrine propounded to Mr. Hofre by General Cass surrendered no right hitherto insisted upon, and clearly stated that laws of certain foreign governments were deemed by our government incompatible with our rights and with the public law of nations."

To make its position stronger as to a far-seeing and prophetic ken, it quotes from the New York Times, a "leading Republican organ"—a piece of news which will be regarded by that paper with no little surprise. This is a trick sometimes resorted by political schemers to bolster up their own assertions, but such tricks do not always win. The New York Times is not "a leading Republican organ." It belongs to a class of newspapers that do not claim to be party organs—that are independent in tone and character, and while generally fair and candid, merely become associated with party as the bias of their writers impresses itself upon their articles, without aiming to be the special organ of any party. So much for the Statesman's veracity in claiming the New York Times to be "a leading Republican organ."

We remember when the brief letter of Gen. CASS to LECLERC appeared, the Statesman made an assertion which the letter itself disproved. When the letter of Gen. CASS to HOFRE appeared the Statesman was evidently taken aback for fear it had "put its foot in it," and was content to avail itself of a long article from the National Intelligencer showing what had been the action of government under former administrations. The letter of Mr. PUGH did not exactly enable the Statesman to say "there now, did I not tell you so?" because while it illustrated what the Secretary of State ought to have said and probably meant to have said, and reasoned upon that hypothesis, it cautiously abstained from assuming that he had taken the broad and national grounds, on which Mr. PUGH declared himself to stand.

In its Sunday issue, the Statesman published approvingly an extract from the dispatch from the Department of State to our Minister at Berlin, July 8th, 1859, in which it is elaborately argued (what no American has denied) that crime committed by native or naturalized in a foreign country is amenable to its municipal laws. In that dispatch, the question at issue, the protection of a naturalized citizen who "may have been called into the army or actually in it at the time of leaving his native country, is more plainly and fully discussed and better defined than in the letters vouchsafed to those addressing the Department for information; and in reality taking the grounds foreshadowed by Mr. PUGH, being restricted to actual desertion, in which event no protection is promised. What public opinion has had to do in this matter it is not necessary to suggest; but it certainly is plainly perceptible that the position of the Administration as now defined by the Secretary of State, does not sustain that of the Intelligencer, which was adopted by the Statesman on the appearance of the HOFRE letter, in lieu of comments of its own.

We are willing that the recent exposition of Gen. CASS shall be taken as the settled policy of the government during this administration, but prefer that of Mr. WISE, who contends that a naturalized citizen of the United States is absolved from military duty to any foreign Government; and should be protected from involuntary service in the army of such government. But as we have heretofore said, this must be a matter of negotiation, when individual cases may arise, unless provided for in future treaties. Otherwise, as in the absurd case presented by the venerable Secretary, of a boy having been brought here by his father, who would have owed service to the Prussian government when arrived at sufficient age, another absurdity would arise, in denying to Prussia the right to compel him to service on returning, while one a few years his senior, who had been called upon, but left his country before service, might be made to render such service without interposition in his behalf.

The MILLER organ is out in defense of the MILLER clique, and as usual cannot make a plain statement—in other words, cannot help lying. The Statesman says:

'During the campaign of two years ago (1857,) the Republican organ of this city kept up a continuous parrot chatter about the Democratic ticket being the the favorite of the 'Miller clique.' Then there was a Senator, Representatives, Probate Judge, Auditor, Sheriff, &c., to elect, as there will be this fall. They were elected by an average majority of 860."

Now, on that ticket was one peculiarly MILLER candidate, (the Sheriff) who ran behind the ticket 500 or 600 votes; and by himself would have been defeated overwhelmingly. This candidate Millerism smuggled on the ticket in a mean, unscrupulous manner, and if those who so regarded it, had not been actuated by a higher motive than Millerism could conceive, that candidate would have never touched bottom. The same game will not win twice, however deep the scheme may be.

The Statesman continues:

"After the election, of course, the chatter ceased. But, it is renewed already, and will be continued till this fall's election is determined, no matter who may be nominated; when the result will be as usual. If we have the old result of this stale chatter this fall, in the election of our ticket by an overwhelming majority, we hope that the Republicans will have the manliness to admit that the cry of 'Miller clique' is no hurt or hindrance to Democratic success."

The Democracy of the county will be fools to put their heads in the snare already set for them—but if the "Miller clique" should not be successful—what then?

The Statesman is again showing the cloven foot with regard to Judge WHITMAN. It publishes an article from the American Citizen of Hillsboro, which hoists the name of Judge SWAN for Judge of the Supreme Court, and discards both WHITMAN and GHOLSON. Not one word does the Statesman have to say against such a movement. It is plain that it would like to join in if it dare. We should like to see the movement carried out—if it were general, but in a triangular fight the two parties would obey organization rather than the urgency of either instinct or reason to do right. But, really, on which side would one infer the Statesman is? Certainly with the American Citizen!

The Statesman has not corrected its mis-statement as to the political leaning of the First Ward. Although it went for MEDILL in 1855 and for PAYNE in 1857, it was always Democratic, in the Statesman's opinion, because it would not go for COX in 1858. The Statesman is an excellent tactician. The Democratic party must be under vast obligations for its concessions. Instead of saying that the ward had been always Republican it would have been better in the Statesman to have said that Mr. CRANE's popularity had reduced the majority against Cox one-half.

County Candidates.

The Republicans have had a consultation and postponed the time of holding their County Convention. The meetings to appoint delegates are called for the 2d of September, and the Convention is to be held the next day. We said some time ago, when referring to this matter, that a postponement was not improbable; and it is likely the arrangement will be satisfactory to all concerned.

On the other side of the house, we saw it announced by the Columbus Gazette that the Democratic primary election would be held on the 20th of August,—we believe it said primary election, but are not positive. It should be primary election, as that is the mode most acceptable to Democrats.

The candidates for the several offices have been pretty well agreed upon we believe—or at least, those who are to run for nomination—except for representatives. We have heard Mr. CONVERSE and Mr. EDWARDS named as the ticket. Mr. DURANT and Mr. QUINN, of Blendon, are both spoken of, if not announced. The friends of Judge RANKIN are desirous that he should again represent the county, and Dr. E. L. GRAVES will be urged to be a candidate for re-election. We shall probably in a short time have more definite information, and who are likely to be successful and when the election is to take place. [illegible]

The Wheat Crop.

From an article in the New York Courier and Enquirer on the national wheat crop of 1859, and the tables connected therewith, we condense some interesting statements.

The productions of wheat in the several States for 1857, '58 and '59, is stated as follows:

1857	[illegible]
1858	[illegible]
1859	[illegible]

The production in Ohio is estimated as follows:

1857	[illegible]
1858	[illegible]
1859	[illegible]

The production of the four Western States, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois, which have the largest surplus for export, is shown by these figures:

1857	[illegible]
1858	[illegible]
1859	[illegible]

The surplus for the present year in these four States, is estimated thus:

Crop 1859	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Surplus crop 1859	[illegible]

It is estimated that in addition to this, from one-sixth to one-fifth of the surplus crop for 1858 is yet in the hands of the producers. We, therefore, have for the States, estimating last year's surplus crop at the west at twenty-four millions of bushels, as the gross:

Surplus crop 1859	28,000,000 bush.
1/6 per ct. on '58	4,000,000
Total for export	32,000,000

The transportation of this at forty cents per bushel will give nearly seventeen millions of dollars to our canals and railroads.

The prominent figures in the foregoing statements are those stating the entire wheat crop for this year at 201,000,000 bushels, and the surplus at 32,000,000. With such a large surplus and the prospect of a fair market abroad, we cannot but feel encouraged to look for a large addition to the capital and circulating medium of the country. With some fifty millions of dollars added to our national wealth by the export of this surplus wheat, our crippled financial condition would be greatly relieved. [illegible]

NATIONAL HORSE SHOW.—The next National Horse show will be held at Dayton on the 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th of September. Liberal premiums are offered for competitors, the highest being $200 for the fastest traveling gelding or filley in harness.

The following premiums are offered to female equestrians:

1st Prem.—Fine Gold Watch and Chain	[illegible]
2d [illegible]	[illegible]
3d [illegible]	[illegible]
4th [illegible]	[illegible]
5th—Fine Mosaic Set	[illegible]
6th [illegible]	[illegible]

Awarding Committee.—Hon. Thomas Corwin, Lebanon, Ohio; Hon. Lewis D. Campbell, Hamilton, Ohio; Gen. H. F. Carrington, Columbus, Ohio; Wm. G. Davis, Dayton, Ohio; J. D. Phillips, Dayton, Ohio; Capt. A. Bufford, Versailles, Kentucky.

NO DOUBT OF IT.—The London Times in speaking of the iron steam battering ram, which is to cost £420,000, says "if she only does one-half of what may fairly be anticipated, she will be cheaper to the nation than a dozen sail of the line." No doubt of it—she would be cheaper maybe when her cost will only nearly equal that of a dozen sail of the line. She might be cheaper than what did not cost half so much. We rather guess that John Bull made his own bill this time, unless the writer of the article was of Celtic or Milesian origin.

PROJECTED STEAM BATTERING RAM.—The London Times gives a long description of the new iron steam ram, which it says will be afloat next June. Her total length will be 380 feet, breadth 58; total weight at sea, about 9,000 tons; full speed 16 miles an hour. About 220 feet of the broadside of the vessel will be of teak, 24 inches thick; this will be covered by armor plates 4½ inches thick on the deck. The ram will be armed with 35 Armstrong guns, each throwing 100-pound shot over a range of six miles. The ram will run down ships by driving straight at them at full speed. If she only does one-half of what may fairly be anticipated from her she will be cheaper to the nation than a dozen sail of the line. The cost of the hull will be about £100,000, the engines £75,000 and her fitting for sea about £45,000 more, or £420,000 in all.

CEREMONY OVER A DEAD PRINCE.—The Court Journal contains the following:

"The funeral of the Prince Rospigliosi, as it seems to belong to another century and a bygone order of things, will, doubtless, be the last of its kind, and therefore merits description. By an exclusive privilege claimed by Roman princes, he was taken to his last resting place in his state carriage, gaily decked, and newly painted for the occasion. The funeral was celebrated at the Church of San Francesco, at Ripa, where the family vault of the Rospigliosi is situated. The last observance of the ceremony was the most curious of all. The head cook, in his costume of cinque cento, advanced respectfully to the foot of the bier, and bowing to the ground, asked the usual morning question, 'Your Excellency has orders for me?' The inquiry was made with an expressive smile and distinctness of utterance which almost shocked the nerves of the bystanders. The dead man, however, not betraying, by word or gesture, any comprehension of question, the great functionary of the Rospigliosi household, after waiting patiently for a few moments, withdrew, walking backward to the door of the church, and, standing in the porch, called out, with a stentorian voice, to the drivers of the Rospigliosi carriages, gathered in vast numbers in the piazza, 'Drive home. His Excellency has no further orders to give you, and will require your service no more.'"

ACTIVITY OF NAPOLEON.—A private letter from the seat of war says that since the active work began Napoleon knock up two horses every day, being in the saddle from four o'clock in the morning, and some of the grooms have just reached Paris for a fresh supply from the imperial stud. His indefatigable inspection of all matters involving supply, commissariat and maintenance, was the theme of the whole army.—N. O. Cres. Bul.

Mrs. Horace Fry, of Philadelphia, lately brought so prominently before the public by her application for a divorce from her husband, has gone to Europe in company with her father, Mr. Grigg.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Happen what may in Ireland—invasion or no invasion—we cannot want for a king to occupy the throne. The ultramontanists have one ready, so we may quietly await the unveilings of the future. One of the most extreme of the Chocolate priests has the following:

"DALCASSIAN.—A correspondent observes that if the prophecy of the Morning Advertiser proves true we may be put to the choice of a prince one of these days to rule over Ireland as King Leopold over Belgium; when a new congress of Europe shall a second time (as in the case of Belgium) subsidize the arrangement of 1815 in favor of the just desires of another little nationality yet in abeyance. 'More unlikely things have come to pass,' that is all we need say just now on the subject. But our correspondent goes farther and suggests that if such a state of things should come to pass, all difficulty in finding a fitting candidate—at once pure Irish, and yet totally unconnected with the life of modern parties in Ireland—is removed, when France can give us a choice between two such men as Marshal O'Niel and Marshal McMahon. It is a singular subject for contemplation, indeed, and not less interesting in connection with the ancient constitution of Erin itself, according to which the right to the throne of the Ard Righ, or chief King, alternated between the Eberian and Eremonian lines—between the northern, Hy-Niel and the Southern royal family who were represented at the most glorious period of our national history by the great Chief of the Dalcassians, the ancestor of Wm. Smith O'Brien. Marshal Niel is the descendant of a family the O'Niels, which settled in Bordeaux above a century ago. The Marshal Duke of Magenta is one of the representatives of a distinguished branch of the Dalcassian family of McMahon's, of the county of Clare, his ancestor, having been, we believe, one of the "Wild Geese" who followed the fortunes of James Stuart after the treaty of Limerick. His family became ennobled in France more than a century since, in which country accordingly the Marshal is allied in blood to many of the greatest historic names of the ancient nobility. Better Irish chieftains than either O'Niel or McMahon the Gaelic race could hardly find in Europe."

There is no harm in permitting papalistic propagandists to amuse themselves with speculations of the kind. They make no secret of their desire to disloyalize the people, and they are working consistently in that vocation when they invite or encourage foreigners to invade us. Even the populace, however, are not so simple as to be deluded. A few silly young men may suffer their brains to be turned, and may cause danger to themselves and grief to their relatives by imprudence in attempting parts that never were designed for them; or some rapparee rascals, drugged with the dose of disaffection that Dr. Cahill doles out to them in half-penny potions, may feel their breasts heaving with a thrasonical throe of insurrectional incendiarism; but Smith O'Brien made rebellion ridiculous, and as the French on a former occasion found that the best use they could make of their Irish auxiliaries was to shoot them, Paddy may have too much sense to put himself in the way again. It is not pleasant standing target for fellows who fire with such accuracy. Besides, putting the Protestants of the land out of the question, there are a good many Romanists who, loyalty apart, may find their account in the present rule, rather than in that which Phoenixites swear to exchange it for. Interest is a strong bond, and many are influenced by interest. It is to be presumed, moreover, that the Niels and the McMahons are not the fools they are taken for; but even if they were, and were as easily gulled as the geese for whose edification such writing is intended, it does not follow that "if the prophecy of the Morning Advertiser prove true," Louis Napoleon would not prefer choosing his own victory, and setting over the bone one in whose affection France would hold a higher place than Ireland. What pleasant prospects the Phoenixites prepare for us! How quietly they take for granted the [illegible] ... that attempts to trample on either the liberties of the people or the sovereignty of the Queen.—Cork Constitution, July 7.

THE BAKE FOR POTATOES.—This subject is brought before the farmers of England, by a communication in the Mark Lane Express. The writer claims thirty-five years' practice in this matter. He does not cut his potatoes for setting, but sets them whole, and the largest he can select. The rows are thirty inches apart, and the potatoes are put nine inches from each other in the row. The land is plowed only eight inches deep, treads the manure firmly in the furrows, puts in the tubers, and covers them in with [illegible], nine inches deep, instead of earthing up. In this way he reports that in 1857 he raised 650 bushels of potatoes—not a rotten one among them—to the acre, with nothing but waste [illegible] a covering. This is of great importance, the [illegible] if it be put to so important and advantageous a use as in this case, it should be widely known and practiced.

FRENCH SERVANTS.—An American lady, long resident in Paris, and perfectly acquainted with its customs, gives the following item in relation to Parisian servants: "You are aware of the petty taxes which our domestics are in the habit of imposing upon everything purchased by them for the use of the household. First in order is the 'sou' per pound, paid them by the grocers, butchers, bakers, &c, for their custom. This, however, is but a trifle in comparison. On a rabbit bought at two francs and fifteen sous, the cook pockets the fifteen sous. For each dish ordered from a restaurant, the servant gets a premium of five sous. So with butter, and every other article of food. I have calculated that, over and above her wages, my cook's profits amount to at least fifty cents a day. Nor is she satisfied with this. She has made a nice little bargain with my butcher, to the effect that when she buys six pounds of mutton or veal for me, the butcher is to add a pound of sirloin steak for her. There is no use changing servants or butchers; they are all thieves alike, and I might only make bad worse if I interfered."

AN IRISH THUNDER STORM.—A Dublin letter, dated June 30th, says:

A thunder-storm of unusual severity passed over Ireland on Saturday last. Scarcely a provincial paper which has since reached us but has some tale to tell of the disastrous effects of the lightning. Eight or ten human beings, scattered through the country, were struck dead; others were dangerously injured, and cattle of all kinds suffered fatally. In the south and north-western districts, the storm seems to have raged with the greatest violence, while in the midland counties it was comparatively but little felt. In some quarters fears were entertained for the safety of the potato crop, which before now had been damaged by violent electricity, and in the neighborhood of Castlebar some mischief had been done in a few fields, but no material loss is apprehended.

A young lady once hinted to a gentleman that her thimble was worn out, and asked what reward she merited for her industry. He sent her an answer in the shape of a thimble, on which the following lines were engraved:

"I send you a thimble for fingers nimble,
Which I hope will fit when you try it;
It will last you long, if it's half as strong
As the hint you gave me to buy it."

A YOUNG LADY THROWN FROM A CARRIAGE AND KILLED.—In Brookline, yesterday, while Mr. W. E. Baker, of the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine Company, of Boston, was riding with his mother, sister and another young lady, his horse took fright, and becoming unmanageable, came in contact with a carriage. Miss Baker was thrown to the ground and almost instantly killed.—Boston Paper.

PAY UP.—The Steubenville Herald says that Mr. Garret, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and extensive dealer in railroad stocks, has written a letter to that city and township officials, admonishing them to be prepared for the "day of reckoning." That the two hundred thousand dollars, subscribed by the city and township to the Steubenville and Indiana Railroad, for which bonds were issued payable in 1866, will have to be paid promptly, or property of the city and township will be put under the hammer for satisfaction.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The steamship Africa has arrived with European dates to the 9th inst.

An armistice has been agreed upon between the contending parties till the 15th August.—The effect of this had been a great buoyancy in all the money markets and strong hopes were entertained of a peace.

Napoleon telegraphed that an armistice had been agreed upon on the 8th, and was signed at Villa Franca by Hess and Vaillant. It ends on the 15th August. It stipulates that commercial vessels without distinction of flag are allowed to navigate the Adriatic unmolested. The Moniteur cautions the public against misunderstanding the armistice, and says negotiations may recommence, but does not see how the war may be terminated.

The London Times believes in peace, and says an well authenticated proposal came from France, indicating good moderation, or the necessities of the French [illegible] with the latter.

France reaps all the benefit from the armistice. The armistice has caused much excitement.

Consols advanced 1½@2 per cent, and on the Paris Bourse the advance was 2½. The other continental bourses all advanced materially. The Austrian funds at Frankfort rose ten per cent. Prior to the declaration of the armistice, the Sardinians proceeded vigorously in the siege of Peschiera, but this and other movements have now lost their interest.

In the Federal Diet, on the 7th inst., Austria proposed to mobilize the whole Federal contingent force and request the Prince Regent of Prussia to assume the command in chief.

ENGLAND.—The seizure of the British ship Laurel at Baltimore, and the coasting trade between New York and California, via the Isthmus, claimed the attention of the House of Commons. The Government promised to represent the matter to the Federal authorities at Washington.

LIVERPOOL, July 18.—BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Messrs. Richardson & Spence report the breadstuffs market very dull and with a slight decline on all qualities. The weather has been favorable for the crops. Flour is quoted at a decline of 1@2d. No sales reported, and quotations are nominally, 10s@12s for American. Wheat has declined 3@4d since Tuesday. Western red is quoted at 7s 6d@8s 6d, and white 8s@9s 3d. Corn closed quiet but steady; quotations are nominally, 5s 10½@6s 3d for mixed and yellow, and [illegible] for white.

LIVERPOOL PROVISIONS MARKET.—The Brokers' report that provisions generally have a declining tendency. Pork heavy and prices easier, but quotations are unchanged. Bacon dull and declined 1s@3d. Lard dull.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET.—Sugar heavy with little inquiry, and prices weak. Coffee firm. Rice quiet.

LONDON MARKET.—Messrs. Baring Bros. report Breadstuffs lower. Sugar buoyant. Rice firm. Coffee firm. Linseed Oil 29s.@29s. 6d.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—Consols quoted at 94@94½ for money, and 94½@94¾ for account. The bullion in the Bank of England has decreased £227,000 during the week. The money market is unchanged. American securities are without change.

LIVERPOOL, July 9th—P. M.—Breadstuffs and provisions very dull.

LONDON, SATURDAY—P. M.—Consols 95@95¼ for money, and 94¾@95½ for account.

The Navy estimates had been introduced in parliament and 10,000 additional men asked for.

It is reported that the Mail Steamers have been notified to prepare to carry armaments according to their contract.

The ship Sarah Hunt, of Boston was burnt at sea. She was from New Orleans and bound to [illegible]. The disaster occurred on the 28th ult.

The Africa arrived at New York at five o'clock this morning. Her mail were dispatched by the morning trains. She brings upwards of one hundred passengers. She passed Cape Race on the morning of the 17th inst., during a dense fog, that rendered all communication with the News Yacht of the Associated Press an absolute impossibility.

The steamship Europa, from Boston, via Halifax, arrived at Liverpool on the 9th inst.

The Times says, with regard to the armistice there is nothing to communicate beyond what the public already know. All that seems to be well authenticated is that the proposal came from France, and was the result of the Emperor's own determination. That Napoleon should stop short in a career of victory and make overtures to the foe whom he has defeated in two pitched battles and hurled back to the limits of Lombardy argues the moderation or the necessities of the French ruler.—We can hardly believe that the latter has been the cause of this sudden resolve.

STOCKHOLM, July 8.—His majesty King Oscar died to-day. He was born on the 4th of July, 1799.

VIENNA, July 8.—The Austrian correspondence contains the following: The French frigate Imperieuse bombarded Zara yesterday. The Austrians returned the fire. The Imperieuse at last broke off the contest appearing to have suffered injury.

The Vienna Gazette publishes an amended list of killed and wounded at Solferino as to officers. The return gives 90 killed, 414 wounded, 73 made prisoners and 70 missing. Total, 647; of rank and file, 2,006 killed and 8,621 wounded, making a grand total of 11,215. Nothing is said respecting the number of the prisoners.

The French and Sardinians killed and wounded were 8,243. The numbers given by the Vienna journals are believed to be still below the truth.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times says, that on the 3d inst. the French fleet consisting of 84 sail, was at no great distance from Venice.

The Hungarian Legion forming at Genoa is to be clothed like the Hungarian soldiers in the Austrian army. It is believed the latter will not fire on men wearing the national costume.

The Moniteur d'Armée publishes the Imperial decree by which a new regiment of Algerian sharpshooters is to be provisionally created. It is to consist of three battalions of six companies each.

ROME.—A letter from Rome, published in the Times, states that the Mazzinians have forged a pretended order of the Pope, as if it had been issued at the war office, directing most severe treatment of the revolted districts.

LONDON, July 9—Noon.—A letter from Belgrade states that but 60 young men belonging to the first families of Servia have solicited permission to form a corps to fight in favor of Italian independence.

The gun-boats destined for bombardment of Peschiera, have been launched at Lago de Garda.

A letter from Friedland says, that Prussia is making great preparations in anticipation of a war [illegible].

The Press, of Trieste, says, that another French squadron of ten vessels was seen from Trieste on the 6th inst., bearing towards Venice.

A semi-official correspondent from Madrid [illegible] Spain will still maintain her neutrality so long as the Italian princes and the church are maintained.

NEW YORK, July 21.—The City of Washington arrived, with London and Liverpool advices to the 7th inst.

The next battle between the Austrians and the Allies was expected would take place on the river Adige.

It was reported that the British mail steamers had been requested by the Government to prepare to carry armaments [illegible].

Ancona was declared in a state of siege.

LONDON, July 7.—The Paris correspondent of the London Times says the Minister of War and Marshal Pelissier have had another difference, for the purpose of counteracting measures to complete the organization of the army of the East. An eighth division is in course of organization at Lyons to reinforce the army of Italy.

Advices from Naples of the 30th ult. announced that legal proceedings have been taken against a secret political society at Naples, and several arrests had been made.

Advices have also been received from Ancona to the 30th of June. Gen. [illegible] had taken command of the town and declared it in a state of siege. A general disarming of citizens had been ordered. An address of the Sardinian Admiral to the people of Messina had been issued.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says that letters from the head quarters at [illegible] speak that another great battle was expected to take place on the Adige. The Austrians are believed to have 200,000 men of the line. A French battalion was organized at [illegible].

Reliable information had reached Vienna that Garibaldi's men had violated Tyrol, by entering the Tonale Pass. Prince Windischgratz has been sent to Berlin to acquaint the Prussian government with this fact.

FRANKFORT, July 6.—It is stated that the proposals made by Prussia on the extraordinary sitting of the federal Diet on the 4th were as follow:—First—The junction of the ninth and tenth corps d'armee to the Prussian army. Second—No appointment as the command in and of the four non-Prussian and non Austrian corps d'armee. Third—The placing of all the reserve contingent force in readiness to march.

BERNE, July 6.—News have been received from Bormio that a corps of 5,000 to 8,000 Tyrolese Chasseurs had been threatening the Valtelline, but that several columns of Garibaldi's and Cialdini's corps had repulsed them from [illegible], and driven them as far as the first canton of the Stelvio pass. It is said that the Tyrolese suffered severely in the engagement.

A Frankfort letter announces that the Austrian Government having been compelled by the battle of Solferino to dispatch to the seat of war troops which it had held in reserve in Tyrol, and that province being consequently menaced with invasion by Garibaldi's corps, it intends to propose to the Diet in virtue of the treaty of Venice, which requires the German territory to send a German army into Tyrol.

Kossuth has issued a proclamation, calling the Hungarian nation to arms, to struggle for liberty, and announces that he would soon be among them.

The Invalide Russe discusses the possible complication of the war. Prussia, it says, has called out an army of 300,000 men, which will be reinforced by the federal contingent of 150,000 men, and it is with such enormous display of force that she proposes to offer her mediation to France, and to hasten the conclusion of peace.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, July 7.—Consols are quoted at 93½@93¾.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Breadstuffs generally are dull, and the quotations nominal. Corn steady with the demand for yellow.

Provisions generally dull. Produce unchanged.

Sickles Defends His Course in Again Cohabiting with his Wife.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The Herald of to-day contains a letter to the editor from Hon Dan'l. E. Sickles in which he corrects a statement made in that paper yesterday regarding the reconcilement in his domestic relations. The reconciliation, he says, was my own act, without consultation with any relative, connection, friend or adviser. Whatever blame, if any, belongs to the act should fall upon me. I am prepared to defend what I have done before the only tribunals I recognize as having the slightest claim to jurisdiction over the subject—my own conscience and the bar of Heaven. I am not aware of any statute or code of morals which makes it infamous to forgive a woman nor is it usual to make our domestic life a subject of consultation with friends, no matter how near and dear to us, and I cannot allow even all the world combined to dictate to me the repudiation of my wife when I think it right to forgive her and restore her to my confidence and protection. If I ever failed to comprehend the utter desolate position of an offending though penitent woman, the hopeless future with all its dark possibilities of danger to which she is doomed, when proscribed as an outcast, I can now see plainly enough, in the almost universal howl of denunciation with which she is followed to my threshold, the misery and perils from which I have rescued the mother of my child, and although it is very sad for me to incur the blame of friends and the reproaches of many wise and good people, I shall strive to prove to all who feel any interest in me that if I am the first man who has ventured to say in the world, an erring wife and mother may be forgiven and redeemed, that, in spite of all the obstacles in my path, the good results of this example shall entitle it to the imitation of the generous, and the commendation of the just. There are many who think, that an act of duty, proceeding solely from affections which can only be comprehended in the heart of a husband and a father, is to be fatal to my professional, political and social standing. If this be so, then so be it. Political station, professional success, social recognition are not the only prizes of ambition, and so long as I do nothing worse than to reunite my family under the roof where they may find shelter from contumely and persecution, I do not fear the noisy but fleeting voices of popular clamor. The multitude accept their first impression from a few, but, in the end, men think for themselves, and if I know the human heart, and sometimes I think that in a career of mingled sunshine and storm I have sounded nearly all its depths, then I may reassure those who look with reluctant forebodings upon my future to be of good cheer, for I will not cease to vindicate a just claim to the respect of my fellows while to these motley groups, here and there, who look upon my misfortunes only as weapons to be employed for my destruction. To these I say, once for all, that a man makes a good use of his enemies they will be as serviceable to him as his friends. In conclusion, let me ask, only one favor of those, who from whatever motive may deem it necessary or agreeable to comment in public or private upon this sad history, and that is, to aim all their arrows at my breast and for the sake of my innocent child to spare her yet youthful mother when she seeks in sorrow and contrition the pardon of Him to whom sooner or later we must all appeal.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Rice straw, or Leghorn hats, without any trimming, are the fashion at Paris. Some of them cost $800.

A reputed son of John Newland Maffit, who was arrested for forgery, at St. Louis, died in his cell of apoplexy, on Sunday night.

The Countess Guiccioli, Byron's inamorata, is living at Paris. No longer young, she is said to be still beautiful; and wears curls.—She wore them 30 years ago.

A little colored girl, three or four years old, jumped from the third story window of the Pulaski House, in Savannah, and wasn't hurt at all, only a little frightened.

Wm. R. Crew, a well-known auctioneer, at Toronto, committed suicide on Wednesday, in consequence of business difficulties.

The death of Dr. Wm. H. Hammond, a distinguished citizen of Arkansas, is announced in the last number of the Little Rock True Democrat.

Leonard, attached to H. Buckley & Co.'s circus was killed at White Spring, Florida, by a man named Lewis Hogan, on the 1st inst.

The Dayton & Michigan R. R. will be completed August 15, 1859—Toledo, Cincinnati and Detroit will then be united by a continuous rail.

Wm. B. Allbeck, formerly editor of the Belmont C. Herald, published at Bridgeport, but more recently of Oregon, died in [illegible], Oregon, on the 15th of last month.

The Canadians are in a mess in consequence of the Government order that the British penny can be taken only at the Post-office for a cent. The people want the Government to stand the loss.

The Board of Directors of the Bank of the State of Indiana, at its recent meeting, authorized an increase to the capital stock of 50,000 each, to the branches at Lima, Laporte, Bedford and Fort Wayne.

Gen. Paez, now in Venezuela, is said to have become so disgusted with the internal feuds of the country, that he has determined to once leave for the United States, to spend the remainder of his days in retirement.

Among the passengers by the Asia, from New York on Wednesday for Liverpool, was Maurice Strakosch, the impresario, who goes to Europe for the purpose of engaging a complete operatic corps for the coming campaign.

Mr. Benjamin Marshall, a farmer, of Princeton township, near Davenport, Iowa, was stabbed by his wife in a moment of furious passion, on Saturday, with a butcher knife, making a terrible wound in his abdomen, from which he cannot possibly recover.

During the session of the Masonic Lodge at Columbus, Kentucky, on Thursday night last, W. J. Walker, sitting as Master, looked back in his chair not knowing that the window behind him was out, and was precipitated below and killed.

On Monday night, at Chicago, a courtesan named Rose Hill, alias Rose Kent, put an end to her existence by swallowing a large potion of opium. The cause of the act is said to have been jealousy, aroused by seeing her paramour in the company of another female.

A party are organizing in New York for the purpose of going to St. Domingo to hunt for gold. It is said that some rich placers have been discovered there, and all it wants, are the miners to dig it up. A vessel is to be fitted up, and a party is to leave about the first of October.

There were seven cases of coup de soleil reported at Davenport, Iowa, within three days, ending the 13th inst., six of which proved fatal. The six fatal cases were Germans, and the one that recovered an Irishman; one was a German woman. The weather there has been intensely hot.

Young, of Rochester, who wanted Blondin to carry him over the river on a rope, went to the Falls, but Blondin demanded the payment of $500 in advance for the trip. Young thought the fare too high, and was not carried.

Since the 4th of July it has been unlawful for any person to pass or receive in the State of Arkansas any bank bill of less denomination than ten dollars. After the 4th of July, 1860, no bill of a less denomination than twenty dollars can be put or kept in circulation.

F. M. Wright was recently shot while riding in his carriage near St. Joseph, Mo. He had just purchased a negro, who was in the carriage with him at the time, and who disappeared before the murder was known. He undoubtedly shot Wright.

The commercial men of New Orleans have in consideration a ship canal six miles in length to connect the river with the ocean, at a point on the coast above the sand-bar. Engineers say it can be done at a cost of about a million and a half, and will give a permanent channel.

Since the beginning of the war forty different pamphlets and books containing biographies of Garibaldi have appeared in Paris. The cheapest of these works, which is sold at the price of ten centimes, has already been purchased to the extent of more than [illegible] copies.

A New York clergyman named R. O. Dwyer, has sued the Sunday Courier for libel in intimating that he was guilty of peculation, forgery and fraud. Dwyer is a retired clergyman studying law, and appears to have read Blackstone to ascertain that he can sue for libel and recover the value of a character.

The [illegible] to Boston [illegible] on Saturday [illegible] in the harbor. The company [illegible] and among the guests were Gov. Banks, Senator Wilson, Mayor Lincoln and the Hon. Anson Burlingame.

An awkward mistake occurred to a German paper in Wheeling, one day last week. The name of a well-known preacher was, by advertisement, placed at the bottom of a lager beer saloon advertisement, and the lager man was announced to preach at the reverend gentleman's church.

Nine gipsies are on trial at Lafayette, Ind., for stealing various articles from citizens of that place. The ringleaders, Blakely and wife, were convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for five years each. The other cases are not disposed of. Several children of the parties are to be sent to the poor house.

The steamer Ravenswood, while on the passage from Madisonville to New Orleans, took fire on Saturday last, and, together with her cargo, was totally destroyed. There were thirty persons on board of the boat at the time of the disaster, all of whom escaped except one, who was drowned in attempting to reach the shore.

Dates from Sisal, Yucatan, to July 3, states that a revolution, headed by General Barrera, had broken out, the plan involving the substitution of a revolutionary for the Liberal Government. At the latest advices the affair had made trifling headway, owing to a deficiency of popular sympathy.

No interference is intended to be made with the troops raised for the Mexican service. The movement is indirectly encouraged or calculated to advance the Presidential policy.

Mr. Greeley has been overturned in a stage coach, sprained his knee, and been carried from Port Jervis by a special conveyance. The accident, it is hoped, will not injure the natural grace of his story.

There were six fatal cases of sun-stroke at Louisville, Ky., on Tuesday: Isaac Woodruff, a painter; Nicholas [illegible] a blacksmith; John Drain, who was married only last week; John Loftys, who had been married the day before, John Jacob Kautz, and a man unknown. Woodruff would probably [illegible]. Drain, Loftys, Kautz, and the unknown man, already died.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW ORLEANS, July 18.—Advices from Tampico to the 3d July say the organization of the Liberal forces in northern Mexico is broken up. The Miramonists are acting with renewed vigor, and are not only threatening San Louis Potosi, but an expedition of 5,000 strong against Tampico is being organized under Gen. Moreno. Artillery men and ammunition have arrived at Tampico from Vera Cruz. Large quantities of powder had also been received there from New Orleans.

Vera Cruz dates of the 13th say that by McLean's demand, the surrender of the Conducta was alone saved; for a few hours later Robles received peremptory orders from Miramon, seconded by Otay and Gabriac, not to allow the Conducta to enter Vera Cruz. Robles captured [illegible] from the Liberals. [illegible] pronounced in favor of himself at Guadalajara.

The Marshal of Texas for the eighth district was officially notified that the Pacific Railway Company will dismiss the State suit upon the payment of the first installment of fifty thousand dollars, as provided in the compromise with the new company.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The President has recognized Emil Christian Hammer as Vice-Consul of Denmark for the State of Massachusetts, to reside at Boston.

The British and Spanish Ministers are severally preparing to leave the city for the purpose of visiting the summer resort in the north. The Prussian minister intends to visit Sharon Springs for the benefit of his weak health. The other ministers have already left.

During the absence of the President the regular meetings of the Cabinet will be held as usual on Tuesdays and Fridays.

The Indian Bureau contemplates the appointment of a local agent to reside near the Pawnees, in order to enable it to exercise control over them and prevent future difficulties.

The Court of Claims had adjourned till the first Monday in October.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—The Overland mail has arrived here. Of the prisoners who escaped from the Penitentiary by overpowering the guard, twelve were recaptured and eight shot while endeavoring to escape.

The Italians at San Francisco raised $1,500 to send to Victor Emanuel for the benefit of needy subjects.

The people of Carson Valley had called a convention for the 18th inst., to consider the public safety.

In the proposed Territory of Nevada an election for delegate to Congress had been fixed for the 3d of July.

The weather had been intensely hot throughout the State, parching the vegetation. Some parts of the country were looking as though they had been burned.

The county of [illegible] was visited by a terrible sirocco on the [illegible], forcing the people to shut themselves in doors, killing animals and literally roasting the fruit on the trees.

ST. LOUIS, July 18.—The Overland Mail of the 27th has reached Jefferson City. The town of Tehama was destroyed by fire. Loss one hundred thousand dollars. Forty-three convicts escaped from the Penitentiary on the 25th. Business was without improvement.

BOSTON, July 19.—In the slave habeas corpus case before Judge Metcalf, this morning, there was no appearance made against the plea of the slave [illegible], and she was promptly discharged. She will probably return to her master, Mr. Holmes, on his promise of improved treatment.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—A special despatch to the Charleston Courier, from New Orleans on the 19th, says the State of Tamaulipas desires an American force of 2,000 to aid them in the prosecution of war. Some Americans had already arrived at Tampico to aid. The liberals, [illegible] de Gollado was at Tampico and General Garza at Vera Cruz. Minister McLane has positively made no definite treaty with Juarez.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar; and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unswerving, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

CHEAPEST IN THE STATE.
THE
CAMPAIGN PRESS,
PUBLISHED AT COLUMBUS, OHIO,
Will be sent to subscribers at the Low Rate of 25 Cents Each!!
until after the October Election, being the CHEAPEST CAMPAIGN PAPER in the State. This will enable the
CAMPAIGN PRESS
to reach all classes, and entitle it to
A Most Extensive Circulation.
20 Copies for $5!
☞ Our friends of the press in this State will please give this a few insertions or call attention to the fact.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
July 21st, 1859.

Democratic Meetings.

At the recent meeting of the State Central Committee in this city, the following appointments were made, commencing the canvass in the North West and the Southern counties at the same time.

Hon. Geo. E. Pugh and Gen. Joseph H. Geiger will address the people as follows:

Batavia, Clermont Co., Monday, August 15.
Georgetown, Brown Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
West Union, Adams Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Hillsboro', Highland Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Washington, Fayette Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Wilmington, Clinton Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

Wm. H. Safford, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Major D. W. Stambaugh, of Tuscarawas County, will address the people as follows:

Bryan, Williams Co., Monday, Aug. 15.
Defiance, Defiance Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Paulding, Paulding Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Napoleon, Henry Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Okekee, Fulton Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Perrysburgh, Wood Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.
By Order of the State Central Committee.

A Sign in Pennsylvania.

The Pittsburgh Daily "Post," the leading Democratic organ of Western Pennsylvania, has hoisted the name of James Buchanan for re-election in a strong, well-considered article, and takes the ground that he is the only candidate who can be nominated by the Charleston Convention, with whom the differences in the Democratic ranks can be reconciled. We shall not be surprised to see the Democratic contest for the nomination at Charleston narrowed down to Buchanan and Douglas, and to see Old Buck again win—a nomination.—[Cleveland Leader.

We have not seen the article referred to by the "Leader," although the telegraph intimated that such a move had been made. There was reason to expect it from some quarter, as the signs were unmistakable. The New York "Herald" has been for a considerable time attempting to get up something of the kind. It has endeavored to point out the impracticability of every body else, while it persistently urged the growing popularity and expediency of Mr. Buchanan, and while it alluded to the declaration that he would not be a candidate for the nomination, it attributed to him a success that had not been enjoyed by Jackson himself in holding the power of controlling the National Convention.

There was a sign, too, in the silence which has been urged as to an expression of preference for the Presidency at this time, which was ominous. The "Herald," not being exactly a party organ, although considered in the interest of the President, did not formally insist upon nominating him. That office has, it seems, been performed by the "Post." As we remarked, we have not seen the "well considered article," and are left to conjecture the "ground that he is the only candidate who can be nominated by the Charleston Convention with whom the differences in the Democratic ranks can be reconciled." It surely cannot be that his theory and practice enfold both wings gracefully within their liberal embrace—or that the platform upon which he so contentedly stood in 1856, and the same platform flooded with a new light from the Jack-o-lantern of the Washington "Constitution" will satisfy the contending non-interventionists and interventionists of the North and South.

From this stand-point, we should consider the Democratic party irretrievably ruined, if Mr Buchanan were to forego his determination to go into retirement, and patriotically offer himself a victim upon the altar of the Democratic party. It would be a sacrifice to which we trust the party may not consent, which it ought not to demand, but be content with the services already rendered, permitting the veteran to retire to the repose and serenity, so grateful to declining years, and the enjoyment of the tranquil pleasures of social and domestic life.

Here, in Ohio, as we have noticed in several other States, the policy of the Administration as a whole, has not been endorsed—but merely specified acts that were not in contradistinction to the accepted construction of the Cincinnati Platform. It is not necessary to enter into an investigation of the peculiar merits which so press upon the Democracy the EXPEDIENCY of nominating Mr. Buchanan—nor do we perceive that the nomination or defeat is the only alternative. We hardly think that such an alternative will be presented, however much it may be coveted by those holding office. The Northern States which contributed to his election, would avoid a repetition of the favor they bestowed upon the nation. Pennsylvania is probably enamored with his Tariff recommendations, and if she thought him in earnest, or could be successful, might be persuaded to renew her allegiance, but when he failed to convince his own Secretary of the Treasury, she might have reasonable doubts, not to say apprehensions. The spartan band in Illinois, led by Ike Cook, the Chicago Postmaster, might make a tremendous demonstration, but could scarcely bring that State fairly under the banner. Indiana [illegible] is not likely to [illegible] over what was considered a very patriotic work in 1856. In Ohio, [illegible] to confess, we could not inscribe upon [illegible], "in hoc signo vinces."

The "differences" existing in the Democratic party cannot be reconciled by the nomination of Mr Buchanan. A return to the true construction of the Cincinnati platform—a recognition of the true principles of the Democracy, that the people of a Territory as well as a State, shall regulate their own affairs in their own way—is the only restorative to that harmony and union without which success cannot be anticipated.

"Hamilton County" and the Enquirer.

Our correspondent, "Hamilton County," will find that we have availed ourself of our first issue, since the receipt of his communication, to give it place in our columns. He complains of a want of courtesy on the part of the "Enquirer," in neglecting to publish the proceedings of the "Butler County Meeting," and attributes to that paper a character of policy which we think is scarcely earned or deserved. Like many Democrats in other parts of the State, the "Enquirer" thought it a good stroke of policy to procure the withdrawal of Judge Whitman and substitute Judge Swan, or rather leave the bars down that the friends of Judge Swan might run him as an independent candidate. It was in the expectation that what did happen, might happen, the call was made for a meeting of the State Central Committee, the object of which was to postpone the time of holding the Democratic State Convention, until after the Republican Convention should be held. When they met and consulted, the Committee declined the responsibility of such postponement. The "Enquirer" was doubtless governed by what it thought would be best for the party and the people, without consulting individual wish or determination.—Being unsuccessful, it were better the attempt had not been made, but once made, and unsuccessful, there the matter should have rested.—We saw obstacles in the way from the first, and unless the proposition should come from Judge Whitman which it did not, we should not have entertained it, and did not entertain it. But we are not at all surprised that the "Enquirer" should feel indignant that its motives should be impugned, or that an effort should be made to saddle it with all blame, when in reality it was entitled to bear only a part; and we regret that our correspondent has indulged the inclination to refer to this matter, in consequence of the inattention of the "Enquirer" to what he considers a subject of paramount importance at this time to the Democratic party.

The communication conveying the proceedings of the "Butler County Meeting" may not have been received at a convenient time, or mislaid, have escaped memory; or it may be that they were not published, as a matter of policy, there being two sides to the question whether it shall be made an issue; and it may have appeared to the "Enquirer" that it had already reaped its full show of animadversion for premature action on matters of general moment.

The subject is one, we confess, that strikes us forcibly as more a matter of general consideration and interest, than restricted to the reflections of a party, although it might furnish some capital to the party first adopting it. New States desirous of population, by immigration, or older States solicitous to retain population already acquired, or inviting it by holding out inducements as liberal as those offered by States just emerging from a territorial condition, might readily engraft the principle upon their organic law. Our columns are open for the discussion of the subject. There are many arguments in favor of its adoption; but a very strong prejudice against it exists among many; and on that account probably, it has been avoided as an issue in the present campaign. It would raise a strong question with our Republican adversaries, whose recent decision that the law of the last Legislature is unconstitutional, and that a negro with more white than African blood is entitled to exercise the franchise, must be regarded with indignation by those citizens of foreign birth who are undergoing their five years probation.

The Statesman for Mr. Douglas.

We have been pretty soundly rapped by one or two of our cotemporaries for "abusing Mr. Douglas's best friends." This has been a grievous sin, and grievously will we answer it. We are filled with regrets, the most poignant and distressing, that we should have been so blindly infatuated, as not to perceive that we had mistaken the earnest, unremitting efforts of the "Ohio Statesman" and it proprietors to advance the cause of the "Little Giant." Their disinterestedness and the absence of all selfish motive must be apparent, when one holds the Post Office, and the other divides his share of government emoluments, derived from public advertisements, and a stipend said to have been stipulated and secured by Hon S S Cox, at the time of casting his vote for the English Conference bill. The studied resistance they have made to the assaults upon Mr. Douglas, by paper thought to be countenanced by the Administration, and the warm eulogies of the Illinois statesman, which appear from time to time in their columns, should challenge our admiration. Every one must have remarked that firmness of tone in his defence, and earnest championship of Mr. Douglas, which entitles the "Statesman" to be ranked among his "best friends." What if the Washington "Constitution" do read him out of the party, and the sneer is sounded by its hundred echoes, the "Statesman" remains true and steadfast to his cause and keeps his banner proudly flying. Ready to cast its shield between the angry lance and his bare breast, it does its devoir bravely. This is indeed excess of gallantry. Reckless of the resentment of the "powers that be" who are supposed to covet the prostration of Mr. Douglas quite as much as the welfare of the party, it spurs to the charge and "Douglas is the cry." What will be the result may be easily foreseen. The "Statesman" will lose government patronage, but it will gain the approbation of its own conscience, the respect of the people, and the lasting gratitude of the friends of Mr Douglas! The Cincinnati "Enquirer" which has been recently doing battle bravely in the cause of Mr. Douglas, will find itself outstripped, in its labor of love, its task of duty, in keeping the Nation advised of the true position of Mr. Douglas, which has been misrepresented by his enemies who sought his disparagement and overthrow.—The "Statesman" must have the lead or be nowhere.

Mr. Douglas.—From every direction the manifestations are of the most cheering character that Mr. Douglas will receive the nomination at Charleston. The proposition by the Pittsburgh Post to re-elect Mr. Buchanan falls still-born.—The article has been copied by the Cleveland Democrat, but the Statesman has not deemed it worthy of consideration; nor has any other paper in Ohio, that we have seen, treated it less cavalierly. The banner of Mr. Douglas is waving proudly in every State. The papers are coming out for him like stars at night, twinkling merrily, till the whole welkin will soon be a-blaze.

Senator.—Our active and inquisitive hebdomadal cotemporary of the Gazette, whose "independent ticket" has not yet been filled, says that the Republicans intend strengthening their ticket by placing on it the name of Judge J. R. Swan for Senator, and compliments them should do so, that "for once, they would do a sensible thing." Would the Judge consent to allow his name to be so used? Is it intended by the move to heal the wounds inflicted by the Convention? Can such a diminutive cataplasm cover so large a sore? Is not the naptha too small?

The Statesman and Ourself.

In reply to a false allegation in the "Statesman" of Tuesday, we addressed the following note to the editor of the "Fact." We need not add a word to the note, except to say that we were comparatively a stranger in Columbus at the time, had no personal acquaintance with the Republicans of the city, knew of no "Junto," never had a conversation knowingly with a member of any "Junto," and did not "father" the article as represented by the "Statesman," which took a step entirely out of its way to state a falsehood, with a wicked intention, but which can do no possible harm. The manner in which we conducted the "Statesman" received the approbation of the leading Democrats and of the press of the State, and it can scarcely have been forgotten that a general regret was expressed on our retirement from that paper, to whose interests and those of the party we were true, if ever there was unswerving fidelity in man:

COLUMBUS, July 26th, '59.

To the Editor of the Fact:—The Statesman this morning in an attack upon Mr. Sparrow and his report made in 1857, upon the Treasury Defalcation, does not omit the opportunity to disparage me. It says:

The Statesman happened at that time, most unfortunately, to be under the editorial direction of J. B. Marshall, who was prevailed upon by the Republican Junto to father an article announcing the defalcation in the Statesman which was written by Gov. Chase.

The writer of the article knew he was telling a lie—a gross, unpardonable and wilful lie—whether it was Cox, Manypenny or one of the office satellites. The Statesman was edited by me at the time, and whether fortunate or unfortunate for the party, I endeavored to do my duty as an honest and truthful editor. If Cox was the writer of the article, it is double knavery in him, for he knew the circumstances by which the paragraph announcing the defalcation got into the Statesman. So do the others, for the Statesman itself, a day or two after, explained the whole thing fully, and exonerates me from all participation in the peculiar wording of the announcement. The same foreman is there now who was there then, and knows that I did not see the announcement until it was in type—that I had it altered, striking out the name of Breslin, and leaving the guilt of defalcation to be established on the proper party by examination; and after seeing the paper put on the press and a copy or two worked off, that the announcement was again changed without my knowledge, so as to very much resemble the original, but slightly variant as an examination of the files of the Statesman and State Journal of that date will show.

Cox, at that very time, assured me that, if there was any difficulty with the Statesman, on the subject, I should have another paper placed under my charge before twenty-four hours! That does not look like he considered my editing the Statesman unfortunate.

The greatest falsehood is that I was "prevailed upon by the Republican Junto to father an article announcing the defalcation in the Statesman which was written by Gov. Chase." I have explained all the connection I had with the announcement. It had been brought to the office after the paper had been made up for the day, and I had left the office. Returning casually I saw the proof-slip, and said it would not do to be published in that form, no matter who requested it; and accordingly materially altered it; and as thought it would be published, but the press was stopped and the type again changed after I had again left the office. I have not the files of the paper, to which the present proprietors of the Statesman have access, but this can be substantiated if necessary by Cox, Nevins, Mr. Brandon and others, who are cognizant of the facts.

I had the satisfaction of knowing that my course while editor of the Statesman was governed by truth and honor, and that I penned nothing which I did not believe to be true, and persisted in nothing which I did not know to be true—a course which I am free to say has been entirely repudiated and discarded by its present management. In haste,

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Naturalized Citizens—The Dispatch of the Secretary of State.

We publish that portion of the dispatch of Gen. Cass to our Minister at Berlin, which explains the policy of the government of the United States, in case of the impressment of a naturalized citizen in the Prussian army. Although it would not be frank to say that this is merely a more full and satisfactory interpretation of the letter to Le Clerc or even that to Hofer (which it is not necessary to gainsay or establish,) it will be found much more in accordance with public sentiment than either of those letters. It should be well understood abroad that America has a nationality, and that her citizens, native or naturalized, are under her protection; and are amenable to no foreign government save for crimes committed within their jurisdiction, and subject to punishment under their municipal regulations:

The moment a foreigner becomes naturalized his allegiance to his native country is severed forever. He experiences a new political birth. A broad and impassable line separates him from his native country. He is no more responsible for anything he may say or do, or omit to say or do after assuming his new character, than if he had been in the United States.—Should he return to his native country, he returns as an American citizen, and in no other character. In order to entitle his original government to punish him for an offense, this must have been committed whilst he was a subject and owed allegiance to that government. The offense must have been complete before his expatriation. It must have been of such a character that he might have been tried and punished for it at the moment of his departure. A future liability to serve in the army will not be sufficient, because, before the time can arrive for such service, he has changed his allegiance, and has become a citizen of the United States.—It would be quite absurd to contend that a boy, brought to this country from a foreign country with his father's family when but twelve years of age and naturalized here, who should afterwards visit the country of his birth when he had become a man, might then be seized and compelled to perform military service, because, if he had remained there throughout the intervening years and his life had been spared, he would have been bound to perform military service. To submit to such a principle would be to make an odious distinction between our naturalized and native citizens. For this reason, in my dispatch to you of May 12, 1859, and again in my letter to Mr. Hofer of the 14 ult., I confine the foreign jurisdiction in regard to our naturalized citizens to such of them as "were in the army or actually called into it" at the time they left Prussia. That is, to the case of actual desertion or a refusal to enter the army after having been regularly drafted and called into it by the government to which at the time they owed allegiance. It is presumed that neither of these cases presents any difficulty in point of principle. If a soldier or a sailor were to desert from our army or navy, for which offense he is liable to a severe punishment, and, after having become a naturalized subject of another country, should return to the United States, it would be a singular defence for him to make that he was absolved from his crime, because, after its commission, he had become a subject of another government. It would be still more strange were that government to interpose in his behalf for any such reason. Again, during the last war with Great Britain, in several of the States—I might mention Pennsylvania in particular—the militiaman who was drafted and called into the service was exposed to a severe penalty, if he did not obey the draft and muster himself into the service, or, in default thereof, procure a substitute. Suppose such an individual, after having incurred this penalty, had gone to a foreign country and become naturalized there and then returned to Pennsylvania; is it possible to imagine that for this reason the arm of the State authorities would be paralyzed, and that they could not exact the penalty? I state these examples to show more clearly both the extent and limitations of rightful Hanoverian jurisdiction in such cases. It is impossible to foresee all the varying circumstances which may attend cases as they may arise; but it is believed that the principles laid down may generally be sufficient to guide your conduct.

It is to be deeply regretted that the German governments evince so much tenacity on this subject. It would be better, far better, for them considering the comparatively small number of their native subjects who return to their dominions after being naturalized in this country not to attempt to exact military service from them. They will prove to be most reluctant soldiers. If they violate any law of their native country during their visit, they are, of course, amenable like other American citizens. It would be a sad misfortune if, for the sake of an advantage so trifling to such governments, they should involve themselves in serious difficulties with a country so desirous as we are of maintaining with them the most friendly relations. It is fortunate that serious difficulties of this kind are mainly confined to the German States—and especially that the laws of Great Britain do not authorize any compulsory military service whatever.

Who is a Nigger?

Queer Decision.—Judge Foote, of the Court of Common Pleas, decided yesterday, in the case of Morris vs. the Judges of Election in the First Ward, that the new law which excludes negro voting is unconstitutional. He says the language "white person" includes all persons having more than half white blood. This is ahead of the doctrine that "a nigger is as good as a white man," for it is equivalent to deciding that A NIGGER IS A WHITE MAN. What a fish a toad is.—[Plain Dealer.

We are not disposed to pass off so gross and infamous an infraction upon law by one clad with official ermine, by calling it a "queer decision." It is not an error of judgment on the part of Judge Foote, but a wilful, manifest, determined dereliction of duty—a violation of his oath—a pandering to a miserable party infatuation—a subterfuge which imperils justice in such hands, and jeopardizes life, liberty and property.

The Constitution itself prescribes that the elective franchise shall be exercised by "every white male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year next preceding the election." The law was enacted in conformity to this clause in the Constitution, which was intended to exclude persons of African descent from exercising the elective franchise.

The first section of the law is explicit. It enacts "that the Judge or Judges of any election held under the authority of any of the laws of this State shall reject the vote of any person offering to vote at such election, and claiming to be a white male citizen of the United States, whenever it shall appear to such Judge or Judges that the person so offering to vote has a distinct and visible admixture of African blood."

The second section of the act prescribes the penalty for taking such vote, and the third section punishes those who procure, advise or [illegible] by counsel or otherwise such voting.

The Constitution of the State is divided, and the act in conformity to the Constitution is distinct. Judge Foote cannot by any specious chain of reasoning show the unconstitutionality of the act. He might as well argue that the Constitution itself formed by delegates from the people and ratified by the people is unconstitutional.

The Constitution of Ohio declares that the elective franchise shall be restricted to "white male citizens of the United States." Ohio by altering her Constitution, (which the Republicans pretended to wish to do, but shrunk from doing,) and striking out the word "white" and the words "U. S.," may make a negro a citizen of Ohio, but not of the United States. He may be made the equal of the white man here, but in other States he may not be allowed to that social or political level. It was the intention of the Constitution of Ohio to exclude negroes from voting, and it was the intention of the act to exclude negroes of any degree from voting. Judge Foote was not ignorant of the object of the new Constitution in changing the phraseology of the old, so as to obviate the construction put upon the Constitution by the Supreme Court of Ohio, in the use of the term "white." When there was a preponderance of Caucasian blood he is a voter, and of African, he is not. The fallacy of the doctrine was admirably argued and exposed by Judge Ranney, whose decision is a masterpiece of reason and strong sense. Why a man may have merely one eighth African blood, and have all the peculiarities of the negro; as is common to all animals; it is vain to breed for pure white, they will show the original cross sometimes.

But it is useless to argue this with a fanatic, a law-breaker like Judge Foote, whose foregone conclusion needed no cloak of casuistry or sophistry to conceal its predetermined hostility to a law which he was sworn to see executed—an abiding war upon the Constitution which he had taken a solemn oath to obey. We should like to see him exercised a little for this stretch of his power, and trust that he may be regarded from this time forth as the Judge whose conscience was too tender to discriminate between Ethiopia and Caucasus, and delighted to contemplate the amorous glances, the sausage lips, the romantic perfume of the former, as equal to the more refined and delicate nature of the latter.

Mr. Sparrow's Appointment.—It has been known for some time that the equalization between the city and country property for appraisement, has been anything but fair, the city bearing a disproportionate burden of taxation; and it was desirable to have a Commissioner from the city, so that its interests might be attended to in the Board. This led to the appointment of Mr. Sparrow, and a better and more generally approved appointment could not have been made. It is harped upon by the Statesman, because Mr. Miller, by the grace of Mr. Buchanan, superseded him as Postmaster, and therefore hates him; and Cox wrote to him that he had called upon the President and found all right, when he had sought and secured the place of Sparrow for Miller. The malignity of the Statesman is thus accounted for, which otherwise could not be understood. The general verdict is that no better appointment could have been made, and the controversy raised by the Statesman is regarded as a mere outburst of vindictiveness, which permits personal animosity to overbalance the prudence that should regulate a party organ.

St. Louis Correspondence—No. III.

St. Louis July 20th, 1859.

"I spend my time in making sermons,
Or writing libels on the Germans,
Or [illegible] at Whigs' preferments."
—Swift.

Dear Marshall:—Taking the above motto for a text, I proceed, in accordance with its first verse, to inform you that we are just now suffering from all the plagues of Egypt. That of flies, mad dogs, and other vermin, as naturalist, we experience, both in a literal and metaphysical application. From our naturally indigenous to a place founded by Jean Chapaud, and our municipal malcontents are only doubtful whether their chief civic magistrate is to be considered King Log or King Stork. The plague of darkness is fully realized in the caliginous hue of our potent Republican masses, and I doubt not that the morning after election day we shall hear a lively repetition of the cry that went up on the destruction of the first born; for, so numerous are the candidates for office, as a glance at the list will convince you, that, whichever ticket succeeds, there will be scarcely "a house without one dead."

As to the second line of my text, I confess some surprise that our city has not yet been called upon to appoint delegates to the Diet of the German Confederation. In numbers and political importance her step-sons, of Teutonic origin, will compare favorably with the population of the minor States and free towns included in the Bund. The third verse above is evidently of a prophetic character, and as plainly belongs to the class of predictions hitherto unfulfilled.

Since the "strand of doctrine" I sent you last week, I find little of note in my diary. (Mem: be particular, Mr. Compositor, not to spell the foregoing term with an aspirated double n, and a diphthong.) The mortality is increasing rapidly of late, especially among infants, and one or two cases of cholera are reported. It is surprising that this city should not be far more visited by epidemic diseases, for it is certainly one of the most unwholesomely filthy in the entire country. From ignorance and carelessness in the municipal legislature, has sprung a code of health ordinances which would puzzle the best officers to execute, and from ignorance and neglect on the part of non-medical officials, has resulted in a condition of things rendering the entire area within the city limits one gigantic nuisance, completely intolerable to those who know by experience what a clean town is. Yet the amount expended for the nominal purposes of purification equals or exceeds, in proportion to population, that of Baltimore or Philadelphia. We have a well constructed sewerage, the only feature of a hopeful character in this connection; but the amount of unregarded offal and refuse matter spread under the fierce rays of the sun, upon private property and in alleys, &c., even in the best portions of the city, is absolutely fearful. Scarcely ever will the local papers venture to utter a strong word upon the subject, important as it is to every resident, and obvious to every visitor.

Thornton, the murderer of Mr. Charles, has been indicted and arraigned for murder in the first degree. Of course he pleads "not guilty." By our special statute, if he wishes a change of venue from the Criminal to the Circuit Court, his affidavit must be filed, and also supported by evidence, subject to argument, in the Court of Common Pleas, to the effect that from prejudice of the Court, &c., he cannot therein obtain a fair trial; and it is then reposed in the Judge of Common Pleas to grant or refuse the application, at his discretion. So the probabilities are that he will have to take his trial before Judge Clover, in the Court of original jurisdiction.

Among the events of the present week is the advent of a new evening paper, entitled the "St. Louis Bulletin," which, judging only from its first three numbers, presents more than ordinary claims to public acceptance. The editor-in-chief is Mr. James Peckham, hitherto known as an indefatigable and talented reporter on the staff of the "Missouri Democrat." His paper has been heralded as a Free Soil sheet, but claims, and thus far manifests, independence and impartiality in politics. A Republican Convention is to meet on Thursday, after which we can test the position of the "Bulletin." Its columns are filled with a variety of excellent matter, original and selected; in every department, editorial, local, commercial, river, general news, criticism, and (not least) advertisements. A masterly and concise review of "Palfrey's History of New England" appears in the second number. This journal, like most new ones, ("BRANDUM REGINA," &c.,) is open to animadversion in one important point of detail, viz: [illegible]; not only its classical quotations, but its leading articles, and especially its local paragraphs are disfigured by execrably careless typography. You and I, Birney, well know the sensation of chagrin consequent upon seeing our best thoughts thus sacrificed, a fate to be avoided only by sitting up to read proof until 3 A. M., or by the rare fortune of securing the services of that most priceless gem, an assistant foreman, combining dictionary qualifications with a fidelity of the staunchest character, impassible to every species of seduction. Errors of this description, from which your paper is singularly exempt, render a writer unintelligible to the illiterate, and a publisher obnoxious to the educated reader.

The thousand dollar premiums alluded to in my last, offered by the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association, are not specially subscribed, but a part of the regular list, and open to universal competition throughout the Union. In this feature of liberality, our young Society, a mere county organization, deriving no assistance from public funds, will compare favorably with most, if not all, similar associations. Ours, which proposes for competition the highest premiums, and admits entries from all quarters without a fee, might sustain the highest pretensions to a national character.—From the general recognition of its attractions, it has hitherto proved self-supporting, and I may notice, as a proof of its wide reputation, that a number of stalls for the approaching exhibition have already been engaged by parties from the remotest States, including Vermont and Louisiana.

A distinguished Democrat of this State who holds, by virtue of popular suffrage, a seat in the councils of the nation, remarked within a day or two past that, in his opinion, Judge Douglas would receive the nomination for the Presidency at Charleston, and would be our only available candidate. Similar views are increasingly prevalent here.

Travellers to the West and North-West, per Pacific Railroad, will find an excellent stopping and starting place at the Clarendon Hotel, on Seventh street, opposite the R. R. Depot. It is a new house, and supplies a vacancy long experienced, owing to the distance of the old houses of entertainment from the terminus. The "Clarendon" in its arrangements is proof against the keenest criticism. The hosts, Messrs. Lester & Co., are gentlemen of experience in the business, and entertain strangers as if they calculated upon their being "angels unawares." Addio. W. G.

Stock Sale.—The stock sale of Fayette county for August, comes off at Washington on the 4th. The sale of the 7th inst. was quite spirited, with 220 head of cattle in market. The Register says:

"One yoke of oxen, owned by Garland Johnson, of Clinton, sold to Fuller Hess, of this county, for $98; 26 head of cattle, owned by Cyrus Johnson, sold for $14 per head, to some person we did not know; 50 head, owned by Garland Johnson, sold to Mr. Hurtt, of Clinton, for $35 82 per head. A number of private sales were made."

☞ General "Tom Thumb," having made his fortune abroad, is about to return to his hotel in Bridgeport, and settle down for life.

Current Sentiments.

R. Hutchinson, Esq., is a candidate for Representative in Madison. He is a gentleman of fine intellectual gifts, and would make a capital representative, and while attending to the local interests of Madison, would have a wary eye for those of the State at large. A gentleman of enlarged and liberal views, of genial character, a deep thinker and fine speaker.—Madison would have reason to be proud of him as her representative.

We find the following extract from an oration delivered by Col. Hutchinson, on the 4th inst., in the last London Democrat. His appreciation of the philosophy of government, and its proper sphere, as well as the rights of the people in their individual capacity, is forcibly illustrated and defined. We want no splendid government, vieing with the monarchies of Europe, where clad in purple, hereditary power wears the diadem. The people are, and should be sovereign, and government but the mere machinery of their will.

In his patriotic address on the 4th of July, Col. Hutchinson said:

"Another danger with which the freedom of the individual is threatened, is centralization, of the growing tendency of Federal and State Legislation, respectively, to trench upon the reserved rights of the citizen both as an individual and as a member of the local self-governing community, by the assumption of powers never delegated. There are those who regard the State, or the Government, as a kind of depository and dispensatory of public blessings and benefits, upon which they can always draw, and legislate the people rich or moral or prosperous at pleasure. It is a European idea which unfortunately has taken root in American soil. It defers to the government everything and makes the people nothing. It is an opinion which abnegates the individuality of the citizen, and converts the State into an engine of oppression. Under that pretext of promoting the "general welfare," or the public morals, it has built up monopolies and class interests, and invaded the individual rights of the citizen. In my judgment it never was intended that the legislative authority of the General Government, or of the States, should extend to other objects than the protection to life, liberty and property; this the government should accomplish by such an amount of legislative enactment, as is absolutely necessary, and there its authority should cease. We want a rich people, but a poor government; a strong and powerful people, but a weak and limited government. England is a rich and powerful State in its exterior, but who would be an English peasant? Russia is a great and strong nation, but who would be a Russian serf? The danger is, as it always has been, lest the legislative authority transcend its functions, and undertake the regulation of matters more properly within the sphere of individual rights and action. I repeat the familiar protest against too much government; "that is the best government which governs least." I maintain the competency, as well as the right of individuals, to protect their own interests, and regulate themselves. The enlightened and enterprising people of this country want little more in the way of government than a few clerks to keep their accounts and a few Ketches to hang malefactors. I rely with full confidence of ultimate success, upon the agency of the voluntary principle, as well to develop the material prosperity, mortality and intelligence of the people, as to promote the external grandeur of the Republic; thus cultivating and developing to a degree never before known or conceived, a strong individuality of character, and a habit of self-reliance, which are the only proper stuff for freemen."

Indications of Public Sentiment.—Every mail, almost, brings us newspapers from other States, with the name of Stephen. A. Douglas flying at their column-heads, as their preference for the Presidency. We do not know precisely, but we do not doubt, that in the West—here where Mr. Douglas is best known—there are two hundred papers that have raised his name absolutely, in the manner indicated, and declared for him as their candidate for the succession; while not a single Democratic paper of any account, in all this northwestern country, can be found whose preferences are not for the Illinois Senator. This fact certainly shows a remarkable degree of unanimity of sentiment in the hosts of the party. It is a circumstance which must be gratifying to Mr. Douglas as it is to his friends, and affords grounds of belief that the same wishes and hopes that animate the Democracy in this section, will shortly pervade the party thoughout the Union. Already there are seen symptoms in the South, especially, of returning good feeling and prudence. We have before us as we write, several of the ablest and truest Democratic papers of that region, which speak out in plain terms for the favorite of Illinois and of the whole West. And the number of such papers is increasing every day. The Memphis (Tenn.) Evening Ledger, just received, nominates Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency, and graces its columns with that ticket. We mention these facts, not that they are in themselves extraordinary, but that they furnish gratifying evidence that reason and sound policy are likely to have a speedy triumph over the machinations and follies of men at Washington and elsewhere, who either have no regard for the Democratic party, or who, in moments of imbecility, do all that weakness can do to bring odium upon Democratic principles. The people are seldom wrong; and such of them as have been misled by the cry against Douglas, his friends and his principles, are fast coming back—they will have resumed the right position by the time their services are wanted to preserve the integrity of the Democracy, and, as a consequence, the indestructibility of the government.—Chicago Times.

Douglas Papers in Ohio.

Constitution—Van Wert;
Democrat—Sandusky;
Democrat—McArthur;
Enquirer—Cincinnati;
Gazette—Bellefontaine;
Herald & Times—Toledo;
National—Lima;
National Democrat—London;
Plain Dealer—Cleveland;
PEOPLE'S PRESS—Columbus;
Standard—Delaware;
Spirit of Democracy—Woodsfield;
Sun—Batavia.

☞ If there be others, let them give the sign. The Statesman is somewhere on the road.

☞ Joseph Bloomer, of Fayette county formerly sheriff, died at his residence on the 9th inst., at the age of 72. He was four times elected sheriff, and served to the entire satisfaction of the people.

Douglas and the Politicians.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

We are informed by a Democratic cotemporary at Lexington, Kentucky, that Mr. Douglas has been "expelled" from the Democratic party. In the name of all the gods at once, will it be pleased to tell us when, where and by whom? Not by the Democracy of Kentucky, surely; for, at their last Eighth of January Convention, they expressly refused to make any test of the "admitted abstraction" of Lecompton. This was done by an express resolution, in which all tests were discarded, except the Cincinnati Platform. Was he expelled by the Democracy of Ohio? The last State Convention unanimously and by acclamation indorsed his position on the Territorial question. Was he expelled by the Democracy of Illinois? Let the unanimous Democratic vote by which he was returned to the Senate answer.—Was he "excluded" by the late Democratic Conventions of Iowa, Maine and Vermont? Let their platforms respond, in which they incorporate the substance of his recent letter to Mr. Dorr, and indorse the entire position taken by him in the Senate debate of last winter. Expelled, indeed! Expelled, probably, by the Bowmans, of the Washington Constitution; by the Slidells, of Louisiana; by the Ike Cooks and Liebs, of Illinois; by the Van Burens, of New York; and the Fremont organ, the Herald; by the Robinsons, of Indiana; by the slave-traders of Mississippi; by the Charleston Mercury, of South Carolina; by the Biglers, of Pennsylvania; but by the honest-hearted Democracy of the country, and nowhere, we venture, less so than in Kentucky—never, never!

Probably our cotemporary at Lexington might as well understand it now as at any other time—he will certainly learn it at Charleston—that there is no difference between the position of Mr. Douglas and that of the entire sound Northern Democracy on this question. Every blow struck at him for his opinions on the subject strikes them; and they think it would be manlier, more chivalric, more in accordance with ideas of Southern frankness and fair dealing, to attack them than him. He is a solitary man—a brave, honest, sincere, straightforward man, it is true—but for all that, only one man. He entertains no opinion on this question not held by the entire body of the conservative Democracy of the North. Pugh has expressed the same views on the floor of the Senate.—No Senator from the North dissented from them. No Northern statesman, who values his political life or reputation, dares gainsay them—not a township in the free States can be carried after their discardal.

This is all gospel. Douglas does no more than give voice to this sentiment.—He has the boldness and honesty to do it—the courage to warn the Democracy of the South of the rock they are drifting on—of the danger that will result from an interpolation of the Cincinnati Platform, violative of the solemn engagements of the party, entered into in 1854 and confirmed in 1856.

It may be thought easy to conspire, and combine, and kill off Douglas, as he is only one man. But the matter will not be mended. The conspirators will only then have succeeded in prostrating the best friend and most fearless defender the constitutional rights of the South have ever had in the free States—one who has more successfully combatted Abolition heresies than any one now living. If Douglas is laid low the sentiment which he represents will still live but the stronger, and the more aggravated by the outrage of his fate. It will find other voices just as bold—just as outspoken, just as manly and positive.

The Northern Democracy can not blink this question; they can not slur it over.—It is one that concerns their manhood, their respectability, their honor. They made a solemn engagement with their Southern brethren—as solemn and as just a covenant as ever before was made.—They cannot permit this compact to be overridden and disregarded; they cannot allow their public men, who simply stand up and defend it, to be stigmatized as "traitors," and read out of the Democratic party, without a complete sacrifice of their independence as men and their respectability as citizens—without, in one word, personal degradation. To suppose them capable of permitting one of their statesmen, who does no more than fearlessly announce their two opinions, to be cut down in their eyesight, presupposes a servility and an unspeakable cowardice that sinks them beneath contempt and to a level with tame rabbits and whipped spaniels.

Who is this man that, forsooth, has been read out of the party and "expelled from its councils?" Who is this "traitor," this enemy of Southern rights, this votary of "squatter sovereignty," this man deemed fit to be coupled, by Kentucky prints, with the Van Burens and Chases? Can it be the same Douglas who voted and spoke for the annexation of Texas—who advocated it in advance of all men in the North?—the same Douglas who was the first Northern man to denounce the Wilmot Proviso on the floor of Congress?—the same Douglas who stood side by side and shoulder to shoulder with the illustrious Clay in breasting the waves of sectional violence and passing the Compromise Measures of 1850? Can it be the same Douglas who, on his return home in 1850, was yelled at by Abolition mobs, and voted "a traitor" by the Common Council of Chicago, and who called a meeting of his fellow-citizens, and proved to them that he was right about the Fugitive-slave Law, and they were wrong, and made the Council repeal their resolutions? Can it be the same Douglas who, at a later day, applied the principle of the Compromise Measures to Nebraska and Kansas, and repealed the hoary-headed Missouri Restriction? Can it be the same Douglas whose way home was again lit up by burning effigies, intended as symbols of his treachery to the free States? Can it be the same Douglas who, throughout his life, has ever been conservative and true to the constitutional rights of the South; who has ever done the South justice; who has defended her through good and evil report, and shielded her from the shafts of the Abolitionists; who has never up to this time, uttered a sentiment inconsistent with the doctrine for which he was applauded all through her limits in 1855 and 1856?

It is the same man. He entertains now the same opinion that he has entertained and freely expressed all the time. He stands now where he stood in 1855 and 1856, advocates the same views, without the dotting of an i or the crossing of a t. It was good Democracy then. It was so sound then that almost the entire South rallied on him as against Buchanan. He has not changed his position.

As for Lecompton, the least said about it the better. It is an extinct issue, and we agree should be made no test either way. Douglas did no more than what Hammond of South Carolina said ought to have been done. Hammond said it ought to have been kicked out of Congress. Douglas did it. We hear no denunciations of Senator Hammond at the South for this opinion. Jeff. Davis said at Portland that he had grave doubts about the propriety of Lecompton, and admitted that by "insertion" the people of a Territory might exclude slavery. Yet he is a lion with our Kentucky cotemporaries. Cobb said that "the majority of the people of the Territories, by the action of their Territorial Legislatures, could decide the question of slavery." Still Cobb is not denounced, but held to be a high-priest in the church. Orr, Stephens, Geo. W. Jones, Smith of Tennessee, and at least twenty other Southern men, have expressed similar views on the floor of the House of Representatives. Still we are not informed of their having been read out of the party. Cobb said that "squatter sovereignty" was a purely theoretical issue, and afforded no ground of difference in the Democratic party. So spoke number and others. Still Douglas is a "traitor" for holding the vile heresy which Orr, Stephens, Cobb and a host of other Southern lights have expressed, without being molested.

People begin to suspect that this is only a heresy because Douglas holds it; and this is the truth. If Douglas was out of the way, we doubt whether we would hear anything of the question.

History utterly fails in a parallel to the persecution of this man by the politicians. Issue after issue that the leaders of the Democratic party would never before entertain for an instant has been gotten up to kill him off. Newspapers have fired broadsides of epithets on him. His friends have been turned out of office; crowned orators and Senatorial orators have set upon him. The big hounds and the little hounds have been put on his track. Still the "Little Giant" lives—what is more still, he grows. Day after day he gets stronger and stronger. The masses have taken him to their hearts.—They have put up their shields to protect him from the politicians. The cabinet-maker's apprentice at seventeen years of age has become at forty-six the great tribune of the American people, and is destined hereafter to make his cabinet out of men and not of wood. This popular love is not hemmed in by river boundaries or sectional limits. It pervades the entire country. It exists in Mississippi and in Texas as well as in Maine and Ohio. Everywhere the popular heart leaps out with delight at the mention of his name. And the continued war on him by the politicians will only ripen this ardor into acclamatory enthusiasm.

"Party Fealty."

The Intelligencer of the last week, under its new administration, contained a very well written article on party fealty. Although the object of the writer is somewhat carefully disguised, it is easy enough to see that he is anxious to furnish his dissatisfied political friends with a pretext for bolting (either partially or wholly) the Republican State ticket.—The tyranny of the Chase regency is odious to many of the opposition in this locality. The Hon. L. D. Campbell came back from Columbus, showing numerous political scars that he had received in the free fight that he and Corwin had with the "blue-bellies," in the committee room, at the late State Convention.

Instead of sounding the loud timbrel of party triumph, and whipping in the obstreperous, who were disgusted at the repudiation of Judge Swan, the organ of the opposition in this county preaches the doctrine that the nominations made by its party at Columbus are not binding on the rank and file. It says:

"Let the intelligent freeman of our country, the farmers and laborers, who can gain nothing by party victories, but who may lose everything by the elevation of bad men, shake off the chains with which the skill and selfishness of interested leaders have bound them for the sacrifice. They can snap these green withes like flaxen threads in a fierce flame. * * * * * *

Under the training of party, men have come to regard party success as of more importance than national or state prosperity. Partizan zeal has stiffened their necks and beclouded their vision. Their preconceived notions are more energetic than argument. The hurrah is more moving than facts. The name and glory of their clan are more to be desired than political integrity, statesmanlike ability or administrative wisdom."

Now where is the State Central Committee? Where is Bascom? Chase and Dennison were both here just after the above refractory article appeared. Were they here to put our neighbor to rights, or only to attend the sewing society? [illegible] what is to become of the Republican party in Ohio if the discipline is to be relaxed, and the nominations are to be rejected at pleasure? "We are in the midst of revolution—bloodless as yet."—Hamilton Telegraph.

Reading Out.—Following the example of the Washington Constitution the Ohio Statesman is pugnacious towards some of the most reliable Democrats in this section. In speaking of the former, the "States" says:

The leader of the "Constitution" of Friday, reading Judge Douglas and Gov. Wise out of the Democratic party, excites indignation against that journal wherever it is perused. A more injudicious article could scarcely have been written. As far as concerns Brigadier General George Washington Bowman, it matters but very little what he may write or say, but the peculiar relation in which the "Constitution" is supposed to stand to the Administration, gives to its editorials a certain amount of importance, while, intrinsically, they would be harmless from their exceeding indiscretion. It is difficult for us to believe that the article in question was inspired outside of the office of the "Constitution," and yet close observing Democrats think otherwise.

If it had its origin in the brain of a Cabinet minister, all we have to say is, that such minister is just as much of an enemy to the reunion of the Democracy as is Forney himself. The "Constitution" seems to be working precisely on the same team for the demoralization of the Democracy as the Philadelphia "Press," and its early repudiation is certain by that party, unless it immediately mends its ways. This is current opinion, of which we have rapidly accumulating evidence. The notion that Stephen A. Douglas and Henry A. Wise are to have their heads cut off, by the edict of Brigadier Gen. George Washington Bowman, is about as absurd as it would be for Tom Thumb to attempt to displace Gen. Scott, and assume command of the United States army.

Are the heads of Thomas Sparrow and "our Democratic County Officials" to come off at the command of Gen. Manypenny and "Judge" Miller?

Perry County is a good deal excited about the county seat question. Our friend T. R. Cox, Jr., is assailed bitterly from the New Lexington end, in the Sentinel, and defends himself most manfully in the Democratic Union of Somerset. A good deal of personality is indulged in, which might be avoided without sacrificing the rules of good taste. We must say for the late representative of Perry that he was as fair and honorable an opponent as those opposed to giving Somerset one more chance for the Court House, could have had. The committee were constrained by justice to report in favor of the bill; and it would not have passed the Legislature but for the strictly honorable course he pursued, and that it could not be denied with any show of fairness.

☞ Mary Louisa Adams, wife of Mr. [illegible] Johnson of Utica, N. Y., died on Long Island on July 16th. Mrs. Johnson was a granddaughter of Ex-President John Quincy Adams.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1859.

Peace Restored.

When still war scarcely [illegible] was blown [illegible] returning.

Event follows event with such unparalleled rapidity that he must indeed be a rapid speculator in the future, who can form any definite conception of the shape which it is to take, predicated upon the past of the Italian war. After a series of victories the most brilliant and effective in modern arms, by Louis Napoleon and his Sardinian allies, before the world is aware, an armistice is agreed upon, and while yet the clouds of war are still rolling on in sight, from amid their lurid folds steps out the smiling features of Peace, arrayed in her wreath of sheaves and garlands of clustering vines.

Everywhere we are asked what do we think of Louis Napoleon now? We are frank to confess we have formed no opinion. It would be difficult for us to tell, when his steps are unintelligible to the ablest diplomatists of the century. As yet we are without details. A mere outline of his present policy is vouchsafed, but what of the future? It is all darkness—all doubt. Austria is to hold Venice; Lombardy to be transferred to Sardinia, and the Pope to be honorary President of the Italian Confederation,—which Palmerston's organ, the Morning Post, thinks is the shadow of supremacy without the substance. We don't exactly understand this Confederation, of which Venice, while a subject of Austria is to form an integral part.

The news says nothing of Kossuth, except he is reported as proposing a monarchical government for Hungary. Has he been overlooked in this general arrangement, and is Garibaldi to flourish upon the verdancy of his laurels?

We are free to say it is easier to ask than answer questions. It is probable that Louis Napoleon did not wish to drive Austria entirely out of Italy, for with her retention of Venice, she would have something of her old prestige. It was not his policy to reduce her in the scale of sovereignties; nor did he desire to bring on a general European war, which he foresaw in the further success of his arms. Having met no reverses, and flushed with uninterrupted conquest, he could play the part of magnanimity, and yield such terms as would not lower his adversary too much in his own estimation. What may be his game—what great results are to emanate from his two months of carnage and triumph have yet to be evolved—they are beyond our skill to vaticinate.

Fort Scott, Kansas.

A friend writes to us from Fort Scott, Kansas, the scene of so many stirring events, not for the Press, but for our "private eye alone;" still we take the liberty of publishing an extract, reasons [illegible], some of whom may take it in their heads to "camp out," at Fort Scott, too, notwithstanding its former terrified reputation. The description pleases us, because not designed to entice others to so charming and promising a section of the country. Our friend writes:

"It is an old military post, the Government buildings forming an excellent base for a town. Having been so long a frontier post, all the roads in this region center here from the different parts of the Territory.

"We are in the South-eastern part of the Territory; in a splendid agricultural country, remarkably well-timbered for a prairie region, with immense beds of coal underlying the soil, and easy of access everywhere. Coal is delivered to you at your residence here for ten cents per bushel. Game and fish are abundant, while the climate is the most charming in the world. The only drawback is, you can't get ice. It never freezes a half inch thick in winter, while the prairie breezes keep the summer cool when you are in the shade. The nights are always cool and pleasant."

INSURANCE AGENCIES.—We had intended last week to call attention to the card of Mr. J. H. WHEELER, Notary Public and Insurance Agent, but the notice we had prepared was mislaid. He is an agreeable gentleman to transact business with, while he attends assiduously to the interests of those for whom he acts. He has the agency of several large Eastern Companies, of unquestionable standing and merit, among which may be named the "Home" and "Manhattan" Insurance Companies. He issues policies upon lives of individuals, at liberal rates, graded in comparison to years. This branch of business, where insurance is so general among our people, is much neglected; and the prudent and provident never fail to make a moderate investment upon their lives, by which, in case of disaster, their bereft families may reap the advantage of their careful provision. Mr. WHEELER will be found an energetic, thorough man of business, but genial and agreeable in discharging his duties. He may be found at all times at his office, on High street, unless temporarily called away by business.

A WORD OF CHEER.—We acknowledge the following compliment from the "Border Star," a fine, large paper conducted with vigor and ability, and published by our old friend H. MILBURN McCARTY, at Westport, Missouri. We hope soon to place the "Border Star," with its lively and genial editor, among our co-laborers in the cause of the people and of their great champion, STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS:

"We read no paper that comes to us with more pleasure than we do the PEOPLE'S PRESS, by our old friend J. Henry Marshall, of Columbus, Ohio. It is not only one of the ablest papers in Ohio, but it is one of the ablest in the Union. Henry must be getting along in years now, but age does not dim the lustre of his genius nor weaken the vitality of his brain.

If any one out this way wants a first-rate Ohio paper, we advise him to send for the Columbus PEOPLE'S PRESS.

A NEW COUNTY.—The Washington Register opposes the proposition for the formation of a new county, to be taken from the counties of Fayette, Pickaway, Ross and Madison, the town of Mt. Sterling, now in Madison, to be the county seat. We approve the sensible conclusion of the Register. A new county, as proposed, might benefit a few, but even they might get tired of it after paying dear for the whistle.

AMERICAN CONVENTION.—This body met on Tuesday at Cincinnati, elected officers, adopted an address and wordy resolutions, and adjourned without doing anything of the slightest importance, very much to the dissatisfaction of the delegates from the rural districts, the action of the Convention having been in fact anticipated by the Cincinnati Council, who by six to five had resolved from five paltry offices, promised to vote for the Republican ticket.

WRIGHT'S DETECTOR AND COINS OF ALL NATIONS.—Among all the publications for the detection of spurious money, for intelligence as to the solvency of moneyed institutions, as well as impressions of the various gold and silver coins, we know none better entitled to confidence and general circulation than this work. It is published simultaneously in the principal cities of the Union, and is very valuable from its intrinsic merit and reliability. Louis Linck is agent for this city and will be pleased to send on orders.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY ELECTION.—We perceive that a call has been made, to hold the Primary Election, on the 3d of September, which will afford ample time to our fellow-citizens to make themselves familiar on several subjects interesting to them, if not important to know.

KANSAS—GOV. MEDARY.—The correspondent of the Fremont "Democratic Messenger," writing from Wyandotte City, Kansas, July 12, says:

Gov. Samuel Medary, the old wheel horse of democracy, formerly of Ohio, has been present thus far during the deliberations of the convention. He seemed a little excited yesterday during convention, when the republicans voted down the taking of the ayes and nays upon a measure which came up, which was carrying things with a high hand, as it prevents the democrats from recording their votes against any measures the republicans may see fit to bring before the convention! They also took advantage of some irregularity of the proceedings of the legislature of last winter, with regard to this county, and refused seats to two democratic delegates of this county. They offered them seats, but without the privilege of a vote, which they would not accept. There were also two other democratic delegates refused seats upon similar grounds, so that now this county which polls over five hundred votes has no representative in the convention, and thus becomes completely disenfranchised, for they have no voice in the making of the laws which they will be compelled to obey.

The following just compliment to Gov. Medary, we find in the Kansas city Journal of Commerce, of the 8th inst:

"We had the pleasure of greeting, on yesterday, in our office, the old Democratic war-horse, Gov. Sam. Medary. Time deals gently with the veteran editor, and we can see but little change in him since fourteen years ago, when we were a printer in his office. His eye is as bright as ever, and his proverbial flow of spirits unabated. There is more service in him yet than in a score of the modern school of politicians. As a political editor, in party contests, he has never had a rival, and his tactics and mode of conducting a hotly contested canvass are models of energy and success. Long may he live to aid the Democracy by his counsels and his great experience. During his stay the Governor was the guest of our fellow-citizen, J. C. Groom, Esq."

The Toledo Herald and the Times of the same place have been consolidated. The Herald was a Douglas and the Times a Buchanan sheet. The united thing carries the name of Stephen A. Douglas as the choice of the concern for next President. Perhaps it would be well for other pairs of inharmonious sheets to follow their example. The Cleveland Plaindealer and the National Democrat might become one and the People's Press and Statesman of Columbus another. Let Flood and Gray embrace, and Marshall and Manypenny fall into each other's arms.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The Commercial, to carry out its antithesis, falls into a grave and serious error. The Toledo Times was an independent journal, with obligations to neither the Democratic nor Republican party, and as far to one extreme can be from another was it from being "a BUCHANAN sheet." It has never spoken ill of Mr. DOUGLAS, nor even hinted aught to his disparagement, but when it has had occasion to speak of him at all, it has spoken respectfully and approvingly. The blending of the two establishments is not unnatural, and we doubt not is a very good arrangement. The rest of the Commercial's article, we presume, has answered its purpose—to create a smile—nothing more. With the union of the Times and Herald, we believe that the Commercial and FACT are the only independent papers left in Ohio among the dailies, and the former is regarded as identified with the Republican party, for its opposition to Democracy seems chronic.

The Battle of Solferino—A Curious Calculation

[From the Rochester Democrat.]

MESSRS. EDITORS: Permit me to call your attention and that of the public to the following facts:

In the late battle of Solferino, between the Allies and the Austrians, it is computed that three hundred and fifty thousand soldiers were engaged for at least twelve hours. Of these three hundred thousand were armed with muskets. Suppose each one fired once in ten minutes or six times in an hour, then the number of shots fired was twenty-one million, six hundred thousand: or, if once in five minutes, forty-three million, two hundred thousand—if once in ten minutes, then only one shot tells fatally in seven hundred and twenty; if once in five minutes, then only one in fourteen hundred and forty; because the number killed from the beginning to the termination of the battle was less than than twenty-five thousand—thus, ten thousand Austrians and fifteen thousand Italians and French. Add to the twenty-one million six hundred thousand shots, the tens of thousands of balls discharged respectively by the Austrian and French fields of ordnance, then how comforting the truth that not much more than one ball in a thousand tells fatally in the battle-field—a thousand falls harmless at the soldier's feet. Amid all the improvements in this our age, the improvements in the arts of war, like the feeling of Goldsmith's pious Vicar, lean all on virtue's side. The implements of death wielded at Wagram, Lodi, Austerlitz and Waterloo were eminently more successful.

JAMES WHYTE.

Rochester, July 18, 1859.

FROM THREE TO FIVE THOUSAND SOLDIERS WANTED.—A Washington correspondent of the New York Herald says:

The Mexican Minister has a dispatch from President Juarez's Minister of Finance, who arrived at New Orleans from Mexico yesterday, on his way to this city. Juarez would like the assistance of from three to five thousand American troops, commanded by brave gentlemen and efficient officers; but desires no aid from rowdies or fillibusters. He says he has more to fear than to expect from such help. He is determined to maintain his position, and does not doubt his ability to do so. Senor Mata does not think Santa Anna has any intention of attempting the return to Mexico at present.

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky, in a case arising on a claim on the estate of Roger O. White, a native of Ireland, but a citizen of the United States, who died here in 1851, owing real estate in Newport, Ky., has decided that by the laws of Kentucky aliens cannot take lands by descent, unless they have resided two years in the State next before the descent cast, and the party must be fully naturalized—taking out the first paper. That no act of Congress can make an alien a denizen.

REPUBLICAN TACTICS.—The Republican leaders, have shown some cunning in making arrangements for a series of meetings throughout the State, and it is quite amusing to see how they have apportioned the speakers. In the Democratic counties they send their conservative men like Corwin, while in abolition localities, Wade, Spaulding & Co., are to look after matters. They act on the principle that "what is one man's meat, is another's poison," but this double dealing may recoil upon its inventors.—Georgetown (O.) Standard.

A FUNNY MIXTURE.—The Batavia Herald, speaking of a brass band, lately organized in that place, says that it "discourses music, which when it comes floating on the soft air mingled with the moonbeams of a night like that of Sunday last, is mellowed to the tone of the gentlest heart." We have heard of all sorts of "mixes" from a French soup to a Dutch stew, but never anything equal to this Batavian concoction. But it is good—music and moonbeams is de'dedly good.

SONS OF MALTA EXPEDITION TO MINNEHAHA.—A dispatch from Zanesville, Wis., of July 20 announces the arrival there of ten cars full of members of the Order of the Sons of Malta, all in good condition, en route for Minnehaha. A large number joined the party at Janesville. We wish them a pleasant trip and hope they may return all satisfied.

Mr. Wm. B. LeCouteulx de Caumont, a pioneer citizen of Buffalo, and formerly an officer in the French Army, died in that city on Monday.

Immigration and Suffrage.

EDITOR PEOPLE'S PRESS:—I observe in your paper of the [illegible] a preamble and resolutions adopted at Hamilton, in Butler county, Ohio, on the Fourth of July last, in regard to aliens voting at an earlier period than five years' residence [illegible] are requested (in one of the resolutions) to publish them; and among those the Cincinnati "Enquirer;" but as that paper is playing bopeep or a kind of hide-and-go-seek between the Know Nothings and Democrats and Judges Swan and Whitman, we presume they have not observed the request of 1500 white men. We don't expect the Republican papers to publish them, because their columns are filled with the negro question. Would it not be sound policy for the Democratic press to bestow some attention to the rights and privileges of the white man, while the Abolition-Republican press is enunciating the doctrine that colored men are entitled to equal freedom with the whites? The only plank in the Republican platform is the question of negro freedom. Governor Corwin, in his speech at Xenia the other day, asseverates this, and complains that it don't embrace more, and is, therefore, ignorant of the party he belongs to, or whether to any party. He used to be a Whig, which was a noble old party, headed by Clay, Webster, "et id genus omne." The Democrats have adopted a platform, and perhaps the "Enquirer" may think it hot-redundant to speak outside. We don't think so. We believe in free speech, but the papers are so servile, we begin to believe that it is not true that "nothing is more apt to surprise a foreigner than the extreme liberty which we enjoy in this country of communicating whatever we please to the public, and of openly censuring every measure entered by any party or clique." We have known Hamilton and Butler counties for many years. Hamilton used to have a large Democratic majority, and would have yet, if the freedom and rights of man were advocated according to Democracy. Let our Democratic papers come up squarely to the work and quit catering to Know Nothingism or any other ism. Our principles will enable us to triumph: they are the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and opposed to the creed of Republicanism and all other creeds that make religion a qualification to office. We stand by the Constitution, and that clause which says, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Our platform is the Constitution. All eyes are opened or opening to the rights of man; the general spread of the light of science has already laid open to every view the palpable truth that the mass of mankind have not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few, booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the "Grace of God." We are in favor of the resolutions adopted at Hamilton, because they enunciate the doctrine of free government. We hold that all men are created equal, and endowed with freedom; but yet we have incorporated in our laws a provision that aliens shall serve an apprenticeship before coming into full communion with us. We shall not differ about that, so far as naturalization is concerned; but insist that no good reason can be given against the alien holding land, and the voting privilege given to him as granted to a New Yorker, or a person from any other State, settling in Ohio, which is one year's residence. This is a necessary regulation to preserve the purity of elections. As has been stated, if aliens, enjoying all the privileges of a State, should become rebellious, they may be controlled in a summary way. It is nonsense to entertain the idea that men crossing the Atlantic Ocean, and hazarding life to get to a free government, must pass through many years of schooling and training to appreciate and understand the workings of our institutions. Place them in a position to learn; don't keep them in bondage and make slaves of them, to be gazed at as a distinct and separate people; they are "bone of our bone," and why not meet them upon terms of equality? Any man that understands the religion of the New Testament, (and its doctrines were enunciated to and by the poor and the ignorant,) can understand our form of government sufficiently to enable him to vote understandingly. The aliens will favorably compare with our natives for morality and intelligence. In this enlightened age of the world, it is idle to say that such an amount of immigration would come into this country as would endanger its liberty; emigrants come here for liberty, not for slavery. In the achievement of our independence, and in the construction of our political institutions, we acquitted ourselves so as to acquire a vast moral power in the world. Towards this country the enlightened Christians and friends of humanity looked from all nations for an exemplification of self-government and a development of Christianity which should commence a career of progress for religion and amelioration for humanity, never to end until the nations were brought under their influence. Our government commenced with a population of 3,000,000; now we have 30,000,000; and it is not to be looked for that any but good results will operate to our country from any amount of immigration. California was admitted into the Union, with her Mexican population, on the same terms as American citizens; Texas in like manner. The doctrine in the Hamilton resolutions is embraced in the Constitutions of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Vermont and other States. In Ohio the narrow and stringent rule on the subject of an alien voting, will be loosened and modified to conform to the spirit of our free government. There are liberal and sensible men enough to bring this about. You now tax an alien without representation; you complained that the population of the States was prevented; you invite foreigners among you, and refuse them the rights of freedom; tax them without their consent. This subject is worthy of a full investigation. I may write you again.

HAMILTON COUNTY.

A DARK DAY IN CHICAGO.—The Chicago Times of the 21st speaks of "a dark day," in the city, arising from clouds and swarms of [illegible] collected on the corners of the streets," in a state of excessive perturbation. Three colored gentlemen, with the sounding names of ALEXANDER HAMILTON, WASHINGTON ALSTON and WINFIELD SCOTT, had been conveyed by the underground railroad from their master, Capt. FACET, of St. Louis, who offered $2,300 for their apprehension and return. They were traced to Chicago, where NOYES, a Republican ex-detective, under guise of a farmer, went to their place of abode inquiring for farm hands, to whom he would give $25 a month with board and lodging to work a few miles in the country. To avoid suspicion, they were told to meet him at his place of business on a certain day, to get such implements as were necessary, and receive instructions. They complied with the arrangement, and the requisite agricultural implements obtained. They were then placed on the car, and proceeded on their journey, but not to the farm; ascertaining which fact, the negroes and abolitionists caused a writ to issue for the arrest of black and white Republicans—those concerned in the transaction—NOYES, SMITH, DEWEY, TURNER and EDWARDS. SMITH TURNER and BURKETT were arrested and held to bail; SMITH who was white at $3,000 and the others who were colored at $1,000 each. A negro, who sought to justify TURNER, was taken by his colored brethren to the Lake Shore, where forty stripes were generously administered.

The Alliance Times has at length chosen sides. For three years it has tried neutrality but found it inconvenient and unprofitable. Henceforth it will sail under the Democratic flag which it has hoisted, and has already chalked down about two hundred additional subscribers, showing that men are rather disposed to read coinciding opinions, than those which conflict, though they may be true.

Effects of the Defeat of Solferino on the Austrian People.

(From the London Times.)

The result of this defeat must be far greater than the loss of a field of battle and a strategic line, or even of the variously stated killed and wounded who cumber the hospitals and moulder under the surface of the plain. Despotism can only exist under the condition of victory. The corpse of Louis the Great was hooted on its way to sepulture, and Napoleon the Great looked around in vain for some hopeful friends of counsel further resistance before he signed his final abdication. In the army of Austria and among the people of Austria, if we are rightly informed, all is now irritation, rising rapidly to disaffection. The soldiery are still as confident as ever in themselves, but they have no longer any confidence in their leaders. It was under the fear of impending mutiny that Gyulai was removed from his command. For the first time, the general voice in the city and camp dares to accuse the aristocracy as the cause of the great national disgrace, and to inveigh loudly against the exclusive character of the disposition of military rank. The soldiery, whether Austrians, Hungarians, or Croats, true to their military esprit de corps, demand to be led back again to battle—but by leaders who are able to command them. They refuse to admit the supposition that they are inferior to the French as soldiers. They are exasperated and not cowed, and their exasperation is even greater against the system by which they have been sacrificed than against the enemy by whom they been defeated. They insist upon fighting, and, in the face of the general excitement, it will be impossible for the Emperor, either for strategic or for political purposes, to shrink from repeating once and again the experiment so disastrously made at Solferino. But if we may trust the reports of those who have most recently mixed with all classes of the soldiery, it is no longer with the hope or the care to save Italy to the Austrian Empire, or to give effect to the old Imperial policy, that other battles are demanded, but simply with the desire to retrieve the honor of the army, to recover to themselves their own self respect and to prove to the world that as soldiers they are not inferior to the French. The country to a great extent shares this sentiment The hope is now, as in 1844, that after having defeated the foreign enemy they may make peace with honor, and may then turn round and arrange their own affairs at home. The Government which was tolerated in its prosperity, has become contemptible immediately it has proved itself to be weak; and all its subjects have discovered that it has no more qualities to preserve it from general detestation. Now, for the first time the Emperor hears the truth from his people; and while the figment of his military power is being rudely exposed by the French, the popular voice cries aloud, "It is for this impotent imposture that the people have been sacrificed, and that the nation has been reduced to bankruptcy!"

It is difficult to predict how far this very reasonable [illegible] of the armed and unarmed objects of the Austrian Empire may carry them. It is an exaggeration, and perhaps scarcely an exaggeration, of the general sentiment which pervaded the English nation when the Crimean campaign made manifest the despotism and imbecility of the aristocratic chiefs of our military force. In our system this is the only department which is homogeneous with a despotic form of government, and which is not responsible to the House of Commons. If in those days the English Constitution was upon its trial, in this fragment of absolute power, despotic institutions were also upon their trial. Now that quiet times are for a moment returned, those who are most interested in the preservation of an effective national force are allowed to relapse into their old somnolence and long-tried obstinacy.

After all that has been said and proved, the authors of that frightful waste at Balaklava, and of those dreadful stages on the plateau before Sebastopol, wear honors and titles as glorious records of the deeds which tarnished the honor of our arms and eclipsed for a moment the memories of a thousand victories. We suffer those insults to our love of country because we know that we have at any absolutely critical moment the power by great and irregular, but peaceful effort, to arrest and punish them. But such is not the case in Austria. Austria has no free Press, no House of Commons, no constitutional checks; her system is of that kind which a blow shivers, but which no friendly pressure bends. We doubt whether Francis Joseph can maintain the extraordinary policy of his House in the face of military defeat. It may be that he will have to draw back from Italy, to restore to Hungary the institutions of which she has been robbed, to give some liberty of speech, and action, and [illegible] to his own German provinces, or, in default, [illegible] to depend upon the Zouaves of the French Emperor, to upon the Cossacks encamped upon the frontiers of Galicia, to protect him from the demands of his own subjects and the indignation of those troops who retreated so sulkily from the heights of Solferino.

MR. RICHARD COBDEN.—The London correspondent of the New York Times, writes that paper on the 8th inst, the following interesting particulars of Mr. COBDEN'S refusal to enter PALMERSTON'S cabinet, and announces the probability of his accepting the Governorship of Canada.

Mr. Cobden is the only Radical of mark who does not probably share these feelings. He professes himself, on the contrary, to be much gratified at the consideration personally shown to him, and to be willing to support Ministers. He had a long interview with Lord Palmerston when he declined a seat in the Cabinet, and listened to all the blandishments and persuasions that master of coaxing lavished on his old adversary. But the imperturbable Leaguer told him, at the end, that his mind was made up; and he told a friend of mine, the day following, that, had Lord J. Russel of Lord Granville been Premier, he would not have refused, but that, having spent twenty years in opposing Palmerston's distinctive policy, he would not bring himself to enter his Cabinet. It is now currently rumored that he has been offered the Governorship of Canada, which be probably would accept.

IRISH ZOUAVES.—It is not unlikely that, ere long, France will have in her service another Irish Brigade. We have learned, (says a Kilkenny paper), from reliable sources that many young men even from this peaceful city of the Nore, moved by the old military ardor of the ambitious Celt, stole away from their friends, and nothing was heard of them, till a letter from Paris announced that they had joined a Zouave regiment in that city, were under drill, and would be moving towards the seat of war about July. One young fellow named Conway, from Irishtown took £10 from his father, and paid the expenses of two companions (who were in the employment of Mr. Purcell, the High Sheriff), and they are now in Paris, learning the noble science of war, to rival the fame of the old Brigade, and to win new laurels for the brow of glorious France. Conway has written home stating that they were received with open arms by their "brother Zouaves," and that for his part he is resolved to win either a Marshal's baton, or a glorious grave!

TO PRESERVE A BOQUET.—If the following recipe prove true, we are sure the ladies will thank us for publishing it, since there will be many an exchange of boquets this season:

"When you receive a boquet, sprinkle it lightly with fresh water, then put it into a vessel containing some soap suds, this will nutrify the roots and keep the flowers bright as new. Take the boquet out of the suds every morning and lay it sideways (the stock entering first,) into clean water, keep it there a minute or two, then take it out and sprinkle the flowers lightly by the hand with water; replace it with the soap suds, and it will bloom as fresh as when first gathered. The soap suds need changing every three or four days.—By observing these rules a boquet may be kept bright and beautiful for at least a month, and will last still longer in a very passable state, but attention to the fair frail creatures, as directed above, must be strictly observed or all will perish."

COCKNEYISM.—The Statesman treated its readers the other day to a long chapter on Lord Lyndhurst, in which true to "Bowbells," it omitted the aspirate where it was needed, curtailing the venerable Peer of his h. But Lord MALMESBURY thinks it unimportant that "a gentleman should know how to spell, or pay strict attention to the rules of grammar." That may be the occasion of the indifference manifested by the Statesman to these minor branches of education.

— An observant farmer in Perry county states that since the late frosts, instead of the myriads of grasshoppers usually abounding at this season of the year, scarcely one of the "varmints" is to be found on his or any of his neighbors' farms. He also states that the caterpillars have been nearly destroyed, the nests having generally turned black. An examination of some of them has convinced him that these enemies of the fruit trees were frozen by the late frosts.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

—Three negroes, Bryant King, Wm. Miller and James Lighfool, convicted of burglary at Cleveland, were on Saturday sentenced to six years' imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

— The Dayton Empire is informed that there was a heavy frost every night last week between that city and Xenia. It has been pretty severe on vegetables.

— J. H. Fisher, who keeps a tavern in Wapakoneta, Auglaize county, was stabbed the other night by Job Atkin, who he refused liquor. Fisher was not expected to survive.

— A man named Lemmon, who stole a horse near Cadiz some months since, and fled to Noble county, has been arrested and made give bail for his appearance at Court. Go in lemon.

— A camp meeting for the Barnesville District of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held near Fairview, Guernsey county, commencing on the 17th of August next.

— Thos. F. De Bertrand, a Frenchman who served as a musician in the war of 1812, died near St. Clairsville on the 13th instant, of typhoid fever, in the 70th year of his age.

—The Cincinnati Commercial intimates that the trotter, Reindeer, will soon try his metal with "Bradley's colt," the Lexington pet, over the Cincinnati race course.

—John Googwar, who lives in the vicinity of Hartville, Stark county, had his arm torn off above the elbow by a mowing machine, on Tuesday of last week. He is in a fair way of recovery.

— A young man named Samuel Gyler was arrested in Zanesville last week, charged with passing counterfeit money. Bogus silver coin to the amount of several hundred dollars was found at the place he resided.

— Wm. Merritt, of the vicinity of St. Clairsville, was severely injured while in a well at Hendrysburgh last week, by the premature discharge of a quantity of powder with which he was blasting rocks. He will hardly recover.

— The barn of Gen. W. Gregg, one mile south of Circleville, with its contents, 25 tons of hay, several hundred bushels of corn, also a large stable adjoining, were destroyed by fire on Saturday evening last. The cause is said to be combustion generated from new hay.

—A sheet-iron wheeled vehicle is used by a fire company at Toledo, in which a fireman can be screened while near a fire. Isinglass lookouts give the operator a chance to see, while from a loophole he deluges the flames.

— Milk sickness is prevailing with extraordinary fatality in a portion of Marion county. A man named Gibson was the first victim, next a Mr. Fisher, and his wife and two adopted children. It seems that the best medical skill in the county had been used in these cases without effect.

— The Painesville Advertiser says Mr. Isaac Collin is now at work raising valuables that went down on the propeller Lady of the Lake, which blew up last Spring at Fairport. The wreck lies near the piers, and Mr. C. is now raising the engine. He got out the safe last week, and found the paper money all right.

— The people of Massillon have organized a company, as we learn by the Times, for the purpose of getting up a pleasure boat, to be propelled by steam, on the canal. It is to be 40 feet in length, and 9 in width—capacity of engine, three horse power. The design is to have the boat ready in time to attend the State fair at Zanesville with it.

— Eli, son of Mr. Luiz, residing near Circleville, Pickaway county, was killed by lightning on Monday last. His brother who was close by was knocked down, and laid insensible for near an hour. Another lad, son of Henry S. Morris, was dangerously if not fatally injured.

— The Barnesville Intelligencer of the 20th says: Considerable excitement was created in town on Monday evening by the return of a party of gold seekers from Pike's Peak. The names of the persons were Best, Hudson, McMahon and Stacby, of Monroe county. They left home in February last, went to the end of the journey, and had some experience in mining. They report that no more than twenty cents per day could be obtained by digging, and are unanimous in the opinion that Pike's Peak is one of the greatest humbugs of the age.

—On Tuesday night, at Cleveland, a German, named Nicholas Bearsholdt, aged 43 years, committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn.

— The Logan Gazette says, a man by the name of Rev. W. Moses was robbed one day this week of $2,200, between this place and Urbana, as he was coming up on the cars. He offers a reward of $500 for its recovery.

— A little boy, seven years old, son of Mr. H. D. Perry, of Stratford, Delaware county, on Sunday last was knocked down, butted, and it is feared fatally injured by a ram while driving a cow to pasture.

— The Springfield News gives the full particulars of the elopement of an exquisite with a [illegible] from Ohio White Sulphur Springs, perhaps as an incentive to other young ladies to try their good fortune (in romance) from the same point.

—A man who resided in Fulton, O., returned on Saturday last from the funeral of his wife, and going into his solitary home sat him down upon a chair and died within an hour. It is said the poor fellow "died of grief."

—Mr. John S. Brown, a resident of Delaware County for nearly sixty years, died at his residence in Berkshire Township, Delaware County on the 12th inst., aged 69 years. He was a church member for 42 years.

— During the encampment at Middletown last week, some graceless scamps spiked the cannon of the Guthrie Grays by driving a rat-tail file into the touch-hole and breaking it off. Not content with this act of meanness, they stole the flag staff and threw it into the canal.

— John Scott, son of William [illegible], five miles south of Marysville, Union county, accidentally shot himself on the 13th inst., in attempting to blow through the muzzle of a gun with his foot on the hammer, not knowing it to be loaded. His foot slipped; the hammer came down, causing a discharge which passed through the back of his head, killing him instantly.

— James Pierson, a respectable citizen of Clark county, was shot and killed by Jacob Welsh as he was passing the house of the latter, on Wednesday. Welsh was arrested. He is said to have been once an industrious man and in good standing, but of late has taken too much whisky, under the influence of which he perpetrated the murder.

—Philip Gardiners said to be a brute in feature and physiological development, was found guilty at Toledo, on Wednesday, of committing a rape, on Emma Burge aged 14 years. The victim of the villain's lust at the time of the outrage was in the woods with other little girls picking flowers to present to a lady that was on a visit to her mother. Gardiner was sent for 16 years to the penitentiary.

— A scamp who gave his name as H. L. Johnson, representing himself as a Cleveland merchant, made a bold effort to victimize a minister named Spaulding, a retailer of religious books, at Grafton on Wednesday. Johnson borrowed a fifty from the minister promising to repay it on their arrival at Cleveland. Johnson soon after disappeared. When the minister reached Cleveland he put detective Gallagher on the track, who overhauled the rascal and made him disgorge.

—The storm of Friday evening blew the steeple off the old Presbyterian Church, at Wellsville, Columbiana county.

— Michael Speaks, a young man apparently in good health, dropped dead at Springfield on Wednesday evening.

— On Saturday, George Coon, of Essex, Vt., was killed at Barnesville Station, Ohio. He was standing on top of a freight train which was passing under the bridge, by which he was struck and knocked under the cars. His left arm was crushed off, and his head badly mashed.

— One day last week, Mr. Joseph Hilliard, of Salem township, Columbiana Co., fell from a cherry tree and broke his collar bone. On the same day a son of David Elliot, of Goshen township, Mahoning Co., fell from a tree whilst picking cherries, and broke his arm.

—On the 14th, at Youngstown, the lightning struck a house occupied by a family named Lewis, shivering one gable, throwing down the chimney, and breaking all the dishes, but none of the family, consisting of Lewis, his wife and two children were injured in the least, although not only considerably stunned, but very much frightened.

— The Reflector states that the wheat harvest in the vicinity of Norwalk is about finished and the farmers seem highly pleased with the result. The weather has been fine, and the yield of wheat is abundant. The Reflector says "the truth is is the crop is immense in the region."

—John Stein, of Bridgewater, an old soldier of the last war, aged 82 years, while on a visit to some friends at New Castle, Mahoning county, last week, accidentally fell head foremost into a cellar, and was so seriously injured that he died on the second day after.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FARTHER POINT, BELOW QUEBEC, July 24.—The steamship North Briton, from Liverpool on the 13th inst, and bound for Quebec, has been intercepted off this point.

Her advices are four days later than those furnished by the steamer Africa.

A treaty of Peace between Austria, France and Sardinia had been concluded. The provisions of the treaty are briefly as follows: An Italian Confederation is to be formed under the Honorary Presidency of the Pope of Rome. Austria concedes Lombardy to France, Napoleon in turn, grants those possessions to Sardinia. Austria retains her right to rule over Venice.

The steamer left Liverpool before the effect of this news had time to be developed.

The Manchester markets were buoyant, and are quoted at an advance.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, July 13.—The Breadstuffs market continues dull. Richardson & Spence's Circular reports the weather favorable for the crops. Flour very dull at 10s@13s for American. Wheat more active, at an improvement of 1d@2d. The quotations are, Western red 7s 6d@9s 2d; do white at 9s@9s 9d. Corn dull, but unchanged.

LONDON PROVISION MARKET.—Provisions have a declining tendency. The Circulars report pork heavy, and slightly declined. Bacon dull, and sales unimportant. Lard dull but steady.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, July 12.—No important change to note in the money market. The peace advices had not yet transpired. Consols 9?

AMERICAN STOCKS.—Baring Bros., and Bell & Co's circulars report the following quotations: Illinois Central R. R. 36½@37½; Illinois sevens of 1875, 77.

Cyrus Field is a passenger, and has accomplished the object of his visit.

The Paris Moniteur explains the circumstances attending the armistice, and says: The great neutral powers exchanged communications with the belligerents, offering mediation, but were unsuccessful until the French fleet was about to commence hostilities against Venice, and the conflict before Verona was imminent, when Napoleon, anxious to prevent further bloodshed, ascertained the disposition of the Emperor of Austria, and finding him willing, an armistice was concluded. The Emperors had an interview on the 11th at Villa Franca.

THE ARMISTICE.

A dispatch from Turin says, Napoleon has issued a bulletin from Valligio, announcing the armistice, and congratulating the troops on their glorious achievements, and announcing his immediate departure for Paris, leaving the provisional command of the army to Marshal Valliant.

The London Times claims that England brought about the armistice. Other authorities give credit to Prussia. A Verona telegram says the armistice was concluded only after repeated requests from the French, and after Austria obtained all she asked for.

It was reported that Kossuth was to propose a monarchical government for Hungary.

DISPATCHES FROM NAPOLEON TO THE EMPRESS.

The following is a copy of the telegram from Napoleon to the Empress announcing that peace had been concluded:

VALLIGIO, July 11.—A treaty of peace has been signed between the Emperor of Austria and myself on the following basis: The Italian Confederacy is to be under the honorary presidency of the Pope. The Emperor of Austria concedes his right in Lombardy to the Emperor of the French, who transfers them to the King of Sardinia. The Emperor of Austria preserves Venice, but she will form an integral part of the Italian Confederation.

(Signed) NAPOLEON.

The dispatch of the Emperor announcing the conclusion of peace was bulletined in Paris on the 12th, when the French funds immediately rose 2½ per cent.

EFFECT OF THE NEWS IN LONDON.

The news did not transpire in London till after the closing of consols; sales of which were made afterwards at 96½. The rise during the day being ½, all other securities closed buoyant.

The London Daily News says the first hopes and expectations of Italy are deceived. History will call Napoleon to a strict account for having made war on false pretenses, and signed a mock and selfish peace, that leaves Austria impregnably fortified in the heart of Northern Italy, and commits the centre of Italy to the patronage of the Pope. The closer we examine this pretended pacification, the more futile and inequitable it appears.

The Post contends that the Pope is deprived of his sovereignty, but keeps a shadow of supremacy.

The Times says, France has spent 450,000,000, and 50,000 men, only to give Milan a Piedmontese, instead of an Austrian master, and to establish the Pope in temporal dignity even beyond his imagination. Is all this real? The Emperor's game must be a long one!

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Evening Post has been private letters just received in this city. Several items of news from Italy have not yet been known here. The massacre at Perugia had created intense excitement at Milan, and on the 3d of July the Pope, Cardinal Antonelli and Col. Schmidt were burned in effigy on the Piazza De Armi. It is reported that three thousand Sardinian soldiers have been dispatched to Bologna to protect that city and to support the provisional government.

Massimo Dazlio has also gone to Bologna.

The news of the battle of Solferino created as great a sensation at Naples as elsewhere, and the young king at once dispatched a messenger, to camp to congratulate the allied victors. It was also rumored that an envoy extraordinary would be sent to him perhaps to form an alliance with the Sardinian Government.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The President, accompanied by Mrs. Thompson and Miss Lane, left this afternoon for Bedford Springs.

Gen. Cullom, who is under indictment for alleged malfeasance while clerk of the House of Representatives, to-day demanded trial in the Criminal Court, but this was postponed till the next term, owing to the absence of a material witness.

BOSTON, July 18.—Mr. Wm. Holmes and wife, of New Orleans, who are now stopping at Plymouth, were served with a writ of habeas corpus to-day, requiring them to deliver up a female slave, named Martha Harkins. The hearing of the case has been assigned for to-morrow. Martha has been brought to this city. Her chief complaint is that she has to enjoy less liberty at the north than when she was in New Orleans.

The committee appointed at the meeting of Suffolk Bar will report resolutions to morrow, in relation to the death of Mr. Choate. It is understood that there will be a public funeral, and Hon. Caleb Cushing will deliver the eulogy.

AUGUSTA, GA., July 18.—The brig E. B., from New Orleans, was totally burned at sea, on the 4th of June. The captain and crew were all saved, having landed on the coast of Florida.

STOCKBRIDGE, MASS., July 19.—A daring attempt to rob a bank has just been detected. Last night a man, who gives the name of John Smith, was discovered while operating on the vault of the Housatonic Bank in this city. He says he has been engaged at the work about three weeks. He had almost effected an entrance.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The Secretary of the Interior has, under the act of March 30, 1859, making appropriation preliminary to the 5th census, appointed Mr. Jos. C. G. Kennedy to take the direction of the work.

It is a well ascertained fact, known to the Indian Bureau, that very many of the Indian disturbances are justly attributable to the encroachments of the whites on the reservation set apart for the Indians by the general government. The whites having once obtained possession, there is no way, the U. S. military force being too small, to dispossess them, and sometimes in consequence of their remaining unlawfully on the soil, hostilities are sure to be with the Indians, who are thus continually harassed in their affairs, owing to the small number of Indian agents, and the Indians are scattered. It has been found impossible in every case to carry out all the treaty obligations, or in some to impose the Indians favorably by an exhibition of our good faith, and to prevent dissatisfaction arising from unfulfilled pledges. The present Commissioner of Indian affairs, Mr. Greenwood, who is thoroughly acquainted with the Indian character, and has always practically shared a warm friendship for them, will, it is believed, recommend to the next Congress such measures as will lead to the carrying into effect of all our treaty obligations, for the fulfilment of many of which no appropriations have yet been made. This is especially the case as to those with the Indians of the State of Oregon and the territory of Washington.

BOSTON, July 19.—The meeting of the Suffolk Bar relative to the death of Mr. Choate was fully attended to-day. A series of appropriate resolutions were adopted. It is expected, the remains will arrive here Friday forenoon. The funeral will take place on Saturday from the Essex Street church.

NEW YORK, July 19.—In the case of Catharine N. Forrest vs. Edwin Forrest, the Judge this morning decided that the motion argued last week to change the referee, and to grant alimony and counsel fees for the plaintiff, should be granted. The reference to proceed before the present referee if he will consent to hear it, and the defendant's attorney consents, vacate the order of adjournment. Otherwise the order will be to vacate the order of reference, and refer the matter to another suitable person, defendant to pay alimony at the rate of $250 per month and $1,500 towards counsel fees and expenses of reference.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Private advices from Tuscon, Arizona, to the 2d, state that Pesqueria had announced his intention of driving all the Apache Indians north of the line, with the aid of the Sonora battalion.

The revolt of the Gogal and Apache Indians seemed to have been suppressed, but another has broken out in the northern part of Sonora, and a band of 400 men under, a Papago Indian leader, were creating great damage to property.

It was expected that Lieut. Mowry and Edward Cross, of the Arizonian, would fight a duel on the 8th of July. Lieut. Mowry's grievance is an abusive letter concerning him communicated to the States newspaper of this city.

The Indians in Arizona continue their depredations; a company of volunteers are in pursuit.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—A novel commitment has been made to the District of Columbia Penitentiary, of an Indian who was found guilty of horse stealing in Kansas. He was immediately set to work.

The Commissioner of Pensions has issued a circular in which he directs that invalid pensioners of the army and navy who are subject to biennial examination, to present with their usual vouchers on the 4th of September and 1st of January next, respectively, the certificates as to the state of their disability. The operations of the act of Congress of the 3d of March, 1859, virtually suspend the commencement of such biennial period until the certificates of two physicians or surgeons have been presented.

ST. LOUIS, July 24.—The Overland mail, with dates of the 1st, arrived on Saturday night

The bark Julia Castner, of Philadelphia, capsized in San Francisco day—a total loss.

A fire occurred at Oroville with a loss of $20,000.

The heat continued intense throughout the State; in many places the mercury ranged at 100° to 119° in the shade.

At Santa Barbara during a sirocco, the mercury rose to 133° in the wind.

Political excitement is running high. The candidates of the various parties are preparing to take the stump.

The difficulties between McKibben and Coffroth had been adjusted.

Broderick received and declined a challenge from D. W. Perley.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—An official communication from the Bremen Government states that the recent reduction on rates of postage to 15 cents between the U. S. and Frankfort-on-the-Maine, Saxe-Cobourg, Gotha, and other German States, under the direction of the Thurn and Cor. taxes. The post-office, applies only to the correspondence, via Bremen, and not to correspondence sent via Hamburg, as originally reported.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—There was an extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet yesterday, called to consider the dispatches received from Minister McLane, relative to Mexican affairs.

The members of the different legations from Europe have had several reunions in glorification of the news of the armistice, and to show their appreciation of the continued peaceful relations among their respective sovereigns. The jubilants, however, did not include the French, Austrian and Sardinian ministers, who are absent from Washington.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—The bark Rowena has arrived from Venezuela, with President Paez, and a number of other prominent Venezuelans, returning in consequence of political trouble.

Venezuela is unsettled. Factions have divided the country, and are continually fighting President Castro has appointed liberal ministers, Aranda, Bondon, Echandia and General Silvo, all friends of the revolution. They had sent commissioners to the chieftains of the insurgents to treat and make a convention. General Castro's position seemed very precarious, the public treasury being exhausted and confidence lost.

The port of Laguaira was closed the day the Rowena left, and the custom house boat came after her went she was under sailed.

Great difficulty was experienced in Puerto Cabello to load vessels. There are no working men, and the roads were blockaded by the insurgents.

BOSTON, July 22.—The funeral ceremonies of Mr. Choate, which took place at the Essex street church this morning, were attended by a large crowd of sympathizing citizens. Gov. Banks, the Judges of all our courts and Representatives of the entire Massachusetts Bar, the Mayor of the city, and the members of the various branches of our Municipal Government, together with the family and immediate friends of deceased filled the church in every part, so that thousands of citizens were unable to gain admittance.

The funeral sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Adams, pastor. At the close of the services the hearse moved toward Cambridge through Boylston and Charles street, a large procession following the remains to the bridge. So impressive a funeral pageant has seldom if ever been witnessed in this city. Mr Choate's remains were interred at Mount Auburn.

NEW YORK, July 25.—The announcement of peace between the belligerent powers was read in the House of Lords and the Commons on the 12th, and was received with loud and prolonged cheers.

PRUSSIA.—It was rumored at Berlin that the Emperor of Russia would soon arrive there, to attend the family conference touching the disposal of the crown after the abdication of the King. It is to be decided by this conference, whether the crown shall be conferred on the Prince Regent or on his son, Prince Frederick William. After the abdication of the King of Naples, an unsuccessful attempt was made on the 8th at revolt among the soldiers. It was met by a discharge of artillery from those who remained faithful, and about forty were killed.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The Liberal Government of Mexico through its agents in the United States, have just concluded a contract for the supply of Minnie and Sharpe rifles, cannons and ammunition, to suit them. These will be forwarded to Mexico by the 1st of September.

It is not yet known here whether the American volunteers will be accepted, as Lerdo has not arrived, and the character of his instructions has therefore not been ascertained. These warlike stores may supercede the necessity for extraneous aid, except as to competent officers, there being a sufficiency of Liberals ready to take the field as the rank and file.

Letters have been received here from various quarters, the writers expressing an anxiety to raise volunteers for the service of the Liberals, in any number wished

PRICES CURRENT.

CORRECTED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY WALKER & SON.

COLUMBUS, July 27, 1859.

Wheat, red, ₱ bush.	$1 00	Hams	12@13c
do white, do	1 10	Pork, Mess	$16 00
Flour, ₱ barrel	5 75@6 00	Hogs	4 50@4 00
Corn, ₱ bushel	65	Potatoes ₱ bushel	1 25@1 75
Rye, ₱ bushel	75	Turnips, ₱ bushel	40
Oats, ₱ bushel	37	Onions, ₱ bushel	62½
Clover Seed ₱ bush.	6 00	Apples, green, ₱ bush.	1 00
Timothy " ₱ do	2 00	Apples, dried, ₱ bush.	2 00
Beans ₱ bush.	1 00	Peaches pared, ₱ bu.	4 00
Sugar ₱ lb	[illegible]	Beeswax, ₱ lb	25
Molasses	43	Wool ₱ lb	[illegible]
Butter, ₱ lb	10	Feathers, ₱ lb	40
Eggs, ₱ dozen	8	Chickens, alive, ₱ pair	25
Cheese, ₱ lb	10	Chickens, dressed, ₱ lb	6
Lard ₱ lb	15	Turkey, alive, each	37@50
Tallow, ₱ lb	10	Turkeys, dressed, ₱ lb	6
Salt, ₱ bbl	1 75	Whiskey, ₱ gallon	[illegible]
Rock salt	2 00	Hay, ₱ ton	10 00@12 00
Hides, ₱ lb	5½	Wood, ₱ cord	1 50@2 00
White Fish per bbl.	10 00	Potash, ₱ bbl	4 75@5 00
Mackerel No 1	19 00	Rio Coffee	13@14c
" No 2	17 00	Java "	16@18c
" No 3	13@14

CITY NOTICES.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCOY, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,
June 28, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

N. SHAFFER.

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the gentle MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

C. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is to "good condition." No. 21 East State Street.

[illegible] of love, [illegible]
Give me excess of it.

The charms of MUSIC have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever essayed a couplet and need not be repeated now. Through Mr. Edward Corradison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and [illegible] if needed. He has our endorsement as an efficient and agreeable gentleman.

SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's., celebrated pianos, which are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, unequaled.

Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at SCHELL'S if you want a superior article.

FASSIG'S Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure substantial boots and shoes. They have made them for the last two or three years.

ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "Jones" says that he don't care if paris is three cents a pound; more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread"

CHARLEY BRETHFOGLE is vending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. They are some of the Spring style for summer wear [illegible].

FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

KNIGHT has the latest periodicals.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, liver fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

A British officer, writing from Teheran, Persia, to the London Times, remarks:—"A Cathartic Pill, manufactured by an American chemist, (Dr. J. C. AYER, of Lowell, Mass.,) has cured the Shah of a Liver Complaint that threatened his life. This simple fact, as might be expected, renders the Americans immensely popular here, while we English are overlooked. Doubtless our own scholars made the discoveries which he employs, and thus it is in everything, we do the labor, then the amusing Americans put their mark on it and take the reward. Dr. AYER is idolized by the Court and its retainers here, which will doubtless be reflected to him on a gold snuff box or diamond hilted sword, while not the name even of DAVY, CHRISTISON or BRODIE, the great lights by which he shines, is known.—New York Sunday Paper

I. O. S. M.

WHEREAS, it has been our good fortune to become acquainted with our [illegible] from the City of Columbus, and of their [illegible] into the Sacred Mysteries of the Most [illegible] and Ancient Order of the I. O. S. M. [illegible] resolved by the [illegible] to our brothers of Columbus [illegible] and pledge ourselves [illegible] they have taught us.

J. A. LESTER.] [DAVID C. [illegible]

CLARENDON HOTEL,

CORNER OF SEVENTH & POPLAR STS.

ST. LOUIS, MO.,

Opposite the Pacific Railroad Depot.

J. A. LESTER & CO., PROPRIETORS.

TERMS, - - $1 50 PER DAY.

All Baggage taken to and from the Depot Free of Charge. All persons stopping at the Clarendon Hotel will be conveyed to all the Depots in the city on the Railroad Lines of Omnibuses FREE OF CHARGE.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S

SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned [illegible] Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States [illegible] their curative properties. This was years ago. Now [illegible] of recommending them has since been [illegible] Aeneids. Enlightened men, whose character [illegible] judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions [illegible] the community, men who observe, reflect, and [illegible] earnestly [illegible] approving and giving the [illegible] stance. All who confide in the wisdom and [illegible] this class, of such classes [illegible] ear of the editor on this important subject. Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the

Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, [illegible] in journals, well known [illegible] of the highest respectability, [illegible] extraordinary cures wrought by the [illegible] cures they themselves [illegible]

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted [illegible] by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback [illegible] all times accessible to the public, establishing

Facts;

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time, after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve and restore the health and strength of the sufferer.

Liver Complaint,

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in hopeless weakness and despondency, recuperate with amazing rapidity under their invigorating operation. Their [illegible] debilities are removed by their cordial and [illegible] ting properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried with and [illegible] that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, [illegible] in which they do not give prompt relief and [illegible] do before the very citadel of life has been invaded, a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who in letters [illegible] cal works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They [illegible] every avenue and organ of the system, and [illegible] thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents a box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of the Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of all the agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing one stamp for the reply.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, No. 6 East Fourth St. Buildings (near Main street), Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY by
[illegible]

And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union.
[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1859.

Papa, what is a Newspaper, and what does it Contain?

Organs that [illegible] play, my boy,
To answer the taste of the [illegible],
Whate'er it be,
They hit on the key,
And pipe in full concert away, my boy.

News from all countries and climes, my boy,
Advertisements, essays and rhymes, my boy,
Mixed up with all sorts
Of flying reports,
And published at regular times, my boy.

Articles able and wise, my boy,
At least in the editor's eyes, my boy,
A logic so grand
That few understand
To what in the world it applies, my boy.

Statistics, reflections, reviews, my boy,
Little acts to instruct and amuse, my boy,
And lengthy details,
Upon matters of state,
For [illegible] folks to peruse, my boy.

The funds as they were and are, my boy,
The quibbles and quirks of the bar, my boy,
And every week,
A clever critique
On something theatrical, and so on, my boy.

The news of Jupiter's moons, my boy,
The doings of somebody's baboons, my boy,
[illegible]
The[illegible] of the [illegible],
And the wit of the public saloons, my boy.

List of all physical ills, my boy,
Banished by somebody's pills, my boy,
[illegible]
[illegible]

Who has got married to whom, my boy,
Who were cut off in their bloom, my boy,
Who has had birth
On this sorrow-stained earth,
And who totters fast to their tomb, my boy.

The price of cattle and grain, my boy,
Directions to dig and to drain, my boy,
But 'twould take me too long
To tell you in song
A quarter of all they contain, my boy.

Elephant Hunting in Africa.

Charles John Anderson, the African Traveler, writes home an account of his adventures in hunting elephants. In one of his letters, he says:

The more I see of these stupendous animals, the more I am surprised. I should very much like to know the real strength of a full-grown male; it must be something almost incredible. Nothing gives a person a better idea of their stupendous powers than a day's walk through one of their favorite haunts. There may be seen whole tracts of forest laid prostrate, and such trees some times! The trees, which are for the most part of a brittle nature, are usually broken short off by the beasts; but when they meet with a tree that seems to them too tough to snap at once, up it goes, root and all. If they can do this in mere play, or for the sake of feeding on the branches, &c., of the prostrate trees, what will they not effect in a paroxysm of rage?

The other day, after very many hours fatiguing, "tracking," I was closing with a very large troop of elephants, consisting chiefly of females, when to my left I suddenly espied another troop of what I took to be males. I at once left the first troop and proceeded to attack the second. I "stalked" unperceived to within 25 paces of the herd, when to my annoyance, I found that they also were mostly cows and calves. There were, however, a couple of fine bulls among them—one acting the part of paterfamilias to the herd; this beast's position was unfavorable, and I was waiting for him to present a better mark, when suddenly they all made off. As they were disappearing in the brushwood, I fired at one of the hindmost—a male, as I imagined. In an instant the herd wheeled about, and with a terrific rush came crushing through the bushes, nearly in a direct line towards me; but after running for about 60 or 70 paces they stopped short, evidently disappointed at not finding the enemy. I felt very much inclined to take to my heels, but a moment's reflection convinced me that safety lay only in keeping close; and it was well I did so, for in a few moments the paterfamilias made an oblique rush through the jungle with such force as actually to send a whole tree that he had uprooted in his headlong course spinning in the air. A huge branch remained fixed to one of his tusks. His head was carried aloft, his huge ears were spread to the full, while with his trunk he sniffed the air impatiently. In this position, and when within less than a dozen paces of me, he remained, I should say, about half a minute. I think it was the most striking and thrilling scene I ever saw; my assailant looked the very picture of grandeur and rage.

I use a heavy rifle, carrying a conical steel-pointed bullet (three to a pound,) and 10 to 12 drachms of the best English rifle powder. With the charge, I sometimes send the ball clean through an elephant. Once I fired at a huge cow; the bullet entered her hind quarters, and obliquely traversing the entire length of her body, passed out at the shoulder!—The only objection I have to the gun is that it kicks frightfully, and I dare not now fire it without previously placing a thick wad on my shoulder.

MRS. PARTINGTON AND IKE.—A new book by Mrs. Partington is one of the most agreeable literary announcements which we can make to the thousands who have laughed and grown fat over her unique sayings. The old lady has been sometime preparing a volume, which she has christened "Knitting-work, a Web of Textures," and in a few weeks Messrs. Brown, Taggard & Chase, the fortunate publishers, will issue it in a very attractive form. It will be handsomely illustrated by Hoppin, who has caught the spirit of the work, and represented both Mrs. Partington and Ike in many of their peculiarities, with unusual felicity.

Though differing somewhat from Mr. Shillaber's previous volume, published some five years ago, and of which 30,000 copies were sold, it yet abounds in quaint and grotesque Partingtonian sayings, fine poems, and suggestive essays. The opening chapter on the choosing of a "Guardian for Ike" is running over with fun and philosophy. The greater part of the book is original, while scattered here and there through its pages may be found selections from the author's recent contributions to the Gazette, of which he is one of its editors. At the risk of being charged with telling tales out of school, we venture to give publicity to the following conversation about the volume, between the dame and a prying neighbor, who is perhaps a little jealous of our friend's success.

"So you are coming before the public again," said the inquisitor, looking into Mrs. Partington's little low window, at which the dame was knitting. She pondered his words a moment before replying. "I am not a publican," she said at length; "and though Heaven knows we are none of us not too good, the publicans are best, and that's gospel truth." "I mean," said the querist, "that you have a new work on the carpet." "Not on the carpet, exactly," replied she, "but something that's cognac to it—knitting-work!"—"Crewel?" he persisted in inquiring.—"No," was the response; "there isn't nothing cruel in it, like a satyr, to wrangle like a barbed arrow; it will be pleasant to take, like a lucubration for a parched tongue, and will make people happy. But there's no knowing who will be governor till after election, and whether a book goes well or not depends upon the number that buys it." The inquisitor moved along, and Mrs. P. kept on with her knitting.—Boston Transcript.

The Oldest Organic Monument on Earth.

Among all the geographic botanical discoveries of modern times, none has excited a more general interest, than the discovery of a new species of that wonderful tree, commonly known by the name of the monkey's bread tree, and which bears the botanical appellation of Adansonia, in Australia. This interest has not been created by the fact that the numerical catalogue of plants has been increased by this new discovery with one entire new species, but principally because new light has been thrown thereby upon the history of the planet which we inhabit.

Heretofore, but one single species of Adansonia was known to the whole botanical system. That species (Adansonia Digitata) grows exclusively within the tropical regions of Africa. It is also known by the name of Baobab, such being the appellation given to the fruit of the tree by the native Ethiopians. In the interior of the Continent of Africa, the tree is known under the name of Kuka, or Mowana; on the Senegal, it is called Goui, and its fruit Boui; on the eastern coast it is known under the name of Mulapa.

The growth of the trunk of the Baobab attains gigantic dimensions. Perrottet met with trunks of the trees in Senegambia ninety feet in circumference. The crown, surmounting the trunk in many instances at least a hundred feet, surpasses even the monster-like appearance of the trunk, by its immense circumference. The wood of this colossal trunk is very soft; hence its shapeless thickness is an absolute necessity for the stability of the tree, which otherwise would be materially endangered by its loose textile interior.—The spongy wood permits an axe to penetrate it deeply, and numerous trees are met with by travelers, that are covered with wounds and sores. The extraordinary abundance of sap, especially at certain seasons when it flows most freely, causes it to exude with the slightest puncture or cut, and promotes decay in its interior parts. A hollow trunk of one of these gigantic trees, affords a natural hotel for twenty or thirty persons, and in some of the negro districts of that country, a hollow Baobab is transfered into a Court-house.

We must not conclude, however, from the remarkable softness of the cellular tissue that this tree is short-lived, as on the contrary, there is no other tree in existence possessing such intense vitality in all its constituent parts. Fire can never harm it, for the abundance of water which its wood contains, affords perfect security against it. Deprived of its glittering green bark, it produces a new body covering it, in a very short time by granulation, like the cork tree. When cut down, the trunk continues to grow lengthwise, and throws out such an abundance of small limbs, that a less area is lost by leaving it to stand undisturbed, than by cutting it down.

Livingstone states that each of the eighty-four portions of wood, concentrically cased within each other, of a Baobab which had been cut down, had continued to grow about an inch in thickness; hence he compares it to an onion grown into a gigantic tree.

The branches of this tree and its leaves, are in perfect proportion to its otherwise colossal dimensions and singular qualities; while the trunk forms a sort of vegetable well in dry countries, as by the slightest incision a large quantity of fluid matter may be drawn from it. The finger-shaped leaf can be used as a desirable vegetable. Clapperton tells us that the leaves contain a sort of jelly, making a fine broth; by being rolled up in a kind of ball, they serve as hay for horses, and furnish when cooked, a refreshing drink for the camel.

To complete the catalogue of wonders which are contained in this tree, we must next consider its fruit. It is shaped like a gourd, and is known by the name of sour gourd among the colonists of Cape Land. It may be cut up into fourteen portions, each of which containing about one hundred and fifty grains of seed in loose, rose-colored covering, and might be called a lemon. It has a vinous, mealy taste; accordingly the tree obtained the name of cream of tartar tree among the Boers of Cape Land. Clapperton says that these eatable gourds, covered as they are by a soft felt on their ebony crust, are suspended like filled purses from the naked branches—a coveted delicacy for the monkeys, whose bread they have been called.

But we must not omit to mention the beautiful blossom which this tree puts forth. It is as large as a common plate, and is formed of five circular floral leaves, in the centre of which about seven hundred stamens are grouped. This flower may be said to represent an inclined lilliput-umbrella, and imparts the highest beauty to the tree whose marvelous physiognomy we have endeavored to depict.

The most peculiar distinction which exists between the Baobab and any other plant or tree known, is its longevity.—Adanson had an opportunity afforded him to observe a specimen of it on an Island of the Cape, which bore an inscription made upon it by an English traveler three hundred years ago. This circumstance, connected with his own direct observation and discoveries, furnished him the means of gaining a knowledge of the laws of its growth by which he found, according to Decandolle's communication, the following proportions between the age and the dimensions of the tree, viz:

For a tree 1 year old, 1½ inches in diameter, 15 feet high.

20 years, 1 foot in diameter, 15 feet high.

30 years, 2 feet in diameter, 22 feet high.

100 years, 4 feet in diameter, 29 feet high.

1000 years, 14 feet in diameter, 58 feet high.

2400 years, 18 feet in diameter, 64 feet high.

5150 years, 30 feet in diameter, 73 feet high.

There being specimens in existence 90 feet in circumference, or 30 feet in diameter, this certainly has no equal among plants in respect to longevity, justifying us in denominating it the oldest organic monument on earth.

As we have already stated, there has recently been discovered a second species of the Baobab in the continent of Australia. It has been named Adansonia Gregorii, in honor of that indomitable man of science, Gregory, to whom Australia owes so many valuable natural discoveries. He found it in the north-western part of the continent, where it grows on a section of land covering about one hundred square miles between Glenely river and Arnhemland. This affords another proof of the identity of Australia and Africa in their constituent geological formations, showing them to date from the same period of creation.

Some of the Austrians seem to have been particulary struck at seeing Zouaves come into action with their pipes in their mouths. The German's love for a pipe is of the number of calm delights—a thing to be appreciated when "he beside his cottage door is sitting in the sun"—but a pipe in battle! Innocent German! Incomprehensible Zouave!

A Scotchman named Davis, who resided at Louisville, having had a difficulty with his wife on Tuesday evening, went to the river and "pitched in." The unfortunate fellow was drowned.

[illegible]

The present complications in the European Courts, viewed relatively to the immortality of some imperial and royal personages, are curious enough.

Louis Napoleon, Emperor of the French, is said to have had only a putative father in Louis Bonaparte, King of Holland for a short time, while his real father is reported to be a Dutch Admiral. His principal Minister, in whom he places most implicit reliance, is Count De Morny, whose father was that same Dutchman, while his mother was no less than Hortense Beauharnais, Ex-Queen of Holland. Thus, at any rate, Napoleon III. and Count De Morny have the same mother. The Count, it may be recollected, acknowledged himself father of one of Rachel's children.

Another pillar of the Napoleonic dynasty, is Count Walewski, son of the first Napoleon, by a Polish lady of high rank and much beauty—one of the few persons who remained true to him when he abdicated at Fontainebleau, in 1814.

There has long existed a belief, in Germany, that the present Emperor, Francis Joseph, instead of being son of the Archduke Francis Charles, by the Princess Sophia, of Bavaria, his wife, claims a different paternity. Butler says,

> The child whom many fathers share,
> Will never know a father's care.

Francis Joseph, however, has been well cared for, and was elevated to the Imperial throne of Germany while yet in his teens, on the abdication of the Emperor Ferdinand, his uncle. Viennese gossip has forked out into two channels respecting his birth. One account declares him to be the son of Count Itterberg, ex-Crown Prince of Sweden. This gentleman's real name was Gustavus Vasa, and his father was Gustavus IV., who was deposed in 1818, and died in Switzerland in 1837.—This young Prince traveled through Scotland and Ireland in the year 1820, and eventually entered the Austrian service, where he obtained command of a regiment at Vienna, and a chamberlainship at the Imperial Court. The other putative father of "His Imperial Majesty, Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria," and so forth, is said to be none other than Napoleon II., better known as the Duke de Reichstadt, ex-King of Rome, who died in July, 1832, aged 21. Francis Joseph, it may be recollected, was born in August, 1830.

If this last rumor be true, we have two cousins fighting against each other in Italy—Napoleon III. and Francis Joseph I. —Phil. Press.

The following is a pretty good burlesque on the patent medicine advertisements of the day:

Oil of brickbats and compound unadultered concentrated syrup of paving stones, manufactured only by Dr. Humbugbras Hollowbelly, and sold only by his regular authorized agents. Beware of counterfeits.

"CERTIFICATE."

Dr. Hollowbelly—Dear Sir: I kicked the bucket last night, but while the undertaker was placing me in the coffin, a vial of your Essential Oil burst in his pocket and streamed down into my face—I opened my eyes, sneezed, and then arose. The shroud, having received a portion of the oil, instantly took root in the floor and expanded into beautiful cotton stalks, each filled with bursting pods; the coffin [illegible] end, sprouted forth shoots, and grew into a magnificent mahogany tree, which burst off the roof of my house and wafted into the evening breeze its luxuriant branches, amid which the monkeys chattered and the parrots fluttered their fanning wings. I remain your revived friend,

TIMOTHY TICKLEBERRY.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

SOW MILLET.—As there is some fear of not having a sufficient crop of hay, in parts of the country, it would be a good plan to sow a few acres of millet, especially where buckwheat seed cannot be obtained. The German millet, which is the common kind, will do well sowed any time before the first of August. On fair ground it will yield three tons of good hay, and only requires a peck to the acre. It should be cut when the seed is in the milk, when it will fill out, just as well as if left standing, and it will not be so liable to shell out. The millet hay will be as heavy as sheaf oats, and will make better feed.

CURING CLOVER.—But few persons understand the correct method of curing clover; they proceed with it just as they would timothy or other grasses, when in fact, it requires very different treatment. Treated in the proper way it is far better for hay than when treated as other grasses are in curing. If you would secure the best of hay from your clover, you must not permit it to remain spread upon the ground only long enough for the leaves to become fairly wilted.

Then put it up in small cocks; say three feet in diameter, and four or five feet high. Thus put up, the air will circulate through, and cure it sufficient for the stack.

CULTIVATE YOUR CORN!—A season of drought, such as we are now experiencing, is the time to cultivate corn.—There could be no better corn weather than this. Keep your shovel plows and cultivators moving through your fields, and your labor will be richly rewarded. We speak not only "from the book," but from practical knowledge. In early planted fields, where the blossom and silks are appearing upon the stalks, it may be too late,—but in all the late planted fields we advise farmers to improve the present "golden opportunity" afforded by the drought. Try it, and charge all damages to "the undersigned." We have seen many fields that have been suffering—not from the drought—but from want of cultivation. There never was a crop of corn that was injured by drought, if cultivated. —Ashland Union.

THE WOOL TRADE IN ASHLAND COUNTY.—In the quality as well as the amount, Ashland is largely ahead of any of our neighboring counties. The clip of the present season will probably amount to 220,000 lbs., at an average price of 42 cents per lb., which will bring into the coffers of our wool growers about $92,400. There are few branches of business connected with agriculture as profitable as sheep growing, and we have a county much better adapted to that branch of business than many others that largely exceed our's in the amount invested in the business. Prices paid the present season are about eight cents in advance of those paid last year. The wool clip of the season just closed, has about all been purchased, and as we are informed, has passed more directly than usual into the hands of manufacturers, without the intervention and large per cents of brokers and jobbers. —Ashland Union.

GOOD COWS.—Too high an estimation can scarcely be put upon a perfect cow. The first quality to be attained is a strong physical constitution, and capacity to eat whatever is offered her at all seasons of the year, and yield the greatest return of good milk for family or dairy purposes, from a given amount of food consumed. Without an appetite she is worthless, and nearly so without the faculty of converting her food into a good quality of milk. The latter depends much upon the strength of her constitution to endure our severe climatory changes, and change of diet which occurs often during the milking season.

Indications of such a constitution are a thick, mellow skin, seemingly loose upon the frame or bony structure, with hair silky and soft, corresponding with the texture of her skin; a bright projecting eye, indicating vital stamina to search for and obtain requisite food, requiring more or less endurance in all good grazing districts, and depending much upon the mechanical structure, to combine strength and action. Wide, flat bones, short in the limbs between joints, broad across the loins and hips, deep body, straight back, length and depth of quarters in proportion to those of the body, are indications of strength and power of locomotion. The loin, or the small of the back, is the centre of motion in all four legged animals. It should, therefore, be carefully observed in judging of their strength and power of endurance. The quality of milk is an essential item in estimating the value of a cow for general use. Cheese dairymen usually select cows that yield the largest amount of milk, because they depend more upon the quantity of cheese than its quality, and milk is known to make a good yield of cheese that would make but little butter, and poor at that.

But I am not in favor of the rule of selecting cows that yield the most milk per day or season in arriving at a proper standard of excellence for the best cow. As there is comparatively a small proportion of the cows in the country used for cheese making, to those used for milk, butter, beef and breeding, I am of the opinion that we should put the highest estimation upon the best qualifications for the most general uses.

The quality of milk a cow will give is indicated by hair and skin such as first described, and yellow color of the skin inside of the ears and other parts of the animal not thickly covered with hair. I have never known a cow with soft, fur like hair and mellow skin, appearing yellow and gummy at the roots of the hair when parted with the hands, and rough, dandruffy scoutcheon that was not a good butter cow, and when fattened, would mix tallow well with flesh. Having been accustomed to fatten my cows that failed for dairy purposes by age or otherwise, for many years, and being on the lookout for causes of known results, I have observed that those known to give rich milk, made most thrift in tallow when fed to fatten. Hence the conclusion that cows that handle well in what the butchers call tallow joints, may be judged to give rich milk. The quantity to be judged by a plainly marked design of Nature in her physical structure. As effeminacy is a universal characteristic of a milk-giving race, it should be deemed an essencial one in the cow. Instead of "heavy head, horns, neck and shoulders, and comparatively light hind quarters," which is the characteristic of the opposite sex, she should show an opposite design, by a feminine countenance, light head, neck, shoulders and fore-arm, widening backward in her chest to the loin and hind quarters, where the most strength is required.

Large veins leading to the udder, and ample provision in and about it to receive a large flow of milk, are also prominent marks of Nature's design. Her feminine marks should not point to weakness in her constitution. It may be taken as a general rule, that the more masculine or male-like her appearance, the less apt is she to be a deep milker.

As the qualities of a perfect cow for dairy or family use require thrift and strength of constitution, she will be able to transmit these qualities to her offspring, and she is, therefore, a good breeder. The disposition and mechanical structure of the eye for convenient use in milking are also prominent items in her account of superior excellence. Her limbs should not be so short, nor her bag and teats so long as to be liable to drag against her feet in traveling, or be stepped on in rising from a lying posture, or mop up the filth of the stable, or require an uncomfortable attitude in the milker. A perfect quietude and willingness to be milked, and handled in various ways—standing up from the ground high enough to keep a well spread set of medium-sized teats; clean, sound and easy of access—with soft, mellow, copper-colored teats, milking easy and not liable to chap and land or light udder after being milked, are all essential traits in the character of a perfect cow. As the last estimated value of the cow is with the butcher, her aptitude to fatten and turn out well after being no longer profitable for milk, is to be taken into her credit account.

CLEAN AND DIRTY FIREARMS.—It may be interesting to non-military men to learn something of the effects of clean firearms in the hands of fresh, or of dirty arms in the hands of wearied soldiers, and we accordingly make the following extracts from Forbes' Volunteer's Manual:

"Ordinary muskets, loaded with ordinary powder, cannot be discharged more than seventy-five times without having the barrel cleaned, because it will become so dirty that the ball will no longer enter the barrel, and even the touch-hole will become so foul that it will not communicate the spark to ignite the charge. As the barrel becomes dirty, more muscular efforts are required to drive home the ball, which injures the rotundity of the bullet, causes the hand to tremble, and makes the hand unsteady. The soldiers must recollect that the first twenty shots will do more execution than the remaining fifty-five; therefore, it is most important that those valuable chances be not thrown away by firing these from too far, fouling the barrel and wasting powder." "At the commencement of the fire (the piece being clean,) a soldier in the ranks may calculate that he will discharge one shot per 40 seconds, which is three shots in two minutes. This refers to soldiers in two ranks in their regular places in the company; a picked man firing separately and singly, can do so quicker than it would be possible to do in the ranks. The men could, by hurrying, fire two shots per minute, or even five in two minutes. Since, however, hurry always creates more or less unsteadiness in the loading and aiming, smaller damage is inflicted upon the enemy by a fire averaging five shots per man for two minutes, than by a fire at the rate of three shots in the same period of time."

AMERICAN JOURNALISM.—We believe, says the New York Tribune, there are now printed within the limits of the Union not less than four thousand newspapers, at least five hundred of them daily, and five hundred semi-weekly. Their average circulation we estimate at two thousand each for the dailies, twenty-five hundred for the semi-weeklies, and fifteen hundred for the weeklies, making a total circulation in this contry of more than four hundred millions of newspaper sheets per annum. Yet in 1810—less than a half a century ago—the total circulations of newspapers in this country was estimated by Isaiah Thomas, in his "History of Printing," at only a little more than twenty million of sheets per annum. At that time there were 359 newspapers, of which 27 only were daily. What an advance in less than half a century!

A young lady named Miss [illegible] McPharis, of estimable character, and an exemplary member of the Methodist church, committed suicide at Burlington, Iowa, on Tuesday of last week, by hanging herself while in a desponding state of mind. Her sister committed suicide some four years ago in like manner.

COOKE & TAYLOR.

WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Columbus and vicinity that they have opened a CUSTOM SHOP, and are now prepared to do business in all branches of Tailoring. We earnestly solicit the patronage of our old Customers as well as new ones. TERMS LOW. No. 180 South High street.

jy7-tf

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

FRESH MEATS! FRESH MEATS!!
D. W. HILL,
Columbus Meat Market,
North-East Cor. of Spring and High Sts.

Has constantly choice fresh and salted Beef, Veal, Mutton, Lamb, &c., which his Ice chests enable him to keep sweet in the warmest weather.

Market attended regularly, where his customers will be served with the choicest meats to be procured in the country.

Thankful for the liberal custom he has enjoyed, his endeavors will be to merit its continuation.

June 23.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT,
In the [illegible]
By JOHN O'HARA,
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Every luxury brought to this market, constantly received, and prepared in the most acceptable manner.

He has a French Cook,
Who has had long experience and the best instruction in his business.

The Capitol Saloon,
Connected with the Restaurant, is a favorite resort, and where every variety of wines and liquors are kept of the very best quality.

The cigars have been selected with great care, and are of the choicest most expensive varieties.

June 23.

COLUMBUS
Machine Manufacturing Company,
MANUFACTURERS OF
STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,
CASTINGS,
MILL GEARING,
MACHINERY,
—ALSO—
RAILROAD WORK.

P. AMBOS, Treas. CHAS. AMBOS, Sup't
June 23-tf

E. CORNELISON,
TUNER
AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
[illegible]

Also, particular attention paid to
TUNING AND REPAIRING ORGANS.

Orders left at Seltzer & Webster's Music Store, will receive prompt attention.

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000; Assets $304,000.
Offices 287 Broadway, 60 Wall Street N.Y.

This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.

JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent,
Columbus Ohio.
may26tf

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers.

FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially with Tiles; including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.

A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.

Hints to Horse-keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)

For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

LATEST BOOKS.

Miscellanies. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vestibule. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Steuben.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Caird's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market,
Silks, Chintz,
Delaines, Bareges,
Lawns, Challies,
Robes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles,
Gloves, Cassimeres, &c.

Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.

may 12. J. C. CRITTENDEN.

McCoy's

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE!
CARPENTER'S BUILDING, COLUMBUS, OHIO.
[illegible]

S. I. McCOY - - - Principal.

S. I. McCoy, Teacher of Book-keeping and Practical and Ornamental Penmanship.
Dan'l. Worley, Teacher of Book-keeping, Mathematics and English Grammar.
S. W. Andrews, Esq., Lecturer on the Laws of Business and Political Economy.

TERMS—Payable in advance:

For a full and unlimited course in all the departments, with the privilege of review at the student's option [illegible]. Students taken for a special course by the month, as per agreement.

The principal has received the first premium for specimens of Practical and Ornamental Penmanship at many State and County Fairs, and at the U. S. Fair. He presents to the Public specimens of penmanship, and invites [illegible] and comparison with all others. He also invites the attention of those desiring a business course, to the superior facilities which are prepared to offer students in all the departments necessary of a thorough business-man's training.

Rooms Open Day and Evening.

Send for Circular and Specimen of Writing.
Address, SAM'L I. McCOY,
jy1-tf Columbus, Ohio.

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS,
BLANK BOOKS
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices, supplied with any article, in the line of Stationary, on the best terms, and all Works warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
JOB PRINTING, BOOK BINDING.
A full supply, at all times, of Valuable Standard Works, Foreign and American Editions.
Agents for [illegible]
French, English and American Stationary
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.

Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Fine Mirrors, [illegible]; French Plate; Oil Paintings and Engravings, Portrait and Picture Frames always on hand and made to order; Cutlery and Gold Pens; Work Boxes and Dressing Cases; Card Cases and Porte Monnaies; Hair, Hat, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Pocket-Books, Wallets, [illegible], &c., &c. June 16

New Books.

FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.

VIEWS and [illegible]. By [illegible] Ward Beecher.

ACADIA or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederic S. Cozzens.

BRAGLIFF, or the Mystery of the Westerveldts. By J. W. De Forest.

To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.

Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.

The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.

The empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.

Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Asia, Africa and Europe. By John B. Ireland.

Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland (7 vols., cloth [illegible].)

The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.

Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novelette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.

The New and the Old. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.

Southwold (a Novel.) By Mrs. Lillie Devereux Umsted.

The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.

Works of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt, 4 vols.

Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.

Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.

The Good News of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.

June 28, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

New and Good Books.

DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.

Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law, from 5th London Edition.

Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, New Ed. with additions.

[illegible]

Diary of Lady Morgan.

Home Memories.

Seward.

Sixty Years' Gleanings

[illegible]

The Prize of Fire.

[illegible]

Mothers and Friends.

Freedom and Friends.

Douglas Jerrold.

Aaron's Memoirs.

Life and Travels of [illegible].

For sale at the New Book Store.

J. H. RILEY & CO.

1859.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs

Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.

The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County, 18 miles North of Columbus, (the Capitol of Ohio) on the Scioto River, 16 miles from Delaware, 8 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mount Vernon and Pittsburgh Railroad, and 10 miles from Pleasant Valley or Springs Station, on the Columbus, Piqua and Indiana Railroad.

The medical qualities of these Springs are unsurpassed by those of any other Mineral Waters in the United States.

For Room or other information, address,
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
June 16 White Sulphur Springs, Dup

DESHLER ICE.

Charles G. Deshler is serving his numerous customers with Superior Ice. He attends to its delivery in person; and the ice is not short-weighted, and supplied with Ice throughout the season.

June 23.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs
VIA THE
CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.
To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 4:30 A. M., and 1:20 P. M., daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis' Centre Station, which is situated 22 miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the Springs. For the accommodation of persons wishing to spend the day at the Springs, the [illegible] train stopping at 4:30 P. M. on Saturday, will take passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.

RETURNING.

Cincinnati Express will stop for passengers going south at Lewis' Centre Station, [illegible] A. M., on MONDAY MORNINGS ONLY, arriving at Columbus at 8:30 A. M. The Mail train will stop daily at 4:30 P. M. arriving at Columbus at 6:30 P. M.

Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages in readiness at all times to convey passengers between the cars and the Springs. [illegible]

Tickets for the round trip to the Station and back, during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

For further information and tickets, inquire at the ticket office at the Depot.

JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.
Columbus, June 23, 1859—3m.

PROPOSED
AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the state to vote at the next annual October election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of this State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."

WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.

April 5, 1859.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
COLUMBUS O., April 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly, is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.

A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO,
COLUMBUS, April 12, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correctly recorded in this office.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA.

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Chronic Diseases, and especially for the Cure of Diseases of the Sexual Organs.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in cases of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
may5ly.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Gwynne Block, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of them at hopeless cases, in this city and country, has sufficiently warranted of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio but of the Eastern and Middle States and Canada, where he has practiced.

He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors (who stay but one day in a place, and are the next hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact. Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.

Being naturally inclined to Consumption, Dr. S spent many years in the investigation of a remedy, which under kind Providence, he was at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in all cases, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, trust their lives to the care of [illegible]. Doctors, and [illegible] have them from the grave!

Dr Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.

DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart is the class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable plaster.

Cases given up by others solicited. He will treat none for any of the following he cannot cure:

Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 25,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. All letters addressed to Dr. Stewart, Gwynne House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

jy 1859

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC
CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

mar1

Attention, Republicans!

THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Staunton's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Kinney's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.

CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Cleveland Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10½ a.m., to 12 m. One of KNABE'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a good performer make the saloon one of the best in the city. may18-3m.

SPENCER HOUSE,
By Pratt and Metcalf,
COR. FRONT & BROADWAY,
jy21] CINCINNATI, O.

New Paint Shop.
—O—
THE SUBSCRIBERS ARE PREPARED TO DO
House, Sign, Carriage
AND
Ornamental Painting.

Glass, White, Graining, Papering and Glazing; Sash and Blinds for sale; Paints ready mixed, of all colors; Linseed Oil, Turpentine, Varnishes of all kinds, and Japan for sale.

Shop in Kirk's New Building, rear of the Neil House.

jy21-3m] VAN BUREN & PINKERTON.

The Best Pianos
IN THE UNITED STATES ARE
MANUFACTURED BY WM. KNABE & CO
Of Baltimore, who have always received
THE "FIRST PREMIUM!"
Over "CHICKERING," and all other competitors. No one doubts this, as the facts are too well known.
THAT BASE FALSEHOOD
in J. C. Wood's advertisement is still kept before the public, though
WE HAVE CHALLENGED HIM!
and have the documents to confirm its falsity. If the Chickering agent is unwilling to accept our challenge of A Trial of the Instruments!
and continues his unfair advertisement, we must continue to brand him as
A PERVERTER OF THE TRUTH!!!
[illegible] SELTZER & WEBSTER.

NEW LAW BOOKS.

VOLUME 18 SMITH'S NEW YORK COURT of Appeals.
Vol. 2 Blatchford's Circuit Court Reports.
Vol. 8 Gray's Massachusetts Reports.
Vol. 21 Howard's United States Court Reports.
Vols. 1, 2 and 3 Ellis and Blackburn Queens Bench Reports.
Vol. 8 Ohio Supreme Court Reports.
Parsons's Laws of Business, for Business Men.
Matthews' Guardians' Guide.
Hellmes & Disbrow's Code, Treatise and Forms.
For sale at the New Bookstore.
J. H. RILEY & Co.

N. B.—A full supply of Law Books of the latest editions, always on hand. jy4

POCKET BOOK LOST.

On the morning of the 6th, was lost a pocket book containing one $5 note, Virginia, $1 Ohio, and a $5 on some other bank, together with a number of papers, memoranda, &c. The finder may retain the money for returning the pocket book, at the Fact office, or to the owner at Robbins & Dickmann's.

July 7. JOHN O'HANLON.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.

A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Saloon and Restaurant supplied with the best of everything. June 2.

JOHN H WHEELER,
INSURANCE AGENT,
Notary Public
AND COLLECTOR.
Office 21 High Street, Savage's Block.

First class Fire and Life Insurance Companies represented. All business attended to promptly. [jy18

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathise with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

PREPARED BY
DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
PRICE ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

FOR COSTIVENESS;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA;
FOR JAUNDICE;
FOR THE CURE OF INDIGESTION;
FOR HEADACHE;
FOR THE CURE OF DYSENTERY;
FOR A FOUL STOMACH;
FOR THE CURE OF ERYSIPELAS;
FOR THE PILES;
FOR THE CURE OF SCROFULA;
FOR ALL SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS;
FOR THE CURE OF RHEUMATISM;
FOR DISEASES OF THE SKIN;
FOR THE CURE OF LIVER COMPLAINT;
FOR DROPSY;
FOR THE CURE OF TETTER, TUMORS, AND SALT RHEUM;
FOR WORMS;
FOR THE CURE OF GOUT;
FOR A DINNER PILL;
FOR THE CURE OF NEURALGIA;
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the best aperient in the world for all the purposes of a family physic.

Price 25 cents per Box; Five Boxes for $1.00.

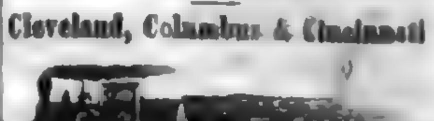
Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

All our Remedies are for sale by

Roberts & Samuels, No. 34 N. High St., Columbus, O.; [illegible]

E. BASSETT LANGDON,
Attorney at Law.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
OFFICE 8 West Third street. [illegible]



WM. DENNISON
-AND-
H. B. CARRINGTON,
Attorneys & Counsellors at Law,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Office, Nos. 1 and 2 Odeon Building. Special attention given to the Law of Patents and Insurance. [illegible]

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route,

Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.
Connecting at Crestline with the
Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad
For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore,
Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.
(Connecting at Cleveland with the
Lake Shore Railroad.
For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sundays) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.

NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 4:30 a. m. Will leave passengers at all stations, south of Galion, stop for passengers at Delaware, Ashley, Cardington, Gilead and all stations North of Galion, connecting at Crestline with the 7:20 a. m. mail train for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 2:40 p. m. Also with mail train of Crestline, with the 9:15 a. m. Express for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at 9:47 p. m. Also at Grafton with Toledo road for Toledo. Arrives at Cleveland at 10:00 a. m.

SECOND TRAIN.

NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at 9:35 a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Lewisburg, Cardington, Galion, Crestline, Shelby, New London and Grafton, arrives at Crestline with the 12:15 p. m. Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at 8:10 p. m. arriving at Cleveland 2:10 p. m., connecting at 2:30 p. m. with the Express on Lake Shore Railroad for the East, arriving at Erie at 5:45 p. m. Dunkirk 8:30 p. m. Buffalo 10:15 p. m. Albany [illegible] a. m. New York 1:20 p. m. next day, two hours ahead of the [illegible] line, Boston 9:00 p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.

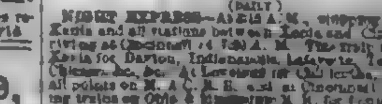
THIRD TRAIN.

EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at 1:30 p. m. stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at 7:30 p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad at Crestline for Chicago arriving at Chicago at 6:41 a. m. At Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston; arriving at Erie 1:30 a. m., Dunkirk [illegible] a. m., Buffalo 6:55 a. m.

Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

RETURNING.

[illegible] Express, arrives at Columbus 1:30 a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at 8:30 a. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at 1:20 p. m.



Fare as low as by any other Route.

For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty Ticket Agent, in the Passenger Depot of the C. C. & C. and L. M. C. & X. Railroads.

E. S. FLINT,
Sup't C. C. and C. Ohio
H. C. MARSHALL,
Gen'l Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent,
Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, May 22, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN.
(DAILY.)

NIGHT EXPRESS—At 2:15 A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati arriving at Cincinnati at 7:30 A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, Athens, and all points on M. & C. R. R.; and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and with mail steamer for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

NO. 1 EXPRESS—[illegible] A. M. stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Morrow, [illegible], Loveland and Milford, [illegible] at Cincinnati at 1:25 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c., &c.

THIRD TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

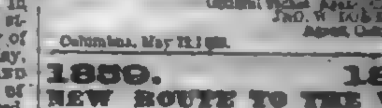
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At [illegible] P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Foster's Crossing, Milford, and Plainville arriving at Cincinnati at 7:10 P. M. connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., &c., and at Cincinnati with evening trains on O. & M. R. R. for Louisville, Vincennes, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAYS.)

MAIL—At 2:50 P. M., stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati; and arriving at Cincinnati at 9:45 P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.

Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express at 2:30 A. M.; No. 1 Express 12:30 p. m. No. 2 Express [illegible]. Accommodation [illegible] p. m.



For further information and Through Tickets apply to M. L. DOHERTY Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.

J. DURAND,
Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER,
General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
JNO. W. DOHERTY,
Agent, Columbus, O.

Columbus, May 22, 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.

Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily.
(Sundays excepted.)

Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL [illegible] Trains will leave Columbus as follows:

FIRST TRAIN.

Leaves at 3:10 a. m., on the arrival of trains from Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Arrives at Indianapolis at [illegible] p. m.

This train connects at Milford with trains for Marysville, also, for Mechanicsburgh, Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati, direct without change of Cars.

Also, connects at Urbana with trains for [illegible] the B. & I. R. R. for Bellefontaine, Forest, Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. Connects at Union for Greenville, at Anderson, and for Kokomo and Peru.

At Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette & Chicago, also with trains for Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis, connecting at St. Louis with Trains and Steamboats for KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.

Also, connects at Indianapolis for Jeffersonville, Louisville, Madison and Peru.

SECOND TRAIN.

Leaves Columbus at 2:30 p. m., on the arrival of trains from Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Arrives at Indianapolis at 11:30 p. m.

This Train connects at Milford for Mechanicsburgh, Springfield, at Urbana with trains north on S. & I. R. R. for Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. At Piqua with trains north on D. & M. R. R. for Sidney, Lima, Delphos, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and at Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette, Chicago, Terre Haute, [illegible] and St. Louis.

THE WAY FREIGHT.

Leaving Columbus at 6:30 a. m. will carry a Passenger Train for the Accommodation of Way Travel.

Be sure to see that your Tickets read Via THE COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE, and see that you do not have Tickets sold you by other and inferior Routes.

Tickets for all Western Routes for sale at all the Principal Rail Road Stations in the East.

E. WALKUP. W. F. GANCE,
General Ticket Agent. Superintendent.
Columbus, Ohio, May 12, 1859.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this Capital, a publication devoted wholly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., The People's Press, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the full of political, scientific news and literary information, necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

The People's Press will inculcate Democratic truths, and its columns shall be characterized by frankness, and honesty; its statements, relied on for their undoubted veracity. [illegible] conscientiously pursue the object [illegible] that of preventing the [illegible] of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the [illegible] of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disruption, which will support every Democratic measure that all the ability it can bring to the duty. We cannot know that it is Democratic and not a false light held up to delude, perhaps to betray)—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy, and the best interests of the party, The People's Press presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and trust every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country, to procure his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into greater detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on a commensurate patronage, I respectfully solicit the [illegible].

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year, [illegible]
A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; [illegible] per cent. on clubs of twenty; 15 per cent. on clubs of thirty, and 20 per cent. on clubs of fifty and upward, paid to agents who [illegible].

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 31, 1859.

N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation by giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME 1. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1859. NUMBER 13.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. SIRWEY MARSHALL - - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising, to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion ... $1.00
Each additional insertion ... 50
One square 3 months ... 5.00
" " 6 " ... 8.00
" " 12 " ... 12.00
One fourth of a column per year ... 30.00
" half " ... 50.00
" column ... 100.00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $10.00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements must be paid for IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular sovereignty.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in its maintainance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one respect, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search, in the vigorous and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay, in the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what must otherwise be inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

The "Organ" on Judge Douglas's Letter.

The Washington Constitution, it appears, is not exactly satisfied with the letter of Mr. Douglas, recently published, defining his position in regard to the Presidential nomination. We are not greatly surprised at this; in fact, we should have been surprised to the verge of downright astonishment, if anything the Illinois Senator could say, under any conceivable circumstances, would be pleasing or satisfactory to the Pennsylvania militia-man, who, with a certain amount of assistance, is popularly supposed to manage the "central organ" at Washington. The manner in which the organ goes about giving expression to its dissatisfaction is rather amusing. The "Little Giant" says that "if the Democratic party shall determine in the Presidential election of 1860 to adhere to the principles embodied in his compromise measure of 1850, and ratified by the people in the election of 1852, and re-affirmed in the Kansas-Nebraska act of 1854, and incorporated into the Cincinnati platform of 1856, as expounded by Mr. Buchanan in his letter accepting the nomination, and approved by the people in his election," he will permit his name to be presented to the convention.

Whereupon the Constitution remarks: "It is certainly not to be expected that the Democratic convention would recede from the principles described in the foregoing quotation from the letter of Mr. Douglas."

Mr. Douglas, too, expresses a strong conviction that the Democratic party will not depart from those principles; and the Senator and the "organ" thus entertain views precisely identical as to the policy which will be pursued. Neither expects or believes that the Democracy will abandon their principles, and we are confident they are right. Yet the expression of this confidence by Mr. Douglas is regarded by the Constitution as an attempt to dictate, and as evidence that treason to the party is meditated by the great champion of those principles! On the same ground the organ is itself in the same position, and liable to like censure.—Toledo Herald.

One of the fiercest Abolitionists in Ohio is a gentleman who sold not only his own slaves, but an estate comprising many slaves and in his haste forgot to pay over the portion of the proceeds due to his mother and his co-heirs, leaving them thereby almost destitute.—Charleston Courier.

The Statesman in Ill Humor.

"Quem Deus vult perdere, prius dementat."

Whom the Gods devote to destruction they first deprive of reason—or a fool rushes on his own perdition—or children should not play with edge-tools, they might cut themselves—or it will never do to take an idiot for a leader in time of battle, for his ignorance of danger may be mistaken for impetuous bravery and precipitate the army upon inevitable destruction.

Thus might the mighty Squire PANZA have strung out his aphorisms even unto the end, illustrating the benevolence of the Deity in beclouding the intellect before he sends his messenger, Death, to bind the victim for the sacrifice, but it is enough that the principle is understood, and shortness of breath to which the obese squire of the redoubtable knight was addicted, may have stopped the excessive flow of proverbs without compelling the knight to place his hand upon his mouth, a piece of rude caution sometimes necessary, but inconsistent with the chivalrous Don's usual courtesy.

These reflections are called up by the predetermined efforts of our self-complacent neighbor of the Statesman to give offense to its own party, in which it is succeeding in a very eminent degree. What advantage it expects to reap from making it appear that the Defalcation Report of [illegible] does not sustain the report made by Mr. SPARROW, we are at a loss to conceive. Everybody knew that the defalcation took place, or was discovered in June—say the middle; and Mr. SPARROW's report was made in July. It will be admitted that he could not be expected to go into the detail which a whole year enabled the others to do. His report was not so long, was not so expensive, does not contain so much repetition on what is irrelevant, but so far as it goes is sustained by the other. We think the whole matter has been disposed of by the people, who know that the money was vilely abstracted, that BRESLIN and GIBSON are both guilty, and that while there is little prospect of its ever being recovered, they have to pay taxes to make up the deficiency. Before any of it is got back, every Republican who had a finger in the pie may become a Democrat—the Statesman MILLER may join his Republican brethren who were Democrats once, and there may be a general change—who knows? Our pay once were content to be dragged through the Lecompton mire, TOM MILLER may be cursed out of the Post-Office for supporting DOUGLAS, [illegible] may achieve a brilliant victory over TOMPKINS and the Zanesville Courier, and all of them swear by Mr. SPARROW, who just at this time is the worst abused man by this clique in the country, because he is what they never can be, above suspicion of his motive, just, honest and capable. Let them go on in their rage, and see what they will come to. [illegible] than ever they had.

The Statesman continues its assaults upon Mr. SPARROW, with an appetite that seems to grow by what it feeds on. It attempts to invalidate his report because it did not establish matters which, however great in themselves, were of minor consideration compared to the bulk of the defalcation, and which in the brief and imperfect investigation which he was enabled to make, he was unable to ascertain. His investigation continued but a few weeks, and we have yet to learn that the subsequent investigation of a whole year, by three select experts, two of whom at least were supposed to have some knowledge of the transactions involving the treasury, with full power over persons and papers, have traversed or shown the fallacy of any part of his report. What is charged about the purchase of the Journal, of the Reservoir loan, and of the [illegible] of bonds, have transpired since, and could not have been known to Mr. SPARROW at the time of making his report, unless these men [illegible] had volunteered testimony which he did not know to exist, and could not have [illegible]. The course of the Statesman must be peculiarly gratifying to its political friends, in the prospect of harmonizing the party, and bringing back the issue to the Treasury defalcation! Is it not all a [illegible] on Mr. SPARROW by the "Great Unwell," who can never forget that he meanly deceived that gentleman while pretending to be his friend?

"We must be more cautious in future. We have the "able and talented" editor of the Statesman excited again; and this, with the mercury up among the nineties, will never do. We fear we shall be complained of for cruelty to dumb animals. The cause of the "able and talented" editor's present disquietude is the simple announcement made by us the other day that when the weather gets cool enough we should ask him to deny a certain charge. If so small a matter as this flurries him so distressingly, what will become of him when we ask him to deny that he was in favor of substituting Judge Swan for Judge Whitman on the Democratic State ticket, in order that we can introduce that "Democratic authority" for the original charge? We fear the consequences, but "duty calls, and we must obey." In the meantime, dear "Colonel," "if you can't be aisy, be as aisy as you can."—Zanesville Courier.

Why don't you "be aisy?" Sure, an' the Col. don't want to be aither bein' plagued wid the likes iv ye! Let the "small matter" alone. He has other things to attend to. Did you not see his "denial" yesterday? He says he wasn't there on any such errand, and did not propose the expediency of substituting the name of SWAN for WHITMAN. Come, Mr. Courier, it is your time, now, with your "sound Democratic authority." It is denied that you have "any authority whatever for the wilful and malicious falsehood," and there is no alternative but to trot out your "authority," of which the public are to judge. It is a "question of veracity, and the longest pole will reach the persimmons."

THE FALL ELECTIONS IN THE SOUTH.—On the 1st of August, Alabama votes for Governor, State officers, and seven Congressmen. Kentucky votes for Governor, State officers, and ten Congressmen. Texas votes for Governor, State officers, and two Congressmen.

On the 4th of August, Tennessee votes for Governor, State officers, and ten Congressmen.

On the 11th of August, North Carolina will choose eight Congressmen.

On the 3rd of October, Georgia and Mississippi choose State officers and thirteen Congressmen.

Maryland will vote for six Congressmen on the 2nd of November, and the elections for the year will close with Louisiana, which will vote for Governor and four Congressmen on the 7th of November.

DOUGLAS IN NEW YORK CITY.—The New York Tribune of Friday has a Washington despatch, dated 21st, which says that information has been received in the last named city, that a majority of the State and City Democratic Committees in New York are for Douglas, and will show their hands at the proper time. This accords with information which was furnished us several weeks ago. There is very little doubt as to how the Empire State will stand at Charleston.

QUESTION OF ANTI-[illegible].—It is asserted by the Washington Constitution, $100,000 has been saved by "[illegible]," which would be the same total, by [illegible] the Democracy?

Who Shall be Representatives.

EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As you are independent of both parties, and seem to wish only the best to be strongest, will you let us say a few words in your columns? We are Democrats, and we think the principles of Democracy are best calculated to promote the welfare and happiness of the people. But we wish that what is Democracy should be properly understood.

We are and shall always be opposed to any man or set of men becoming so large in his or their estimation as to assume the prerogative of dictating who shall or shall not be candidates. At this very time Franklin county is breathless waiting to hear from Postmaster MILLER, who shall or shall not be candidates for representatives. Some have announced themselves, but the number is limited, as men do not wish to come forward unless they are to have a show. Why not vote for RANKIN, and CHANEY at the Primary election, (if we are ever to have one) as they are firm, reliable men, not to be swayed by any "cliques" and [illegible] of the right stripe? We understand that Judge RANKIN will run if his friends desire it. They do desire it. Look around the county, and where will you find a gentleman combining higher qualifications for the position? Last winter some of the finest efforts on the floor of the House were made by Judge RANKIN. His speech in favor of the repeal of the 10 per cent usury law, was an effort of which any man might have been proud. It has been complained that he was not always there—who would have desired to have his dinner cooly bored by being compelled to listen to the eternal chatter of the gambling politicians, who fancied they were sent to the Legislature to hear themselves talk? We want men who will not engage in intrigue merely for MILLER's benefit, nor to send SAM COX to the Senate of the United States. Such we know are Judge RANKIN and Dr. CHANEY. The latter is a modest, unassuming gentleman, who is governed by his own good sense and not by a would-be dictator. His record in the last Legislature was as correct as that of any member on the floor. The interests of the county would not be entrusted to safer or more independent hands. Let us vote for the Judge and the Doctor anyhow, unless they peremptorily decline, because in them we are at least safe from Millerism, under the load of which Democrats can never flourish in this county.

DEMOCRATS OF FRANKLIN.

ED. PRESS:—A legion of Democrats who acknowledge his services, standing, and the necessity of having a man of his coolness and firmness in the position, appeal to their fellow citizen and fellow Democrat, THOMAS SPARROW, to allow his name to be used as a candidate for County Commissioner. They promise him a majority of votes in EVERY TOWNSHIP AND WARD.

To John G. Edwards, Dr. Durant, Geo. E. Converse and John Quinn.

GENTLEMEN:—As you have been either announced as candidates for the Legislature, or expect to be, will you answer a question or two, which we would respectfully propose?

Are you willing that the Cincinnati Platform shall be construed to mean that the people of a territory shall have no power over the question of slavery until they form a constitution to become a state?

Are you in favor of S. S. Cox for the Senate of the United States?

Will you oppose his election to that position? [illegible]

Do you approve the war made on Democrats by the self-appointed directors of the Democratic party for Franklin County?

Would you, under any circumstances, vote for Tom Miller or George W. Manypenny as President of the United States, or Special Commissioner to the Flat Head or Digger Indians?

Please answer these questions, as upon the answers will depend several votes in the FIFTH WARD.

County Matters.

The public mind seems to be very much unsettled as to the candidates, in this county, especially for the House of Representatives. The conventions of the two parties have been postponed until the 3rd September, [illegible] time it is thought a definite and satisfactory arrangement may be made. The Democrats choose their candidates by a primary election by the people, the Republicans by the old-fashioned convention. If the people took their own matters in hand, the former would be the fairer way, but as the thing works, there is not much difference. In the first case, it would be more difficult to work a primary election than a convention; for the numbers are not so limited. But, then, it is not so difficult a task after all, to prepare for even a primary election, and arrange the several wards and townships so as to secure a majority.

It sometimes occurs that the weakest candidates are enabled to secure a nomination, with the plea that all they want is a good vote—they do not expect a nomination. Perhaps some of our Democratic readers have heard of some such transaction, in the course of their travels. But then, that happened where a convention could be juggled into nominating a minority candidate.

It has been suggested that the County Central Committee, ("God save the mark!") which means "TOM MILLER and his, (his man Lawr") have fixed a very late day for the election, so that the Republican Convention should not have the advantage of their nominations; in addition to which, if the Republican Convention should happen to throw overboard any prominent candidate for nomination, a good thing might be made by giving him a Democratic nomination at the primary election. What the "tactical" demonstrations expect to "rehabilitate" by this move puzzles the most skillful Democrats who are not in the secret, but they all conclude it is a Miller trick. We cannot see that any particular good can be expected to result from it, unless it gives a longer time to operate in secret, and buy up certain influences.

The "wigwam" is considerably puzzled however unscrupulous its "schemes" may be. The great chief, reeking with the sanguinary trophies of a murdered sparrow, lately sent to his long home, and whose scalp he displays in imaginary triumph, has still some secret misgivings that all is not well. He wants the longest time, for the maturing of his schemes, and under pretence of a fair start, he causes to be postponed the time of holding the primary election, until the 3d of September, when ploughing will have commenced, and farmers be again busy, instead of having it about the middle of August when there would be comparative leisure.

We shall see what we shall see. But unless the people act for themselves, they deserve to be cheated, and will have no right to complain when it is too late.

American Convention.

The so-called Convention of the American Party (?) was held yesterday at Cincinnati.

The following were the officers: President, Gilbert Kennedy, Montgomery county; Vice Presidents, Joseph N. Snyder, Richland county; Daniel Hillhouse, Ross county, David L. Jennings, Belmont county, Chatfield Walker, Butler county; Alexander E. Glenn, Franklin county, and J. A. Trimble, Highland county. Secretaries, George Stackhouse, Cincinnati, and J. F. Charlesworth, Belmont county.

An address and resolutions were reported and adopted. A resolution that "it was inexpedient to nominate a State ticket was voted down, as was one to call a Convention at Columbus Aug. 18. A good deal of dissatisfaction was expressed by the country delegates, who thought they had been called to the city to do something and were disappointed. The Convention did nothing in reality except expose its weakness.

Chronology of the War.

Some weeks since we gave a synopsis from the New York Times of the principal events of the Italian war, which transpired in the six weeks from its commencement. We are now enabled to furnish, from the same source, the graphic grouping of the events of the remaining five weeks, concluding with peace.

THE SEVENTH WEEK OF THE WAR—THE RETREAT OF THE AUSTRIANS.

June 10.—Garibaldi enters Bergamo—The Austrians evacuate Pavia and Piacenza—The Duchess of Parma arrives at Verona.

June 11.—The Austrians evacuate Lodi—They also evacuate Bologna and Ancona—Resignation of the Derby ministry in England—Lord Palmerston invited to form a Cabinet—Headquarters of the French advanced to Gorgonzola.

June 12.—The vanguard of the French army passes the Adda at Cassano—The Sardinian army passes the Adda at Vaprio—The Austrians complete the evacuation of the Papal Territory, and also withdraw from Modena—Death of Prince Metternich.

June 13.—The Austrians abandon Pizzighettone—Garibaldi at Brescia—Cremona and Brescia declare for the King of Sardinia—The allied army passes the Serio—Gen. d'Urban retires from Coccaglio.

June 14.—The Duke of Modena arrives at Mantua—D'Urban occupies Cavriana, but evacuates it the same night—Revolt at Venice.

June 15.—Garibaldi repulsed by an overwhelming force of the Austrians at Castenedolo—He retreats towards Lonato.

June 16.—Gen. Count Schlick takes command of the Second Austrian army, replacing Gyulai—The Headquarters of Napoleon III. removed to Covo—The Austrian Emperor at Travagliato.

THE EIGHTH WEEK OF THE WAR—PREPARATIONS FOR THE FINAL AND DECISIVE BATTLE.

June 17.—The Austrians occupy Montechiaro and Castiglione—Kossuth leaves London for Italy.

June 18.—The Emperor and King enter Brescia—The Austrians occupy the pass of the Stelvio—The Emperor Francis Joseph reviews a portion of his army at Lonato—He assumes supreme command of the army—The Papal troops, having through the treachery of the Priests, captured Perugia, indulge in a ferocious massacre of the inhabitants.

June 19.—The Third Division of the Adriatic Fleet sails from Toulon.

June 20.—The Austrians abandon Montechiaro, Castiglione, and Lonato.

June 21.—The Emperor and King leave Brescia for the Camp—The Austrians reoccupy Montechiaro and Castiglione—Francis Joseph fixes his head-quarters at Villa Franca.

June 22.—The French pass the Chiese at Montechiaro, and push a reconnaissance as far as Goito—the headquarters of Francis Joseph at Valeggio—Kossuth arrives at Genoa.

June 23.—The French Emperor and the King urge a reconnaissance as far as Desenzano—The Austrians in full force repass the Mincio, and occupy Pozzolengo, Solferino and Cavriana—Tumults at Milan against the Jesuits.

THE NINTH WEEK OF THE WAR—THE BATTLE OF SOLFERINO—THE ALLIES PASS THE MINCIO.

June 24.—Great battle of Solferino; 250,000 Austrians defeated by the Allies, numbering 180,000—The Austrians repass the Mincio—The Allied headquarters at Cavriana.

June 25.—Prussia proposes in the Diet the mobilization of the Federal army—Panic—Retreat of French troops at Brescia.

June 26.—Kossuth arrives at Parma, and after conferring with Prince Napoleon, proceeds to the Imperial headquarters.

June [illegible].—[illegible] portion of Garibaldi's troops, under Major Medici, occupy the pass of Tonal between Val Camonica and the Tyrol.

June 28.—The Allies crossing the Mincio enter the Venetian States.

June 29.—The vanguard of the Allies advances to Villa Franca.

June 30.—The Imperial head-quarters removed to Volta—The corps of Prince Napoleon joins the main body of the allied army at Valleggio—The Sardinians commence the siege of Peschiera—The new British Ministry declares in Parliament its determination to maintain an inviolable neutrality.

THE TENTH WEEK OF THE WAR—REPOSE AFTER THE BATTLE.

July 3.—The Emperor removes his head-quarters from Volta, and crossing the Mincio, fixes them at Valeggio.

July 4.—Ten thousand French troops landed at Lussin-Piccolo, in the Adriatic—Grand Te Deum for the victory of Solferino, in Notre Dame.

July 5.—The Austrians retire from Rovato, after a sharp action, in which they are defeated by Garibaldi.

ELEVENTH WEEK OF THE WAR—THE ARMISTICE AND PEACE.

July 8.—Armistice concluded between the two Emperors at Villa Franca—Zara bombarded by the French frigate Imperatrice.

July 11.—Interview between Napoleon III. and Francis Joseph—The War Terminated by the PEACE OF VILLA FRANCA.

Mexico.

The time has arrived when the United States must do something in earnest towards a settlement of the conflicting elements in Mexico. While attention has been attracted by the brilliant exploits in the Eastern hemisphere, events have been transpiring nearer home, calculated to awaken interest, that deeply concerns us as a nation.

We have recognized the government of Juarez. A treaty has been negotiated by which rights of way authorizing our adventurous vanguard to push into Mexico in pretty much any direction they may please to select; to cross the Southern States at Tehuantepec, and the Northern States from the tortuous Rio Grande to the pearl-y-paved waters of the Gulf of California; to land their wares at the ports of Sonora duty free, and to transport them without toll and in safety to Arizona; protection, armed if necessary, and by American troops if no others can be had, to the several lines of transit; and the liberty of unrestricted and unquestioned worship of God.

In addition to this, there is a readiness on the part of the Mexican government, with which we are negotiating, to form an alliance with the United States of such intimate nature, as to amount in fact to a protectorate, that its disorganized condition may be brought to proper order, and the dissensions be subdued into a regular system of government conducive to the welfare and happiness of the people.

With a matchless climate and productiveness of soil, the revolutions in Mexico, and its distracted condition have brought it to the lowest scale in nations. We should, as Mr. Clay once said, like to see there a splendid Republic, vieing with ours in its great resources and securing the prosperity and happiness of its people.

What will be done by this Administration it is impossible to predict. A glorious opportunity is afforded to do something which may promise peace and tranquility to Mexico, and advantage to this confederacy, but we much apprehend that President-making at home, absorbs more attention than the glory of our name in bringing peace, good government and prosperity to our neighbor.

The Wounded on the Battle Field.

M. Armand, a surgeon of the Fourth French Army Corps, writes to the London Medical Times, after the battle of Ticino, from which we make the following extract:

"After we had disencumbered our ambulances, we carefully explored the field of battle, both to remove any wounded that still might have been left, and to direct the interments. There were but few French still wanting succour, but a great number of wounded Austrians had been abandoned. The proof of the precipitancy of the retreat, or rather flight, of the enemy was the large number of wounded officers they left behind, without any provision for their treatment.

"While traversing the battle-field of Magenta, the saying which had formerly been current with respect to Russian soldiers, that they must not only be killed but thrown down, was brought to mind. A great number of the killed, in fact, retained in part the attitude they were in on receiving their death-blow. Those who had died from injuries of the head usually fell with their face to the ground, and with complete resolution of the limbs. In those wounded in the heart, death, though rapid, is not so instantaneous that some attitude cannot be taken. A Zouave so struck had fallen on his musket, which he held in the position of a bayonet charge, his energetic face projected forwards, with the menacing attitude of a dead lion. Not far off, as a contrast, lay an Austrian who had died of hemorrhage; and in his agony he had taken the attitude of supplicating Heaven—his face turned upwards, and his two hands joined with fingers firmly interlaced. A Hungarian hussar killed at the same time as his horse, both being shot through the head, remained in his saddle, carrying the sabre forward as during a charge. Some of the Austrian officers found among the slain exhibited a distinguished physiognomy, and were dressed with exquisite, almost affected neatness and cleanliness—their features, very different from those of most of their soldiers, seeming to exhibit courage with resignation. Such were some of the impressions made upon us while traversing the field of battle, giving rise to painful emotions, little calculated to dissipate those produced by still more dreadful scenes within the ambulances, the receptacles of suffering of every kind. Physical fatigue is great indeed, but so also is the moral exhaustion of the surgeon; and great is the error of those who think his heart is hard, and that his impassibility is the result of indifference.

"In our ambulances, calmness and resignation distinguished the wounded. To their honor be it said, the soldier with severe and often fatal wounds restrained their complaints, and patiently awaited their turns. Groans and murmurs were rarely heard. The stoicism of courage, proud in its wounds, was the general rule. The railway to Milan, which the enemy had not time to destroy, was of immense service in transporting the wounded to the hospitals of that city."

Position of the French Army before the Armistice.

A letter from Villeggio of the 4th of July says:

"It appears that the Austrians are before us, only two and a half miles distant. After the defeat of Solferino, they crossed the Adige, but they have since returned towards us. They have, it is said, received fresh troops, and are now 300,000 strong. Marshal Neil holds the advanced posts of the French army. The day before yesterday he signified to the Emperor this offensive movement of the Austrians, and even thought that he should be attacked yesterday morning. He, in consequence, evacuated Villa Franca, which did not appear to him to be tenable, and fell back on the main body of the army. Half an hour after the departure of the French from Villa Franca, the Austrians arrived and established themselves. Many French officers attached to head-quarters had already got a lodging at Villa Franca. I was of the number, and I have now in my pocket the billet given to me by the authorities of the town. The Emperor, on being informed of what was going on, sent Marshal Vaillant to make a reconnaissance. The Marshal returned at night, and his Majesty, on the fresh information received gave orders, as already stated, to have his horse ready for four o'clock in the morning. The Austrians have not, however, made any attempt to attack the corps of Marshal Neil, and the Emperor has not quitted the Massi Palace, where he had taken up his residence, and the battle is postponed."

The Richmond Enquirer on the President.

In times gone by, but by no means distant, the Statesman was wont to quote from the Richmond Enquirer with great gusto, as one of the unchanging and unalterable Democratic papers that in every contingency "hewed close to the line." A recent number of the Enquirer has arrayed the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN as derelict to Democracy. We take a specimen brick for the Statesman's consideration, and would like to know what our neighbor thinks of it?

"If this Administration is entitled to dictate the interpretation, then the Cincinnati platform must be regarded by every fairminded man as the most extraordinary concatenation of blue-light Federalism, Know-Nothingism, Black Republicanism, shuffling evasion and vacillation, which ever marked the record of a political party."

How does the Statesman account for that? Does it not come at a good time when the President has just been re-nominated by the Pittsburgh Post? But then some think the Post was joking.

GOV. WISE AND THE ADMINISTRATION.—The Richmond Enquirer, the leading organ of the Virginia Democracy, and an earnest supporter of Gov. WISE for the next Presidency, has come out in fierce denunciation of Mr. Buchanan's Administration. The article in the Enquirer undoubtedly expresses Gov. WISE's sentiments, and we may consider it as an open declaration of war on his part. The provocation is the hostility manifested by the Administration, through its organ at Washington, to Gov. WISE, as a Presidential candidate, and the Enquirer certainly commences the war with a spirit and impetuosity which argues a determination to give no quarter. It accuses the Administration of a desire to dictate to the party, of having departed from the Cincinnati Platform, and of attempting now [illegible] that platform. It says:

"We will have the Cincinnati platform as it is, uncontaminated by the interested dictation of any selfish interest, and least of all by the dictation of such an Administration as that which now presides at Washington, and whose entire course for the last eighteen months has been the occasion of a series of unprecedented disasters to the Democratic party; an Administration which has deserted every political [illegible] which it once possessed, and has incurred the just contempt of its enemies within and without the Democratic party."

"Occasional" writes to the Philadelphia Press:—"It appears that the article in the Pittsburg Morning Post, nominating Mr. Buchanan for the Presidency, was intended less as a compliment to him than as a threat to the office holders in the western part of your state. A gentleman now here, from Pittsburg, says that the editor of the Post laughs heartily at his own article, and is no more sincere in it than any other man of sense might be expected to be who attempted the stupendous task of putting Mr. Buchanan before the people as a candidate next year. That it will tickle Mr. Buchanan, however, there can be no doubt."

WOOL GROWERS' CONVENTION.—The Wool Growers' Convention takes place on the 4th and 5th of August. We understand that the necessary arrangements have been made for the Convention, which will doubtless be a successful affair.

A FREE RIDE.—On the arrival of the night train at Zanesville, a few days since, a lad was found perched on one of the trucks of the cars. On being interrogated, the account he gave of himself was, that he had ridden all the way from Wheeling in that manner, and had hoped to reach Columbus by the same means.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

SACKVILLE, N.B., July 27.—Letters from Paris note much discontent there concerning the terms of peace, although peace itself gave satisfaction. The Paris Siecle objects to the Austrian influence still suffered to remain in Italy, and calls for the expulsion of the petty Italian princes who are but confederates of Austria.

Napoleon, on his arrival in France, would proceed direct to St. Cloud, deferring an official entre at present, till he makes it at the head of the army.

The Emperor and the King of Sardinia entered Turin on the 15th, amid enthusiastic acclamations of the people.

An Austrian correspondent officially announces the conditions of the treaty of peace thus:

Austria and France will support the formation of an Italian confederation. Lombardy, as far as the line of the Mincio, to be given up. Mantua and Peschiera; and Venitia to remain in the Austrian possession. The Princes of Tuscany and Modena to return to their States. A universal amnesty is granted.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says, three applications were made by Napoleon to Austria before she would consent. Overtures were made direct by Napoleon for the purpose of preventing the mediation of neutrals.

The Pope was burned in effigy at Milan, and unfriendly feeling existed between Napoleon and Victor Emanuel. The latter had issued a proclamation to the people of Lombardy, announcing their annexation to Sardinia, according to his own desire, many times expressed, and his determination to ameliorate their political condition. Emanuel entered Milan on the 13th, amid the enthusiastic plaudits of the citizens.

It is rumored that the Emperor and Empress of France would visit Vienna.

It is reported the French army commenced a countermarch, though it is probable a dismissal of Cardinal Antonelli would follow.

It is rumored that Garibaldi would issue a proclamation. It is considered doubtful whether he would lay down his arms.

The formation of the Hungarian legion had proceeded prosperously, 5,000 having joined.

A letter from Rome says the Pope sent an autograph letter to Napoleon, announcing his determination to demand an armed intervention from the Catholic powers.

ENGLAND.—The House of Commons passed to a second reading a bill abolishing church rates, by a vote of [illegible] to [illegible]. Both Houses discussed the treaty of peace. In the Commons Lord Russell, in answer to an inquiry, said nothing was known or could be known as to the details of the treaty till Napoleon returned to Paris, which would be about the 18th.

Sir James Graham called attention to the formidable French fleets at Cherbourg and Brest, together with gun boats for landing troops. Sir John Russell said the French had made no extraordinary preparations, therefore England had demanded no explanations.

Orange riots on the 12th of July occurred in various parts of Ireland. Also at Paisley, where affairs became serious, knives and fire arms were used. One man was killed and several wounded dangerously.

It was reported at Paris on Friday, that great agitation prevailed in Milan; that troubles had arisen in Venitia; that Florence was disturbed, and that the Parisian populace was indignant at the Emperor for failing to fulfill his promise.

The statement of the Bank of France shows a decrease in cash of over eleven millions francs.

Switzerland has ordered a disbandonment of the troops called out during the war.

The papers were mainly engaged in speculations upon the sudden conclusion of peace, and its results.

The Siecle, the organ of the French liberals, is dissatisfied, and says France will have everything to begin in a few years, if the minutest Austrian influence is suffered to abide in Italy. It calls for the expulsion of the petty Italian princes, the confederates of Austria.

The interview between the Emperors at Villa Franca is said to have lasted nearly three whole days. The Augsburg Gazette alleges that the cause of the armistice was the existence of a dangerous malady in the French army, but to this we can give no credit. The sanitary state of the French army is excellent and exceeds even the hopes which could be entertained from the heat and fatigue endured.

SACKVILLE, N. B., July 27.—The [illegible] from Galway has arrived, with the dispatches furnished by the arrival of the Europa. Her dates are to Saturday, the 16th inst., three days later than received previously.

The following are the principal items of news:

The steamers Saxonia and Kangaroo arrived out on the 13th. The Ocean Queen touched at Southampton on the 14th, and the Persia on the 16th.

The treaty of peace is fully confirmed, but no further particulars have transpired beyond the fact that the Princes of Tuscany and Modena are to return to their States.

The result of the treaty is generally unfavorable in England. The Emperor Napoleon was on his way home; he was expected to reach Paris on the 18th inst., when further details will probably be announced. In his address to the army he says that the peace was concluded because the contest was about to assume proportions no longer in keeping with the interests France had in the war.

The Emperor of Austria had left the army, and was on his way to Vienna. He had issued an order of the day, in which he says alluding to the treaty of peace, that he yielded to the unfavorable political situation in which he was placed, because his natural allies did not, as was expected, come to his assistance.

Count Cavour and the Sardinian Cabinet had resigned, and it is reported that the reasons for this step were on account of the terms of peace being unsatisfactory. Count Arese has been charged with the formation of a new cabinet.

LIVERPOOL, July 16.—Sales of cotton for the week amount to 107,000 bales; and the prices have advanced from 1/8d to 1/4d since Friday. Breadstuffs exhibit a declining tendency; there is little inquiry and prices continue weak. Provisions are also very dull. Pork is heavy and all qualities have slightly declined.

LONDON, July 16.—The Bank of England has reduced the rate of discount to [illegible] per cent. Consols are quoted at [illegible].

Telegraphic Dispatches.

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 29.—John J. Jones has been nominated as a candidate for Congress, by the Democratic District Convention, in place of Hon. A. H. Stevens resigned.

A fire occurred at Jacksonville on the 17th, destroying property to the amount of $20,000; the Buffington House and nearly an entire block of buildings were burnt.

ST. LOUIS, July 26.—Doctor Doy, under sentence in St. Joseph jail for alleged kidnapping, was rescued on Sunday morning during a violent storm, and is still at large. There was great excitement at St. Joseph on the announcement of the escape. Pursuit was attempted, but without success.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The New York Times' Washington correspondent says the draft of a treaty just concluded by Hon. Robert McLane to be presented to our government contains provisions of the very highest importance to this country. I am fortunately enabled to furnish you with a summary of its most striking stipulations which are as follows:

First—Rights of way across the Northern States between the Rio Grande and ports on the Gulf of California with guarantees for their protection and safety.

Second—Rights of way and valuable privileges of transit secured to the American company holding the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

Third—The privilege of erecting and maintaining warehouses at the termini of the several transit routes.

Fourth—The right of transporting troops and munitions over such routes and to send troops to protect them in default of Mexico falling that duty.

Fifth—Free entry and transit of goods belonging or consigned to American citizens to Arizona through the ports of the Gulf of California and across Sonora.

Sixth—Entire and unquestionable freedom of religious opinion and religious worship throughout the Republic.

Seventh—A clause indicating the willingness of the Mexican government to accept a modified form of protectorate at the hands of the United States. In other words, to consummate another treaty to form, one of alliance offensive and defensive but in substance creating a protectorate whenever the United States shall signify its willingness to enter into such engagement.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Herald's money article says: The restoration of peace in Europe, the most important event that has happened since the war broke out, produced little or no effect in commercial or financial circles here to-day. The news caused the French funds to advance 2½ per cent., the British 1, and other foreign stocks in proportion; but in New York neither merchandize, nor stocks, nor money, nor exchange, have been perceptibly affected. No doubt the season of the year, which is proverbially dull for speculative movements, is in a measure the cause of the prevailing apathy. Something is also due to the complete sway which the bears exercise over the Stock Exchange, and which for the present paralizes the action of that body. It may be doubted whether dull indifference will prevail in all monetary and commercial circles [illegible] can be of long duration.

The Post says: [illegible] appears most unsatisfactory for two important interests, the western trader and the importer, yet there is of course much reason for congratulation that the agitation of European war is removed from the financial system, permitting a wider action of credit here, the essential condition of prosperity of the aggregate. Few can doubt that whatever may be the temporary advantage to the west [illegible], ever slow the recovery from embarrassment, the termination of the war will greatly promote business interests and establish a better state of things generally.

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—The New York Herald, in an Editorial on the effect of the peace on the commercial interests, says: It may be of serious import to this country if we do not meet them calmly and with foresight, viewing the results of the war and its sudden termination in the same aspect with the results of the Crimean war, attended as they are with failure in the breadstuffs and provisions speculations, and with a reckless speculation in imports. They are not without menace to our commercial affairs. The close of the present war leaves us in imminent danger of another unless we do not exercise the utmost caution to avert it. But in one respect the war has benefited us, it has increased the Government revenue considerably at a very opportune moment.

CRESTLINE, July 26.—A collision occurred last evening at Lima, Ohio, between a passenger train on the Dayton and Michigan Railroad and Express train on the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne, Dayton and Chicago. The trains were both approaching Lima station, and came together at the crossing of the two roads. One man standing on the station-house platform was crushed to death between the building and a car, and the P. Ft. W. & C. engineer slightly injured. No one else hurt. The two trains were badly smashed up.

NEW YORK, July 26.—It is said that the New York Railroad managers hope Mr. Garrett's agent will be agreed to the proposition for an increased rate on freights. The New York Central agrees to put up all classes of freight if the Baltimore and Ohio Road abates part of its water rates. An answer is expected to-day. The rates to be binding.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The steamship Moses Taylor has arrived, with California mails of the 5th inst. She brings $2,140,000 in gold, among the principal consignees are the following: Messrs. Wells, Fargo & Co., [illegible]; American Exchange Bank, $120,000; A. Belmont, $180,000; E. Kelly & Co., [illegible]; W. T. Coleman & Co., $60,000; Duncan, Sherman & Co., $90,000, Freeman & Co., [illegible].

The U. S. Frigate Roanoke was at Aspinwall.

Much excitement had been occasioned on the Isthmus on account of the discovery of large quantities of golden images and gold in the Indian graves in the Chiriqui district. Many hundreds had gone thither to prosecute the search, and already several thousand dollars worth have been received at Panama.

The Moses Taylor left Aspinwall on the 19th inst.

A serious disturbance occurred at Aspinwall on the 2nd of July, occasioned by a scurrilous article published in the News, a sheet published at that place, reflecting on some of the Railroad employees. The printing office was entered by the mob and the presses and all the printing materials thrown into the sea. During the disturbance the proprietor of the News attempted to defend his office, and several shots were fired upon the assailants, resulting in killing one man and wounding two others.

Horatio Lyon, the proprietor of the paper, and three printers, named Fredd, Levy and [illegible], were arrested.

COSTA RICA.—The advices from Costa are to the 8th inst.

Nothing of special importance had transpired. The harvest was over. Coffee rated at 12 and 13 cents.

SOUTH AMERICA.—The advices from Valparaiso are to the 16th and Callao to the 27th of June. The new French ship Malamoque had been wrecked on the Araucanian Coast on the 15th of May. The captain, eight sailors and one passenger perished. The entire cargo was plundered by the savages.

The accounts from Peru state that the Revolutionary movements of Col. Zevallos were continued. Castilla had issued a general amnesty to all soldiers and private parties who partook in the Revolution, provided they report themselves ready to sustain the Government by the end of July.

Castilla had also determined to declare war against Equador and proposed leading his forces in person.

ST. LOUIS, July 27.—The Overland Mail, with dates to the 4th, arrived last night. Drew & Co., distillers, and Sease & Co., millers, have failed.

The steamer Washington was detained at St. Catherine three weeks and the Federal Officers nearly two months on account of the revolution and their inability to obtain coal.

When the Washington left the revolution in Valparaiso was about ended and business improving.

William J. Bopper, of Long Branch, New Jersey, was murdered by the Peons in Corumal.

The Washington was libelled at San Francisco for money due for supplies.

A fire at San Francisco destroyed nearly all the buildings on Davis street between Broadway and Vallejo, also the wharf fronting Davis street. The loss is not stated.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A letter received from Mr. Forney, Superintendent of Indian affairs in Utah, states that two of the children who were spared from the Mountain Meadows massacre have been detained by the United States' District Attorney of the Territory as witnesses against certain white men who are strongly implicated in the commission of that crime. The other children will arrive at Leavenworth about the 15th of August, where Wm. C. Mitchell, whose two sons and their wives were among the murdered emigrants, will receive and return them to their friends in Arkansas. The measures for their recovery were taken by Mr. Mix, the former commissioner, and Mr. Greenwood has zealously consummated that benevolent purpose.

Majors Whiting and Emmons, Capts. Tyler and Campbell, and Lieut. Elwood, are on their return to the States on leave of absence.

The public lands advertised to be sold in Minnesota from the 1st to the 24th of October, embrace the Government alternates within the six mile limits of the railroad grants, and the pine lands of the northeast portion of that State, consisting of 1,800,000 acres.

FAIRMONT, ILL., July 27.—A German, named Peter Arndt, near Cedarville, in this county, killed three of his children with an axe yesterday afternoon, and wounded the fourth so badly that it is not expected to live. He made no resistance when arrested, and assigns no reason for the murder.

BOSTON, July 27.—The steamer Canada sailed this morning for Liverpool via Halifax. She takes 66 passengers for Liverpool and 19 for Halifax, and $385,000 in specie.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—A severe thunder storm passed here yesterday afternoon. Several unfinished cabinets in the northern part of the city were damaged and many cellars flooded by water. A flock of 83 sheep belonging to A. J. Burns, of Wayne County, O., was killed by lightning while gathered beneath a tree during the storm.

BEDFORD, PA., July 27.—The Bedford Gazette to-day's issue publishes an article authoritatively declaring that President Buchanan will not be a candidate for renomination by the Charleston Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, July 26.—A journeyman tailor, named Gallow, supposed to be insane, this afternoon made a furious assault with a large pair of shears on a fellow [illegible] inflicting a wound supposed to be fatal. He afterwards attacked two other persons, who were severely wounded, before he could be secured.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar, and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unswerving, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

CHEAPEST IN THE STATE.

THE

CAMPAIGN PRESS,

PUBLISHED AT COLUMBUS, OHIO,

Will be sent to subscribers at the Low Rate of

25 Cents Each!!

until after the October Election, being the CHEAPEST CAMPAIGN PAPER in the State. This will enable the

CAMPAIGN PRESS

to reach all classes, and entitle it to

A Most Extensive Circulation.

20 Copies for $5!

☞ Our friends of the press in this State will please give this a few insertions or call attention to the fact.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

July 21st, 1859.

Democratic Meetings.

At the recent meeting of the State Central Committee in this city, the following appointments were made, commencing the canvass in the North West and the Southern counties at the same time:

Hon. Geo. E. Pugh and Gen. Joseph H. Geiger will address the people as follows:

Batavia, Clermont Co., Monday, August 15.
Georgetown, Brown Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Hillsboro', Highland Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Washington, Fayette Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Wilmington, Clinton Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

Wm. H. Safford, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Major D. W. Stambaugh, of Tuscarawas County, will address the people as follows:

Toledo, Lucas county, Saturday evening, August 13th.
Bryan, Williams Co., Monday, Aug. 15.
Defiance, Defiance Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Paulding, Paulding Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Napoleon, Henry Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Okokee, Fulton Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Perrysburgh, Wood Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.
Port Clinton, Ottawa Co., Monday, Aug. 22d.
Fremont, Sandusky Co., Tuesday, Aug. 23d.
Tiffin, Seneca Co., Wednesday, Aug. 24th.
Findlay, Hancock Co., Thursday, Aug. 25th.
Kenton, Hardin Co., Friday, Aug. 26th.
Upper Sandusky, Wyandott Co., Saturday, Aug. 27th.

By Order of the State Central Committee.

The Negro Law—The Record.

As a good deal has been, and will be, said of the law passed by the last Legislature, in conformity to a provision of the Constitution, which confines the right of suffrage to the white male citizens of the United States, we publish the law for the public benefit. It will be found on the 129th page of Laws of Ohio, 1859:

AN ACT to prescribe the duties of judges of elections in certain cases, and preserve the purity of elections.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the judge or judges of any election held under the authority of any of the laws of this State, shall reject the vote of any person offering to vote at such election, and claiming to be a white male citizen of the United States, whenever it shall appear to such judge or judges that the person so offering to vote has a distinct and visible admixture of African blood.

SEC. 2. Any judge or judges of any such election, who shall receive the vote of any person when such person has a distinct and visible admixture of African blood, shall, on conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, nor less than one hundred dollars, and imprisoned in the county jail of the proper county not more than six months, nor less than one month.

SEC. 3. Any person who shall procure, aid, assist, counsel or advise another to give his vote at any such election when such other person has a distinct and visible admixture of African blood, shall on conviction thereof be fined in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, nor less than fifty dollars, and be imprisoned in the county jail of the proper county not more than six months nor less than one month.

SEC. 4. All persons shall be under this act shall be tried, indictment in the court of common pleas of the proper county, and it shall be the duty of the judges of the court of common pleas to give this act specially in charge to the grand jury at each term of the court.

SEC. 5. This act shall take effect from and after its passage.

WILLIAM B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.

April 9, 1859.

We referred to this statute in a former issue of the PEOPLE'S PRESS, when referring to a decision of Judge Foote, of Cleveland, that this law was unconstitutional, a similar decision having been given by Judge Carpenter, of Lorain. It is understood that these decisions were pronounced upon the hypothesis that the Supreme Court of Ohio had decided, under the old Constitution, that the word "white" denoted those of the colored race in whom, in the blending of races, the white admixture predominated, as well as those of pure white extraction—that this construction of the former constitution settled the question as to the meaning of the term "white" as employed in that instrument, and determined it for all time to come—that this being the accepted definition of the term "white," the law, which we publish, abridging the rights of those already declared "white," (and the new, or present constitution, fixing the basis of suffrage on the term "white,") is unconstitutional.

The sophistry of such argument is very plain, and shows how far the ermine may be used to carry out a favorite design—the design of NEGRO EQUALITY WITH THE WHITE RACE!

The phraseology of the present Constitution differs from the former, and the difference is marked. The former Constitution conferred suffrage upon "white male inhabitants," while the present restricts it to "white male citizens of the United States." The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that a negro, or a mulatto, or a cross of mulatto and white, cannot be a citizen of the United States; and the reason is obvious. In a portion of the United States these persons are held as slaves; and have no legal rights, and are dependent upon the protection of the laws. Each State sovereignty may confer State citizenship on whom it pleases, in conformity to its own Constitution; but beyond its boundary the power ceases. Ohio cannot confer citizenship on a negro, or one of African descent, unless a change be first made in its organic law, which distinctly says that to be a voter, one must be a "white male citizen of the United States." The construction then of the former Supreme Court of Ohio of what constituted a "white male inhabitant" does not apply to a "white male citizen of the United States."—The qualifications of a voter in Ohio must not only embrace the term "white," but the fact that he is a citizen of the United States. Else why, when the foreign born white citizen presents himself at the polls, is he required to produce his naturalization papers? For no other reason than to comply with this provision of the State Constitution, and prove that he is a "white male citizen of the United States." If his right to exercise the elective franchise depended solely upon his color, he might dispense with his papers altogether. It is therefore, apparent that the Constitution of Ohio, in the phraseology of the section, altered materially from that which was in operation at the time of the decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio, does not regard a negro, or one of African descent, who is not and cannot be a "white male citizen of the United States," under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, as entitled to the elective franchise. The law of the last Legislature is, therefore, constitutional, and must be so regarded until determined otherwise by the highest tribunal known to our laws.

But why is the effort made to ignore this law and set it aside? It is to establish the right of the African to vote! It is to carry out the Republican doctrine of Negro Equality. It is to break down the barrier of races, and call to the polls a valuable ally in the mixed race, which, under Republican auspices, must now number in this State several thousand. We have heard it denied that it was sought to place the negro upon a footing with the white race, but that "Negro Equality" merely meant equality among that race. This idea is exploded by the action of Republican Judges, who declare that a negro who has been crossed twice is entitled to vote, but that a single cross with the white race will not suffice. This is "Negro Equality" with a vengeance. It produces classes and castes among the negroes themselves which may make some of them very miserable to think that they are excluded from privileges which their companions and relatives enjoy at will. Now it is a step, and a bold one, to that political equality which is but the precursor of social equality or a unity of the races.

Who are the advocates of this scheme of amalgamation? Look at the record of the last Legislature. See where stood the Democrats and where the Republicans on the passage of this identical law:

VOTE IN THE HOUSE.

YEAS—Andrews, Bagley, Bates, Bigony, Blackburn, Brooke, Carlisle, Chase, Chaney of Franklin, Clark, Collins, Cox of Perry, Cowan, Dubmeyer, Edmo, Finefrock, Fraser, Gibson, Glasgo, Green, Hitch, Hughes of Butler, Hughes of Highland, Jackson, Jenner, Johnston, Leete, Marshall, Morse, Mott, McEwan, McFerran, Odell, Paine, Parr, Pikelheimer, Pittman, Ralston, Rea of Guernsey, Ray of Scioto, Richardson, Robinson of Hamilton, Rogers of Hamilton, Rose, Sedan, Sangster, Sener, Stumer, Stout, Thompson, Waugh, West of Brown, Westcott, Williams of Monroe, Williams of Warren, Wilson, Winner, Wright and Speaker—59. All Democrats except Williams of Warren.

NAYS—Allen of Ashtabula, Allen of Jefferson, Bailey, Ball, Blair, Brown, Cox of Knox, Drwes, Day, Denning, French, Fernald, Gardner, Gatch, Harmaker, Hitchcock, Hubbell, Jones, Kerr, Laughlin, Monroe, McCreary, Peck, Plants, Raymond, Rees, Roseb, Robinson of Union, Rodgers of Clark, Simmons, Sperry, Stephens, Townsend, Van Vorhes, Watson, Welsh and Worthington—37. All Republicans.

VOTE IN THE SENATE.

YEAS—Cantwell, Cass, Chapman, Corwine, Hatch, Kincaid, Langdon, Merrow, Murdock, Parker, Perrill, Phelps, Reid, Safford, Shideler, Scheick, Smith, Thomas, Vanatta and Westcott—20. All Democrats.

NAYS—Ashburn, Beckland, Canfield, Card, Gatch, Green, Henkle, McCleary, Miles, Slade, Taylor and Winner—12. All Republicans.

But one Republican was found in both chambers, who was willing to maintain the constitutional provision which excluded negroes from the privilege of voting!

Why was the law deemed necessary? Because it was held by some Judges of Election that there was no statute upon the subject, and the practice under the old Constitution, and decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio still obtained. The Constitutional provision was set at naught by Republican Judges who could not separate and distinguish the rights of a white citizen from those of a negro, and thus the law of election was made to operate unequally in different parts of the State. The necessity of the statute is obvious—its enforcement a plain and unavoidable duty.

We do not say that negro equality is inculcated by all Republicans, but it is the inevitable policy of their doctrines—it is a calamity which their success will inaugurate, and which can alone be averted by sustaining the Constitution and Laws as interpreted by the Democratic Party.

Don't Express an Opinion.

The Ohio "Statesman," which, for its own private reasons, does not wish to take sides, gave the cue, on the publication of Mr. Douglas's letter, that the Presidential question in this State was to be ignored, or at least postponed until after the State election—time enough to think of that a year hence!—and the non-committal policy was caught up by a few such miserable sabers as Harper's "Mt. Vernon Banner," which were willing to tie themselves to the nominee of the Charleston Convention, no matter who he might be, or on what principles nominated. Such subordination is very good in an army or upon a southern plantation, where negroes are made to bow to the will of their master; but it is anti-Democratic and unmanly in a freeman. It is rather an evidence of baseness than faith and confidence, when the creed of the party is assailed by pretended friends, and an interpretation given it, upon which no Ohio Democrat would be willing to stand, who has a spark of the old fire in his composition. There are some papers which have been entrapped in this cunning snare, that do not fairly and properly belong to the cave lettered. Each and every one of them will feel the force of this when appealing to his own conscience and examining the facts.

It is the proper province of the newspaper press to strive to impart the truth, to advocate what is right and condemn what is wrong; to endeavor to preserve a healthy opinion in the community, and not to mystify and misdirect that opinion. To be silent when the great chart which is to guide and direct our councils is sought to be destroyed by interpolations and heresies that involve error and must lead to inevitable ruin, is criminal. So feel the public press generally, and it is speaking out with a voice of thunder through the land, and in tones that are not to be misunderstood.

Listen! as they roll through the Piney Woods of the South, and the Green Mountains of Vermont, and Granite Hills of New Hampshire reverberate the sound! Can that voice be suppressed? The pent-up feelings must have utterance, and the great popular heart is throbbing now, as the effort is being made to stifle its voice, and it will be heard.

"Don't express an opinion on the Presidential question?" Let the day take care of itself! Time enough for that hereafter! Was there ever any thing so monstrous? When the enemy are abroad, to draw in the pickets, send the patrol to their quarters, lull those who otherwise might be on the alert, must be considered the height of discipline!

We say speak out now—let your voices be heard—swell the proud peal for "DOUGLAS and VICTORY" that is ringing now from one end of the Union to the other.

The Baseness of the Statesman Exposed.

The obligation a man owes to his party depends on the obligation he acknowledges to his own conscience. He may be an excellent party man TO FOLLOW, if he have no conscience, but a dangerous man TO LEAD. There can be no party obligation which requires a man to ignore his sense of right, of justice, of truth, of honesty. Party no more insists that a man shall be a traitor to himself and to truth, than does the Bible demand that he shall bear false witness against his neighbor.

We have been misrepresented by the Ohio "Statesman," under its present management, in a way, that leaves no doubt of its intentional falsehood. To us, the motive is apparent. It has employed every art, even to downright fabrication, to the most barefaced misrepresentation, to convey the idea that we are, and have been, faithless to the Democracy; when in no single instance have we permitted personal friendship, or dislike, or any other influence to cause us to swerve from the straight path of duty to our party. As an editor, we do as we would be done by; nor do we seek to gain for our party a temporary advantage by some miserable subterfuge, or to place an opponent in a false position, alike forbidden by candor and honesty.

We do not consider politics a mere game, to be gained by the more adroit shuffler of the cards. Nor do we regard them, in the light of a case at law, where feed counsel are presumed to have the liberty to twist and misconstrue evidence, to mystify a jury, or draw conclusions not warranted by the facts. As the mere pettifogger is looked upon as contemptible, from his proneness to quibble, the editor who forfeits truth and honor to embarrass an adversary should be held in execration and contempt by honest men.

During the past week, it devolved upon us to vindicate our record from a flagitious assault of the "Statesman," which pretended to present a transcript of that record, and upon it invented a concatenation of falsehoods, with which it sought to prejudice us with the Democracy. We exposed the voluntary rascality of that unscrupulous party "organ," and availed ourself of the courtesy of the editor of the "Fact," to use his columns for the vindication. By referring to the bound volume of the "Statesman" of 1857, in the State Library, we were enabled to refute the accusation of the present "Statesman" most conclusively; and we reproduce that vindication that it may reach such readers as do not receive the "Fact":

To the Editor of the Fact:

The Statesman Lie Nailed.

The stupidity of the Statesman is even exceeded by its knavery. The utter disregard which it manifests for everything honorable and truthful is manifest in almost everything it does. In its issue this morning, a most gross and palpable effort is made to place me in a wrong attitude before the public, and make me appear in a character exactly the reverse of that in which I stand. After quoting an extract from an article in the Statesman of June 27th, 1857, written by me, accompanying one from the Cleveland Plaindealer, the whole of which the Statesman dare not publish, as it gives the lie substantial and direct to what that reckless and shameless paper says, it remarks:

"The story had some two weeks currency through the Statesman by the endorsement and adoption by Marshall of an article prepared by Chase, and it was only when Democrats all over the State began to complain that this false man attempted to speak of the matter in a proper way. Chase had succeeded however and had given the story currency. He found Marshall's calibre at that time, and has industriously used the advantage then gained; until to-day Marshall is one of the readiest tools to do the work that Chase chalks out, even to denying his own record of but two years old."

The "story" was published on Saturday afternoon. What I had to do with it has been already stated—that I was not in the office when received—that I altered the phraseology after it was in type, and that it was partially restored after I left the office. I shall here show very distinctly and incontrovertibly that the Statesman malignantly lies without even the shadow of an apology.

On the 15th of June, 1857, in the very next issue of the Statesman after the announcement appeared, I published this article:

"Our community were startled on Saturday by the announcement that a defalcation had been discovered in the State Treasury of more than half a million dollars. This is in addition to the $225,000 admitted to have been lost to the State through the mismanagement or wrongful act of the predecessor of the late Treasurer.

"We were not advised of the fact or nature of the defalcation until word was sent from the Executive office on Saturday afternoon to delay the issue of the paper, and the Postscript announcing the defalcation was brought over to the office.

"When the announcement which was published on Saturday was received, we were asked not to say anything about it as the whole matter would be investigated and a full expose be made perhaps to-day. We reluctantly yielded, but against our better judgment. The published announcement throws the whole blame on Mr. Breslin, and that too on the word of Mr. Gibson. It may or may not be true as events shall determine. Mr. Breslin is absent in Nebraska, whither he went more than a week ago, after having been some time in this city. He has no means of defending himself from any charge that may be made against him and it is but fair that there should be a suspension of public opinion, as to the extent of his offence, until he can be heard from.

"Mr. Gibson left Columbus for Tiffin on Saturday, but is expected to return this evening. The amount said to be missing is about, in round numbers, $800,000. Of this sum $204,000 had been already charged as a defalcation to Mr. Breslin. The balance is said to have remained outstanding since he went out of office. A committee of examination is overhauling the documents, but how they can arrive at any satisfactory conclusion, when the Finance committee of Investigation, appointed by the Legislature, with Taylor of Mahoning, a very shrewd and competent person, at their head failed, to discover anything, we cannot conceive.

"Mr. Gibson has stated under oath that all was right, except what was publicly charged against Mr. Breslin. Such was the report of Taylor of Mahoning, Smith of Knox, and Sinnet. Such was Mr. Gibson's statement made in April last when the Treasurer's account was examined.

(I have quoted from the Cincinnati Gazette which threw the blame on Breslin and the Cincinnati Enquirer, which attributed it to Gibson.)

"The Commercial very justly remarks:

'Let the people of Ohio know how much they have been swindled and by whom. Without regard to the feelings of individuals or the interests of parties, let the whole truth be told, and the man, clique, party officer or public journal that attempt to turn aside or hinder the investigation or cover up the facts which it discloses, let them be branded at once as partakers in the guilt.'

"We say amen with all our heart.

"It is not our purpose to conjecture as to who had or has the missing bonds. It is not our desire to place the burthen on the wrong person, or indicate to the public mind the wrong direction. No good can come of such course to our own party—no harm to our adversaries. There has been a great wrong done, and the laws of the last session prescribing the duties of Auditor and Treasurer, relative to the receipt, safe keeping and disbursement of the Public moneys have not been sedulously observed as they should have been. Too much confidence was reposed in the Treasurer, who according to his own statement, through fictitious certificates of deposits, made it appear that the funds were in the Treasury when they were not.

"We should be willing to be silent still, until the official statement is forthcoming, but the announcement made on Saturday evening gives the affair a coloring which may not be correct, and of which unscrupulous partisans would eagerly avail themselves. We have thought proper to say thus much, reserving further reflections for another opportunity."

Nothing could be more conclusive of the villainy of the Statesman as at present conducted. But the rascality which prompted it to make this false charge against me, suppressed the part of the article of the 27th of June, 1857, in which Gov. CHASE is held responsible for the coloring given to the announcement by his unscrupulous organ the State Journal, which I had predicted as will be seen in the article I here publish from the Statesman of the 15th of June, 1857, and had sought to make party capital out of such false construction, in the absence of proof. I am content to stand by my record, and although the public cannot feel much interest that an individual should be misrepresented, it is of some importance that a paper holding the position of the Statesman and aiming at public confidence should be exposed in its willful, studied and palpable violation of truth.

A grosser falsehood was never uttered than that I was ever an instrument of Gov. CHASE. Long years ago, when we were both young men, we met in friendly intercourse. When I became editor of the Statesman and a resident of Columbus, I did not renew that intercourse, nor to this time has aught ever transpired between us since, save an introduction and distant salutation. I have uniformly opposed Gov. CHASE's political movements, and sought to expose the fallacies and pernicious tendencies of his political principles. I have never attempted to set up false premises against him or any other citizen and draw false conclusions, that I might by such unscrupulous cunning misdirect public opinion—a sort of warfare that seems natural to the Statesman and which is fast sinking it beneath contempt.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

After this full and conclusive proof that the "Statesman" had done us injustice, and had foully misrepresented our position while we edited that paper, did it make any acknowledgement? Did it confess it had been hasty? No, nothing of the sort. The attempt to injure us had been premeditated. Our influence as an editor must be broken down, as it might interfere with its own schemes to mislead and misdirect the party! Our frankness and truth might be in the way of its sharp practice! The press of the State must be prejudiced against us, that there might be no rivalry with the "Statesman" in its estimation! Rivalry with the "Statesman!" Heaven forefend that such an idea should enter our head. Our course is that of honesty and truth. We advocate principles We seek to establish them. We endeavor to meet argument by argument, and show the tendency of the opinions asserted by our opponents, when they shall be reduced to practice. We play no game—nor for stakes, that we should lie and cheat and steal, as the meanest kind of gamblers do. Such is not our vocation, but such is the vocation of the "Statesman." Such a word as fairness toward an adversary is not in its vocabulary, unless in a hypocritical affectation of indignation it rolls up its eyes, if its opponents treat it to its own tactics.

False as the "Statesman" has shown itself to us, it has been equally so to other Democrats. It loaded its columns with reflections upon an eminent Democrat of this place, upon whom devolved, in the summer of 1857, by the appointment of the Governor, the examination as far as lay in his power, of the Treasury Defalcation of that year. That gentleman having received the appointment of County Commissioner, from the Board authorized by law to make the appointment, although his qualifications were acknowledged by the "Statesman," was subjected by that paper, to insinuations that his report in the Defalcation matter had been made, to bolster up the Republican cause and the Republican Governor who said the money had not been abstracted by a Republican. The county officials who made the appointment were charged with want of reflection, with being unfortunate, and divers other moderate reproaches for appointing a gentleman of the highest qualifications, respected by the community, and of firm, unbending integrity. The "Statesman" went back to the report of Mr. STANNOW in 1857, and endeavored to torture it into antagonism with the report made to the last Legislature by Messrs. Edgerton, Morgan and Reznelle; although, in fact, there was nothing incongruous, nor aught suggested in the former report which the latter did not amply sustain. There were wrongs and rascalities disclosed in the latter which the former had no means of reaching; in addition to which the former report was made after a few weeks investigation, with restricted powers, while the latter report was made after a whole year of investigation and full powers. The whole secret of hostility lay in the fact that Mr. MILLER, one of the proprietors of the "Statesman" superseded Mr. STANNOW in the Post Office, the change being procured by Hon. S. S. COX, who pretended all the time to be the friend of the latter; added to which is the attempt made by Cox and MILLER to produce the impression that the Treasury was robbed by Gibson and Republicans under CHASE, which Mr. STANNOW's report, and the truth did not substantiate.

This effort for mere party purposes to revive an exploded assumption, which was sought by some to be made the basis of the canvass two years ago, has led the "Statesman" into the ridiculous folly of abusing good Democrats, who are consistent, working Democrats, but who will not be driven into what they consider wrong, or to the support of unprincipled men by fear of denunciation from that or any other quarter.—"Our Democratic County officials" have the confidence of the people. They were elected by large majorities, (the largest that have been obtained by Democrats in many years) and in the discharge of their duties have been faithful to their several oaths of office. Mr. COLE, the Recorder, had 1,819 majority, when the majority for Cox was but 299, showing that he had the confidence of the people, considerably beyond our Representative in Congress, who did not add much to the strength of the ticket, but would have been defeated had it not been for the timely aid of Republican votes.

It is not necessary to pursue this matter further. We have shown that the "Statesman" is reckless and unreliable—that it does not scruple to falsify the record—that it descends to the lowest and meanest trickery to disparage an adversary, and that, to gratify its malignity, it turns its weapons against Democrats. We warn the Democrats in our State to be cautious in receiving its statements. They are not reliable in all cases, especially if it have "an axe to grind," or owes some ill-will. It is to be regretted that such a paper should occupy the position of "central organ," because that position enables it to do the party a great amount of harm, unless its reckless assaults upon Democrats, and its untenable dogmas are treated with the contempt they deserve.

THE DEMOCRATS OF LOUISIANA AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY.—The Democrats of Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, at a late meeting called to nominate members of the Legislature, passed, among others, the following resolution:

Resolved, That the assertion and maintenance of the rights of the people of every section of this Republic to regulate their domestic affairs and shape their own institutions, independently of the interference and dictation of other States of the Federal Government, we declare to be an attribute of their sovereignty they can neither alienate or disregard.

It will be seen that these Louisiana Democrats adhere to the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty, and most significantly repudiate the heresy that the people of the Territories cannot regulate their own affairs.

A SYMPTOM.—As a small symptom of "coming events," the Statesman of Tuesday published without comment a brief extract from "Judge Douglas on the Territorial Question in 1850."

The Cincinnati Platform.

This political standard for the National Democracy of the Union, erected at the last National Convention, and the principles there enunciated are doubtless fresh in the memory of most Democrats; yet there are many, doubtless—now that it is again being frequently referred to—who would like to study and ponder over it; we, therefore, republish it in our columns of today, and we suggest that it be preserved by our readers for future reference.—[New York News, July 9.

That it should be ever present to our readers and accessible to any readers, we have kept it standing in the front column of our paper. One might almost suppose that the editor of the Washington "Constitution" had never read it, and was not familiar with the opinions expressed by distinguished Democrats, from its strictures on and misinterpretation of the principles enunciated in the platform.

We shall continue to present the fundamental principles of Democracy, so that their true interpretation may be realized, and not only be kept "fresh in the memory of most Democrats," but be present to them, substantial and entire, so that they may judge of the false interpretation sought to be placed upon them by those who, from position alone, claim their confidence.

We happened to see, accidentally, the importance attached to the platform, by our New York cotemporary, nearly a month ago; but we saw that importance three months ago, when we presented the first number of the PEOPLE'S PRESS to the public. We knew the secret, silent officers at work, and we desired that the people should understand what constituted Democracy.

It would be invidious to suggest that the New York "Times" intended to invite the attention of the Washington "Constitution" to the document embodying the cardinal Democratic doctrines; but it looked that way, and the delicate manner in which the advice was given to observe the rule, and not "wander off after false Gods," is appreciated by some of us fellows out West, if it fall short of the comprehension of the "Constitution."

Judge Ranney's Appointments—Gen. Jos. H. Geiger in Southern Ohio.

Morgan county, at McConnelsville, Wednesday, August 17th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, and W. C. Gaston, Esq.

Washington county, Marietta, Friday, August 19th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, and W. C. Gaston, Esqs.

Athens county, Athens, Saturday, August 20th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, Hon. C. D. Martin and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Ross county, Chillicothe, Monday, August 22d, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Pike county, Piketon, Tuesday, August 23d, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Scioto county, Portsmouth, Wednesday, August 24th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Lawrence county, Ironton, Thursday, August 25th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Gallia county, Gallipolis, Saturday, August 27th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Meigs county, Pomeroy, Monday, August 29th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

GREENE, CLINTON AND FAYETTE.—Hon. JAMES J. WINANS has been announced in the Xenia News as a candidate for re-election to the Senate. As the Democracy could have no hope of electing a Senator in that district, we shall be gratified to hear of the re-election of Mr. Winans, who was one of the first men in the last Senate. He is a strict and unfaltering Republican partisan on principle. He is wedded to his opinions as founded upon calm reflection, and therefore entitled to to respect, if we cannot agree with him. He is a very accurate and observant legislator, and sifted every proposition thoroughly that came up, unless temporarily absent on leave. We can fully endorse that Mr. Winans earned his per diem legitimately, giving his time, wholly and conscientiously, to the contemplation of legislative business, and the discharge of his duties.

DOUGLAS IN MISSOURI.—The Stewartville (Mo.) "Telegraph" publishes the article of the Edgefield (S. C.) "Advertiser" in favor of Mr. Douglas as the next Democratic candidate for President, (which will be found in our columns) and prefaces it with the following comments:

It may be fairly taken as a pulse of the sentiment of the Democracy of South Carolina. The "Advertiser" asks the question: "Are we to accept Douglas?" and discusses the various inducements why it is the true policy of the South to do so.

To this the Cincinnati "Enquirer" of Tuesday adds:

While in this connection we may remark that we were yesterday assured by an intelligent Democrat of St. Louis, who formerly lived in this city, and whose business causes him to travel all over the State of Missouri, that Mr. Douglas was more popular in that State than any other man. Indeed, he said no other Democratic candidate for the next Presidency was spoken of. The feeling was strong and universal that he was the available candidate for 1860.

☞ The Cincinnati Enquirer invites the Gazette to inquire of Judge Gholson if it be a fact that he sold his slaves or any portion of them, at auction, previous to removing from Mississippi to Cincinnati to reside. The question could not be deemed impertinent, as it would not be held proper in a Judge to deceive his friends in this matter. It is important, too, for some of the people of the Reserve might hang themselves in very remorse, should they cast their votes for a man who had such a blot upon his record!

LEIB AND DOUGLAS.—The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican says:

All things human are changeable, but some of the most astonishing changes are these constantly taking place among the politicians of Illinois. I will cite but a single case: Judge Leib, who, during the late political canvass in that State, was conspicuous above all others for his abuse of Judge Douglas, now heartily repents and begs forgiveness. He lately solicited an interview with the "Little Giant," I understand, saying that politicians would sometimes abuse each other, but that he hoped bygones would be forgotten. It is needless to say the interview was declined.

☞ We have heard that Hon. S. S. Cox has said that he should "be in the ring" for re-election to Congress, at the proper time. This would be inconvenient to our friend, the late Speaker of the House of Representatives, of Ohio, who might not like to wait another term. However, we presume this can be adjusted by making Cox U. S. Senator—as such a thing has been mentioned, although scarcely probable.

☞ A proposition has been made by the Cincinnati Enquirer, that a series of discussions take place in different parts of the State, between Hon. GEO. E. PUGH and His Excellency S. P. CHASE, who is understood to be a competitor for U. S. Senator.

☞ Mr. HALL of the Springfield (Ohio) Press, and Mr. HOSMER of Zanesville, were in the city on Monday, for the transaction of business pertaining to the Democratic Central Committee. The former says the Democracy are all for DOUGLAS, down his way, with the exception of a P. M. or two.

☞ The Mac-a-cheek Press is edited by a funny fellow who will have his jest. He shows so much good taste (except his politics) he may construe us as suits him best.

Shall the South Accept Douglas?
[From the Edgefield (S. C.) Advertiser.]

The question here proposed is not designed merely to startle our readers; neither do we take it as a text of an indignation article. Looking upon it as a question that must be met squarely if it be brought upon us, and believing that South Carolina should decide her course in the matter by considerations of prudence and policy, tempered throughout with principle, it appears rational that she should canvass it fairly and impartially. It will perhaps be said that we are meddling with a foregone conclusion in even suggesting the possibility of our State's taking a part in advancing Senator Douglas to the Presidency of the Union. But this notion cannot well be held, when the people of the State have never had the subject directly before them, and when indeed it is not known how our leaders have determined the question for themselves.

There are several disconnected reflections that may serve to elicit thought upon the subject-matter of our interrogatory, and we simply note them down for what they are worth.

1. Senator Douglas is probably the most available man in the Democratic ranks for the next Presidency; in fact, it is conceded on all hands that (with the support of the united South) his success in the race would be next to certain.

2. Senator Douglas is a recognized National Democrat, and identical in feeling and action with the Southern Democrats, except in the single point of Congressional legislation for the direct protection of slave property in the territories. He is a non-interventionist in the sense of the term held to be correct by the Democrats of the North—in the sense of the term which Mr. Stephens, of Georgia, has declared an "overwhelming majority" of the Southern people held in the settlement of the great territorial question of 1850 and 1851—in the sense which Mr. Stephens himself now holds to be the fair construction of that principle of compromise.

3. If Mr. Douglas is not to be elected President, Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, or some worse Abolitionist may be; and if we are to decide between the two alternatives, is it better to take the latter: Will prosterity hold us justified in such a step? The expectation is absurd, in the present condition of things, that the election of a Black Republican will bring about disunion. There is too much prosperity, too much contentment, too large a feeling of security, at the South, to admit the idea of her revolutionising on account of the mere result of any election unaccompanied by overt acts of tyranny and oppression. If this suppressed good, then is not to be anticipated, have we any other cause to prefer the rule of a Black Republican President to that of a Northwestern Democrat?

4. There appears at present to be no other man than Douglas upon whom the Democratic party at the North can concentrate with effect, or in other words, under whose banners they can defeat all the elements of the opposition.

5. These northern Democrats ask the nomination of Douglas at the hands of the people of the South, in order that they may vanquish their and our enemies in that quarter of the Union, holding forth to us the promise that with another defeat, the host of Black Republicanism will be broken to pieces, and the power of the Democracy for good be permanently established north of Mason and Dixon's line.

6. Is it possible at present to erect a great Southern sectional party at a sacrifice of the old Democratic organization? If so, then might our people be appealed to with some show of reason to turn away from everything that will not lead directly on to that consummation? Then, perhaps, might there be some pretence for persuading them that the election of a Black Republican President is a thing to be desired. But where is the indication that such a Southern party is had in anticipation anywhere throughout the South, except in the sanctums of certain zealous newspaper editors? Where is there a flaw at present in the separate Democratic organizations of the States of the South? Where is there any evidence of a prospective disruption of this party machinery? If Banks shall be elected President—if even Seward could be the man—is it credible that the Democratic party, having fought together to avert that result, and still standing together on all essential principles, would fall to pieces on the event? If the South should be ready then to move for disunion, of course the strictly sectional line would at once be drawn; but if not, is it to be supposed that the South, in the Union, would give up the power of her Democratic position, would throw off her tens of thousands of friends at the North, and draw within herself to no purpose? Such a course on her part is far from probable. It cannot be but that our friends who secretly hope for good in this respect, from the elevation of a Black Republican to the Presidency, will be egregiously disappointed. Neither will the result cause disunion, nor will it bring about the formation of a purely Southern party. It would seem to be a most mistaken policy, to allow ourselves to be beaten by a Black Republican, if we can do any better—and is, or is not, the election of Douglas a better alternative?

7. Senator Douglas is an able and ambitious man. If elected President, his surest road to an enduring greatness, to an immortality of renown, would lie in the path of constitutional duty, and fidelity to the great principles which underlie our confederated republican form of government. In the pursuit of this course, he must necessarily defend every section of the Union against the inroads of any aggressive policy on the part of other sections; and the most especially would he be apt to see in the maintenance of the great Southern section's perfect equality a "rock of ages" upon which to rest his fame as one of the American Presidents. Is Mr. Douglas a man of this calibre?—And if so, might we not at least be assured of fair dealing and equal justice under his administration?

We have thrown out these several considerations as food for thought. For ourself personally, we have no leaning towards Senator Douglas, but rather the contrary. Yet it will probably become a question, whether, to prevent the election of a Black Republican, it may not be necessary for the South to unite upon the Senator from Illinois. Objectionable as his course has been in several particulars of late, it may be that his availability for this emergency should not be too angrily viewed by the South. It is on this account alone that we suggest the several propositions above given. These things should be thought about calmly and dispassionately.

O, WHAT A FALL WAS THERE!—Near Lowell, Washington county, on Sunday week, Jacob Hagy fell from a tree forty feet to the ground, breaking his right arm in two places, dislocating one of his wrists, and bruising the side of his head and face. He is doing well and will recover.

LANDS SUBJECT TO ENTRY.—We learn from the Marietta "Republican" that there are about a dozen tracts of Government land, 40 and 80 acres each, subject to entry in Washington county, chiefly in Lawrence and Independence townships. They may be entered at Chillicothe on the morning of the 15th inst.

Old Buck Scolding an Office-Holder.

"Occasional" writes to the Philadelphia Press:

One of those rich scenes which have become quite frequent since Mr. Buchanan was elected, took place at the Washington depot on Monday evening, prior to the departure of the train carrying the President and his escort on their way to Bedford. I reached the station too late to be a witness to it, but those who were present describe it as eminently worthy the pencil of some modern Cruikshank or Hogarth.

It appears that in the same car with his Majesty, was Col. Simeon M. Johnson, editor of the New York Herald in 1856, from which paper he was discharged by Bennett for advocating Mr. Buchanan's nomination, and one of the editors of the Washington Union last year, from which position he retired on account of Mr. Buchanan's public and nauseous toadyism of Bennett.

Johnson started out quite patriotically with the Press on the Lecompton question, but patronage was too much for him, and he fell by the way-side, and became fiercely Administration; in consequence of which, as well as his early advocacy of Mr. Buchanan's nomination, he was willing to accept the post of consul to Liverpool or to London.

Finally, the consulate at Havre was offered to him, and I believe accepted.—For some reason, however, he has not yet entered upon the discharge of the duties of this office, but has sojourned in Washington, attending to his profession as a lawyer. When he saw the President in the car, (so runs the story,) he approached to pay his respects to the high and mighty Majesty, upon which J. B. began to catechise him before the spectators in the rudest and most imperious manner, demanding to know why he had not proceeded to the discharge of his duties, and stating that he had not appointed him to remain in the country; upon which Johnson proceed to explain that the Government would be at no inconvenience, as business had detained him, &c, &c. This apology still further aroused the ire of Mr. Buchanan, and as he was proceeding to renew his lecture, Johnson fired up, told him that he never asked for the office of consul at Havre, that it had been voluntarily tendered him, and that he was not under the slightest obligations to Mr. Buchanan for it; that he had done quite as much for him as he (J. B.) had done for Johnson, &c., &c. All this transpired while Mr. Secretary Cobb, Mr. Secretary Thompson, and the ladies of the Presidential party, were sitting or standing by.

POPULARITY OF DOUGLAS.—We find one of our exchanges dilating on Douglas's popularity in this way: "At the last Democratic Convention in Vermont—Douglas's native State—the members not content with the nomination of candidates opposed to the Buchanan policy, gave three cheers for Douglas. All through the Democracy of New England there is a hearty response, except about the Custom-Houses and Post-Offices, and they will echo with the same before November, 1860. There is no New England State that would not this year pronounce with Vermont, if left free from Executive influence, and even against that most of them will do so. In the middle States and the West, this is the prevailing feeling. No man who could acknowledge that he ever knew or saw Buchanan, could carry Pennsylvania or a northwestern State. It is doubtful, too, if the administration will be able to present any show in the Pacific States. Broderick is making a gallant fight in California, and so widely apart are the two wings of the Democracy in Oregon, that the Republicans may walk in[illegible] between them. Nor is the South without a little leaven of Squatter Sovereignty. Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri would surely go for Douglas as against any extreme Southerner; and in Louisiana the same faction, led by Soule against Slidell, has called a bolters' convention to meet on the 4th of July."—Some have thought it probable that Douglas would injure his prospects by his card, for the reason that the demonstration would be considered dogmatic and dictatorial. That, however, is not the general opinion. It seems to us a correct view of that document, that it claims simply, but fairly and frankly, to define his position, at a time when there was danger of its being seriously misconstrued. It is no defiance of the Democracy, and no dictation to it. It says: "Make such a platform as you please. Be it what it may, I do not say I will oppose it. But I ought to say that, make it in a certain form, and I shall not be able to stand on it as a candidate." That is all.—St. Louis Herald.

INTERVENTION IN THE TERRITORIES.—In an article of the Mobile Register defending Judge Douglas from some unjust strictures of a correspondent of the Confederation, we find the following judicious and sensible remarks upon the subject of Congressional intervention, which we fully indorse, except as to the "theory" of Congressional protection being "untenable," if that is its meaning. We think the theory tenable, but like our cotemporary, we think it "a barren abstraction," utterly "worthless in practice," and if pressed to a division of the Democratic party, the only bulwark against Black Republican fanaticism, "fraught with danger to the country."—Mont. Confederation.

The true doctrine is to regard and treat slaves as property, and afford them all the protection by law to which any other species of property is entitled. The "theory" that is in our opinion "untenable" is, to discriminate between this and other kinds of property. There is no warrant for the distinction that we can find in the Constitution or elsewhere. We see no more claim to call upon Congress to make a "slave code" for the Territories than to make a "horse code," and if Congress were to make forty thousand such codes, there would be neither slaves nor horses in the Territories if the people did not want them there, and if the people did want them, there would be no occasion for any such Congressional code. This is just one of those stubborn facts that is proof against philology, casuistry or logic. The dispute is about nothing, and will come to nothing. Before the Charleston Convention meet, the people of America will find this out. Let the politicians look out, for as Senator Thompson, of Kentucky, says, "it is dangerous to stand on the outside platform when the cars are in motion."—Mobile Register.

Douglas Papers in Ohio.

Constitution—Van Wert;
Democrat—Sandusky;
Democrat—McArthur;
Enquirer—Cincinnati;
Gazette—Bellefontaine;
Herald & Times—Toledo;
National—Lima;
National Democrat—London;
Plain Dealer—Cleveland;
PEOPLE'S PRESS—Columbus;
Press—Springfield.
Standard—Delaware;
Spirit of Democracy—Woodsfield;
Sun—Batavia.

☞ If there be others, let them give the sign. The Statesman is somewhere on the road.

Honest Employment for Philanthropists.

Lewis Smith, a colored man, formerly owned by Mr. Hemlong, of Bracken Co., Ky., was in our place last week. Upon an examination of his paper and certificates, we ascertained that he had purchased himself for $1,000, and that his master had emancipated his wife and two of his children, retaining four (the balance of them) whom he offered to Lewis for $2,500. Lewis is now soliciting contributions to aid him in purchasing them, after effecting which, he says it is his design to leave for Liberia. He is recommended by the following persons as being entirely reliable, worthy the donations of the philanthropic, and that his true object is to secure the liberation of his children from servitude—George K. Snider, hardware dealer, Ripley, O., (Rev. John Rankin certifies that "Mr. Snider is worthy of credence,") John Davis, Rev. D. Gould and D. B. Evans, all of Ripley, O.; Wm. Perkins, endorsed by John Joliffe, of Cincinnati, and Jos. Emery, also of that place, S. P. Chase, Gov. of Ohio, Col. Cassius M. Clay and J. G. Fee, of Kentucky, and Gerrit Smith, of N. Y. The M. E. Church of Ripley contributed $100 for the above-named purpose, the 1st Presbyterian Church $40, the 2d Presbyterian Church $15, for which Lewis returns his most grateful thanks. He has collected on the above-stated sum, $458,76. Contributions may be forwarded to Geo. K. Snider, Ripley, O., or given to his traveling agent, S. L. Wilson. We recommend Mr. Smith to all persons philanthropically inclined. He has adopted the honest method, and we trust all persons who are friendly to the cause will donate freely. No risks are to be run in this case, no "running off" will be necessary, if you give freely, and let your love for the cause impel you do one good deed and honest act. Contribute your mite to the cause, and remember that "whoso giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord."—Georgetown, O., Democratic Standard.

SAD ACCIDENT AT SEA ON BOARD THE FULTON.—M. BARBERAS, editor of the Courrier des Etats Unis, who reached France in the Fulton July 9, sends to that journal the following interesting account of a mischance which occurred on board in celebrating the Fourth of July:

Preparations were made for firing a salute at mid-day. The cannon had been placed near the bows of the vessel, and a rope stretched at a certain distance prevented the passengers from approaching too near; all was ready, and every care had been taken to prevent accident. The two cannons were to be fired alternately, at intervals of half a minute each, thus allowing an interval of one minute to each for reloading.

Precisely at 12 o'clock the first report was heard, but the thirty intervening seconds had not expired before there was a second and louder explosion, immediately followed by cries of pain and terror. The report came from the same piece, which had been reloaded with imprudent haste, and had suddenly exploded. Of the two men who were reloading it, one had his right hand and wrist carried away, and the other had his left hand shattered; a quartermaster standing by also received severe wounds, and a cabin boy was dangerously wounded on the breast by pieces of the ramrod, which was broken into a thousand fragments by striking violently against one of the anchors.

Accidents of this character are each year the inseparable accompaniments of the Fourth of July celebration in the United States, and to record them has become for the journalist almost a matter of course; but when a similar casualty occurs on the little world cradled on board of a ship, its proportional importance is considerably changed. So it would be difficult to convey an idea of the painful gloom which this sad event immediately cast over us. The ladies especially, from whom it was impossible to hide what had passed, were so affected that some of them became really ill. The youngest daughter of the captain, a lovely child about six years, added to the sad effect of the scene by her unrestrained grief. It appeared the sailor most severely wounded had been endeared to her by one of those ties of friendship which so often unite the tenderness of childhood and the strength of rude manhood. Nothing could be more heart-breaking than to hear the poor little girl crying out, "My poor Jack! my poor Jack!" at the same time wringing her hands with convulsive grief. This was all that she could say, and all efforts to console her were only met by this sad cry.

In the meantime the victims of the accident had been conducted to the cabin of the ship's surgeon, Dr. Teats, who at once proceeded in his cruel but indispensable duties. The man most severely wounded had his arm amputated a little below the elbow; the other only saved one of his fingers. At the moment of writing this, both of the men are well enough to authorise the hope of their recovery. I could not sufficiently praise the kindness with which the unfortunate men were treated by Captain Wotton and all on board. As to Doctor Teats, he on this occasion proved his remarkable ability both as an operator and a physician.

As soon as the first shock of surprise and fright was over, the passengers took up a subscription for the sufferers, which in two hours amounted to $800. The names of the French passengers figured pre-eminently on the list. M. and Madame Yznaga, of Havana, nobly represented Spanish liberality by a contribution of $75. It is the intention of the donors to give three-fourths of the sum to the man who lost his arm and who has three children.

As may be supposed, no further rejoicing took place. At dinner the captain simply spoke a few words, which the French passengers requested me to answer. No other address was made, no toasts offered, and the evening ended in a quiet way, very different from the excitement expected in the morning. 'Man proposes, but God disposes.'

☞ The interventionists are thrusting an issue upon the people of this State, which, according to their own story, is in the last degree absurd. If the people of a Territory neglect or refuse to protect slave property, and if any wrong is suffered that a court can't remedy, and if a law be framed by Congress adapted to remedy the wrong, and if the means of execution can be devised, and if it will not create more wrongs than it will rectify, then Congress must pass such a law.—They have found no case of wrong yet; nor is one likely ever to happen. They give us no sketch even of the sort of law for protection they want, and we are confident they would never themselves agree on one; and yet they are as fierce and zealous as if they had a real case of wrong on hand to rectify, and knew how to do it. They remind us of the little girl that burst out into a fit of grief, to the astonishment of every one. When they asked what was the matter, she said she was thinking if she were grown up, and if she were married, and if she had a little baby, and if it should fall into the fire and get burned to death, how shocking it would be!—Lou. Dem.

☞ "Occasional" writes from Washington to Col. Forney's paper, that the clerk in the departments who refuses to subscribe for the Washington Constitution, and take it home and make it the doctrine of his political faith, will be watched, spies will be put upon his track, his words will be noted, and he will be as summarily ejected from office, on the first fitting opportunity, as if he had been found reading the Press, or holding a conversation with Stephen A. Douglas. Such is the Austrian despotism which prevails under an Administration claiming to be superfinely Democratic.

A WITTY REGRET.—Our friends of the Home Journal get off in private as many good things as they publish. In a "regret" dated some months back, Mr. Willis says, "My pen (like my pig's) is my prison. I must stay where it's off write."

☞ The small-pox has appeared at Chelsea, Mass. and several deaths have occurred.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1859.

HARPER FOR AUGUST.—We are indebted to our friend KENNEDY, of State street, for this popular Monthly. To us Harper is never dull. Its great variety, the evident amount of labor performed in adapting it to public taste, its neat and characteristic illustrations, make it a welcome visitant to us, as to every body else. It is entitled to its vast circulation.

KENNEDY has all the standard periodicals fresh from the press.

DON PEDRO.—A black scamp, who calls himself a native of Spain, but in reality is probably a negro, notwithstanding the notoriety given him by the newspapers, continues to victimize printers and landlords. Within the last week he has been travelling in this State, and leaves every town and village in mourning, as dusky as his own hue, over unpaid bills.

MEAT MARKET.—The North Enders will be sadly grieved to lose the convenient Meat Market of our friend D. W. HILL, which was always supplied with choice meats, but another location promised greater abundance of custom and small change, so he has opened a superior Meat Market on the corner of Front and Broadway, where he will furnish the very best meats to be found in the market.

WHITE'S DETECTOR, AND COINS OF ALL NATIONS.—Among all the publications for the detection of spurious money, for intelligence as to the solvency of moneyed institutions, as well as impressions of the various gold and silver coins, we know none better entitled to confidence and general circulation than this work. It is published simultaneously in the principal cities of the Union, and is very valuable from its intrinsic merit and reliability. Louis Linck is agent for this city and will be pleased to send on orders.

CAPITOL SALOON.—This popular Restaurant, under the proprietorship of Mr. JOHN O'HARA, having been lately renovated, is now prepared to satisfy the epicureans with the "good things" of the world. By the way, the Turtle Soup which JOHN serves up every Sunday can't be beat.—See advertisement.

THE HOLMES COUNTY FARMER.—Mr. J. B. PEEBLES, has become associated with J. A. Estill, Esq., in the editorial management of the Farmer. "Brady" is a young man of promise and we welcome him to the tripod most cordially.—[Bucyrus Forum.

We have not seen the "Farmer" on our table yet; although it should be there. It was an old favorite when we were looking out for friends through the loop-holes of the "Statesman."—Holmes is one of those Democratic counties on which there is no discount. She never lets down. We shall really be glad to have the "Farmer" among our exchanges. It has always been a good paper, and we look for improvement still under the new "regime." We should have sent ours long since, but, strange as it may appear, "Millersburg" escaped our memory at the right time, notwithstanding we have something sometimes to say of "Miller's tricks."

☞ The Columbus PRESS erroneously credits our article headed "Extremes Meet," to the Intelligencer. That paper never talks anything Bro. Marshall would regard as sound Democracy.—[Marietta Republican.

BRO. CAMPBELL will have seen that we made the AMENDE in our very next issue. We were absent the day of publication, and had not seen the proof-slip, which accounts for the mistake. We do not know that we ever saw the "Intelligencer," and certainly did not so mark the "credit." That paper must have been more familiar to the printer than to us, and the sin be on his shoulders, and those of the "Sons of Malta" who invited us to go with them to Circleville, which we did in the face of the fact that a newspaper editor has no business away from home. His work never ends. He has no respite. He rolls the stone of Sysiphus. He is on the wheel of Ixion. He empties the ocean with a seive. He sees his paper go to press, only to begin again, and fashion out the next.

ENLARGED.—The Ashland "Times" (Republican,) has been materially enlarged, and is a fine-looking paper, conducted with ability.—We perceive it uses an article from the PEOPLE'S PRESS, contradictory of some of the misrepresentations of the "Statesman," relative to the appointment of Mr. SPARROW and his report on the Treasury Defalcation. We regard this as an evidence of good taste and sound judgment, for the editor of the "Times" has discovered by this time that we are scrupulous in avoiding two evils incidental to newspaperdom, misleading friends and misrepresenting opponents. If we do not excite admiration for our adroitness we are at least entitled to respect for our honesty. The interests of no party can be advanced by a contrary course, and parties will soon become fatigued in wandering after such eccentric or wilful leaders. The "Times," although an "opposition" paper, we trust will join us in upholding the doctrine that "honesty is the best policy."

MARIETTA REPUBLICAN.—Mr. Campbell has transferred the publishing of this sterling Democratic paper to Mr. WM. SCOTT, who has placed the mechanical department in charge of Messrs. Ely P. Boring and John H. Skillington, Mr. Campbell continuing editor for the present.—The late proprietor says that he was forced to make this change by the delinquency of subscribers; and in turn, will be "forced to collect" what is due him. In noticing this strait in which our friend Campbell finds himself, we may be allowed to say that his is not an isolated case, but is a calamity to which the whole fraternity are exposed, through the inattention or indifference of subscribers. They think the amount each owes is so small, to withhold it will produce no inconvenience; but where a good many are of the same opinion, it produces an aggregate of some importance. Prompt and punctual subscribers impart spirit and nerve to a newspaper, and there is nothing that so relaxes the energies of an editor as to find subscribers delinquent and creditors clamorous. We hope our friend Campbell may have a swift and easy time in balancing his books, and find his fingers fairly tired out writing the cabalistic word "Paid."

A TIMELY PRECAUTION.—A Pedagogue who was very anxious to administer to his school the discipline of flagellation, but feeling solicitous to know what was the state of public sentiment, procured the publication of the following select scriptural texts from the Book of Proverbs. We have not since been apprised of the extent of the CATASTROPHE tickled, but believe there was raised quite an uproar in the neighborhood:

He that spareth his rod, hateth his son; but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes.

Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying, or to his destruction, or, to cause him to die.

Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child; but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him.

Withhold not correction from the child; for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die. Thou shalt beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell.

The rod and reproof give wisdom; but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame.

Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.

We publish these for the benefit of other schoolmasters, and those tender-hearted "parients" whose susceptibilities are very much outraged, if it become expedient to apply the rod to the extremities of their young hopefuls. The would-be Commissioners of Common Schools might not be damaged by committing some of them to memory.

The Armistice.

We are indebted to our cotemporary the State Journal, for intelligence that the Post Office clique had proposed an armistice to the popular county auditor and the other "Democratic officials." But then it takes back nothing. What it has said falsely of Mr. SPARROW'S appointment, and what it has said falsely of Mr. SPARROW'S report, it will not undertake to deny. It can well say with the fell RICHARD:

"When I look back, 'tis dangerous returning."

There are other matters on which the Statesman observes a grave and desperate silence, one of which is, how in the world one of the proprietors of that paper, who is Mr. BUCHANAN'S postmaster, came to change his opinion of the President, whom he called a "d——d old scoundrel," in March, 1858.

But we were speaking of the Armistice. The Statesman this morning does not abuse Mr. SPARROW. It does not even abuse his report. It denies, however, the statement of the Journal, "about a proposition having been made on behalf of the Statesman, to the county officers for a 'cessation of hostilities.'" Give that "unquestionable authority," Mr. Journal, and prove the falsehood of the Statesman's denial, but even the "most" "unquestionable" and irrefragable evidence of its falsehood cannot call up a blush. It has no blush. MANYPENNY'S face is as hard as a terrapin's back.

The Statesman has been guilty of falsehood before under similar circumstances. It no more hesitates to deny what every one knows to be a fact than it does to state an original falsehood with the hope of deceiving. Nothing seems so natural to it as lying, as the columns of this paper, in its many refutations, will sufficiently show. When a falsehood has been indelibly branded on the Statesman, it moves on to another, probably supposing the brand it wears sufficient without acknowledgment.

Now there is no doubt of overtures having been made to the "county officials," and an effort to persuade them that no reflection upon them was meant in the day-after-day tirades of abuse of Mr. SPARROW and denunciations of his appointment. But the people don't bite. They look another way. The course of the "county officials" is approved, and the appointment of Mr. SPARROW is confirmed by the people. The Statesman would like to crawfish but that is not its game. It would rather pretend that it never said a word of reproach to the "county officials" and therefore had nothing to take back.

But beware the snake in the grass. Whenever it can strike, its envenomed barb will sting. We have reason to know that the County Auditor, who comes before the people again for a nomination, don't care the snap of his finger for their hostility, for this is not the first time he has experienced it, but they dare not strike openly. They want a practical armistice although ashamed to acknowledge they sought it. With the generosity of LOUIS NAPOLEON to FRANCIS JOSEPH, grant it, JOHN. You don't know how much they love you!—[City Fact.

Something about Glass Houses.

While the Statesman is eagerly questioning the State Journal as to certain financial arrangements by which the latter establishment passed into former and the present hands, it entirely overlooks the interrogatories that have been from time to time put to itself respecting the mode by which its own animals upon the policy of the administration and zealous support of Anti-Lecomptonism were converted into a subservient acquiescence in the former, and dumb silence with regard to the latter. How and why the present Postmaster of Columbus was reinstated? Why Cox voted for the English Conference Bill? What arrangement was made that the Statesman should receive the government advertising and be recognized as the special organ of the administration at Columbus? What changed to suddenly the Miller appreciation of President BUCHANAN? What portion and how much of the Pennsylvanian's "spoils" or any other it was to share, in consideration of its new tactics? What changed MANYPENNY'S Democracy since the 16th March, 1858, when at the Theater at this place he was reading out of the party all those who did not stand then and there on the Anti-Lecompton platform, and was for closing the books? What interest were these unselfish patriots, MANYPENNY and MILLER, to have in the public contracts if restored? What they were paid for the keen interest manifested for such restoration, and to retaliate on prominent Democrats and read them out of the party because they opposed such restoration? These are questions, the answers to which would be quite as interesting, as who paid for the Journal, and how many prominent Republicans subscribed to give it a good start under the Republican branch of the "MILLER family."

James H. Baker, formerly Secretary of the State of Ohio, is now the candidate of the Republican party for the Secretaryship in Minnesota. Baker is a lively, whole-souled, good fellow, and we hope he may succeed.—Columbus Gazette.

"JIM'S" a fast b'hoy. The Republicans of Ohio wouldn't renominate him for Secretary of State, so he went to Minnesota, where his savings as Fund Commissioner enabled him to speculate in lands, as he had a sort of speculative turn in stationery while Secretary here. He is very versatile, as he was so stringent a Know Nothing it took him three days to make up his mind to run on the same ticket with Gov. CHASE, who was unwilling to debar naturalized citizens of the right of voting for twenty-one years. But he did make up his mind and was swept into office by the great avalanche. He now leans like the Indian tree, that was so straight; he introduced a resolution in the Minnesota Republican Convention denouncing the Massachusetts amendment. There are lots of foreign-born voters in Minnesota.

THE SENATOR FROM WARREN.—We learn with pleasure that LAUREN SMITH, Esq., the able and amiable Senator from Warren and Butler, was re-nominated by the Democratic Convention, at Mason, on Friday last. There was not a gentleman in the Senate of the last Legislature who entitled himself to such a compliment more than Mr. SMITH—for certainly none evinced a stronger will to be guided by his own sense of right, or more matured his opinions on the various questions before him than he did. He was most sedulous and faithful in attending to the interests of his constituents, and on all questions involving the general interests of the State, he gave them his earnest and thorough attention, governed by his unfaltering desire to do what he thought right. Modest to a degree, and distrustful of himself in debate, he was rather retiring, and more seldom obtruded his views upon the Senate than men of less judgment and greater pretensions. He had the respect and regard of his fellow Senators, and will be welcomed back again, for we entertain no doubt of his election.

WHETHER IT THERE.—The Statesman, a short time since, spoke of the New York Times as "a leading Republican organ." The Summit Democracy taking its cue, speaks of it as "the leading Republican newspaper in the United States." It is thus the Statesman takes in its Democratic friends. The New York Times, in its own advertisement, disclaims any political relation with any party, but claimed to be independent of all parties. It is thus the Statesman deceives its friends, who will have many sins to answer for if they take what it says for granted.

The Democracy are moving.—Statesman.
Will they take you along?

The Wheat Crop and Trade.

During the week ending July 23, there had been shipped to foreign countries from the port of New York $11,000 worth of wheat and $135,000 worth of flour. If this were an average, it would amount to the respectable sum of $572,000 for wheat and $7,500,000 for flour annually. It is anticipated, however, that the fall exports will be unusually heavy, there is a greater surplus of wheat than in any former year, and that this surplus must seek a foreign market at some price, and consequently will be exported. The excess of the present crop over the greatest ever known before is set down at 25,000,000 bushels, and it is estimated that the total will reach in round numbers 200,000,000 bushels. Assuming the home consumption at four bushels per head, with a population of 30,000,000, amounting to 125,000,000 bushels, it will leave 75,000,000 bushels for export. This reduces to an absolute certainty, that flour will be cheap during the present year, a desideratum with the population, whatever it may be to speculators and traders, for, as has been well remarked, "cheap and abundant food is the first essential to successful industry, prosperous enterprise and increasing population." At $1 per bushel for wheat, the individual cost for the staff of life for one year will be but $4, which will place it within the power of every one to procure, and from this may be estimated the comparative prosperity of the country. Cheapness of the necessaries of life rather than exaggerated prices tends to that prosperity. So long as high prices are maintained to supply the demand at home, they will rule too high for shipment. But shipments must begin, and they govern the home market, falling to a point that those shipments can be made to realize a profit. This will rule until the surplus of 75,000,000 bushels wheat surplus over and above what will be required for home consumption shall have been exhausted, by which time another crop will be coming on, if not already here.

With regard to the prospects of the foreign trade in grain, a careful observer makes the following speculative remarks:

There are those who look for a further fall in grain in Europe. But there are many reasons for anticipating the very reverse. The product of the grain bearing countries of Europe must be affected by the enormous diversion of labor from agriculture which has been caused by the war. Neither the English nor the French harvests are yet out of danger. The Russian crop, we know, has suffered from drought. And even supposing that the European crops prove everywhere as bountiful as they were last year, the price of wheat in England is very low at present; very considerably below the average for the past ten years. On the whole, the weight of probability is rather in favor of prices in Europe than against them, and the prospect is fair for a grain export from hence this fall greater than the largest heretofore known.

A New Sect—"The Broad Church."

The recent movement of Dr. BELLOWES, and other Unitarian Ministers in the East, to inaugurate a new sect to be denominated the Broad Church is creating something of an excitement in the religious world. It is now said that this new organization is to have a seminary to propagate its peculiar faith at Antioch College, in this State, an institution founded by the Christian denomination, but for the last two or three years under the auspices of HORACE MANN, its President, and a Unitarian in sentiment, is fast drifting into the tone of the day. The New York Times, denying the connection of the Rev. Dr. FROTHINGHAM, of that city, in this new plan to regenerate the Universe, says:

"It is certainly nothing more than natural that any sensible man should feel a decided flush of inward indignation at finding himself described as a participator in such a rhapsodical scheme as this; and there can be no excuse for the fixing of such an imputation upon any man without due inquiry and full warrant of fact. The scheme itself, however, rhapsodical as it is, is by no means more unpractical than many of the forms in which the religious uneasiness and discontent of the age have already found expression. There is nothing in the vision of a Unitarian Cathedral, hung with pink silk, blessed with the tinkling of silver bells, and the twinkling of waxen tapers and haunted with the chanting voices of respectable Boston gentlemen, disguised in copes of brocade and stoles of rustling satin, more intensely absurd than the realities of such an organization for instance as that of the Irvingites in England.

* * *

"Should anybody, therefore, really undertake to carry out the ideas which Mr. Frothingham so properly repudiates, it is by no means to be taken for granted that nobody would be found to follow him."

FARM PRODUCTS OF FAIRFIELD COUNTY.—The farm products of Fairfield County in 1858, were as follows:

Wheat, acres sown	[illegible]	Product	[illegible] bush.
Rye " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible]
Barley " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible]
Buckwheat " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible]
Corn " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible]
Oats " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible]
Potatoes " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible]
Hay " "	[illegible]	"	[illegible] tons.

The average yield of wheat to the acre was 9¼ and of corn 19 bushels.

The largest yield of wheat in the County for the last ten years was in 1856, which averaged 18 1-5 bushel, and for corn in 1856, which averaged a fraction under 60 bushels to the acre.

DEATH OF GOV. GAYLE.—The Mobile Advertiser of the 22d instant says: "It is our painful duty to announce the death of the Hon. JOHN GAYLE, one of the most honored and esteemed of our old citizens. This sad event occured yesterday morning at his residence in Jacksonville." He was a distinguished Whig politician of the State of Alabama, held several important State offices, and was at one time the Whig candidate for U. S. Senator in opposition to the Hon. WILLIAM R. KING, receiving 55 against 73 votes for Mr. KING.

KILLED IN MEXICO.—Dr. EDSON DENNY OLDS, formerly of Circleville, the youngest son of Dr. E. B. OLDS, was killed by a cannon ball near Tacubaya, Mexico, on the 2d of April last. He joined one of the revolutionary armies of Mexico, at Monterey, in 1858, in the capacity of surgeon. On the morning of the 2d day of April, the army to which he was attached, marched from Tacubaya to attack the city of Mexico, and met the Conservative army at San Cosme, where a commanding ensued, during which Dr. OLDS was struck by a cannon ball, died in a few minutes, and was buried at Tacubaya by his friends.

☞ Letters have passed between Hon. WILLIAM DENNISON, jr., and Judge RANNEY, candidates for Governor, making arrangements for a joint canvass of the State. The time fixed is between the 5th and 20th of September, pre-engagements of Mr. DENNISON preventing a more extended tour. From the well known courtesy of both gentlemen we doubt not that the discussions which may be presented to their hearers will be able, dignified and courteous.

☞ The firm of BEKAN & KNEISSNER, proprietors of the National Democrat, published at London, has been dissolved, Mr. KNEISSNER having disposed of his interest to his late partner, with the intention, as we understand, of establishing a paper elsewhere. The Democrat, which, under the management of the late firm, had become one of the institutions of Madison County, will in future be conducted by Mr. BEKAN, and we trust with that success which has heretofore marked its course. Both gentlemen have our best wishes for their prosperity.

Virtue does not attract imitation, unless the person who gives the pattern be beloved as well as esteemed.

Every man likes to be taken for a gentleman and yet no man likes to be charged as one—in an hotel bill.

The gentleman who has been trying to raise the wind finds himself blown all over the town.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FARTHER POINT, July 29.—The steamship Anglo Saxon, from Liverpool on the 20th inst., passed this point to-day, bound up for Quebec.

The papers contain nothing additional in regard to the basis of the peace.

The discontent resulting from Napoleon's hasty course, was apparently on the increase, particularly in Italy.

The Queen of Portugal is dead.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post says, that both of the Emperors are convinced that the basis of peace agreed upon by them is in many respects impracticable. The English Journals continue to ridicule the terms of the peace. The Post, Lord Palmerston's organ, attacks the proceedings at Villa Franca with some severity.

The Paris correspondent of the News says, there is a feeling of disappointment, and even of indignation, among many who took a sincere interest in the object of the war. The Emperor has seriously lowered himself in the opinion of all classes.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says, the representatives of Austria, France and Sardinia will soon meet at Zurich to conclude the treaty of peace.

There will be no Congress of the great powers called to ratify the treaty, the Emperor of France and of Austria having agreed to settle the difficulties without the interven tion of neutral powers.

FARTHER POINT, July 30.—In the House of Lords on the 18th the debate was confined to the despatches between England and Prussia in regard to the war. In the House of Commons, Lord Jno. Russell stated that the subject of the Stadt Dutchies was under consideration by the law officers of the crown, who, pending their decision, recommend the renewal of the former treaty for six months.

Mr. Gladstone introduced his annual exchequer budget. The following are the principal figures: Revenue of the year, $65,467,000; expenditures of the year, $64,663,000; estimated revenue of the current year, $64,340,000; estimated expenditure, $69,207,000. Mr. Gladstone, proposed to add four pence to the income tax on incomes over £150, and a half penny on incomes between £150 and 100. The debate which followed was favorable to the scheme proposed by Mr. Gladstone to increase the revenue. The consideration of the Budget in its details was fixed for the 21st inst.

It was announced in the House of Lords on the 19th that the subject of telegraphic communication with Gibraltar, America and the West coast of Africa, was receiving the serious attention of the Government.

In the House of Commons Mr. Horseman gave notice of his intention to introduce a resolution providing that works for the country defence shall be provided for otherwise than by annual vote of the Parliament.

The announcement of peace is said to have caused signs of commercial improvement.

FRANCE.—The Paris flour market was dull, and wheat was lower.

The Paris correspondent of the London Herald says, the greatest activity prevailed all along the French coast. The channel coast was being fortified and from Cherbourg to Dunkirk, earth batteries were being constructed at the distance of every 3,000 yards.

The Paris Pays says, the whole Imperial Guards, a division of the infantry of the line and a battalion of Chasseurs, selected from the different corps of the army of Italy, had received orders to march immediately for Paris, where they will receive a distinguished reception.

On the Paris Bourse rentes closed on the 19th at 68f. 20c.

ITALY.—There were strong indications of discontent in some parts of Italy. Great agitation existed at Florence. The Provisional government of Tuscany had issued a proclamation describing the basis of peace as betraying the fairest hopes that the Tuscan government participated in and were the sentiments of the people, and declaring that the Tuscans will not be replaced under the yoke and influence of Austria against her will and rights.

The Le Nord says, that a French corps of 40,000 will remain in Italy until the re-organization of the country according to the treaty of Villa Franca.

The Piedmontese correspondent of the Daily News says that fresh Piedmontese troops are going to Romagna with Napoleon's consent, to maintain order and take from the Pope all hope of recovering it by the help of the Swiss guards. The most important towns of the Roman States had sent a deputation to confer with Garibaldi in regard to the condition of affairs.

Modena and Parma are said to be in a state of revolt.

The Austrian troops remain in their positions the same as if peace had not been declared. Orders had been given to some of the French ships of war to protect Frenchmen and their property in Tuscany in case of need.

The Paris correspondent of the Post says, it has never been intended to support by the French army the return of the Grand Duke of Tuscany.

It was reported that Sardinia has recalled its representatives from Tuscany and Modena, and that the Provisional Government of Tuscany and Modena are organizing a force to oppose the return of the Dukes.

Chevalier Pertgi had been sent from Florence to Paris on a special mission.

The Times' correspondent says, that the news of the Peace produced the greatest exasperation and defection at Turin. The Emperor was accused of being a traitor to Italy; his portraits had to be withdrawn from view in the shop windows to prevent them from being broken. The Opinion of Turin manifests dissatisfaction at Venice being allowed to remain in the hands of Austria.

The government of Lombardy had cautioned the editors of the Press against using invectives against the recent events and recommended them to assume sentiments of moderation under pain of suppression.

PRUSSIA.—The Prince Regent had issued an order of the day to the army expressing satisfaction with the treaty of peace and the conclusion of the war.

General Wrangle had been removed from the command of the army which was to have been concentrated on the Rhine.

NAPLES.—Four thousand Swiss troops had left the Neapolitan service and gone home. The disbandonment of many more was expected. Large bodies of troops were concentrating at Naples.

The Times' city article says, that the general feeling in regard to the budget can be said to be completely satisfactory. It is to be regretted, however, that there is not even allusion to an export duty on coal, the equalization of sugar duties, &c. The necessity that the income tax shall be all levied in half a year is disputed.

The Le Nord says, that although the preliminaries of the treaty of peace have been arranged by the principals at Villa Franca it will be definitely drawn up at Zurich, and will then be officially communicated to the courts of Europe, in obedience to those organic and international stipulations which form a part of the public law of Europe.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., July 29.—The Steamship Ocean Queen, from Southampton on the 20th and the Needles on the 21st, was intercepted off Cape Race this morning.

No general news has been received. The following are the commercial advices:

Manchester advices unfavorable. Markets dull but steady.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—Richardson & Spence report flour dull. French brands are offered at a further reduction in price. American flour sells 10s@12s 6d. Wheat quiet, but firm; western red 8s 6d; white 9s@9s 6d. Corn dull; European has slightly declined owing to the heavy arrivals, sales of mixed and yellow at 5@10d@6s 3d, and white 6s@7s 9d. The harvest prospects were favorable.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.—The circulars report the provision market dull and lower. Beef heavy. Lard steady and in rather more demand at 54s@56s. Tallow [illegible]

The following summary of news is furnished: The Emperor Napoleon had arrived at Paris.

Austrian funds were buoyant, and subscribers to the new Austrian loan had been released from their obligations.

A new ministry had been formed at Turin, [illegible] being constituted Minister of War, and President of the Council.

The Bank of Berlin had lowered the rates of discount to 4 per cent.

The budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. Gladstone, had been presented to Parliament. Its figures show a deficiency of five million pound sterling. Mr. Gladstone prefers taxation to any other means to meet the deficit; he proposes to add four per cent. to the income, to duties on malt spirits, and tea and sugar exempt.

—The Delaware Gazette, speaking of the drouth in that county, says: "The greater portion of the corn and potatoes are already injured beyond hope of recovery. In some situations, however, corn that has been well attended and was not injured by the frost, is still looking well—and the same remark will apply to late planted potatoes. Hay throughout the county does not exceed half a crop, and the pastures are rapidly drying up.

Why was Beethoven like opium? Because he was a great composer.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Advices received here from Nicaragua, give the assurance of a fair prospect of a satisfactory settlement of the transit difficulties, and speak in confident terms of the ability of General Jeares to secure the rejection by Congress of the article in the Lamar Zelada, which is objected to by our Government.

The treasury balance on the 25th was nearly $5,600,000; the receipts for the week ending on that day are $2,252,000; the amount of drafts paid $1,616,000; of drafts issued, $2,114,000.

The amount of increase over the former week is $132,000.

A letter from Superintendent Johnson has been received at the Indian Bureau, in which, speaking of the difficulty between the Pawnee Indians and the citizens of Nebraska, he says no white persons have been killed, but the whites have killed two Indians and wounded one; the Indians making no resistance when they were approached by the citizens, who were more culpable in producing the difficulty than the Indians. The newspaper accounts, he says, are greatly exaggerated.

Mr. Cushman, the recently appointed minister to the Argentine Confederation, received his instructions to-day and started on his destination.

ST. LOUIS, July 29, 9.30 P. M.—A special dispatch to the Democrat says three men arrived at St. Joseph, bringing $12,500 in gold dust. These parties disposed of eight thousand dollars at Omaha, making a total of twenty thousand five hundred dollars from the Kansas mines.

The Kansas Constitutional Convention adjourned sine die to-night. The Constitution was adopted by a vote of 34 to 13, all Democrats voting against, and refusing to sign it.

PORTLAND, July 29.—Last night the Machine shop of Mr. Geo. Hall, on Fourth street, was completely destroyed by fire, together with the Last Factory of Mr. Moore, the Blacksmith shop of Stephen Noyes, the Cooper shop of Geo. McLellan, and a considerable quantity of lumber.

NEW ORLEANS, July 29.—The steamship Granada, from Havana on the 26th, via Key West, has arrived here. Sugar dull but unchanged. Sterling exchange 113¾@112; exchange on New York 5 per cent.

CINCINNATI, July 29.—Cassius M. Clay spoke to a large and silent audience at Covington, Kentucky, to-night. He took neither sides. He denounced Bell and Magoffin as political quacks. His speech was straight out Republican, and he called upon the non-slave holders of Kentucky to prepare to share in a national triumph of the Republicans next fall.

NEW YORK, July 30.—In relation to the New church scheme reported to be favored by prominent Unitarian Ministers, the Rev. Mr. Osgood makes a positive refutation of the Evening Post's story, concerning his connection therewith, in a spicy and sarcastic letter. He also explains the discourse of Dr. Bellows, which gave rise to the report of his meaning, having been misapprehended for his using the word catholic in the philosophic instead of the ritual sense, and nothing having been said by him to justify the statement that he favors any new hierarchacy or any revival of the old pageantry. In conclusion Mr. Osgood says, he should be very glad to see a new Catholic church of the true stamp arise.

PITTSBURGH, July 30.—The following letter from President Buchanan was received this morning by the Hon. Wilson McCandless:

"BEDFORD SPRINGS, 29th of July, 1859.

"MY DEAR SIR:—I have received your kind note of the 29th inst., with a leader from the Post. Whilst I appreciate as it deserves the ability and friendship displayed in the editorial, I yet regret it has been published. My determination—not under any circumstances to become a candidate for re-election—is final and conclusive. My best judgment and strong inclination unite in favor of this course. To cast doubts upon my predetermined purpose is calculated to impair my influence in carrying out important measures, and afford a pretext for saying that these have been dictated by a desire to be re-nominated. With kindest regards, &c., I remain, sincerely and respectfully, your friend,

(Signed) "JAMES BUCHANAN."

BOSTON, July 30.—The express train from New Bedford and Fall River this morning ran into a private carriage which was crossing the track near North Bridgewater. A lady and child, who were in the carriage, were instantly killed, and the other occupants, a gentleman and lady, received fatal injuries. The names of the parties have not been ascertained.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Information has been received at the State Department that proper steps have been taken by the Chinese government to carry into effect the arrangements by Ex-Minister Reed, for the payment of the various claims of American citizens, amounting to about $700,000.

ST. LOUIS, July 30.—Prof. Wise made an ascension from Washington Square at 11 o'clock to-day. He intends descending at or near Lafayette, Indiana, [illegible] arrangements are made to re-inflate, and where he will again ascend and proceed eastward.

ST. LOUIS, July 30.—There is not much change to note in the river since last night. Weather cool with slight rain since 11 o'clock and indications of its continuance all day.

ST. LOUIS, July 31.—The Overland mail arrived here last night.

Reports indicate the election of Major Dodge as a delegate to Congress from Carson Valley.

The loss by the fire on the 5th amounts to $100,000.

There is much excitement in Nevada and Eldorado counties in consequence of gold discoveries on Walker River, east Sierra, Nevada.

The bark Messenger Bird, which left Rio Janeiro mysteriously, some months ago, was at Tobita in the middle of May, from whence the captain shipped two hundred thousands pounds of coffee to San Francisco, by the ship William, which was seized by the Sheriff on account of the real owners. It was reported that the captain had already realized fifty thousand dollars on the cargo.

The sloop-of-war Warren left San Francisco on the 5th, for Panama.

The Fort Smith Times says, that the Creek and Cherokee Indians have opened hostilities in consequence of murders committed by the former.

Four hundred Creeks were armed, awaiting the movements of the Cherokees.

LOVELAND, O., July 31.—The heavy rains today caused a rapid rise in the streams, washing about two hundred feet under the track of the Little Miami R. R., at Foster's crossing. The track was let down considerably, but men are now at work on the break, and it will be O. K. in a few hours.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The construction of the Washington National Monument, after a suspension of several years, is about to be resumed. Systems to raise funds for the prosecution of the work have been put in operation, and it is purposed to request the Postmasters throughout the country to give their aid to the enterprise by placing boxes within their respective offices for the reception of contributions and forwarding the returns to Washington. A few cents a month from the thirty thousand Post-Offices would suffice in a few years to raise the staff to its intended height.

The Postmasters of many of the principal cities, including those of New York, Washington, Boston, Brooklyn, Baltimore and Charleston, have already expressed their readiness to lend it a cordial co-operation.

The Postmaster General has written a letter to Lieut. Ives, the Engineer in charge of the monument, in which he says, it is the privilege of Postmasters and others associated with the postal service, in common with all other citizens, to give to this enterprise such support as their judgments and feelings may prompt as citizens and not as officers; that their influence will be invoked, and, I doubt not, that in this laudable endeavor worthily to illustrate and perpetuate the fame of the Father of his Country, they will yield none in the promptness and earnestness of their co-operation.

PHILADELPHIA, August 1.—Hon. Richard Rush died in this city on Saturday morning, aged seventy-nine.

ST. LOUIS, July 31.—The St. Joseph Journal of the 30th learns that a band of fifty Omaha Indians were attacked by a large party of Sioux one hundred miles from Decatur, Nebraska, on the 23d. Seventeen were killed and seventeen wounded. The Omahas took five Sioux scalps.

CLEVELAND, August 1.—A Wool Fair will be held here on the 4th inst. Public sale will take place on the 5th. Fine samples of Ohio, Indiana and Michigan are already exhibited.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The steamer Northern Light has arrived, with dates from Aspinwall to the 23 inst. Gen. Lamar is a passenger.

The dates from Valparaiso are to July 3d. Chili had agreed to pay $15,000 indemnity to the owners of the American ship Franklin, detained at Lalcahuano in 1832.

The town of Ancoal had been nearly destroyed by fire; loss $50,000.

Callao dates to July 12th, state that the late attempt at revolution in South Peru had been put down, and an amnesty granted. Gen. Castillo and Dr. Ureta are reported as having been defeated by the government forces.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Col. Sim Johnson, one of the editors of the late Washington Union, who several months ago was appointed Consul to Havre, has tendered his resignation. The office, however, is not open for competition. So numerous have the applications for situations in the Census Bureau already become, that in order to facilitate responses thereto, printed forms have been prepared, stating that no additional clerical force will be required until next year.

Secretary Toucey has returned from his northern trip. A letter received from Secretary Floyd, who is now at the Virginia Springs, states that his health is slowly improving.

PRICES CURRENT.

CORRECTED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY WALKER & SON.

COLUMBUS, August 3, 1859.

Wheat, red, ℔ bush.	90	Hams	12@13c
do white do	1 00	Dried beef	12@14
Flour, ℔ barrel	[illegible] 00	Pork, Mess	$15 00
Corn, ℔ bushel	65	Hogs	4 [illegible] 00
Rye, ℔ bushel	75	Potatoes ℔ bushel	1 [illegible] 1 75
Oats, ℔ bushel	30	Turnips, ℔ bushel	20
Clover Seed ℔ bush.	5 00	Onions, ℔ bushel	[illegible]
Timothy " do	2 00	Apples, green, ℔ bush.	1 [illegible]
Beans, ℔ bush.	1 00	Apples, dried, ℔ bush.	2 00
Sugar ℔ ℔	[illegible]	Peaches pared, ℔ bu.	4 00
Molasses	[illegible]	Beeswax, ℔ ℔	25
Butter, ℔ ℔	10	Wool, ℔ ℔	[illegible]
Eggs, ℔ dozen	10	Feathers, ℔ ℔	40
Cheese ℔ ℔	10	Chickens, alive, ℔ pair	25
Lard ℔ ℔	14	Chickens dressed, ℔ ℔	6
Tallow, ℔ ℔	10	Turkey, alive, each	[illegible]
Salt, ℔ bbl.	1 75	Turkeys, dressed, ℔ ℔	6
Rock salt	[illegible] 00	Whiskey, ℔ gallon	[illegible]
Hides, ℔ ℔	5½	Hay, ℔ ton	10 00@12 00
White Fish per bbl.	10 00	Wood, ℔ cord	1 [illegible] 2 00
Mackerel No 1	20 00	Potash, ℔ bbl.	4 [illegible] 5 00
" No 2	17 00	Rio Coffee	12@14c
" No 3	13@14	Rice	[illegible]
Tea	50, 75, 100

Markets.

CINCINNATI, August 2.—The market for wheat is active and prices firmer, though not quotably higher; sales of 3,000 bu prime white at $1 16; 600 do good at $1 14; 350 do do at $1 12; 600 do do red at $1 06. Corn steady and firm at 80@82c. Rye advanced to 80c for prime. Barley unchanged. Oats in brisk demand at 45c for new and 48@50c for old. Flour unchanged with a firm feeling and fair local demand; sales of 1,600 bbls at $4 90@5 00 for superfine and $5@5 25 for extra. Whisky firm with a good demand; sales of 300 bbls at 24@24½c. Provisions—6,000 tierces hams in pails sold at $7 70 per hundred pounds. The demand for sugar is firm at 7@7½c. Molasses firm at 36c. Coffee steady at 11¼@11⅝c.

NEW YORK, August 2.—Flour heavy; sales of 7,000 bbls. Wheat higher; sales 4,000 bushel at an advance of 1@2c, red $1 20@1 28, white $1 42. Corn declining old mixed 78c. Pork heavy at $15 for mess and $10.75 for prime. Lard heavy. Whisky lower at 28c.

PHILADELPHIA, August 2.—The flour market continues dull; sales for export of 1,000 bbls of good brands superfine at $5 00; old stock offered at $5; sales to the trade from the lowest figure up to $6 75 for common and fancy. Rye flour and cornmeal dull at $3 75 for former, and $3 62 for latter. Wheat—small sales of 2,700 bu at $1 20@1 25 for red, and $1 30@1 33 for white. Rye steady at 79c. Corn comes forward slowly, but very little demand; sales of yellow at 79@80c. Oats plenty and dull, 4,000 bu of prime Pennsylvania old sold at 35@38c, and new at 50c. Whisky dull at 26@26c.

BALTIMORE, August 2.—Flour firm; the market closed with an advancing tendency for Howard street and Ohio. Wheat firm and unchanged; 10,000 bushel sold. Corn very dull; at a decline of 2@3c; sales of white and yellow at 75@78c. Provisions unchanged. Whisky steady.

New York Cattle Market.

[From the Tribune's Cattle Market of Wednesday.]

NEW YORK, August 2.

There were 2,234 head of Beef Cattle yarded in 44th street to-day, with a few to come for the supply of market this week. A very large proportion of them were of inferior and medium grades, and owing to scarcity of such Cattle as are wanted by the first class retail market butchers, the brokers made a strong move toward getting an advance upon the rates at which such Cattle sold last week, meeting, however, with but poor success. Up to one o'clock there had been very few Cattle sold, and then it was so extremely hot that buyers and sellers seemed to prefer the shade, so that the market had very little appearance of animation till near night.

We doubt whether sales were any in advance of last Tuesday—that is, 10@10½c nett per ℔ for the best bullocks in the pens, and we are pretty certain that those of pretty fair quality for summer retailing could be had in any number at less than 10c. The sales of the day closed with a good stock on hand for to-morrow, of all grades but the best, at last week's rates.

☞ Buy AYER'S AGUE CURE for Intermittents, AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for a Cough, and AYER'S PILLS for all the purposes of a Family Physic.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.—Are you sick, no matter what organ is affected, depend upon it the blood, which is the food and sustenance of every organ, is full of corruption! My Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier break up the source of disease in the fluids of the body. They purge and purify the elements of the blood. Hence their quick and complete cures in dyspepsia, scrofula, eruptions, fits, tumors, nervousness, kidney complaints, piles, low fevers, debility, rheumatism, headache, want of sexual vigor, &c., &c. These remedies are astonishing the whole medical world.—See advertisement.

CITY NOTICES.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 23, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

E. SHAFFER,

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on,
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in Warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in Columbus. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. DUNNE on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. CHITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

C. A. WAGNER, dealer in Fruits, Preserves, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of game and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention. The Saloon is in "good condition." No. 21 East State Street.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's., celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed unequaled.

☞ DR. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at RUDISILL'S if you want a superior article.

☞ FASSIG'S Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

☞ ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ CHARLEY BREYFOGLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ FRANK HERTFAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

Sensation Books.

L'AMOUR. By Michelet.
The Roman Question. By E. About.
The Two Paths. By Ruskin.
At the New Book Store.
J. H. RILEY & CO.

CAPITOL SALOON AND RESTAURANT
(Under the Goodale House.)

HAVING completely renovated the establishment, and recently received new supplies of LIQUORS AND CIGARS,

The Proprietor begs leave to announce to the public and his friends, that he is ready to wait upon them, and furnish anything in the line of his business.

His RESTAURANT is in full operation, with the best cook in the city.

The Bar is attended in person, and with the most native assistants.

Turtle Soup Served up every Sunday.

JOHN O'HARA, Proprietor.

The Westport Border Star,
PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT WESTPORT, MO.

TERMS.—1 Copy 1 year $2; 1 Copy 6 months $1; 10 Copies 1 year $15; 10 Copies 6 months $8.

FOR THE STATES AND TERRITORIES, Immediately on the Great Thoroughfare to Santa Fe.

This is the first point in the States that is reached by travelers from the Plains and from the Rocky Mountains, from Utah, from New Mexico, and FROM THE NEWLY FOUND GOLD MINES!

Our facilities for obtaining late and reliable intelligence from the great Western Territories are unsurpassed by any press on the borders. We have resident correspondents at Santa Fe, Albuquerque, Las Vegas, Conexos, Salt Lake, Omaha, Fort Scott, Leavenworth, and all the most important points of western commerce.

It is the determination of the proprietors to make the Border Star

A FIRST CLASS NEWSPAPER,

And to further this object they will spare neither labor nor expense.

THE EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

Is under the control of H. M. MCCARTY, late of Kentucky, who has made the "STAR" not only one of the best NEWS JOURNALS in the West, but one that has taken no mean rank as A GAZETTE OF LITERATURE, COMMERCE AND POLITICS.

Orders for the "BORDER STAR" will be attended to if left with the editor of the People's Press.

E. BASSETT LANGDON, Attorney at Law,
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
Office No. 10 West Third street.

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

SPENCER HOUSE,
By Pratt and Metcalf,
COR. FRONT & BROADWAY,
jy21] CINCINNATI, O.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.
A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Bar and Restaurant supplied with the best of everything. June 2.

E. D. COOKE. JAMES TAYLOR.

COOKE & TAYLOR.
WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Columbus and vicinity that they have opened a CUSTOM SHOP, and are ready to execute all orders in the line of Tailoring. We respectfully solicit the patronage of our old Customers as well as new ones. THEIR LOC. No. 109 South High street.

LATEST BOOKS.
Mountain. By the author of Self for the Sufferer.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pastor. By Rev. Phelps.
The Convalescent. By N. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Steuben.
Napoleon's Ideas.
Prairie Farming in America.
June 8, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers.
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and open Ditches, and especially with Tiles; including Tables of Rain Fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Agnel's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Kenny's Manual of Chess.
Chess and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
Staunton's Chess Tournament.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & Co.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT,
In the Basement of "the Goodale House,"
By JOHN O'HARA,
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
Every luxury brought to this market, constantly received, and prepared in the most acceptable manner.

He has a French Cook,
Who has had long experience and the best instruction in his business.

The Capitol Saloon,
Connected with the Restaurant, is a favorite resort, and where every variety of wines and liquors are kept of the very best quality.
The cigars have been selected with great care, and are of the choicest most expensive varieties.
June 21.

WM. DENNISON
—AND—
H. B. CARRINGTON,
Attorneys & Counsellors at Law,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
Office, Nos. 1 and 2 Odeon Building. Special attention given to the Law of Patents and Insurance. [1y14

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.
CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Wines and Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free lunch daily from 10½ a. m. to 12 m. One of EXERT'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been secured, and the services of a fine performer make the saloon one of the best in the city.

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000, Assets $204,000.
Offices 237 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N.Y.
This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes in Port, Household Furniture, and other personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BUDINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent.
may28 Columbus Ohio.

Cheap Dry Goods.
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS
Embracing a Variety,
Not exceeded in this market.
Silks, Delaines, Challies, Lawns, Berages, Robes, Calicoes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles.
Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price Store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
may 18. J. C. CHITTENDEN.

NEW LAW BOOKS.
VOLUMES SMITH'S NEW YORK COURT of Appeals.
Vol. 2 Blatchford's Circuit Court Reports.
Vol. 9 Gray's Massachusetts Reports.
Vol. 21 Howard's United States Court Reports.
Vols. 1, 2 and 3 Smith's Bench Reports.
Vol. 8 Ohio Supreme Court Reports.
Parson's Laws of Business, for Business men.
Matthews' Guardians' Guide.
Holman & Disbrow's Guide, Treatise and Forms.
For sale at the New Bookstore.
J. H. RILEY & Co.
N. B.—A full supply of Law Books of the latest editions always on hand. [1y14

New and Good Books.
DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law.
Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England. New Ed. with additions.
Poems: By Wm. Cullen Bryant.
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Sea Yarns.
Dream Land.
The Pioneer Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Trust Him and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Arago's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store.
june29 J. H. RILEY & Co.

DESHLER ICE.
Charles G. Deshler is serving his customers with Superior Ice. He expects to be delivered regularly, and the ice is not more frosted. His carriages will run throughout the season.
June 15.

JOHN H. WHEELER,
INSURANCE AGENT,
Notary Public
AND COLLECTOR.
Office 21 High Street, Savage's Block.
☞ First class Fire and Life Insurance Companies represented. All business attended to promptly. [1y14

J. A. LESTER.] [DAVID C. [illegible]

CLARENDON HOTEL,
CORNER OF SEVENTH & POPLAR STS.
ST. LOUIS, MO.,
Opposite the Pacific Railroad Depot.
J. A. LESTER & CO., PROPRIETORS.
TERMS, - - $1 50 PER DAY.
☞ All Baggage taken to and from the Depot Free of Charge. All persons stopping at the Clarendon Hotel will be conveyed to all Railroad Depots in the city on the Railroad Lines of Omnibuses, FREE OF CHARGE.

FRESH MEATS! FRESH MEATS!!
D. W. HILL.
Columbus Meat Market,
North-East Cor. of Broad and Front Sts.
Has constantly choice fresh and salted Beef, Pork, Mutton, Lamb, &c., which his Ice chests enable him to keep sweet in the warmest weather.
Market attended regularly, where his customers will be served with the choicest meats to be procured in the country.
Thankful for the liberal custom by his patrons, he endeavors will be to merit its continuation.
June 30.

COLUMBUS
Machine Manufacturing Company,
MANUFACTURERS OF
STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,
CASTINGS,
MILL GEARING,
MACHINERY,
—ALSO—
RAILROAD WORK.
P. AMBOS, Treas. CHAS. AMBOS, Supt.
June 23-tf

E. CORNELISON,
TUNER
AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
[illegible]
Also, particular attention paid to
TUNING AND REPAIRING ORGANS.
☞ Orders left at Seltzer & Webster's Music Store, will receive prompt attention.

1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs,
Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OVER 400 VISITORS.
[illegible]
For Room or other information, address
A. WILSON & WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio.
June16

The Best Pianos
IN THE UNITED STATES ARE
MANUFACTURED BY WM. KNABE & CO.
Of Baltimore, who have always received
THE "FIRST PREMIUM!"
Over "CHICKERING," and all other competitors. No one doubts this, as the facts are too well known.
THAT BASE FALSEHOOD
in J. C. Wood's advertisement is still kept before the public, though
WE HAVE CHALLENGED HIM!
and have the documents to confirm the falsity. But the Chickering agent is unwilling to accept our challenge of A Trial of the Instruments!
and continues his untrue advertisement. We must continue to brand him as A PERVERTER OF THE TRUTH!!
[j.21] SELTZER & WEBSTER.

New Paint Shop.
THE SUBSCRIBERS ARE PREPARED TO DO
House, Sign, Carriage
AND
Ornamental Painting.
China White, Graining, Papering, and Glazing. Sash and Blinds for sale; Paints ready mixed; all colors; Linseed Oil, Turpentine, Varnishes of all kinds, and Japan for sale.
☞ Shop in Kirk's New Building, rear of the Neil House.
jy21-3m] VAN BUREN & PINKERTON.

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE!
CARPENTER'S BUILDING, COLUMBUS, OHIO.
THE MOST THOROUGH AND PRACTICAL INSTITUTION FOR FITTING YOUNG MEN FOR BUSINESS IN THE COUNTRY.
S. I. MCCOY - - - - Principal.
S. I. McCoy, Teacher of Book-keeping and Plain and Ornamental Penmanship.
DAN'L WORLEY, Teacher of Book-keeping, Mathematics and English Grammar.
R. W. ANDREWS, Esq., Lecturer on the Laws of Business, and Political Economy.
TERMS—Payable in advance.
For a full and unlimited course in all the Departments, with the privilege of review at the pleasure of the Student, [illegible]
The Principal has received the first premium for the best specimens of Plain and Ornamental Penmanship at the State and County Fairs, and at the U. S. Fair. He professes to the Public a pledge of scholarship and the best discipline, and comparison with all others. [illegible]
Rooms Open Day and Evening.
Send for Circular and Specimens of Writing, Inclosing stamp. Address, S. I. MCCOY, Columbus, Ohio.
jy7-tf

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS,
BLANK BOOKS,
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, on hand, or made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES,
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices,
supplied with any article in the line of Stationery, on the best terms, and all Work warranted.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS.
JOB PRINTING, BOOK BINDING.
A full supply at all times of Valuable Standard Works, Foreign and American Books.
A large stock of Valuable Miscellaneous Books at all Times. All the new Books received direct.
French, English and American Stationery
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.
Window Shades and Fixtures, Window Cornices, Gilt Mirrors, from 3 to 8ft; French Plate; Oil Paintings and Engravings, Picture and Picture Frames always on hand and made to order. Cutlery and Gold Pens. Work Boxes and Dressing Cases; Card Cases and Porte Monnaies, Hair, Nail and Tooth Brushes; Pocket Books, Wallets, &c.

New Books.
FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
VIEWS and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA; or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederic S. Cozzens.
SEACLIFF; or the Mystery of the Westervelts. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Treatise on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Henry J. Macdonald.
The Shepherd of Assam. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journal of Five Years in Asia, Asia and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland. (7 vols., cloth.)
The Life of William Von Humboldt. By Friedrich Bopp.
Ten Walks in Waldheim. [illegible] the New York Home Journal.
The Wife and the Child. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Sunbeams. [illegible]
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
We Have Marked the Strongholds. By W. [illegible]
Memoirs of Thompson. [illegible]
Life of General H. Havelock, K. C. B. By J. T. Headley.
The Good Reason of God Sermons. By Charles Kingsley.
J. H. RILEY & CO.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 1, 1850

[The following poem is credited to Mrs. JULIA BRANCH, one of the strong-minded women of the day, who "stoop from their high sphere," and seek notoriety rather than reputation. We confess we have not been a subscriber of Miss BRANCH as an advocate of doubtful morality and a new dispensation, but the tenderness and sweetness of this poem, the only one of hers we have seen, dictates the delicate heart of feeling which hails the maternal heart, and command admiration. The hand that wrote the stanzas to "My Boy" is capable of tracing high thought and weaving the brightest wreaths of poesy. —[Ed. P. P.

MY BOY.

My little boy lies sleeping. Sinless now
Are the bad feelings quickly roused lately,
And the blue veins beneath his thoughtful brow,
Are closed entirely.

One hand lies hid among the locks that float,
In careless grace, upon the rustling pillow;
The other on his breast rides like a boat
On quiescent billows.

About his mouth, where play his waking tides
His willful mischiefs in its rare confusion,
And undisturbed his closed, intelligent lids
In safe seclusion.

He cannot offend. The tired sunset at the door,
And in the room the firelight's fitful gleaming
Makes pleasant shadows where the moon's faint
I sit a-dreaming. [pour

I see after-fulfilled, uncertain land,
That in the future waits his manhood's coming,
And strive to distinguish, with love's strong hand,
Its misty beginning.

And in the old time runs of tarnished kings,
The warrior of the purple of the Poet?
Or like the hermit of which the Poet sings?
His life will show it.

And if he be a soul from fabulous Arn,
Though he should wear no laurel, sing no story,
To bear his part with honor can shall be Enough of glory.

[Have heard of Mrs. PARSON WILLIS says "Death" is destined to take a high rank, and that each young—perhaps old—person who writes like an angel and should be one, although she will not thank us, perhaps, for suggesting that she ought to be in heaven. Her modesty, we are glad to see is there on earth; and gives voice to those rich thoughts that, on earth to

"Sweet their memory left behind"

It is not every day that a "Baby Bard" bequeaths such touching memories and so pathetic.—[Ed. P. P.

BABY BORN.

Winsome baby Bard
Brighter than the stars that glow
In the dusky evening skies,
Sweeter than the dew that lies
Clearer than A woodland Spring,
Are the eyes of baby Bard—
Winsome baby Bard

Smile, mother, smile!
Twinking softly all the while
Of a tender, blissful day,
When the dark eyes, as the there
Of the cherub on your knee,
Stole your girlish heart away—
Oh! theyre of baby Bard

Weep, mother, weep!
Put the little one asleep
With her head [illegible]
Then the baby's rose-white fingers,
Not its patient, shining eyes
Or the music of the voice,
In your memory can ever
Then the wee pink hands and feet
Of the wide baby Bard—
Winsome baby Bard!

Pray, mother, pray!
Pain and Chaos may loom the while,
Wandering blindly from the light,
Lady, and nameless will your prayer!
Then can this golden image
Oh! the dimpled feet of Bard!
In the [illegible] sweetness exposed,
Still the baby hands of Bard!
Then the rose-leaves in your breast!
heaven will gleam at your
But to find them empty there!
Those shall filter many a day,
Bruised and bleeding by the way
Ere they reach the land of rest!
Pray, mother, pray!

THE RING FETTER.

From the Atlantic Monthly for August.

There are long stretches in the course of the Connecticut River, where its tranquil current assumes the aspect of a lake, its sudden bends cut off the lovely reach of water, and its heavily wooded banks lie silent and green, undisturbed, except by the shriek of the passing steamer, casting golden-green reflections into the stream at twilight, and shadows of deepest blackness, star-pierced, at remoter depths of night. Here, now and then, a stray gull from the sea sends a flying throb of white light across the mirror below, or the sweeping wings of a hawk paint their moth-like image on the blue surface, or a little flaw of wind shudders across the water in a black ripple; but except for these casual stirs of Nature, all is still, oppressive and beautiful, as earth seems to the trance-sleeper on the brink of his grave.

In one of these reaches, though on either side the heavy woods sweep down to the shore and hang over it as if deliberating whether to plunge in, on the eastern bank there is a tiny meadow just behind the tree-fringe of the river, completely hedged in by the deep woods, and altogether hidden from any inland road; nor would the traveler on the river discover it, except for the chimney of a house that peers above the yellow willows and seems in that desolate seclusion as startling as a daylight ghost. But this dwelling was built and deserted and weather-beaten long before the date of our story. It had been erected and inhabited during the Revolution, by an old Tory, who, foreseeing the result of the war, better than some of his contemporaries, and being unwilling to expose his person to the chances of battle or his effects to confiscation, maintained a strict neutrality, and a secret trade with both parties; thereby welcoming peace and independence, fully stocked with the dislike and suspicion of his neighbors, and a large quantity of Continental "fairy-money." So, when Abner Dimock died, all he had to leave to his only son was the red house on "Dimock's Meadow," and a ten-acre lot of woodland behind and around the green plateau where the house stood.—These possessions he strictly entailed on his heirs forever, and nobody being sufficiently interested in its alienation to inquire into the State laws concerning the validity of such an entail, the house remained in the possession of the direct line, and in the year 18— belonged to another Abner Dimock, who kept tavern in Greenfield, a town of Western Massachusetts, and, like his father and grandfather before him, had only one son. In the meantime, the old home in Hiddam township had fallen into a ruinous condition, and, as the farm was very small, and unprofitable chestnut-woodland at that, the whole was leased to an old negro and his wife, who lived there in the most utter solitude, scratching the soil for a few beans and potatoes, and in the autumn gathering nuts, or in the spring roots for bear, with which Old Jack paddled up to Middletown, to barter home a return freight of salt pork and rum.

The town of Greenfield, small though it was, and at the very top of a high hill, was yet the county town, subject to annual incursions of lawyers, and such "thrilling incidents" as arise from the location of a jail and a court-room within the limits of any village. The scenery had a certain summer charm of utter quiet that did it good service with some healthy people of well regulated and insensitive tastes From Greenfield Hill one looked away over a wide stretch of rolling country; low hills, in long, desolate waves of pasturage and grain, relieved here and there by a mass of black woodland, or a red farm-house and barns clustered against a hill-side, just over a wooden spire in the shallow valley, about which were gathered a few white houses, giving signs of life thrice a day in tiny threads of smoke rising from their prim chimneys; and over all, the pallid skies of New England, where the sun wheeled his thorn beams from east to west as coldly as if no tropic suns mirrored his more fervid glow thousands of miles away, and the chilly moon beamed with irreproachable whiteness across the round gray hills and the straggling pond, beloved of frogs and mud-turtles, that Greenfield held in honor under the name of Squam Lake

Perhaps it was the scenery, perhaps the air, possibly the cheapness of the place as far as all the necessaries of life went, that tempted Judge Hyde to pitch his tent there, in the house his father's had built long ago, instead of wearing his judicial honors publicly, in the city where he attained them; but, whatever the motive might be, certain it is that at the age of forty he married a delicate beauty from Baltimore, and came to live on Greenfield Hill, in the great white house with a gambrel roof and dormer windows, standing behind certain huge maples, where Major Hyde and Parson Hyde and Deacon Hyde had all lived before him.

A brief Northern summer bloomed gayly enough for Adelaide Howard Hyde when she made her bridal tour to her new home; and cold as she found the aspect of that house, with its formal mahogany chairs, high-backed, and carved in grim festoons and ovals of incessant repetition, —its penitential couch of a sofa, where only the iron spine of a Revolutionary heroine could have found rest,—its pinched, starved, and double-starched portraits of defunct Hydes, Puritanic to the very ends of toepet and perwig,—little Miss Hyde was deep enough in love with her tall and handsome husband to overlook the upholstery of a home he glorified, and to care little for comfort elsewhere, so long as she could nestle on his knees and rest her curly head against his shoulder. Besides, between grew, even in Greenfield, there were damask roses and old-fashioned lilies enough in the square garden to have furnished a whole century of pastoral idyls; and it the posy-bed under the front windows were tulips of Chinese awkwardness and splendor, beds of pinks spicy as all Arabia, blue hyacinths heavy with sweetness as well as bells, "pinies" rubicund and rank, hearts-ease clustered against the house, and sticky rose-coscias, pretty and inarticulate, not to mention the groundsel files of hollyhocks that contended with fennel-bushes and scarlet-flowered beans for the pseudeans, and the hosts of wild flowers that bloomed by woodedges and pond-shores, wherever corn or potatoes spared a foot of soil for the lovely weeds. So in Judge Hyde's frequent absences, at court or conclave, hither and yon, (for the Judge was a political man,) it was his pretty wife's chief amusement, when her delicate fingers ached with embroidery, or her head spun with efforts to learn housekeeping from Old Keery, the time-out-of-mind authority in the Hyde family, a bad-humored, good-tempered old maid,—it was, indeed, the little Southerner's only amusement,—to make the polish and mustiness of those dreary front-parlors gay and fragrant with flowers; and though Judge Hyde's sense of the ridiculous was not remarkably keen, it was too much to expect of him that he should do otherwise than laugh long and loud, when, suddenly returning from Taunton one summer day, he tracked his wife by snatches of song into the "company rooms," and found her on the floor, her hair about her ears, tying a thick garland of red peonies, intended to decorate the picture of the original Hyde, a dreary old fellow, in bands, and grasping a Bible in one wooded hand, while a distant view of Plymouth Bay and the Mayflower tried to convince the spectator that he was transported, among other antediluvians, by that Noah's ark, to the New World.—On either hand hung the little Flora's great-grandmother-in-law, and her great-grandfather accordingly, Mrs. Mehitable and Parson Job Hyde, peering out, one from a bushy ornament of pink damask-blossoms, and the other from an airy and delicate garland of the wanton sweet-pea, each stony pair of eyes seeming to glare with Medusan intent at the promising of their state and dignity. "Isn't it charming, dear?" said the innocent little beauty, with a satisfaction half doubtful, as her husband's laugh went on.

But for every butterfly there comes an end to summer. The flowers dropped from the frames and died in the garden; a pitiless winter set in; and day after day the mittened and muffled school-boy, dragging his sled through drifts of heavy snow to school, eyed curiously the wan, wistful face of Judge Hyde's wife pressed up to the pane of the window, its great restless eyes and shadowy hair bringing to mind some captive bird that pines and beats against the cage. Her husband absent from home long and often, full of affairs of "court and state,"—her delicate organization, that lost its flickering vitality by every exposure to cold,—her lonely days and nights,—the interminable sewing, that now, for her own reason she would trust to no hands but her own,—conscious incapacity to be what all the women about her were stirring, active, hardy housekeepers,—a vague sense of shame, and a great dread of the future,—her comfortless and motherless condition,—slowly, but surely, like frost, and wind, and rain, and snow, beat on this frail blossom, and it went with the rest. Japonicas were laid against her dark hair and in her fair hands, when she was carried to the lonely graveyard of Greenfield, where mulleins and asters, golden-rod, blackberry-vines, and stunted yellow-pines adorned the last sleep of the weary wife and mother; for she left behind her a weak-old baby,—a girl,—wailing prophetically in the square bedroom where its mother died.

Judge Hyde did not marry again, and he named his lady Mehitable. She grew up as a half-orphaned child with an elderly and undemonstrative father would naturally grow,—shy, sensitive, timid, and extremely grave. Her dress, thanks to Aunt Keery and the minister's wife, (who looked after her for her mother's sake,) was always well provided and neat, but no way calculated to cultivate her taste or to gratify the beholder. A district school provided her with such education as it furnished her children, and the library, that was her resort at all hours of the day, furthered her knowledge in a singular and varied way, since its lightest contents were histories of all kinds and sorts, unless one may call the English Classics lighter reading than Home Incidents.

But at length the district schoolma'am could teach Mehitable Hyde no more, and the Judge suddenly discovered that he had a pretty daughter of fourteen, ignorant enough to shock his sense of propriety, and delicate enough to make it useless to think of sending her away from home to be buffeted in a boarding-school. Nothing was left for him but to undertake her education himself; and having a theory that a thorough course of classics, both Greek and Latin, was the foundation of all knowledge, half a score of dusty grammars were brought from the garret, and for two hours every morning and afternoon little Miss Hitty worried her innocent soul over conjugations and declensions and particles, as perservingly as any professor could have desired. But the dreadful part of the lessons to Hitty was the recitations after tea; no matter how well she knew every inflection of a verb, every termination of a noun, her father's cold, gray eye, fixed on her for an answer, dispelled all kinds of knowledge, and, for at least a week, every lesson ended in tears. However, there are alleviations to everything in life; and when the child was sent to the garret after her school-books, she discovered another set, more effectual teachers to her than Sallust or the "Graca Minora," even the twelve volumes of "Sir Charles Grandison," and the fewer but no less absorbing tomes of "Clarissa Harlowe;" and every hour she could contrive not to be missed by Keery or her father was spent in that old garret, fragrant as it was with sheaves of all the herbs that grow in field or forest, poring over those old novels, that were her society, her friends, her world.

So two years passed by. Mehitable grew tall and learned, but knew little more of the outside world than ever; her father had learned to love her, and taught her to adore him; still shy and timid, the village offered no temptation to her, so far as society went; and Judge Hyde was beginning to feel that for his child's mental health some freer atmosphere was fast becoming necessary, when a relentless writ was served upon the Judge himself, and one that no man could evade; paralysis smote him, and the strong man lay prostrate,—became bedridden.

Now the question of life seemed settled for Hitty; her father admitted no nursing but hers. Month after month rolled away, and the numb grasp gradually loosed its hold on flesh and sense, but still Judge Hyde was bedridden. Year after year passed by, and no change for better or worse ensued. Hitty's life was spent between the two parlors and the kitchen; for the room her dead mother had decorated was now finished as a bedroom for her father's use, and her own possessions had been removed into the sitting-room next to it, that, sleeping or waking, she might be within call. All the family portraits held a conclave in the other front-parlor, and its north and east windows were shut till the year, save on some sultry summer day when Keery flung them open to dispel damp and must, and the school-children stared in reverentially, and wondered why old Madam Hyde's eyes followed them so far as they could see. Visitors came now and then to the kitchen-door, and usurped Keery's flag-bottomed chair, while they gossiped with her about village affairs; now and then a friendly spinster with a budget of good advice called Hitty away from her post, and after an hour's vain effort to get any news worth retailing about the Judge from those pale lips, retired full of disappointed curiosity to tell how stiff that Mehitable Hyde was, and how hard it was to make her speak to one! Friends were what Hitty read of in the "Spectator," and longed to have; but she knew none of the Greenfield girls since she left school, and the only companion she had was Keery, rough as the east wind, but genuine and kind-hearted,—better at counsel than consolation, and so was adopted to fill the vacant place in Hitty's heart.

So the years were away, and Miss Hyde's early beauty went with them.—She had been a blooming, delicate girl,—the slight grace of a daisy in her figure, wild rose tints on her fair cheek, and golden reflections in her light brown hair, that shone in its waves and curls like sun-shine; but ten years of such service told their story plainly. When Hitty Hyde was twenty-six, her blue eyes were full of sorrow and patience, when the shy lids let their legend be read; the little mouth had become pale, and the corners drooped; her cheek, too, was tireless, though yet round; nothing but the beautiful hair turned; even grace was gone, so long had she stooped over her father. Sometimes the unwakened heart within her destroyed, as a girl's heart will. Stately visions of Sir Charles Grandison bowing before her,—shuddering fascinations over the image of that dreadful Lovelace,—nothing more real haunted Hitty's imagination. She knew what she had to do in life,—that it was not to be a happy wife or mother, but to waste by a bedridden old man, the only creature on earth she loved as she could love. Light and air were denied the plant, but it grew in darkness, blanched and sickly-looking, it is true, but still a growth upward, toward light.

Ten years more of monotonous patience, and Miss Hyde was thirty-six. Her hair had thinned, and was full of silver threads; a wrinkle invaded either cheek, and she was angular and bony; but something painfully sweet lingered in her face, and a certain childlike innocence of expression gave her the air of a child the world had never touched nor taught her.

But now Judge Hyde was dead; nineteen years of petulant, helpless, hopeless wretchedness were at last over, and all that his daughter cared to live for was gone; she was an orphan, without near relatives, without friends, old, and tired out. Do not despise me that I say "old," you plump and rosy ladies whose life is in its prime of joy and use at thirty-six. Age is not counted by years, nor calculated from one's birth; it is a fact of wear and work, altogether unconnected with the calendar. I have seen a girl of sixteen older than you are at forty. I have known others disgrace themselves at sixty-five by liking to play with children and eat sugar-plums!

One kind of youth still remained to Hitty Hyde,—the freshness of inexperience. Her soul was as guileless and as ignorant as a child's; and she was stranded on life, with a large fortune, like a helmless ship, heavily loaded, that breaks from its anchor, and drives headlong upon a reef.

Now it happened, that, within a year after Judge Hyde's death, Abner Dimock, the tavern-keeper's son, returned to Greenfield, after years of absence, a bold-faced, handsome man, well-dressed and "free-handed," as the Greenfield vernacular hath it. Nobody knew where Abner Dimock had spent the last fifteen years; neither did anybody know anything against him; yet he had no good reputation in Greenfield. Everybody looked wise and grave when his name was spoken, and no Greenfield girl cared to own him for an acquaintance. His father welcomed him home with more surprise than pleasure; and the whole household of the Greenfield Hotel, as Dimock's Inn was now-a-days termed to put out of Abner Dimock's way, and obey his eye, as if he were more than master over his children.

Left quite alone, without occupation or amusement, Miss Hyde naturally grasped at anything that came in her way to do or to see to; the lawyer who had been executor of her father's will had settled the estate, and gone back to his home, and Miss Hyde went with him, the first journey of her life, that she might select a monument for her father's grave. It was now near a year since Judge Hyde's death, and the monument was on its way from Boston; the elder Dimock monopolized the cartage of freight as well as passengers to the next town, and to him Miss Hyde intrusted the care of the great granite pillar she had purchased; and it was for his father that Abner Dimock called on the young lady for directions as to the disposal of the tombstone just arrived.—Hitty was in the garden; her white morning-dress shone among the roses, and the morning air had flushed her pale cheek; she looked fair and delicate and gracious; but her helpless ignorance of the world's ways and usages attracted the world-hardened man more than her face. He had not spent a year like in a great city for nothing; he had lived enough with gentlemen, broken-down and lost, it is true, but well-bred, to be able to ape their manners; and the devil's instinct that such people possess warned him of Hitty Hyde's weakest points. So, too, he contrived to make that first errand lead to another, and still another,—to make the solitary woman depend on his help, and expect his coming; fifty thousand dollars, with no more incumbrance than such a woman, was worth sobering for, and the prey was easily snared.

It is not to be expected that any country village of two streets, much less Greenfield, could long remain ignorant of such a new and amazing phase as the deception of any man to any woman therein; but, as nobody liked to interfere too soon in what might only be, after all, a mere business arrangement, Greenfield contented itself with using its eyes, its ears, and its tongues, with one exception to the latter organ's chatter, in favor of Hitty Hyde; to her no one dared as yet approach with gossip or advice.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

[Col. SULLIVAN H. HARRIS, who sits in his easy chair and farms (on paper,) is very eloquent upon the theme of "Harvest," with its golden observes, within he enjoys the shade. What a "Season" of the harvest field he is, to be sure! With what enchantment are he "tunes his oaten pipe" and tells how he "pastures them in," in spite of blustering all the time on the "Harvest home!" We rather think the Colonel handles the hoe with more grace than the "spade and fork," and as smuggler his "Cultivator" makes a breach among the weeds, every now and then.—[Ed. P. P.

THE HARVESTERS.

We gather them in—the bright green leaves,
The sun-browned ears in sheaves,
And the snow-covered cotton, as simplicity weaves
His tithe into a garment for man;
Of he's afraid for the mower's scythe
Hath a ring as of destiny,
Sweeping the earth of its burden blithe,
As it sings in wrathful glee.

We gather them in—the rustling plumes
Of the yellow and hooded grain,
And the flesh of our mother light blooms as
Our march o'er the vanquished plain,
And we come with the shouldering car—
The cumbing of modern town,
And the corners sleep to its sleeping jar—
As it rocks its hungry down.

We gather them in—the waiting fruits
From the shrub, and vine, and tree,
With their russet, and pasture, and purple suits,
To garnish our treasury;
And each hath a juicy treasure stored
Of the nectar we will bring
To cheer the guests at the social board,
In our festive gathering.

We gather it in—the sparkling store,
But not with the miser's gust,
For the Great All-Father we adore,
Hath but given it us in trust.
And our work of each of us shall be
In the wintry days to come,—
Remembering those more needy every home,
And a guest at his threshold sought

AUGUST ON THE FARM.—August is a hot month, and is usually considered the most unhealthy season of the year; but with moderation and temperance in all things the hard working farmer has little to fear. He should, however, pay strict attention to the sanitary condition of the dwelling, cellar, sink drains, cess-pools, compost heap, stagnant water, etc., using plaster, muck and charcoal dust, or some other absorbent or disinfector to fix the noxious and unhealthy gases. In fever and ague districts avoid the damp evening air, and if the weather be inclined to "chilly," build a little fire in the room towards night to purify and dry the atmosphere.

The heaviest labors of the hay and harvest field are now over, and a little relaxation may be enjoyed, although there is still enough to employ one's time in clearing up waste land, getting out stones, stumps and roots, draining wet places, building permanent fence, getting out swamp muck, etc., and especially in preparing the ground for winter grains.

Barn and other manure yards should be examined to see that no rich wash finds its way into the road. If water must run from them during rains, let it be filtered through a muck heap or through a lump of soil before it passes away. As much as possible provide sheds or other covering for the manure, so that it be neither washed by rains nor burned up by the sun. Let no noxious weeds ripen seeds in the yards to be spread over the farm.

Bushes, briers and weeds along hedges and in pastures or meadows should now be cut or grubbed up. Bushes "whipped", this month will not sprout readily.

Cattle—See that the pasturage is sufficient. If the grass is short have recourse to the early soiling crops of millet, corn and sugar cane, especially for milch cows. In providing a mate for the cows and heifers, bear in mind it costs no more to raise a grade of Devon, Durham, Ayrshire, or Alderney, than the most common highway stock.

Cellars should be kept sweet and clean, and well ventilated at this season.

Cisterns and Wells—Now is a good time to dig these, since water reached during this month will usually be permanent. If the barn is not already provided with water, build a large cistern without delay. It will pay.

Corn—Keep the fields free from weeds, but do not plow or cultivate so deep as to injure the roots at this season. Early plantings for forage may be gradually cut and fed.

Draining—The usual dry weather of this month affords a good opportunity to drain wet lands. There is generally a little leisure time now which can profitably be devoted to this purpose. Use tile, stones or wood in blind drains rather than leave open ditches.

Fences—Keep in good repair. Do not invite your cattle to become unruly by leaving a bar down here, a rail or board off there, and a broken down wall in another place. As feed becomes short in the pastures, they are apt to examine closely the fences which separate them from better pickings, especially the corn fields.

Forests—Now is a good time to cut away the forests to increase the tillable land. After felling and trimming up the trees, draw out the heavy wood with oxen and spread and burn the brush, ra, ?, to prepare the ground for winter wheat or rye.

Grain and Granaries—Thresh early and watch the market and speculators at the same time, not omitting to "take the papers." Cleanse granaries and put a little lime in the cevices, the offensive odor of which is frequently a preventive of the attack of weevils and other insects in the bins. See that everything is tight and rat proof.

Hay—Cut salt marsh and sedge, ra, ?, or during the neap tides of this month, so that it may be removed without being flooded with water. Stack upon high ground, or cart it to barns or hovels.

Hogs should not be laid aside unless hand pulling of the weeds is resorted to.—Among late crops the ground should still be stirred with hoes.

In-door—Ventilate the rooms freely, especially in the morning, during hot weather. By opening the chamber or garret windows, and leaving the doors open, an upward draft will almost always be created. Keep rooms and entries clean and sweet, and allow no accumulation of filth or drain deposit about the premises, as August is a month in which every precautionary measure to preserve the health should be observed. Wage war against the tribes of insects which are frequently troublesome at this season. Scalding water used freely about the haunts of roaches and ants will usually rout them.

Manures—Collect all the material possible and keep up the manufactories to furnish a good supply which will soon be needed for winter wheat and rye.

Millet or Hungarian Grass—Continue to cut the successive sowings, if, ra, for milch cows, or for curing as hay. Secure the whole crop before the seed hardens, unless the grain is wanted for feeding or sowing.

Mowing Fields—Whenever you have time, clear from stumps, bushes and stones, that the mowing machine and horse-rake find no obstruction. Now is a good time to cut under-brush and weeds.

Muck—We cannot too strongly urge every one who has a deposit, or who can buy the privilege of digging upon a neighbor's swamp, to get a large stock of it while there is little water in the way.—Remember that every load carted to the yards or stables, and saturated with urine, or mixed with manure, is worth as much as a load of clear manure. It will rarely cost half as much to obtain it. Use it freely about the sink drains and under the privies as a disinfector.

Oats have generally done very well this season, and the remaining crops are now ready for the harvest. Secure with as little injury to the straw as possible.

Pastures—See that the feed is sufficient for grazing animals. A frequent change of ground is beneficial, and in some cases the cattle may be turned into the mowing fields where a good bite of rowen awaits them.

Plowing for winter grain will soon be in order. If the ground is clear of other crops, it may be manured and deeply plowed, subsoiled if possible, ft.

Potatoes—Early plantings are now ready for market, and the ground may receive a crop of, cabbages, turnips, or be sown to wheat or rye in the early part of next month.

Poultry—Those which are necessarily shut up during the day, should be let out about sun down, when they will ready stop to scratch much. They seldom do well unless allowed some liberty.

Root Crops—Keep the ground free from weeds and well stirred between the rows.

Rye—Complete harvesting both winter and spring varieties. Sow winter crop, ft, or early next month, using one and a half bushels to the acre.

Seed Wheat and Rye—Supposing that the feed stuff was pulled from the seed patch it will only be necessary to thresh and sift out the small shrivelled grain and any foreign seed which remains. It would be even better to only partially thresh the heavens, so as to get the ripest and plumpest kernels for seed.

Sheep—Guard against the dogs. Rub a little tar upon the nose, the odor of which is the best preventive against the fly now seeking to deposit its eggs in the nostrils of sheep. Give salt freely.

Soiling Crops—Give cows and other stock a portion of the millet, green corn or sugar cane sown for fodder, now that the feed is getting short.

Swine—Keep their pens and yards well supplied with materials for making manure. If convenient give a small range of pasture or orchard; if not, feed some green stuff, as weeds, grass, corn stalks, or sorghum, daily.

Timber—If it is contemplated to erect buildings of any kind another year, cut the timber now. It will last longer if cut at this season, and be seasoned when wanted. The same applies to fence posts and other timber.

Timothy—Sow by itself, m, for a full crop next year. Sow also with rye or wheat, il, or early next month. Try 12 quarts of seed per acre, and get a finer and better, as well as larger yield.

Tobacco will need cutting, il, in some localities.

Turnips may still be sown, ft, m, among corn and potatoes, or after early crops. Flat or cow-horn varieties should be used instead of ruta bagas for such late sowings. Cultivate, hoe, and thin former plantings.

Weeds—Make into compost, or feed to swine instead of raising for seed, particularly about the manure heap. Canada thistles may be mainly destroyed by cutting them a few inches from the ground when in bloom.

Wheat is mainly cut and stacked, except the late crops of spring sown at the north. The heavy yield in this vicinity, and fine weather cutting and securing it, were very cheering. Prepare grounds by manuring and plowing, and sow, il, at the north, and next month in this latitude and south.—Amer. Agriculturist.

HAY AND HAY-MAKING.—Of the importance of the hay crop we need scarcely remark, save that its value exceeds that of any other product of the northern section of our country. That this value might be largely increased without extending the area devoted to grass, or giving more time to its manufacture into hay, as food for stock, accords with the care and judgment bestowed on its making; and the difference between hay and straw it not so much in the plants themselves, as in the stage of growth in which they are cut, and the curing they receive. One farmer may keep his stock in thriving, fattening order through winter, while another, although he feeds the greatest of more acres of meadow, shall find them constantly failing in condition. The first has hay cured in the best manner, and of such a quality, that a given quantity of it will produce nearly as many pounds of meat or milk as the grass itself would have produced if eaten in the green state.

In what stage of the growth of grass it shall be cut, and the manner in which it shall be cured, have long been acknowledged questions important to the practical farmer, though as yet no decisions in which all acquiesce, have made any one practice the general one. Some cut in the season of flowering, before the blossoms have fallen; others, not until the seed has formed; and others, still, defer the operation (with some grasses) until it is fully ripe. Some cure by exposure to the sun as rapidly as possible; others seek to perform the same process with the smallest expenditure of labor; and others, still, would keep the hay as fully shaded as may be while drying.

Chemistry shows us that all plants contain the largest amount of matter soluble in water, at the period of flowering, and that the sugar and gluten of the grass, and a few other soluble ingredients, constitute its other value as food for animals. These rapidly diminish as the seed forms, changing into insoluble woody fibre, and the hay, which should as far as may be, resemble grass in its most perfect state, is worth much less if not made until after that period.

That process of curing which shall most perfectly retain the nutritive properties present in the plant is the best process. We do not wish to change or evaporate the juices of the grass, but only to dry on the water. In drying herbs for medicinal and culinary uses, the experience of many centuries teaches that drying in the shade is the only way to accomplish the desired object. In making hay this cannot be entirely accomplished, but the plan which most nearly secures it—that of curing in the swath and cock—is a good and safe one; advantageous also, as requiring less exposure to injury from rain than any other.

Clover hay and coarse herdgrass especially need to be cured in the shade, as they lose little handling while dry, without loss of leaves and bloosom. When mowed, let the grass get fairly wilted and all external moisture dried off while in the swath, with perhaps a single shaking up and spreading, and then put into cocks, and it will be cured with little loss of value. In curing by this method, care should be exercised that the hay is not put up before it is fully wilted, and that the cocks be small and well constructed so that the sweating process be not carried to an excess, and induce so great a fermentation as to decompose the sugar of the hay, changing it to alcohol and carbonic acid, both of which soon evaporate.—Country Gentleman.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, (Two-thirds of the members elected to each branch concurring,) in, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next general election for members of the General Assembly, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first section of the second article of the Constitution of the State, to wit: "An regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in December annually

Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MERRILL WILLIAMS, Jr.,
President of the Senate.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE,
COLUMBUS, O., April [illegible], 1850.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original Joint Resolution, as the same remains of record in this office.

JOHN L. TORRENCE, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO,
COLUMBUS, April 16, 1850.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.

June 6-4t

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,

PHILADELPHIA.

A Benevolent Institution, established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Bronchial diseases, and the incompetent practices upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago established a Medical Charity, for the GRATUITOUS RELIEF of worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of their class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, age, occupation, habits of life, &c. Also, to publish, for gratuitous distribution, a Treatise on these diseases, containing the result of the Association's experience, and the views of the most eminent Physicians in the country. This Treatise will be sent to any address, post paid, on application to the Agent.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report from the transactions of the past year, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the laborers. Their Spasmodic Remedies, Wind, Pectoral Syrup, Diuretic, Sedative, Aperient, Anodyne, Specific, Tonic, Expectorant, Diaphoretic, Alterative, and Stimulant, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail to a select number, FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the Causes, Symptoms, and Successful Means of Cure, will be sent to applicants for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted, some of the newest and most valuable of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or Treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.
ISAAC D. WELSH, President.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for cherishes of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of the most desperate cases, in the city and country, is sufficient warrant for what he expected to do in the present. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.

He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and professional calls will receive his strict attention if required. Those who have been benumbered by curative powers, (who may perhaps, after all, be humbugs,) are invited to call and be satisfied that some one above fifty years of age, who has devoted his whole life to the study of medicine, is well acquainted with the diseases of the country, and who possesses the skill and experience to treat them successfully.

Dr. S. employs WORLD MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and among that supply are, among the various Indian tribes, which this continent was discovered.

Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a specific which under all treatment, in severe cases, did at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining as it does the IDENTICAL PRINCIPLES of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Directions in an intelligible manner, which has been greatly improved by obtaining the needs for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many people a season from these affections, or what is worse, drag out miserable themselves to be dragged by old school Doctors, till no human art can save them from the grave!

DISEASES OF THE THROAT.—Dr. Stewart has also cases of diseases case truly say, has been devoted more particularly for physicians in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and disturbances from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.

Charges moderate. Office hours from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Consultation solicited. No fee will be charged for any of the following diseases, unless a cure is effected: Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hemorrhage, Hemorrhoids, Bleeding, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scrofula, Ulcerations, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Piles, (in persons under 20,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to thirteen Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

Patients who may have to travel on account of their treatment, will be furnished board at reasonable rates.

Jan 1-6

DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

AND

DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them to all among and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered state of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures in the Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will show its wonderful and cure the most severe Diarrhœa, proceeding from COLD OR THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called HOOFLAND'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and recommendations from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all the agents.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. BOBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WE, the Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, has put them in plain language their curative properties. This important step is the result of increased confidence with which our remedies are universally received, and the unanimous voice of the people, from one end of the country to the other, in favor of the Scandinavian Remedies. All who combine in the wisdom and honesty of the times, or who come to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

We do not think it unbecoming in the proprietors of the Scandinavian Remedies to call the attention of the Medical Profession, and all who will know Merchants and Farmers, and Leaders of the Medical Profession, to the astonishing success of this extraordinary cure, especially in the remedies, of private and their Scandinavian Remedies.

Original Letters,

from the Physicians of the Medical Profession, Ministers of the Gospel, and well known Merchants and Farmers, and Leaders of the Medical Profession, to the astonishing success of this extraordinary cure, especially in the remedies, of private and their Scandinavian Remedies.

Eye Witnesses.

Facts!

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by contents to Contain no Mineral!

That they contain no Mercury, Calomel, Antimony, Arsenic,

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

VOLUME I. COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1859. NUMBER 14.

PEOPLES PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL, Editor.

TERMS — $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion........$ 1,00

Each additional insertion........ 50

One square 3 months........ 3,00

" " 6 " 5,00

" " 12 " 12,00

One fourth of a column per year........ 40,00

" half " 60,00

" column " 100,00

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year........ $10,00.

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rates.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our present slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and law-abiding citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white men.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State: a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

DEATH OF HORACE MANN.—This eminent gentleman, President of Antioch College, died at the Yellow Springs, on the 2nd inst., in the 64th year of his age, after a brief illness. He was born at Franklin, Mass., on the 4th of May 1796, and was educated at Brown University. He adopted law as a profession, and was a successful practitioner until he received the appointment of Secretary of the Board of Education for Massachusetts. In 1836 he was elected to the Senate of Massachusetts from Boston, and on the death of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS he was elected as his successor in Congress, in 1848. In 1853 he accepted the post of President of Antioch College.—A brief biographical sketch in the New York Times has the following handsome compliment:

"Mr. Mann's permanent place in the annals of American biography will be high among those who have devoted themselves to the task of leaving the world better than they found it. He had all the faults of a vigorous, passionate, emphatic character, and with these faults its virtues too. It is to him more than to any other single person that the primary school organization of the United States owes its best features; and to him that we are indebted most largely for the triumphant naturalization in America of the invaluable system of Normal Academies for the training of teachers. He was in truth, after a sort, the Apostle of skilled education on this side of the Atlantic. He possessed fine natural powers of oratory, and was not less impressive in the lecturer's desk by the simple energy of his eloquence, than convincing as an author, by the masculine rhetoric of his ardent style."

SEWING MACHINE FOR AN EMPRESS.—A firm in Philadelphia, engaged in the manufacture of sewing machines, have prepared one as a present to the Empress EUGENIE. A letter, describing it, says:

"Upon a silver base, embossed in elaborate elegance the escutcheon of the Empire, while the whole rests upon four silver lions, over which an eagle is perched. The names of Napoleon's generals and victories appear upon the sides of the base, and at the end, upon a square, a statuette of the great Napoleon is standing. This is done in enamelled work, and is a gem in its line. At the side of this figure the Goddess of Industry is seen, and over both a spread eagle is flying, which, bending forward, forms the vibratory arm of the machine, the needle being in the beak of the royal bird. The plate of the machine is of highly polished steel, supported by four angels of silver with wings of gold, and in front of the plate is the inscription. The case and table of the machine is to be made of wood from Mount Vernon."

The corner stone of the Pilgrim Monument was laid at Plymouth, Mass., on Tuesday, with imposing ceremonies.

Disappointed.

There has been a susurrus or low whisper, such as the winds make as they blow over arid sands—a sort of murmur, such as we hear on the stage, preceding the arrival of some important personage of the drama, or the far-off sounds of a tumult that faintly meet the ear—that the Statesman intended some of these days to astonish the Democracy of these parts, by coming out unequivocally for STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS for President. Only a day or two since, whether to wake up the lagging attention of the administration to some forgotten obligation on its part, or to run a distant parallel, beyond the point of danger, the first step in a long siege, the policy of which the military tactician of that paper fully comprehends, is a matter of indifference, it published an extract defining Mr. DOUGLAS's opinion of slavery in the territories in 1850. It has been suggested that this was a sly way to curry favor for the Illinois Statesman in the South, where it is known there are those who consider such views heterodox.

Well, after a long silence, content to rest upon an equivocation, a mooted point as to the influence which changed its tactics, the Statesman vouchsafes the following:

"The present proprietors, Manypenny and Miller, answering for themselves, repeat the denial of the former firm, and state that they have not had at any time any interest in the past, present or future, in any United States government printing, or any other contracts, and that they have not received any money in any shape or form, or on any account, from Washington, and do not expect to receive any except the usual price paid the Statesman for a few official advertisements voluntarily sent to it for publication, by the heads of bureaus."

It is but fair that the Statesman should have the benefit of this denial—the former to which it refers is as follows:

"Messrs. Smith and Miller, proprietors of the Statesman, have never received, as partners or individually, one dollar for, or in any way on account of, the Post-Office blanks, nor have they any contract, or share in any contract, for that or any other description of Washington patronage—unless the printing of two advertisements, in about seven months past, worth not more than one hundred and forty dollars in all, may be considered an exception to this denial."

The caution exhibited in the terms of this former denial was commented on at the time, because it was said the arrangement was in the shape of a bonus, to come out of certain earnings of the Pennsylvanian, without any share in the contract. It will be perceived that there is a certain degree of equivocation in the present denial, which, with all its seeming exactness, leaves the matter pretty much in the same fix, just as it was. It will be seen, too, that it denies receiving "money in any shape or form, or on any account, from Washington" but does not say or from any other quarter, still leaving the old charge practically uncontradicted. In neither instance is the denial "unequivocal" or "conclusive" as the Statesman asserts; and it would be a "pretty kettle of fish," if it should be established beyond peradventure, that a regular bargain was consummated by which the tactics of the Statesman were to be changed, one of the proprietors of the Statesman was to be reinstated as Postmaster, and Cox was to vote for the "English Conference Bill," and as a part of said bargain the Statesman was to receive a further consideration, to be derived from some fund provided for such contingencies.

If this latter part of the bargain has not been complied with on the part of the party of the other part, and it has been "poor pay," it may be because the terms of the bargain have not been complied with, in full, by the Statesman, which really has furnished but "poor preach," and it has been restricted to a few Government advertisements, and the list of letters which we had for a short time, just before the Statesman flipflopped.

We are loth to do the Statesman injustice, and therefore take the first occasion to spread before our numerous readers the denial of the charges that we have been instrumental in circulating, perhaps to its disadvantage, but which we nevertheless believe to have been true; and if there has been a failure of consummation, we are very sure the Statesman may safely be set down among the disappointed.

The Effect of the Peace in Genoa.

The following address, numerously signed, is copied from the Corriere Mercantile of Genoa:

ADDRESS TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING VICTOR EMANUEL.

Sire: Amidst the profound sense of deception and consternation that throughout the country has been produced by the unexpected announcement of a peace, unfortunately so different from what we with every right hoped for, is mingled a sweet relief in our souls by the thought, the certainty, that this peace was not your making, and that, therefore, uncontaminated and glorious, still rests the name of of the first soldier of the Italian independence. The national question is not destroyed—it is only temporarily annulled. It has entered on a new phase, full of grave difficulties and supreme perils; but that King and that people who have been able to sustain their lot for ten years, and to conquer wherever deceit and fatality have not sufficed to prevent valor from conquering, will know now how to overcome the obstacles the future may prepare. It is not a stroke of the pen that can cancel the sentiments of twenty-six million hearts. But if the country is ready—if the whole living strength of the nation is disposed to great trials, to great sacrifices, we trust that you will not do less: that there will be no relaxation in that strong and sage direction that your Majesty and your Ministers have hitherto lent to the popular enthusiasm. All comprehend your sufferings. Italy, whose cry of grief has reached your ears, feels the irresistible eloquence of your silence. But why, therefore, suffer with and for her? Italy has faith in you and your Government, and dares to send to you a word of consolation that (at least we hope so) will be received by you with joy.

May you yourself be blessed, as likewise those heroes who fought by your side for the most sacred of causes. If now, at this hour, Italy is weeping, her independence and her liberty are such great benefits that, in order to conquer them, much blood and many tears will yet be shed.

Until the moment, Sire, when you will be the leader of the Italian cause, grief will be the duration of our discouragement and our discomfort, and, of itself secure, the nation will be capable of sustaining the most truthful destiny.

The following story pertaining to the battle of Waterloo, told by Whelm in his recent excellent history of France, published the by Blackwoods, Edinburgh, the author guarantees to be authentic:

"It was a Sunday, and while all the church bells in England were calling the people to prayer, the cannonade commenced. Everybody was in expectation of a battle. It was known in England that Napoleon had crossed into the Netherlands, and that Wellington was ready to meet him. News was slow in coming and people's hearts were sick, with the expectation of the next mail. It chanced that, between the services on that eventful Sunday, a clergyman in Kent was walking in his garden. His gardener was an old soldier, who had fought in Spain. He said, 'There's a fight going on, sir, somewhere; for I remember when we were in the Peninsula we always knew when a cannonade was taking place, wherever it might be, by a crumbling of fresh mould.' He took a spade and dug down a single foot, and along the smooth surface left by the steel an imperceptible trembling shook down little pellets of the soil. 'That's it sir,' said the gardener; 'they're at it sure enough.' Before the next Sunday came around, the news spread from end to end of all the sea-girt isle; joy-notes had sounded from all the castles in the land; and it was known that the greatest victory of modern times and crowned the British army.

Not a Canard

We published, some time since, a story of the abduction of a young lady from Montreal, who was discovered in the branch convent of Grey Nuns at Toledo. This, shortly after, was pronounced a canard by the newspapers, which denied the abduction, and effort at concealment, and imputed the whole mystery to the caprice or conventual inclinations of the young lady herself. The father of the girl has addressed a letter to the Montreal Advertiser, exonerating the Bishop of Montreal, who it thought himself to have been deceived. The Hon. Mr. STARR says his daughter has not announced her religious faith, and hopes that she "may live the life of a devout and holy Catholic." He alludes to "four conspirators" whom he hopes to have punished by a court of justice, as their offences merit, and closes his letter as follows:

"When I vented my long pent-up anger on the woman Blondin (who is the superior of the Convent at Toledo) she replied, 'Don't blame me, sir; why did not Bishop Charbonnel tell you where your daughter was—he knew all about it—your daughter will tell you so—I acted only under the orders I received.' When I asked her from whom those 'orders' emanated, she replied, 'my ecclesiastical 'superior;' and when I demanded who her ecclesiastical superior' was, she replied, 'I will not tell you;' but if I had to go over the same ground again I would act differently. Now the question is, who is the ecclesiastical superior of the branch of the Grey Nuns of Montreal at Toledo?

"One remark more. I am finally and conscientiously convinced, that had even another week elapsed without finding my daughter and rescuing her, her illness would have led her to the grave; and that her parents would have dragged out a miserable existence in all the agony of doubt and uncertainty, forever, of the fate of their beloved child."

Bishop CHARBONNEL, here alluded to, of Toronto, makes a most explicit denial of any participation in the abduction, as appears from his card. He says:

I declare, first, that I never sent for, nor wrote to, Miss Starr in my life; second, that having met her in my house, I blamed her imprudence in coming; third, that being acquainted with her desires, I invariably insisted upon her making them known to her parents; fourth, that she has never been admitted in our church, nor to any sacraments in Toronto; fifth, that I never recommended her to any person nor wrote or spoke about her to any one living in Montreal; sixth, that I have been altogether a stranger to her leaving that city; seventh, that when she presented herself at my door, on her arrival from Montreal, I refused to see and receive her; eighth, that she was not aided by me even during one hour in her concealment; ninth, that I have not given any indication, false or true, when she was inquired after, because I was not questioned on the matter; tenth, that she never received any direction from me to go east, west, north or south, nor, of course, to Toledo; eleventh, that she never received from me any pecuniary aid, or any promise thereof, for carrying her plans into execution; twelfth, that I never received nor intercepted any letter intended for her relatives; thirteenth, that she has been heard, several times, complaining of my coolness and of my not seconding her designs.

Should the matter be brought before a court of Justice, it is to be hoped that the truth may be elicited, and the guilty be punished. It is a grave matter to wrest the custody of a child from her parents, and under the guise of religion to secrete her from the most persevering inquiries and search. A strong picture of just such a proceeding, is graphically painted in a thrillingly interesting fiction entitled "The New Priest," for a copy of which we were indebted some time since to our friends J. H. RILEY & Co., of the New Book Store.

Rain.

At last the wish'd-for shower had come. Nil desperandum is a most excellent motto. We remember a friend of ours, in a boyish composition, described an ant, or some other creeping thing, that had fallen into the water, making sundry and marvellous efforts to avail itself of a floating straw to waft it to terra firma and succeeding at last. He would have translated its pertinacious efforts, to which he applied nil desperandum,

"It will never do to give it up so. Mr. Brown."

Well, when our community, and the farmers, around had almost despaired, the parched and thirsty earth was blessed with rain. On Sunday the clouds gathered, and without any "noise and confusion" shook their vapory contents over the arid fields, which had very nearly dried out. On Monday there was another Providential visitation of the kind; and to-day the rain was decidedly "some pumpkins and no mistake."

From the telegraphic despatches to the Cincinnati papers, there is no doubt that the rain was pretty general, some points being more blessed than others.

Here, we have had enough in the three days to revive hope that vegetation may yet be revived so that the corn and potatoe crops may be almost an average. With two or three more showers such as we had to-day, the agricultural thermometer which had gone down to zero, will rise to a very seasonable point. Some corn will have been put beyond redemption, but a vast deal will be resurrected.

DEATH OF THE QUEEN OF PORTUGAL.—Death is busy with the crowned heads of Europe. To the list of dead monarchs is added the name of the young Queen of Portugal, who died July 16, having just completed her 22d year. The Queen, baptised by the name of STEPHANIE FREDERIQUE ANTOINETTE, was the daughter of Prince HOHENZOLLERN-SIGMARINGEN. But little more than a year since, the foreign illustrated papers published elaborate accounts of her marriage. The ceremony was performed by proxy at the Church of St. Hederige, in Berlin, April 29, 1858, and in person at Lisbon on the 18th of May. Passing through England, on her way to Portugal, the Princess became the guest of Queen VICTORIA, and attracted much of the popular attention, from her beauty and winning manners. STEPHANIE's early life was not courtly. She was brought up in a little Suabian country town, where her father resided until 1848; but after the Revolution, the house became established at Dusseldorf, and the royal alliance was contracted at Berlin a year ago. The Queen's birthday fell on the 15th of July, she died on the 16th.

DEATH OF AN ACTOR.—Mr. Samuel Lake, well known in this city as a dancer and actor, died yesterday morning of paralysis, at the house of Mr. John Deering, in Wall street, at the age of forty. He was an Englishman, and first played in this city at the National theatre, under Mr. Pelby, as a pantomimist. For three seasons he, with his wife (known as Agnes Raymond), were engaged in the Boston Museum, he acting the ballet master. During the long run of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" he received a fall, which so injured him that he was forced to relinquish dancing altogether, and the ultimate result of his injuries was paralysis. He leaves a wife and two children—the lady being absent, fulfilling an engagement at Charleston, S. C. He died poor.—Boston paper, 28th.

The widow of Mr. LAKE is the daughter of MALONE RAYMOND, well known here as a delineator of Irish character. Some four or five years ago Mr. RAYMOND, in company with his two daughters, gave several entertainments in this city.

On the field at Solferino Francis Joseph is said to have addressed an angry reproof to one of his oldest Generals, who instantly broke his sword across his knee and threw it at his feet; the Emperor burst into tears and held out both his hands, begging pardon for the offence he had given.

The Peace—How it is viewed in England.

The London Economist, writing on this subject says:

"Preliminaries of peace have been signed, and the Italian war is nominally over. The funds have risen both here and in France; there is a general jubilee of admiration and rejoicing; men throw up their caps, embrace their neighbors, praise Louis Napoleon, and go about their avocations with the feeling that great things have been achieved and great dangers averted. We can share no such sentiments. We can neither approve nor rejoice. We can well understand that tender-hearted men, to whom the horrors and sufferings of war are more dreadful than any cause is dear, may be delighted that such miseries are suspended in any manner and at any cost. We can well understand that two Emperors who have been playing at war for six weeks with the thermometer at 96 degrees in the shade, at a cost of twenty millions a piece, and who have seen 50,000 men slain or dying around them, may be sick of the sanguinary game and be willing to draw their stakes. But that practical statesmen or thoughtful observers can be of opinion that anything has been gained by such a war, or anything concluded by such a peace; that competent politicians can imagine that Italy has gained independence, or that Napoleon has gained honor, we are utterly unable to comprehend. In our judgment, Italy has gained nothing; the question is still open; the sore is still unhealed; while the Emperor of the French has, in the moment of apparent victory, and for the sake of a theatrical effect, abandoned all his high pretensions, and violated all his generous promises; and returns to Paris, nominally a conqueror, but in reality a defeated and dishonored man. The terms and the circumstances of this pacification render it, in our opinion, one of the most hollow, unjust, and cynical on record; and—except with reference to the personal vanity and possible ulterior design of Napoleon himself—one of the most impolitic.

The Examiner says:

"Whom will this whimsical peace, this most extraordinary treaty, satisfy? What promise does it fulfill, what hopes does it realize? Never did so much blood flow, never was so much treasure expended for so small and unworthy a return. Italy, for the first time, will become a nation. So says Louis Napoleon to his army; but these are words only—where are the facts to support them? What is there in all the arrangements to constitute an Italian nation? The confederation will be Austrian, Austrian all over; it will infallibly take its colors and character from the power that will predominate in it. Austria would singly outweigh all the liberal members of the body, but she will not be single; she will have one faithful and devoted follower in Naples; she will also have her passive tools and subservient creature in the restored dukedoms of Tuscany, Modena and Parma, restored in defiance of the popular will, to say nothing of her high favor with the Sovereign Pontiff, who is in future to preside over the councils and fortunes of Italy. A peace like this has of course driven Count Cavour into retirement. His resignation is sufficient commentary upon its articles. It was not for such poor results he called his countrymen to arms, or in an evil hour implored the success of France. He was in earnest in the quarrel in which it is now clear that Louis Napoleon was not. The hopes which the other day Count Cavour held out in a circular to his diplomatic agents acquainting them with the annexation of the Duchies to Sardinia, were well-founded, that is to say, as well founded as hopes could be built upon fair speeches. In fact, the Sardinian minister only made the mistake of believing that Louis Napoleon really meant to do what he undertook to do in the face of Europe. The Count never dreamt of a conclusion of hostilities accomplishing nothing worth mentioning of the objects of the war. It never occurred to him that a rapid series of the most brilliant victories in the field would end in a peace so poor in its results to Piedmont and Italy. But whatever he may have expected from it, he never could have anticipated the haughty and insulting manner in which it was patched up without Sardinia having any more voice in the transaction than if she had been wholly uninterested in it, or had borne no part in the previous struggle. This was, indeed, one of the most inauspicious of the many circumstances that contribute to make the peace of Villa Franca almost as gloomy as war. It is a peace, in a word, that will neither please Italy nor France. The war was too short to give the French army a sufficient meal of glory. It has excited their appetite, not appeased it. And as to the opinion of the French public, it has found vent already in the columns of the Siecle, which has had the courage to remark: 'Let but a single Austrian soldier remain in Italy—but the minutest Austrian influence there abide, and we shall have to begin everything again in a few years.'"

The Observer says:

"Perhaps the most serious objection to the so-called settlement is, that it settled nothing, and that Italy is left by this incomplete and unsatisfactory arrangement more unsettled and dangerous to the peace of Europe than ever it was before. It is but a poor consolation for Englishmen that England had nought to do in this deceptive and unfinished drama, where the curtain has so unexpectedly fallen in the middle of an act. In fact it is only the first chapter of the book that is closed, and not the last. But those who ignorantly and impatiently require England to deny her high position amongst nations, and to abjure the glorious destiny of freemen, may now see the baneful effects of 'total abstinence,' to which certain politicians would degrade the voice and arm of Great Britain. We have joined heartily in the general cry of neutrality for many reasons. One of these reasons may be enough to repeat. We distrusted our late rulers, and the wrong side upon which they would place us in the occurrences and preparations of last year. And we are not without fear that they would lead us into similar dangers and complications again, if they have the power. But it is clear that affairs do not go better from our abstinence. It is more than probable that we shall be again called upon to take our part in the general advance. Let us hope to be well prepared for the struggle—and, above all, with able, experienced and honest guides, through the dangers and difficulties to come. We have too much at stake to allow ourselves to be made again the victims of shallow incompetence or mere party pretensions, incompatible with the honor and interests of England."

THE PEACE CONSIDERATIONS.—The following considerations are suggested by the peace just concluded:

The cession of Lombardy to Piedmont comprehends that of the two fortresses, Mantua and Peschiera. The superfice of Lombardy is 8,538 square miles. Its population is 2,800,000 souls. Lombardy has hitherto been divided, administratively, into nine provinces or delegations—viz.: Milan, Pavia, Lodi, Corma, Cremona, Como, Mantua, Sondrio, Brescia and Bergamo. The fortified towns of Mantua and Peschiera form part of the province of Mantua. The fortress of Pezzighettone is comprised in the province of Cremona.

After the annexation of Lombardy and Piedmont, this kingdom (the island of Sardini both included) will contain a superfice of 37,540 square miles, with a population of 7,800,000. As regards territorial extent it will occupy a tenth rank in Europe, and will come immediately after the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, and before Portugal and Bavaria. With respect to population, Sardinia will stand in the ninth rank, on a level with Naples, and will be above Sweden and Norway, Belgium and Bavaria. The following table completes the comparison as regards Italy:

	Area Sq. M.	Population.
New Kingdom	37,540	7,800,000
Venetia	8,686	2,300,000
Papal States	17,218	3,600,000
Tuscany	8,761	1,700,000
Parma	2,360	500,000
Modena	2,100	610,000
Two Sicilies	41,089	9,000,000

OLD SLEDGE.—J. E. SCRUGGS, of the Warrenton (Va.) Whig, writes to his paper from the Red Sweet Springs:

A few days ago a couple of Southern gentlemen, here, rich planters from Red River, played seven games of old sledge, for $5,000 a game, and the winner took every game—$35,000 were lost and the money paid, I hear, in a check on the Bank of Louisiana.

— A building owned by Dr. Mendenhall on Western Row, between Everett and David streets, Cincinnati, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Mrs. Geister, wife of a butcher of that name who occupied a part of the second story, jumped with her two children to the pavement. In the fall she fractured her right leg, the children, fortunately, escaping injury.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ Ten thousand revolving rifles are now being manufactured at Colonel Colt's Armory for the British government.

☞ The strike of the moulders in Albany, N. Y., has ended. It lasted three months and it cost the trade $50,000 a week.

☞ The Boston Book Trade Sale commenced in that city on Tuesday morning. There was a large catalogue of books offered and a very respectable attendance of purchasers.

☞ Mrs. Rhoda Douglas, of Freetown, Mass., entered her 100th year last June. She was left a widow in her 58th year, and has remained such for forty years.

☞ Two of Kossuth's sons recently took prizes at the University College, London, receiving them from the hands of Lord Palmerston himself.

☞ On Sunday evening, while Mrs. Stowe, of Louisville, Ky., was preparing to walk with her husband, fell dead in her room.

☞ The adjourned annual meeting of the New York State Temperance Society is called to meet at Saratoga Aug. 2.

☞ Greenwood Cemetery, near New York city, was founded in June, 1840, and from that month up to the 23d ult., 69,040 bodies took up their residence in the silent city.

☞ The oldest surviving graduate of Yale College is Joshua Dewey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., of the class of 1787; and the next survivor is the Rev. Henry Waldo, of the class of 1788.

☞ A physician in Louisville has discovered that by living principally on buttermilk, a human being may prolong existence to the period of two hundred years.

☞ On Wednesday, the 3d inst., M. Blondin is to go it again across the Niagara, and to do it against a boat's time. On his return he will stand on his head on the rope over the center of the river.

☞ Late advices from Valparaiso state the town of Ancud was laid waste by a fire, which consumed the cathedral, archives, and one hundred and fifty-four dwelling-houses. The loss is estimated at $450,000.

☞ A drunken vagabond, named Thomas McCarty, in New York, on Saturday night, quarreled with his wife, beat her severely, and then seized her ear with his teeth, bit off a large piece and swallowed it.

☞ Col. Braxton Bragg, to whom General Taylor, at the battle of Palo Alto addressed the famous words, "A little more grape, Capt. Bragg," is reported to be the Democratic candidate for a local office at Lafourche, La.

☞ The trial of S. M. Booth, late of the Milwaukee Free Democrat, charged with the seduction of Miss Cook, was in progress in the Circuit Court of Wisconsin, on the 25th. The trial was expected to occupy at least a whole week.

☞ Carleton, the novelist, has gone to the North of Ireland on a reading and lecturing tour. He still sticks to the old land, where he expects soon to "shuffle off this mortal coil."

☞ Mrs. Margaret Fuller, mother of the Countess d'Ossoli and the Rev. A. B. Fuller, of Boston, died at the residence of another son, Mr. R. F. Fuller, in Wayland, Mass., on Sunday evening, aged 70 years.

☞ It is remarked, as an evidence of the yet unsettled state of Italy, that since the Spanish war of succession (1701) Austria has lost and regained Lombardy no fewer than twelve times.

☞ An anvil has been cast in England whereon to hammer materials for the newly invented rifle cannon, which weighs twenty-one tons and a half; the trip hammer that is to do the pounding weighs over thirteen tons.

☞ The American Primary election took place in Baltimore on Tuesday evening, and the occasion was characterized by rowdyism and violence. Ballot-boxes were smashed, and several persons were wounded by pistol-shots.

☞ Gov. Newell, of New Jersey, has issued a proclamation, offering a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of the person or persons who murdered Charles Robinson, of Newark, while at a pic-nic on the 6th of July last.

☞ The first free school in the United States, according to a correspondent of the Newark (N. J.) Advertiser, was established in that city by Albert N. Gamber, prior to 1800, in a building erected by him for a school and meeting-house.

☞ Messrs. Samuel A. King and James Allen, of Providence, R. I., and M. Tarone, of New Orleans, have concluded a contract with the authorities of New Bedford, to make a triple balloon ascension in that city on the 24th of August.

☞ The Universalist Convention of Vermont is to hold its annual meeting at Stowe, on August 24th, and Friday of the same week the members will ascend the great Manchester Mountain, when a sermon will be delivered on this highest summit of the Green Mountains.

☞ The Fort Wayne Republican says that a German named Shoemaker, of that place, who was engaged in mowing some eight miles from town, accidentally set fire to a bundle of hay by letting a match he had used to light his pipe with, fall upon it, and in the effort to put it out was burned to death.

☞ In New York, on Monday, Symmes Gardner, a Wall street Broker, was arrested on a charge of false pretences in selling to Abner Jones, of Binghampton, 133 shares in Trident Mutual Insurance Co., of Providence—an insolvent corporation.

☞ McHenry, alias Townsend, visited Vienna, C. W., on Wednesday, for the purpose of delivering a lecture, but he could obtain no place in which to hold forth. The feeling against the man in that section of the country a so strong that he barely escaped mobbing.

☞ The Hon. David Heaton, member of the Ohio Senate from the Butler district in the sessions of 1856-7, is at the point of death, from disease of the lungs and heart. He is now Senator from the St. Anthony district, Minnesota.

☞ A "divorce in high life" is noticed in the English papers. A son of Lord Harvey discovered a criminal intercourse between his wife and Lord Ribblesdale, and a jury granted him a separation and large damages from the correspondent.

☞ A dreadful riot took place on the 12th July, between the Antrim Artillery and the people of the town. A body of over 200 soldiers were dispatched from the Cork barracks at midnight. After a great deal of damage had been done to several houses, including the convent, the riot was suppressed. The Antrim Artillery were brought up to Cork, some of them, we hear, very badly wounded.

☞ A letter from Florence in The Providence Journal, July 11, says: "The Pope's edict of excommunication, launched against his rebellious children, has received at Milan an odd response. The effigies of his Holiness and Cardinal Antonelli were burnt in the streets of that city, and the young men lighted their cigars with the profane fire."

☞ The gold coinage of the Philadelphia Mint for the month of July was $117,788; being in double eagles, half eagles and dollars. The silver coinage was $43,000, being in dollars and quarter dollars. Of cents, $30,000 were coined. The whole number of pieces coined was 3,101,262, of the aggregate value of $190,788.

☞ The pew openers at a certain fashionable church in New York, have written to know if "persons who have playing hearts will not aid them to obtain an increase of pay." The reason assigned for the demand is the fact that, when the present terms of remuneration were decided upon there was only the trouble of opening the doors; now there is the task of tucking in the dresses and fixing the hoops.

☞ The Rockford Register says that John P. Manny has a new machine for mowing, reaping, heading, raking and binding, all combined. It says, the binders, which are made of hemp cord, will only cost about 50 cents per acre of ground, and will last many years, as they can be removed without injury from the bundle quicker than one can be cut with a knife.

☞ Henry Grattan, the younger, is dead. He was once Member of Parliament for Meath, in Ireland, and only surviving son of the great Henry Grattan. The event took place rather suddenly on the 16th ultimo, at his residence in the County of Wicklow. Mr. Grattan was among the faithful few who adhered to Mr. O'Connell throughout his stormy career of Irish agitation. Mr. Grattan leaves no male issue, his children consisting of two daughters, both recently married, and who, it is to be presumed, will inherit his large estates. Disease of the heart is said to have been the cause of death.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, August 2.—The steamship Ocean Queen, from Havre and Southampton, arrived after midnight. Her advices have been mainly anticipated by the arrival of the Anglo Saxon at Quebec.

Dr. Merritt, U. S. Consul at Tunis, is a passenger.

The Atlantic telegraph shares are advancing in price.

The Paris Moniteur of the 20th has the following defense of the peace treaty by Napoleon: "Yesterday evening the Emperor received the great bodies of the State, the Presidents of which, M. Tropling, Count De Morney and M. Borocher addressed congratulatory speeches to his Majesty. The Emperor thanked them for their devotion, and then explained the reason for his conduct during the great events. He said:

"Arrived beneath the walls of Verona, the struggle was inevitably about to change in its nature as well in a military as a political aspect. Obliged to attack the enemy in front, who was intrenched behind great fortresses, and protected on his flank by the neutrality of the surrounding territory, and about to begin a long and barren war, I found myself in the face of Europe in arms ready to dispute our successes or aggravate our reverses. Nevertheless, the difficulty of the enterprise would not have shaken my resolution if the means had not been out of proportion to the results to be expected. It was necessary to crush boldly the obstacles opposed, and then to accept a conflict on the Rhine as well as on the Adige. It was necessary to fortify ourselves openly with the concurrence of revolution. It was necessary to go on shedding precious blood, and at last risk that which a sovereign should only stake for the independence of his country. If I have stopped it was neither through weariness nor exhaustion, nor through abandoning the noble cause which I desired to save, but the interests of France. I felt great reluctance to put reins upon the ardor of our soldiers, to retrench from my programme the territory from the Mincio to the Adriatic, and to see vanish from honest hearts noble delusions and patriotic hopes in order to serve the independence of Italy. I made war against the mind of Europe, and as soon as the destiny of my country might be endangered, I made peace. Our efforts and our sacrifices, have they been merely losses? No! We have a right to be proud of this campaign. We have vanquished an army—numerous, brave and well organized—Piedmont has been delivered from invasion—her frontiers have been extended to the Mincio—the idea of an Italian nationality has been admitted by those who combatted it—most all the sovereigns of the Peninsula comprehend the wants of salutary reforms. Thus after having given a new proof of the military power of France, the peace concluded will be prolific of happy results. The future will every day reveal additional cause for the happiness of Italy, the influence of France, and the tranquility of Europe.

NEW YORK, August 3.—The Cunard mail steamship Persia has arrived, with Liverpool dates of Saturday, the 23d ult.

The steamships Bremen, Glasgow and Edinburgh have arrived out.

The conference between France and Austria was to assemble at Zurich in about a week.

The discontent in regard to the terms of peace are unabated, and the explanations of the Emperor Napoleon are not considered reassuring. The Sardinian representative to the Zurich Conference has not been named, and it is expected that none will be present, but that Sardinia, if pleased with the terms agreed upon, will acquiesce in the Austro-French arrangement in a separate article. It is affirmed that Sardinia has signed nothing but the armistice, and is consequently in a nominal state of war with Austria.

It is supposed that a European Congress will assemble after the adjournment of the Zurich Conference.

The exhibitions of discontent in Italy to the terms of peace continue.

The people of Tuscany show a strong hostility to the return of the Grand Duke. The Provisional Government has directed a popular vote on the subject.

The English foreign policy had been under debate in the House of Commons. Mr. D'Israeli opposed all interference in the peace Congress. Lord Palmerston and Lord John Russell thought that England might with propriety take part, but no course was determined on. Lord Elcho gave notice of the introduction of a resolution against any interference by England. Mr. Gladstone proposed an increase of the income tax, which had been agreed to.

The Emperor Napoleon has received the congratulations of the Diplomatic Corps at St. Cloud. The Pope's nuncio was the spokesman for the ambassador. The Emperor, in his reply, said, that Europe was so unjust to him at the commencement of the war that he was happy to conclude a peace as soon as the honor and interests of France were satisfied. As a proof of his moderation, he trusted that the peace would be enduring.

The Paris Bourse closed flat and lower; three per cent rentes closed at 67f 15c.

The German Diet has agreed to restore the contingent and fortresses to a peace footing.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, July 22.—Consols closed at 94½ to 94¾ for money and account. The bullion in the Bank of England has decreased £214,000. The money market is unchanged, and closed with a good demand.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, July 22.—The market closed firm, wheat has an advancing tendency, and all qualities are slightly improved. Richardson and Spence, quote the harvest prospect as favorable. Flour dull at 10s@12s 6d per cental of 100 lbs. Wheat has an advancing tendency, and is in more demand, having improved 1d@2d; sales of Western red at 7s 6d@9s 2d, white 9s@9s 6d. Corn closed firm, with an advancing tendency, sales of mixed at 5s 8d, yellow 5s@5s 8d, white 7s @7s 3d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, July 22.—Provisions have a declining tendency; beef is heavy with little inquiry and prices weak; pork heavy and quotations nominal; bacon dull at a decline for all qualities. Lard steady and quiet at 54s@56s.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET, July 22.—Sugar dull. Coffee quiet. Rice dull. Tea has advanced ¼@1d.

LONDON MARKET, July 22.—Baring quotes Breadstuffs dull. Sugar firm. Tea very firm. Coffee dull and prices easier, but quotation unchanged. Rice dull.

NEW YORK, August 3.—The following is from the Moniteur.

PALACE OF ST. CLOUD, July 21.—The diplomatic body having expressed wish through the organ of its President, his Excellency, the Apostolic Nuncio of the Holy See, to be received by the Emperor, offer their congratulations on the conclusion of peace. They had the honor of being received by his Majesty. The Emperor, surrounded by the grand officers of the household, had at his side the Minister of Foreign Affairs, speaking in the name of the diplomatic body. The Nuncio addressed his Majesty.

The Emperor replied:—Europe was in general so unjust towards me at the commencement of the war, that I was happy to be able to conclude peace as soon as honor and the interests of France were satisfied and proved that it could not enter into my intentions to subvert or revolutionize Europe, and provoke a general war. I hope that now all causes of dissent will banish, and that peace will be of long duration. I thank the diplomatic body for their congratulations.

The Emperor's speech caused a great sensation.

In reference to the annexation of the Duchies in central Italy to Sardinia, Lord Russell, writing to the British Minister, from Turin, June 28, says: Her Majesty's government considers that everything for the present must be considered as provisional, and the will of the people; the fortunes of war, and finally an European treaty, the last resort to settle the Territorial arrangements and right of sovereignty in central Italy. This view, his lordship states, is shared in by the French Government, and he infers it is also the view of Russia.

A dispatch from Count Cavour, in reply to one from Lord Malmesbury, relative to the neutrality of Parma, complains of the unfriendly tone the British Ministers communicate.

The Le Nord says it is clear that the return of the exiled rulers to Tuscany, Modena and Parma resulted by force, and if England can consent to appear in Congress, now is the time when her voice may be heard to advantage in behalf of Italy.

PARLIAMENT.—In the Commons, on Thursday, Mr. Bright inveighed against the attacks upon the French Emperor, and consequently the French nation, which tended to plunge this country into a war. If he was in the position of Lord Russell he would try to emancipate himself from the old bloody traditions of the foreign office. He would approach France in a sensible, manly, and Christian spirit, and would sincerely the Government by proposing the alteration of the tariffs of the two countries in interest. Free trade, he believed, if this offer was honestly made, now with diplomatic finesse, it would bring about a different state of things.

Lord J. Russell said he [illegible] with the attempts made to awaken a feeling in this country against the sovereign and people of France, which could only produce on their part feelings of animosity against the people of this country. He believed the Emperor of the French had been a faithful ally to this country. What then was the meaning of these continued invectives against him? He believed, as far as he was concerned, that the Emperor had been anxious to get rid of protection duties, so injurious to France.

On Friday, in reply to an inquiry by Mr. Pease, Lord Palmerston said the formation of harbors of refuge on our coasts was an object of great importance, but that it was calculated that the expense that would be incurred thereby, would be about four million pounds, and Her Majesty's Government had no intention to propose a measure upon this subject at the present session.

In reply to a question from Mr. Griffith, Lord Russel said he had understood from the Emperor of France, there is no provision or understanding in the treaty of Villa Franca, that the dynasties of Tuscany, Modena, and Parma should be restored to those possessions if necessary, by military force.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, August 3.—Private dispatches announce the serious illness of Senator Jefferson Davis of Mississippi.

The Secretary of the Treasury has left Washington on a brief visit to his home in Georgia.

The receipts into the Treasury for the last three quarters of the official year, ending the 1st of July, from the customs, lands and miscellaneous sources, amounted to thirty-eight millions, five hundred and eighty thousand dollars, being eight hundred and eighty thousand dollars more than Secretary Cobb's estimate.

ALBANY, August 3.—A terrible accident occurred last night on the Northern Railroad, near Schaghticoke. The down train due in Albany at 7 o'clock 25 minutes, was passing a bridge spanning the Tomhannock Creek, when it was precipitated into the creek below from a height of 20 to 25 feet. The water was about six to eight feet deep. At least thirteen persons are reported as killed. Their names, as far as known, are as follow:—Mrs. Schuyler, of Albany; Mrs. Cooley, wife of the conductor, of Albany; Charles Berthelow, brakesman, of Albany; Charles Plimpton, mail agent, of Vermont; David Russell, Express messenger, of Albany, and Patrick Connelly, brakesman, of Greenbush.

Among the wounded are the following:—G. S. Cooley, conductor, of Albany—badly injured; Thomas McCormick, newsboy—legs broken and otherwise injured: Michael Flanney, of Troy, a passenger—head cut and badly bruised, supposed to be internally injured.

NEW YORK, August 4.—The Democratic State Committee met at Albany yesterday, and unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the Democrats of each Assembly District to appoint one delegate from each district to a State Convention to be held at Syracuse on the 14th of September next, for the nomination of State Officers and the choice of delegates to the Charleston Convention, or to determine the manner in which, and the time when said delegates shall be chosen.

The New York Herald of this morning publishes a letter represented to be written by Governor Wise to a distinguished friend of his in this State, in which he says, "I have apprehended all along that the Tammany regency would carry a delegation from New York to Charleston. But where? Douglas I believe is confident that you may rely on it that Mr. Buchanan is himself a candidate for re-nomination and his patronage will be used to disappoint Douglas and all other aspirants. The only chance is to organize by districts, and either whip the regency or send two delegations. If that is done or not done we must rely on a united South. A united South will depend on a united Virginia, and I pledge you, that she at least shall be a unit. Virginia a unit and persistent and firm on a sound platform of protection to all persons of popular squatter sovereignty. She must rally to her support all the South. The South cannot adopt Mr. Douglas' platform. It is a short cut to all the ends of Black Republicanism. He may then well kick up his heels. If he does or don't, he cannot be nominated, and the main argument against his nomination is, that he cannot be elected if nominated. If he runs an independent candidate, and Seward runs and I am nominated at Charleston, I can beat them both, and if squatter sovereignty is a plank of the platform at Charleston and Douglas is nominated the South will run an independent candidate on protection principles and run the election into the House. Where then would Mr. Douglas be the lowest candidate on the list. If I have the popular strength you supposed it will itself fix the nomination, not that I see much dent of success."

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 4.—A coroner's inquest was held on the body of Charles Plympton, who came to his death from injuries received by the falling of a bridge on the Albany, Vermont and Canada Railroad, over the Tomhannock creek, while engaged in a regular trip of said railroad as mail agent, and as said bridge was in a rotten and unsafe condition, the jury believe that those having charge of said road should be highly censured.

WASHINGTON, August 4.—The President called a meeting of his Cabinet to-day to consider the dispatches from Minister McLane in relation to the treaty with the Constitutional government of Mexico. It is reliably ascertained that several months ago the Miramon government invited France and England to assume the protectorate of Mexico, but they have given no response to the proposition.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

— Michael Connor, an Irishman, was so seriously injured yesterday, at Cincinnati, by a gravestone, which he was unloading, falling on him, that he died in a few hours.

— The Sandusky Register, of the 1st, says: "The colored woman, mother of the dead infant found in the privy vault at the corner of Adams and Warren streets, has had a hearing, and has been sent to jail to await her trial, at the next term of Common Pleas."

— The members of the ancient and honorable order of the Sons of Malta, in this city, made a visit to Chillicothe on last Friday evening and organized a Lodge there, initiating twenty-six members, among which are some of the best citizens of the place, the Hon. Wm. H. Safford, Democratic, Candidate for Lieutenant Governor being among them.—Circleville Watchman.

— A Convention of the Soldiers of the War of 1812, of the county of Lake, to which those of Geauga, Ashtabula and Cuyahoga are invited will be holden at the Court House in Painesville, on the 23d inst. To adopt such measures as shall be thought advisable to carry into effect the proposed Pension Law, now before Congress.

— The Ohio University buildings at Athens had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire on Saturday. The fire, which is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, was first discovered in the lower story of the eastern building. Through the timely exertions of the Bucket Brigade the flames were confined to the room where the fire originated, and extinguished with but little damage.

— The Ironton, Lawrence county, Register says: "Wheat and oats in all this region have been harvested in nice condition—the crops large. Hay also abundant, and made in fine order; potatoes and other vegetables most excellent, and corn is making fast. Apples, too, will be abundant this year, and peaches in good supply."

— Navigating the air is the next thing to be perfected in locomotion, and Mr. D. M. Cook, of Mansfield, thinks he has hit upon the important invention. We learn by the Mansfield Herald that Mr. C. is now engaged in the construction of a flying match, combining balloon and steam power. The balloon is to be used for elevating, and steam for propelling the air ship.

— We learn from the Dayton Empire that a barn belonging to Mr. Schenck, occupied by a tenant a few miles below Hamilton, was burned together with its contents, on Thursday evening. The tenant, with a number of hands, were engaged in threshing wheat, the power being outside and the separator in the barn; when the friction at the shaft ignited the straw and the blaze almost instantly enveloped the entire place. The separator was considerably damaged before it was got out; and the entire contents—a large amount of wheat and other grain, and articles of value—were consumed.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,

RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,

HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.

AUDITOR OF STATE,

W. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.

TREASURER OF STATE,

WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.

SECRETARY OF STATE,

JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,

JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.

[illegible]

CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar; and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unswerving, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

CHEAPEST IN THE STATE.

THE

CAMPAIGN PRESS,

PUBLISHED AT COLUMBUS, OHIO,

Will be sent to subscribers at the Low Rate of

25 Cents Each !!

until after the October Election, being the CHEAPEST CAMPAIGN PAPER in the State. This will enable the

CAMPAIGN PRESS

to reach all classes, and entitle it to

A Most Extensive Circulation.

20 Copies for $5!

☞ Our friends of the press in this State will please give this a few insertions or call attention to the fact.

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

July 21st, 1859.

Democratic Meetings.

At the recent meeting of the State Central Committee in this city, the following appointments were made, commencing the canvass in the North West and the Southern counties at the same time.

Hon. Geo. E. Pugh and Gen. Joseph H. Geiger will address the people as follows:

Batavia, Clermont Co., Monday, August 15.
Georgetown, Brown Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Hillsboro', Highland Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Washington, Fayette Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Wilmington, Clinton Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

Wm. H. Safford, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Major D. W. Stambaugh, of Tuscarawas County, will address the people as follows;

Toledo, Lucas county, Saturday evening, August 13th.
Bryan, Williams Co., Monday, Aug. 15.
Defiance, Defiance Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Paulding, Paulding Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17.
Napoleon, Henry Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Okokee, Fulton Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Perrysburgh, Wood Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.
Port Clinton, Ottawa Co., Monday, Aug. 22d.
Fremont, Sandusky Co., Tuesday, Aug. 23d.
Tiffin, Seneca Co., Wednesday, Aug. 24th.
Findlay, Hancock Co., Thursday, Aug. 25th.
Kenton, Hardin Co., Friday, Aug. 26th.
Upper Sandusky, Wyandott Co., Saturday, Aug. 27th.

Morgan county, at McConnelsville, Wednesday, August 17th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, and W. C. Gaston, Esqs.

Washington county, Marietta, Friday, August 19th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, and W. C. Gaston, Esqs.

Athens county, Athens, Saturday, August 20th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, Hon. O. D. Martin and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Ross county, Chillicothe, Monday, August 22d, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Geo. Geiger.

Pike county, Piketon, Tuesday, August 23d, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Scioto county, Portsmouth, Wednesday, August 24th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Lawrence county, Ironton, Thursday, August 25th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Gallia county, Gallipolis, Saturday, August 27th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Meigs county, Pomeroy, Monday, August 29th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Geo. Geiger.

By Order of the State Central Committee.

Mr. Douglas.

We have gathered a few waifs of public sentiment, strown along shore, which show very conclusively that the efforts to damage the Illinois Senator have been everything but successful. From North to South, the hearts of the people are with him. In vain do politicians aim to repress expression—it will have vent. The Opposition hastily gather up the expressions of hot-headed blusterers in the South, and declarations of the never-ceasing hostility from newspapers that for years long have wearied the public patience with dark and boding murmurs against the peace and quiet of the Union; and these they bring forward as signs of Public Opinion. As well might the philipics of Garrison and Fred Douglas be set down as true Republican thunder—as well might the ravings of Joshua R. Giddings be taken for the universal Republican sentiment of Ohio, as that these scattered insignia of opposition to Mr. Douglas be set down as the universal voice of the Southern Democracy.

The South has too much to lose in the approaching Presidential election, to be divided from the Democratic party in the North, which has proved in many a hard-fought field, that it was true to the Constitution and the Union. It will not be led by fiery Hotspurs, or driven by designing and ambitious aspirants, from the support of that Northern candidate who stands unshaken upon the record it helped to make in 1856. It cannot be persuaded to countenance a subterfuge, miserable and untenable in itself, and promising them only strife and bitterness in the future. The South will stand by STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, an unbroken phalanx, and demand from the North the fulfilment of the compact of 1850, ratified in 1856, that the constitutional power for the reclamation of fugitives from labor, carried out by the law of Congress, shall be faithfully adhered to and observed. It will abide by the compact that leaves to the people of the territories, as of the States, the direction of their own domestic institutions.

We have no fears of the Charleston Convention. When delegations shall there assemble from all of the States, and consult for the welfare of the Union, they can come to no other safe conclusion than that Mr. DOUGLAS is the foremost man in the hearts of the people—that North and South, his hold upon their affection is the same; and with him, by every reasonable calculation, and him alone, is victory certain.

As we have asked in former articles, what statesman, North, can rival Mr. DOUGLAS in the confidence of the people? It has been conceded that the Southern States alone cannot elect a President. To throw the election into the House, would virtually give up the contest. "The belt of the Union" must be with us, or at least so many of the Northern States, as love the Union better than the pursuit of an abstract notion and a false philanthophy. DOUGLAS, beyond any other Democrat, is strong in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Ohio. He has equal, if not stronger chances in Pennsylvania. He is not without a host of friends in New York and New Hampshire and Maine. In all these, where the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty is dear to the people, who can face the people with the same confidence as STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS?

The Mystery of Nominations—Our County Candidates.

We were conversing the other evening with two gentlemen of the Democratic school of politics when the subject of nominations came up, and the name of Mr. REES was mentioned.

"Is he a man of the people?" asked one.—"By a man of the people," said he, "I mean one who does not belong to any other man, but thinks and acts for himself, and is governed by his own judgment."

He was assured by the other, that, as far as he knew, Mr. REES was all right, and, he thought, independent of any man or clique, but would be guided in his legislative duties by his own perceptions of right and expediency.

It was conceded between them that there was a prospect of the nomination of Mr. REES, a man of intelligence, of good character and unexceptionable Democracy. In that part of the county where he is known, he is popular, and it was thought he would run well in town.

Many speculations were made as to the idea of Mr. O. P. Hines running for the office of Auditor. It was suggested that he was in a good business, requiring his attention, and could not want the office; but being a great friend, if not one of the "Miller clique," he was merely used to intimidate JOHNNY PHILLIPS, or punish him for defying the power of the "clique," in the appointment of Mr. SPARROW, neither of which was likely to succeed as PHILLIPS would knock the hind-sights off of him at the Primary Election for the people have no sympathy with the vexation of Tom Miller at JOHN PHILLIPS's independence of the "Post Office Junto" and will not assist him to his revenge, even though courted to do so by O. P. HINES, who may as well hang up his political fiddle, as his subserviency to Millerism (being also a partner) is now manifest. This is about the WEAKEST show of what malignity and malevolence would do if it could, that has been manifested yet.

The probability of the defeat of Squire Bruck at the Primary Election was hinted; although it was freely accorded that he was unexceptionable in every respect—being an upright, straightforward citizen, of excellent business tact as well as established habits of industry—of unblemished reputation, of unbending integrity, and admirably fitted for the office too. He was a favorite among the Germans, who were entitled to a candidate on the county ticket. A desperate effort was making by his competitor who spent his money freely and was very sanguine, with the "Miller influence" to back him while 'Squire Bruck relied entirely upon his known integrity of character, his uniform correctness, and his capacity for the place, without putting himself to the slightest trouble to electioneer. It was suggested that Thompson might be a mercantile partner of A. P. STONE, Treasurer of State, and that it would be a nice little arrangement, to make him a partner, (to all intents) in the management of the public finances. One partner as State Treasurer, and the other as County Treasurer, would be a nice little arrangement! But then they are of different politics! Just so. The "Miller influence" is perfectly understood, although two of the brothers are Democrats, and two Republicans—a well balanced family, and an apparent exception to the rule that "a house divided against itself must fall." It was also suggested that THOMPSON was a bolter from the ticket last year—that while some bolted COX, which was unpardonable, he bolted MOELLER, a venial offense, and did what he could to get the Doctor defeated in obedience to the "Miller influence," of which he was one of the instruments.

The conversation lasted for some time longer, but nothing definite could be drawn from it. It was conceded that a strong effort will be made to defeat the nomination of Judge Rankin, as a gentleman of his positive character could not be without his enemies. In addition to that, the Judge is a free spoken, and don't care sort of person, who tells his mind no matter in what crowd, and in that respect is considered dangerous by the "Miller clique," with whom privacy and caution are everything. His talents and acquirements are admitted, but he is charged with being remiss in attending to legislative business, because he was not always in his seat, and always in attendance on the important committee of which he was chairman. Now, it was asking too much of a man of Judge Rankin's impatient temperament, to be compelled to sit through the interminable sessions of the last Legislature, and listen to the asses who prattled and caveted through long days, and after occupying nearly every hour of day light employ the night time in committee. He made the best speech that was made in favor of repealing the Ten per cent. law and labored hard to effect it. There were other important measures to which he attended assiduously, and if he did not always succeed he was an able champion.

But Judge RANKIN is an out-spoken friend of Mr. DOUGLAS, and does not admire the Kansas policy of Mr. BUCHANAN, or the President's continued hostility to Mr. DOUGLAS and other distinguished Democrats, as shown by his special organs, the Washington "Constitution" and its echoes. There was no Post Office or other Government favors to buy his silence or his support. He was a Popular Sovereignty Douglas man in 1858, and he is the same in 1859. Will he be openly opposed by the Post Office clique?

It is very desirable that Thos. SPARROW, Esq., should be nominated for Commissioner. There would be no doubt of his election, although the Post Office clique and the "Statesman" should come down on him like a thousand of brick.—The people of Franklin, without respect to party, would like to see him occupy that position. Although the emoluments are trifling and the duties are rather troublesome, it is an office of great responsibility, and on the capacity, integrity and firmness of the Commissioners, a good deal of the county prosperity mainly depends in the transaction of its business. If good men are to be kept out of such positions of trust by such "old men of the sea" as the "Miller influence," it is time the people should take their affairs in hand and shake off the incubus. That nominations must undergo a mysterious revision, and be subject to the acceptance of the Miller influence, is indeed a lamentable truth. Such a Procrustean bed which cuts off long limbs and pulls out short ones, is an indifferent piece of political machinery at best, and might be dispensed with to advantage. The confused, if not dangerous condition in which the Democratic party finds itself involved in this county, is attributable to that source alone. A free people are not willing to place their freedom in such unscrupulous hands. They wish to have a voice in the selection of their own candidates—they wish in such selection, to feel untrammeled by any dictation for ulterior purposes, and to know that the Primary Election in which the selection of candidates is to be made, is not a mere sham, and that a secret influence has not been spread through the country, to thwart its free expression and control the popular voice. The conversation referred to in this article frequently occurs. The people are restive. They are stimulated by their fears to say things that might be construed into offensiveness, and if such an operation as is apprehended, has been at work, it is high time it stopped. An important election is before us. A U. S. Senator is to be elected for six years—the State is to be apportioned off and districted for ten years—the matters claiming legislative attention were never of more profound interest, and when there is good ground for hope that the State Ticket may be triumphantly elected, it is to be earnestly deprecated that any defection should take place here, where, if at any point in the State, there should be harmonious action.

It is right that the people should be jealous of any cabal that seeks in secret to sway them and select candidates for their support, who are expected to subserve personal rather than the general interests. In every candidate there should be that independence of thought and action, in which the people may confidently repose their delegated authority. A single candidate who lacks these qualifications, if successful, would damage the whole ticket. It is a party rule, and one worthy to be generally observed, that individual preferences should be foregone after nomination, but it will be found impracticable, should trick and chicane and secret effort succeed in securing that nomination for those distasteful to the majority of the people. There are a multiplicity of candidates for almost every office, and a plurality as a consequence elects. Should this unfortunately devolve the candidacy upon unpopular men, the party will be loser. It renders it important, then, that the Primary Election should receive the attention its importance demands; and that such persons should be voted for as candidates as it would be desirable to elect, and would prove most formidable and popular at the general election.

"Consistency, thou art a Jewel."

When it was discovered that Judge Gholson could not be driven to decline the Republican nomination, and that Judge Swan would not be used to defeat him, these enlighted advocates of a pure and independent judiciary, turn upon Judge Gholson and DEMAND of him an expression of his opinions in regard to legal questions which, if elected, he may be called upon to decide! They call upon him to sacrifice the very purity and honor, for which they pretended to make an idol of Judge Swan.—[Dayton Jour.

We make this extract from the leading article in the Dayton "Journal" of the 5th instant which is written with a good deal of causticity, and would be a merited rebuke if verified. The inconsistency which has ruffled the PEN-feathers of our Dayton gamecock, is not applicable to the Democratic party, but may fairly be attributed to the party to which, PAR EXCELLENCE, the "Journal," after a tedious travail, has become a parent. It is possible that a few thoughtless Democrats, who had not considered the confidential relations a Judge must maintain to his own opinions, before public utility or necessity requires that they should be spoken, may have suggested that it would be well to learn what Judge Gholson's opinions are upon a subject on which his friends—those who are expected to support him—are divided. In the Northern part of the State the Abolitionists insist that Judge Gholson is a practical Abolitionist—that he liberated his patrimonial slaves, to become the citizen of a free State—that pledges were given for him by his friends and neighbors that he was "all right" on the Fugitive Slave Law, and consequently he was entitled to their hearty support. Look on the Southern side of the picture, which is just the reverse of the other. It is said that he sold his slaves at auction, before removing from Mississippi to Cincinnati—that he endorses the constitutionality of the Fugitive Slave Law, and would have decided, if he were on the bench, as did Judge Swan. The want of consistency is on the side of the "Journal," and in its candidate, who, in pronouncing an opinion, must undeceive and disappoint one wing or other of his friends and followers. Should he be elected, the question will be tried again. The fanaticism of Northern Ohio would become more intensely mad in the excitement of success, and would re-enact the scenes of Oberlin and Cleveland, with additional follies, and claiming additional glory.

The Democracy have asked, (and it is a legitimate question, which trenches neither on Judge Gholson's very proper judicial reserve, or upon his dignity as a citizen,) to know which representation is true—whether he sold his patrimonial slaves or manumitted them? This is a question that he may decide without sacrificing "the very purity and honor" which the Democracy admired in Judge Swan—there will be no official impropriety in answering it, and it would relieve his supporters of the necessity of inventing marvellous excuses, and expiating marvellous fabrications, if he would enlighten them on this interesting topic. It might save them many a dark day of contrition and remorse,—for would they of Northern Ohio, who believe in the perfectibility of the negro, and as the Egyptians of old worshipped the most loathly reptiles of the Nile, deem the blackest African the most worthy of idolitry,—would they ever forgive themselves should they discover that Judge Gholson, a slave holder, (as he had an undoubted right to do) sold his negroes and put the money in his pocket before moving to Ohio?

We have said that they do not now care how Judge Gholson may decide the question of the constitutionality of the Fugitive Slave Law.—Those who are sincere will be greatly disappointed and moved—the mere politicians are satisfied whatever may be the result. In selecting another candidate, the question decided on habeas corpus will be re-opened, and, until decided, they may howl without having their mouths stopped by the decision of their own Judge. We believe, with Southern Ohio, that Judge Gholson would decide as Judge Swan decided, and until it is positively and peremptorily denied by himself or those who ought to know, we are, and shall be, as positive that he sold his negroes, and did not manumit them.

The Dayton "Journal" has leave to amend its motion, and restore the charge of inconsistency where it properly belongs.

More Mystery.

Last Spring, when the voluminous Report of the Investigating Committee was ordered to be printed, 5,000 copies were to be provided immediately, omitting the appendix of testimony, for the use of the Legislature, &c. About the same time an article appeared in the "Ohio State Journal" investigating the investigating committee, and throwing together certain correspondence, a portion of which was that of Messrs. EGGERTON and MORGAN, the one as Transfer Agent and the other as acting Fund Commissioner. The object of the article, as we remember, was to show that these gentlemen, members of the Investigating Committee, had some knowledge of the vacuum in the Treasury some time before the explosion. The "State Journal" article was thrown into pamphlet form, double column, and struck off to suit the call of the Republican members of the Legislature, and such others as might desire copies. For the convenience of those who wished to use them, these eight pages were neatly pasted in the front part of the brochure, like a preface. The Public Printer had nothing to do with the arrangement, and we do not believe any Democratic member of the Legislature had. The Secretary of State was free from any complicity in the matter, and it was only after all, a prefix on the part of Republican members and a few others, for what ulterior purposes they themselves best know. It could not have been very wicked, as the genuineness of the documents introduced has not been disputed; and a report, such as that ordered to be printed in such large numbers by the Legislature, could not apprehend much damage from a newspaper fly, even although sheltered under its own wing. It might sting a little, but was there not the report itself to refute any charge that might be embodied in it?

Well, the editor of the "Statesman" was supplied with a copy and instantly his bristles rose. The "chairman of the Central Committee" felt that a great outrage had been perpetrated—a gross violation of duty somewhere, and charges, involving those who have no connection with the State printing, binding, &c., were preferred.—Instead of explaining exactly how the thing was done, simple in itself and of little importance, it was made a serious matter, and integrity, and malfeasance and all that were mysteriously talked of. The "State Journal" replied in the same mysterous, opaque manner, leaving the public in a state of uncertainty where the blame legitimately rested, and the extent of culpability and degree of censure that anybody had incurred and should be awarded.

It would have been easy for the "Chairman of the State Central Committee" to ascertain all about it. He preferred to jump to a conclusion, and make charges without inquiry. He went off on a false scent, and entangled himself in a mystery. His floundering did no good, for he struck at random and was as liable to injure friend as foe. The "State Journal" instead of relieving him from his dilemma, which was uncharitable, left him hopelessly there, to flounder on or take the back track, which was revolting to his vanity. The fact is, the whole mystery did not exceed the outrage that one would perpetrate in sending a copy of the "State Journal" with a copy of the "Statesman" in the same envelope. VIVE LA BAGATELLE!

Party Tyranny.

Here we have the law laid down by the Statesman. Hear ye "all Democratic readers of the Statesman" and be sure that you may heed. This is the law, if not the gospel:

When these primary meetings or delegate conventions are called according to usage, and the proceedings are conducted in the ordinary way, the nominations made by them ought to be accepted by the party and supported with its entire strength. It is to be presumed that the voters who go out to the preliminary meetings, and the delegates who are elected to the nominating conventions, in the discharge of their duty, act in good faith and it will not do for the loosing party to get up accusations, charge unfairness and "bolt," because of the failure to carry a friend triumphantly through a Convention: All who in any wise participate in the preliminary meetings, are by that act bound to sustain what is done by the nominating body; and candidates who submit their claims to the consideration of a convention, are in honor committed to acquiesce in the nominations and in the support of the successful candidates.

If such be the fact, then should the people at once put a stop to the these clap-trap machines of party rascality. If these primary elections were always conducted fairly, equally, without the interposition of all the uses and appliances that pledge men to support certain individuals, there might be no objection—only it is taking a great deal of trouble for nothing. The old Democratic rule that every tub should stand on its own bottom—that every one who wants an office should present himself, is the best. But why then the necessity of a primary election or convention? To draw party lines, in which the individual is lost, and secure the party vote. This very sinking of individuality in party necessity is a great wrong, and leads to the success of mean, unscrupulous, artful demagogues and the defeat of that very intelligence, that very honesty and honor which the people want in office.

We do no not deny the rule as laid down by the Statesman; but is it not hideous? Is it not a short-linked despotism? Is it not just the thing by which Millerism could carry out its schemes and keep in office its creatures?

The Statesman talks of good faith—"act in good faith"—after such an exhibition of "good faith" in the county convention to appoint delegates to the State convention! Why was TOM MILLER there?—and SAM COX, and half-a-dozen Post Office clerks and their allies to instruct the convention whom to appoint delegates? It disgusted every honorable Democrat present, unless some of those might be so considered who were engaged in a very dishonorable business, the "unfairness" of which was as palpable as the unscrupulousness of such wire-workers and schemers as MILLER and COX.

When a Primary election or a convention is fairly conducted, we agree that candidates who have submitted their claims "are in honor committed to acquiesce," whatever may be the result. Where cheating is allowed, on the rule of "honor among thieves," the same may hold good. But it by no means follows as a consequence that those who vote for a candidate in whose intelligence and honesty they have full confidence, shall be committed to vote for a candidate in whom they have no confidence. The doctrine is monstrous. The people are not participants in frauds, that may be practised to deceive them—they are made the victims of thimble-riggers, and are told that they have pledged themselves to the successful adept with "the little joker." We hold to no such doctrine. Far better to refrain from any participation in any such "preliminary proceedings," than, barter away the birthright and privilege of a freeman.

Recently, in the county of Sandusky, a secret cabal has been exposed, in which a number of Democrats had combined to stand by their "noble selves," and control all offices in the county. By their secret and combined influence, ramified throughout the county, guided and directed by stringent obligations to stand together, they were to control all conventions and nominations, and procure the dismissal of obnoxious persons from offices in the county, Postmasters and their clerks, Railroad conductors, &c. Who does not see here an illustration of the Millerism we have amongst us, which if it have no constitution and by-laws to be exposed, has all the power and exerts all the influence to the same end of selfish aggrandizement.

The Post-Office here is the sanhedrim in which the affairs of the county, and the men of the county are canvassed. The guage of an individual is his subserviency to the dictation of Millerism, which is the "Buckeye Democratic Club" of Franklin county. No matter how consistent a Democrat one may have been—no matter how much he may have entitled himself to the regard and confidence of his fellow citizens—no matter how just, how conscientious, how industrious, how intelligent, how independent he may be—all the worse for him—if he be not one of them, off goes his head. He is made the object of suspicion. His coat is searched all over for holes. Detraction is set at work. His motives are impugned. Every possible insinuation is thrown out to disparage him, and his chances of nomination or office are whittled down by a concerted action and influence, thrown out by a combination of co-workers, against which individual effort has in most instances little success, and battles to great disadvantage. This is party tyranny of the worst description. The people of Franklin have grown weary of it. It remains with them if it shall prosper and be perpetuated.

A QUEER WAY OF TRUE!—The Statesman tells a good story about the impressment of subscribers for the Ohio State Journal. It charges that the width of the National Road has been materially contracted by the farmers on either side running their fences upon the line of the road. This was tolerated by the late contractors who had less road to repair, and would not have cared if there had been none. The trespassers were notified by the new superintendents (under the Board of Public Works) that they must move out their fences to give eighty feet to the road as originally laid off; but they have been privately advised that the order will not be enforced provided they subscribe to the State Journal! It was pretty smart in the Statesman to discover this, but what may not be done by one whose nose is always in other people's business? Perhaps the Statesman was anxious to know why the circulation of the Journal doubled its own?

We presume there is about as much truth in this, as our conscientiously scrupulous cotemporary usually considers necessary—a little seasoning of truth! If the State Journal only knew what levies are made to keep up its tottering adversary it might retaliate after a kindred fashion.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS IN LICKING.—The Democracy of Licking county yesterday nominated WM. B. WOODS and WM. PARR for re-election to the House of Representatives. The admirable manner in which Mr. WOODS presided over the late House, his urbanity yet firmness, won "golden opinions from all sorts of people." He was deservedly ranked high as a debator, for his few rounds on the floor told well, and showed him a foeman worthy of the steel of any opponent who might venture within the lists. Mr. PARR was an attentive, industrious representative, and did not lose sight of the interests of his party.

☞ The "Austrian" of the Statesman has arrived at a most "Astounding Conclusion"—something singular, after concluding that British soldiers were the best in the world, and could slaughter the Zouaves with the bayonet—after concluding that English trotters were the fleetest in the world, and that we are indebted to England for the improved breed of horses—that there is nothing on this side of the herring pond half so good as it is in England!

A Voice from the North-West.

Ohio is speaking out through her press. In vain are efforts made to suppress her sentiments. They are overwhelmingly for Douglas. Some of the more timid affect to think that it is too early to express an opinion, but, in general, they fall in company with those who enjoy government favors, and would not be at all disconcerted if the echoes of the Washington Constitution were the only sounds that met the public ear. Others there are who feel like men—who speak like men—who, like the "champion of the people" himself, are straight-forward and out-spoken, and give voice to their thoughts. Of these latter, is the Van Wert Constitution, which, in its last issue, held the following language:

OUR POSITION.—The People's Press, published at Columbus, in enumerating the Democratic papers in Ohio, which have expressed a preference for Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency, classes the Constitution among them. To this we have no objection so long as Douglas remains firm to what he is and always has been, i. e., a bold and fearless advocate of the glorious principles of Popular Sovereignty. So long as Mr. Douglas, or any other Democrat, adheres to the doctrine laid down in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and reiterated in the Cincinnati platform, we are ready to support and stand by them, come what may: and whenever an attempt is made to interfere with the rights of the people in the States or Territories, by Congressional legislation, come from what source it may, we shall denounce it as a gross usurpation of the rights of the people.

We have frequently asserted that we belong to no clique and bow to the behests of no man. The Constitution is a free, independent paper, influenced by no outside pressure. Whenever we see corruption and fraud we denounce it. If we discover tickery and baseness about to be practiced by the Black Republicans, we lay it before the people in all its wickedness and deformity, that they may see its putrefaction. And when we see demagogues among Democrats, working their insidious wiles, we endeavor to rebuke them in such a way that it will be heeded.

We look upon Douglas as the most brilliant statesman of the age. We cannot but admire the man. The same today as when he made the Senate ring with his towering eloquence in defence of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, against the clamoring opposition of fearful odds. One by one he drew his opponents beneath his banner by his logical reasoning, earnestness of demeanor, and beautiful oratory, until not a foe was left who dared to meet him. We admire him for the wonderful struggle he made in Illinois, when encompassed by foes on every side—when professional politicians, thinking his star was about to set, deserted him, with an eagerness only equalled by their zeal to serve him when his bright star was in the ascendancy. Could ever a man with other principles than those of "Popular Sovereignty" inscribed on his banner, have swept the State of Illinois with a power like one of her own wild tornadoes?

'Tis true, that here and there may be found a subtle tool, who has such a vast and wonderful veneration for party and office, that he would hold up his hands with a gesture of warning, saying—"peace, be still!" "Policy, policy!"—With us, to do right is always policy, though political gamblers howl!

We are sorry to see so many of his former admirers, who, but a short time since were loud in his praise, silent now, when his enemies seek to crush him. Where are those loud peals of thunder that were heard rolling through the valleys and reverberating among the hills? "Silent now!"

Shall he be crushed who has so often imperiled all for the sake of his party, that he may be trodden on by a common foe, and his ruin be the trophy of an acknowledged enemy's triumph?

Is there no hand on high to shield the brave?

But we digress. It always brings a throe to our breast to see a set of official leeches—those human vampires in Washington, who coo like a dove and cringe like a dog—with a political coat of chameleon—besetting a good and honest man on every side with their serpent hiss. It grieves us to see the going out of the great lights which have illuminated our country and cast a halo of light over her history. But to see a set of political tricksters plotting the destruction of a man whose shoes they are not worthy to dust, is a double grief.

We pledge ourselves to no man—our motto is "principles and not men," but so long as a man is true to a principle which we advocate, we shall remain true to him. The doctrine of popular sovereignty is our darling and our pride, and in our opinion Stephen A. Douglas has always remained firm and steadfast on that point.

This article has been called forth by frequent inquiries from our readers who have expressed a desire to know our opinion upon the subject. We have given it.

Old Buck Snubbed.

Our readers have already been informed that JOHNSTON, formerly of the Detroit Free Press, and more recently of the Union, had thrown up the consulship to Havre, but they don't all know how it was done. It was necessary to make some arrangements for Col. JOHNSTON, in placing the "organ" in charge of Gen. BOWMAN, and the Havre Consulship was tendered and declined. The Washington correspondent of the New York Times, under date of August 4, gives the further particulars of this interesting affair:

In a subsequent interview he was persuaded by Mr. Buchanan to accept of the appointment temporarily, and at least give the post a trial. Col. Johnston then stated that he would be unable, under any circumstances, to leave home for some months, which Mr. Buchanan at once said was of no consequence, as Mr. Vesey, the present occupant, was very capable and popular; and he was anxious to oblige many influential applicants to Mr. Vesey's favor, by allowing him to remain as long as possible at his post. So late even as the end of June Col. Johnston wrote to urge the retention of Mr. Vesey permanently, and the acceptance of his own resignation, without drawing any remarks from the President on his continued absence from the appointed post. Col. Johnston, however, met the President on the morning of his departure from Washington for Bedford Springs, and accosted him as usual, when, to his infinite surprise we presume, the President turned on him with the hasty anger of fretful old age and approaching dissolution, and, with an imperiously querulous voice, demanded to know why he had not gone to the discharge of his duties. On Col. Johnston's reminding him of his own arrangement, the President cried out "then it terminates now;" upon which Col. Johnston at once, with well deserved indignation, flung back his appointment in the President's face, and bade him farewell.

We do not know who had the most right to think "Republics is ungrateful." JOHNSTON had been a strong "Popular Sovereignty" man and a writer of considerable power, but he lost caste in the Union, and when that paper was converted into the Constitution, under Gen. BOWMAN, it became requisite that JOHNSTON should be provided for—and such is the way.

☞ Mr. E. L. Gray, Merchant of St. Louis, mysteriously disappeared on the 23d July. It is thought he has been murdered.

Waves of Popular Sovereignty.

☞ The Corynth (Miss.) Republican unfurls the Presidential colors of Hon. S. A. Douglas, and Hon. James Thompson for Vice President.

☞ The Douglas banner must wave triumphantly in Indiana. He is the man for the times, and around him centres the hopes of the Democracy, and upon his success depends the triumph of national principles.—Terre Haute Journal.

☞ Judge Douglas will, in all probability, be nominated at Charleston for President, and if the News don't like him they can throw their influence in favor of a Republican, if it suits them better.—Boston Herald.

☞ The Lynchburg (Va.) Republican thinks the Washington Constitution incapable of doing Judge Douglas justice. It says he is a good Democrat and no disorganizer, and when he intimates that he will not accept the Charleston nomination on the platform, in some quarters insisted on, he is precisely right.

☞ If we attempt to transfer to our columns all the articles which reach us in our exchanges from every section of the country, speaking favorably of Judge Douglas and of his overwhelming popularity, and strongly advocatig his nomination at Charleston, we should fill our entire pages over and over again.—Hartford Post.

☞ It is not a little remarkable that, while some Northern "dough-faces" are going about declaring that the South will not go for Douglas, in any contingency, there are influential men and journals in the South declaring, without reserve, that he is the most available candidate, and that they have confidence in him that he would administer the Government in strict accordance with the Constitution.—N. Y. Sun.

☞ The position of Judge Douglas is the only true one any Democrat can take, with the least hope of success. The doctrine of strict non-intervention by Congress in the local affairs of the Territories is now a part and parcel of the Democratic creed, and any attempt to repudiate it or interpolate the monstrous heresy demanded by a few hot-headed Southern agitators, that Congress has the right and ought to interfere for the protection of slavery in the Territories, would result in the defeat and total destruction of the Democracy in all the free States.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

DOUGLAS'S POSITION.—There is one very strong indication that the late letter of Senator Douglas is all right. His opponents throughout the country see the necessity of destroying its effect by perverting its meaning. They don't do that unnecessarily.

It is a noble and straight-forward production—the attacks upon it show. They can see that it strikes an answering cord in the hearts of the masses, and they know that unless this harmony can be disturbed, the popular voice will be overwhelming in his favor whenever it will be called on for an expression of preference.—St. Charles Argus.

DOUGLAS IN MISSOURI.—About two weeks since, F. P. Blair, Jr., the late Black Republican member of Congress, from the St. Louis district, was up in St. Joseph, Mo., where he is said to have made the first free-soil speech ever made in that city. Blair did not fail to use the opportunity to lie about Senator Douglas—falsely charging that the great Illinois statesman was hostile to western interests and to the improvement of our rivers and harbors. In course of the speech, as reported in the St. Louis Democrat, was the following passage, which we quote as illustrative of Douglas with the masses everywhere:

"Douglas is one of the Democratic stars. (Voice: That's so.) He is so much of a Democrat they dare not repudiate him. (Applause.)"

DOUGLAS ABROAD.—Our friend James L. Anderson, Esq., returned from his visit to Virginia on Saturday last, looking as well and clever as ever. From him we learn there is a strong Douglas feeling in Virginia, and that Douglas is the second choice of the people of that State for the Presidency. They would prefer one of their own men, but if they cannot succeed in nominating Hunter or Wise, they will go for Douglas. They think our Senator the strongest man that probably could be nominated at the Charleston Convention. Mr. Anderson says there is a strong Douglas feeling all through the country, and that the masses are for him and for him alone. Judge Anderson is a shrewd politician and close observer of what is going on in the political world, and therefore his opinion, in regard to such matters, may be relied on as about correct.—Rushville Times.

THE DOUGLAS FEELING.—The Chicago correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes thus from St. Louis:

The feeling for Douglas is very warm. All information from the South and East respecting his chances for the Charleston nomination is eagerly received and canvassed. Almost every hour of the day I found a crowd at the Briggs House engaged at that occupation. I heard from gentlemen just returned from Kentucky and other States South, that Douglas's chances are growing each day stronger, and that he has now more friends in that section than he has credit for in the North. In this city (St. Louis) some of the Democrats have been fiercely opposed to him, but they already show signs of relenting. They have felt the public pulse, and it beats healthful music to the strain of Popular Sovereignty.

DOUGLAS IN INDIANA.—The Booneville (Ind.) Democrat, which is a warm advocate of the selection of Senator Douglas as the next President, says:

It appears to be a foregone conclusion that he is to be the choice of the National Convention at Charleston, and the people are now thinking of the time when they shall have the pleasure of giving him their suffrages. Nor is this decided feeling in his favor to be wondered at. Mr. Douglas is a representative man; we see in him the true type of the American character, and the great embodiment of the principles which are so dear to us as a people. The right of the people to frame their organic laws, free and untrammeled of any foreign or extrinsic influences whatever, is a sacred one to them. He who struggles earnestly against infringements upon it is respected, is admired by them; but the one who, "with uncommon powers of intellect, with great energy and unflinching purpose, with great reliance upon his own powers and resources, with a nature fearless, with a courage that leads him to grapple with the greatest dangers, with a spirit that leads him to scorn all compromise of his principles," is the great champion and defender of the people's right to self-government, is rapturously loved by them. It is to him they wish to do homage; it is to him they will pay all due respect.

☞ Speaking of an address of John Mercer Langston, at Springfield, the "News" says:—"He announced his determination to trample the fugitive slave law under his feet." This outburst of indignation was perfectly withering and drew down a thunder-storm of applause. The United States of America trembled in an agony of fear at the darky's effervescence of temper.

To the Voters of Madison County.

[From the London National Democrat.]

Having announced myself a candidate for Representative, it is proper I should also make an announcement of what I propose to accomplish, or make an effort to accomplish, if I should be elected.—The people are the source of all power, and the government has been instituted for their benefit; they have, therefore, a right, which they should never abandon for a moment, to inquire of those who may seek to serve them in a legislative capacity, what they propose to do; and no man, I take it, is justified in asking the suffrages of his follow-citizens, for such a position, unless he proposes to effect something for the public good.

I shall endeavor, if elected, to ferret out and expose the causes of all unnecessary expenditure and extravagance in the administration of State affairs, and the sources of public corruption, and if possible, lessen the burden of taxation.

I shall labor to secure the enactment of a law to prevent the further immigration of free negroes into the State of Ohio.

I shall labor to secure such an amendment to existing statutes on the subject as to more effectually prevent negroes or persons of African descent from voting.

I shall oppose all attempts to revive or continue the agitation of the slavery question in Ohio, by any effort which may be made to re-enact the statutes in regard to fugitives slaves, which were wisely repealed by the last Legislature, and which were only calculated to bring into collision the National and State authorities; thereby disturbing the harmony of the Union, and inaugurating intestine war and civil commotion.

I shall advocate the enactment of a law to secure to each county the exclusive use of the school tax levied within its own limits.

I shall endeavor to secure the codification of the criminal laws of Ohio; and also to have the statutes of the State, generally, revised and collated in a convenient form so that the people can find out what the law is on any particular subject without paying a lawyer or going into a law suit.

I shall advocate the enactment of a law providing for a second trial before Justices of the Peace; thereby cutting off appeals and preventing a great deal of useless and expensive litigation in small cases.

It is proper to state that there will be a United States Senator to elect by the next legislature. I shall oppose the election of Mr. Chase (which seems to be intended,) Giddings, Spalding, or any other person who adheres to the Philadelphia Republican Platform, or who is identified with the men who controlled the recent Republican State Convention. If elected, such men must infect the Senate Chamber with treason and disunion, as they have disgraced the State of Ohio by the overthrow of Judge Swan and by their persistent attempts at nullification.

R. HUTCHESON.

London, O., July 28, '59.

A Voice from Kentucky.

The last number of the Louisville Democrat, published amidst Democratic rejoicings over the great victory achieved in that noble State, the veteran HARNEY thus raises his voice for the champion of the people, the Senator from Illinois:

The terror inspired by the name of Douglas in the Opposition ranks is highly amusing. They scribble away very complacently, until they think of the giant of Illinois, and then their hair rises on end like porcupine quills. They think they have it all fixed until they look up at the North-West, and the thought strikes them that perhaps Douglas will be the nominee next year. That spoils their calculations, and deranges their whole programme.—The great point the Opposition South have been trying to make, appears from the question they ask of our candidates: Will you support Douglas, if he be the Charleston nominee?

When they get an affirmative answer, they hold up their hands and roll up their eyes in affected horror. Squatter Sovereignty! they exclaim. In the North the Opposition are still more exercised over the name of Douglas. He is the lion in their path. They are waiting with nervous anxiety, to see if their allies in the South can't dispose of him. They give out word along the line that he is dead; and feel happy; and next day they repeat it, until they have him dead so often that his demise is not credited at all. We don't often see a paper of the Opposition without an allusion to Douglas, in evident alarm. By the signs of the times, judging by their apprehensions, Douglas is to them a very dangerous man. It is no wonder they labor to kill him off. If he be the nominee at Charleston, the Opposition see their overthrow in advance.—Work away, we warn you, both North and South. It is the game you have to play. Before you stand any chance to beat the Democratic party, you must dispose of Douglas. You see it; but the Democracy see it, too, unfortunately for you; and they see through all your clap-trap and humbug.

Douglas Papers in Ohio.

Constitution—Van Wert;
Democrat—Sandusky;
Democrat—McArthur;
Enquirer—Cincinnati;
Gazette—Bellefontaine;
Herald & Times—Toledo;
National—Lima;
National Democrat—London;
Plain Dealer—Cleveland;
PEOPLE'S PRESS—Columbus;
Press—Springfield.
Standard—Delaware;
Spirit of Democracy—Woodsfield;
Sun—Batavia.

☞ If there be others, let them give the sign. The Statesman is somewhere on the road.

Gubernatorial Discussion.

It has been arranged by the chairmen of the two State Central Committees that Hon. Wm. DENNISON and Hon. R. P. RANNEY will discuss the political topics of the day before the people of the States at the following times and places:

At Tiffin, on Tuesday, September		6th.
Dayton, on Thursday,	"	8th.
Cleveland, on Saturday,	"	10th.
Canton, on Tuesday,	"	13th.
Zanesville, on Thursday,	"	15th.
Chillicothe, on Saturday,	"	17th.
Columbus, on Tuesday,	"	20th.

This will afford ample opportunity to the contestants for the highest office in the gift of the people of the State, to stand upon their own merits and show their respective good points to those from whom they expect favors. The well-known courtesy of the two would-be Governors would warrant the expectation of a highly interesting discussion; and the facts will probably be drawn out as to what position both gentlemen have heretofore occupied on the Fugitive Slave law, a question of veracity having been raised in each case, among some of our cotemporaries.

☞ The Ottawa "Democrat" significantly says:

Let it be remembered that the Black Republican Judges of Ohio have declared the late enactment of the Ohio Legislature, prohibiting negroes from voting, unconstitutional!

The Sandwich Islands.

We believe that acquisition is a word that is recognized by every government as describing part of its inevitable policy; as acquisitiveness is more or less predominant in individual nature. Following out the example of Rome which claimed to be the mistress of the world, [illegible] would have still held the reins of governmental government, modern powers have sought by every artifice and device to extend their empire. England has laid tribute heavily on India and the sun nor rises nor sets on her possessions. France too has planted her standard wherever her rule could be enforced, and still looks abroad for new conquests. Some years ago the effort was made to embrace within her jurisdiction the interesting little kingdom of Hawaii, and it seems that the project has not been relinquished. A correspondent of the Providence Journal furnishes that paper with some interesting and important facts relative to this scheme for overthrowing the throne of Kamehameha IV., and annexing the islands of the Hawaiian Archipelago to the French empire. [illegible] Dillon, and attempted and executed by Admiral De Tromelin, with a frigate and steam corvette, in 1849, on which occasion this gallant commander landed 300 men in Honolulu, where not a soldier existed, [illegible] a little saluting battery, spiked and threw [illegible] the guns, placed sentinels over the custom-house and government offices, impeding the business of the employees, and finally embarked and left the port, carrying off the King's yacht, which has not been returned up to the present day.

The newspaper press of this country ceased to some extent the expediency of annexing these islands to the United States. But there is a large party in our country who are opposed to all annexation—who think we have territory enough, and are apprehensive of any addition in any quarter, or under any circumstances. The matter was dropped by common consent and little has been heard of the Sandwich Islands from that time to the present. The correspondent of the Providence Journal, which paper endorses his correctness and means of information, presents a number of important facts that claim the attention of our national functionaries. He says:

Monsieur Perrin, Commissioner of France for Hawaii, has for the last two years been discussing with the Plenipotentiaries of the King the articles of a new treaty, under assurance that it should be more liberal than that of 1846, which prohibited the government of Hawaii from levying a higher import duty than five per cent. on foreign goods, and to assimilate more to the treaties lately made with Great Britain and the United States. The restriction upon import duties was indeed withdrawn, but in its place a right was assumed by Mr. Perrin to govern by treaty stipulation the school fund set apart for the education of the Hawaiian youth, and to establish, also, by treaty, that documents in the French language should be received at the Custom-house, and other public offices, wherever they might be rendered in the English language.

These demands of the French Commissioner show plainly the object he has in view, which is to bully the Hawaiian government into obligations impossible to be fulfilled, laying before the world proofs of the non-compliance of Hawaii with treaty stipulations, thus destroying the generous protection, by Great Britain and the United States, of the independence of that rising nation.

Everyone knows that Hawaii was discovered by the English, its native inhabitants converted to Christianity and educated by American missionaries, and that a very large portion of its foreign inhabitants are Americans. Thus the English has become the common language of the country, commercial transactions, trials in the courts of justice, and business at the Custom-house and in the government offices, are conducted in English, and at most of the schools the youth are educated in this language. This being the case, it is next to possible to admit the French to a perfect equality with the English language, and that, being attempted to be established by treaty, the first failure of compliance, which would be the first case that was presented, would be blazoned to the world as insulting to his Imperial Majesty, and punishable only by the subjugation of the offender.

When the new treaty containing these very objectionable features was presented to his Majesty's privy council for its constitutional approbation, this respectable body refused to assent to its ratification. An additional article ad referendum was then proposed and accepted, which in a great measure removed the objections.

In this form, the French Commissioner forwarded the treaty to his government, but without awaiting a reply, and after having given officially assurances that his Imperial Majesty did not pretend to exercise any exclusive influence over Hawaii, and that the French Government did not approve of the conduct of Admiral de Tromlin, he presented, in January last, an offensive note to the Minister of Foreign Relations, asserting that the Imperial Government had approved of all the acts of its consuls and naval commanders of 1837, 1839, and 1849, that France has peculiar interests in Hawaii different from those of Great Britain and the United States, requiring special treaty stipulations to protect those alleged peculiar interests, and in virtue of this, claimed the right to interfere in the religion, language, legislation and revenue of that kingdom. In a previous communication Mons. Perrin had claimed the right virtually to set aside the decision of the Supreme Court of Hawaii in last resource, notwithstanding he had previously made himself a volunteer party to the suit. He furthermore asserts that the new treaty, with all its overbearing stipulations, is the work of the French Government, after having previously declared officially that it was his own production.

Not wishing, or having any good reason to deny the magnanimity of the French Government, this strengthens the belief that causes are sought for to preclude the possibility of Great Britain and the United States stepping forward to protect the independence of Hawaii.

There is no doubt that in 1849, the American press opened the eyes of Louis Philippe to the danger of attempting to seize upon Hawaii, and it is now to be hoped that a public demonstration of the United States and Great Britain, and, if necessary, the naval forces of these powerful nations will prevent the Emperor from attempting what the King declined.

The facility with which France assumed sovereignty over the Society and Marquesas Islands, without a remonstrance from any other power, no doubt has led to the belief that a similar course may be pursued with Hawaii. A strong presumption is, however, entertained that England and the United States will not permit such an act of open usurpation, particularly after both have by treaty guaranteed the independence of that little kingdom.

☞ New Volumes of the Four Reviews & Blackwood commenced July, 1859.

CLUBS.

	Per ann.
For any of one of the four Reviews	$3 00
For any two of the four Reviews	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews	7 00
For all four of the Reviews	8 00
For Blackwood's Magazine	3 00
For Blackwood and one Review	5 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews	7 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews	9 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews	10 00

Money current in the State where issued will be received at par.

CLUBBING.

A discount of twenty-five per cent. from the above price will be allowed to Clubs ordering four or more copies of any one or more of the above works. Thus: Four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9, four copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on. [illegible]

☞ Remittances should always be addressed to the Publishers,

LEONARD SCOTT & CO.,

No. 54 Gold Street, New York.

GARIBALDI.—It is said that on the arrival of the news of the peace, General Garibaldi assembled his soldiers, and after having calmed their excitement by a noble address, he requested them to renew the oath of fidelity to the King, which they did, without opposition. This conduct, which reflects honor on all concerned in it, will prove to Europe that the pretended revolutionary elements in Italy daily comprehends the importance of concord. It is worty of remark that among the volunteers of Garibaldi, there are a great number of young men belonging to Venetia.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1859.

FOR REPRESENTATIVES.

Please announce BENJ. L. REES, of Hamilton township, a candidate for the next General Assembly, subject to the decision of the people at the Democratic Primary Election.

WM. R. RANKIN, the able and efficient representative in the last Legislature, will be supported for re-election, by the "unterrified DEMOCRATS" OF FRANKLIN.

FOR AUDITOR.

JOHN PHILLIPS, the present Auditor, is recommended for re-election by Democratic voters of every ward of Columbus and every township in the County of Franklin, as a faithful and efficient officer, and entitled to the suffrages of the people.

FOR SHERIFF.

GEORGE W. HUFFMAN will be supported for Sheriff of Franklin County, by MANY VOTERS.

Board of Equalization.

Without respect to party, or through any other motive or consideration, except the general benefit, we respectfully request that Hon. ALFRED KELLY will allow us to present his name for member of the Board of Equalization. We regard the office as of the greatest importance, and wish to have his experience, judgment, close discrimination and knowledge of value, in the place, if his health and time and other engagements will permit; and we, therefore, respectfully nominate him through the columns of the PEOPLE'S PRESS. WE THE PEOPLE.

Aug11tf

To Correspondents.

"Hamilton County, No. 2" was received yesterday, but too late for the present, but shall appear in the next number of the PEOPLE'S PRESS.

We have received several communications to which we have not attended, for the simple reason that the writers have not confided to us their names. We are willing to be responsible for what we write, or what is written in accordance with our own sentiments, but do not feel inclined to be held accountable for what does not in the slightest concern us and of the authorship of which we have not the slightest conception.

"Marie" will be always welcome to our columns. Her favor came too late for this week. We have been fain to wonder where all of our old poetic friends had gone, and came to the conclusion that having "paired off," children and poetry were uncongenial. But it's not so.

Kentucky Election.

In 80 counties, having 21 to be heard from, Magoffin's majority is 4,208 which will be increased to about 8,500. Boyd's majority for Lieut. Gov. is about 10,000.

In the Senate the Democrats have a majority of ten. In the House they have a majority of 24. Allowing for all uncertainties, the majority on joint ballot will range from 28 to 34.

The members of Congress elected, indicate a tie, but hopes are still entertained of Garrard's election in the Sixth District, which would give the Democrats 6 to Opposition 4. Simms's official maj. in the 8th District 67. The opposition have gained two, possibly three, but where will they go?

THE NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.—The architecture of Columbus is rather showy in some of its features, but for the most part displays an accommodation to convenience rather than the inspiration of taste. Maj. M. B. Kelly has drawn the outline of a beautiful structure, embracing the sightly with the convenient, for a school house to be erected on the foundation that was laid for Trinity Church on Broad street, near Seventh. The skill of Maj. KELLY is indisputable. With a thorough knowledge of the science of architecture, he does not permit a desire for display to outstrip his judgment in providing for convenience and economy. The drawing shows a blending of these desirable purposes, and when erected, the building will be an ornament to that part of the city.

GIDDINGS AND CORWIN.—We hardly think it worth while to cumber our columns with the letter of Joshua R. to Tom. It has perhaps had sufficient notoriety. It animadverts with no little vim and some keenness upon Corwin's artful dodges, which shaming the Fugitive Slave Law, denouncing it as "destructive of the rights of the States, the liberties of the people, and abhorrent to the feelings of the civilized world," yet, in another breath, says: "It is the sacred duty of every good citizen to obey the law when the Legislature and Judiciary have decided it to be such." This is a logic which Joshua does not comprehend, and tells Corwin plainly that while he has no objections to Corwin entertaining them, he decidedly does object to Corwin presenting sentiments for Republicans. The inconsistencies of these Republican leaders we leave entirely to their respective friends to reconcile, and hope they may have a good time of it.

ENCOURAGING.—We like to receive such letters as the following from a prominent Democrat:

Hamilton County, July 29.

DEAR SIR:—Enclosed I hand you $2, my subscription to the PRESS.

I like the paper. It is bold, frank, honest. I trust it may be, as it should be, remunerative to you. Harvest is over. POLITICS WILL SOON COMMENCE.

The Opposition, as you will have been posted before you receive this, have FUSED in this county. The contest will be a sharp one, but with a good ticket, we shall succeed.

Yours truly,

A REPRESENTATIVE.—We publish the brief address of Col. R. Hutcheson, of Madison county, to the people, announcing himself a candidate for Representative. He is frank and emphatic. There is no circumlocution. He points out much that claims the immediate attention of our Legislature, and if he be elected, he will see that it is done or know the reason why. We wish him success. He would indeed be a Representative of the people. Consulting the interests of Madison county, he would not disregard those of the State. We like his programme. But will not the lawyers kick up at the clause that may curtail their business?

NEW HOTEL AT NEWARK.—The splendid edifice just completed at Newark, entitled the "Murray House," is to be thrown open to the public on Thursday next, with a festival, of supper and ball. The "Murray House" is situated opposite the North-west corner of the Public Square, and is a three story brick with an iron front, and large, convenient, and elegant store-rooms on the ground floor. It has fifty spacious, well-lighted and admirably ventilated sleeping apartments, which have been furnished in neat and complete style. The dining-hall is large, elegant and airy, capable of seating 150 guests comfortably and conveniently. The Ladies' Reception Rooms, Parlors, &c., have been most beautifully fitted up and furnished, and in every respect the Murray House may be set down as a first class hotel, conducted on the most liberal scale and in the very best style. On Thursday the festival of the "warming" is to be inaugurated by a sumptuous supper, and afterwards the halls will resound with "music's lively and enchanting strains," and "the light fantastic toe" will be sported by gay and graceful votaries of the dance. A general invitation has been extended to partake of the cheer, which we have been requested to say includes Columbus, whose warm-hearted citizens Mr. MURRAY hopes to number among his guests. As we intend to rank ourselves among them, we shall defer any further description until after the fete.

Cox and Miller—Will they Answer?

The people of this district, and the people of this county, and the people of this city are interested in knowing what constitutes the vis inertia by which their public servants and officials are moved. We all know with what reluctance Col. MEDARY relinquished the agreeable position of Postmaster at Columbus to accept the higher honor of the Executive of Kansas. We all know how TOM MILLER was the Grand Marshal of the Anti Lecompton procession on the 19th of March, 1858. We all know how as Chairman of the "Mass Convention" GEO. W. MANYPENNY read out of the party all Democrats who did not coincide with that demonstration, and closed the books. We all know how SAM COX proclaimed that the English Bill was a d——d sight meaner than the original Lecompton. Some of us know that the Austrian editor of the Statesman declared that if SAM COX voted for the English Bill he ought to be kicked (not very respectfully) out of Congress Hall. And we all know that a very great change suddenly took place in a very peculiar set of politicians. The reasons may be inferred for the simultaneous "bout face" of this squad, who claim to dictate to the freemen of Franklin county, if not the State of Ohio, from the following questions to which categorical answers are invited:

Did MILLER, at Washington, agree to purchase the Ohio Statesman, and change it from a zealous DOUGLAS organ to an Administration paper?

Did MILLER and COX reduce to writing this agreement? Was there not a copy of that original agreement?

Was there not an understanding that so much of the public printing, or proceeds thereof, was to be transferred to the Statesman as part or whole of the consideration?

Did COX, at Washington, agree to go for the English Bill, with a Southern member of Congress from Ohio? And was there not a member from one of the Eastern Districts present when the agreement was made?

Was there not agreed upon, as a consideration, the reinstatement of TOM MILLER and the removal of Col. MEDARY as Postmaster at Columbus, and that COX should have the control of the mail agencies in his district?

Will COX and MILLER stand in the presence of a committee of Congress, and deny the charges involved in these questions?

Will they, in the face of this community, deny that such meeting was held in Washington, such agreement was concluded, and that the considerations were demanded and accorded?

The denial of COX and MILLER, fairly and squarely is wanted, publicly and unequivocally as on that depends something in which they are interested. If they do not answer unequivocally and without dodging the questions here set forth, their silence must be taken as admitting everything therein indicated.

Q OUT OF A CORNER.

LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE OF THE PILGRIM MONUMENT.—The corner stone of a monument to the Pilgrims, who landed at Plymouth, Dec. 21st, 1620, was laid on Tuesday, with imposing ceremonies, one of the chief features of which was the Masonic display. Military companies from New Bedford, Braintree, Abington, and the local military and firemen added to the interest of the occasion. Probably twelve thousand people were present, and the village of Plymouth was gaily decorated. The exercises of the day commenced by the laying of the corner-stone of the monumental canopy over Forefather's Rock, with masonic ceremonies. Then followed the laying of the corner-stone of the national monument, to be erected on Monument Hill. The exercises commenced by an address from RICHARD WARREN, president of the Pilgrim Society. He was followed by GOV. BANKS, who delivered an oration. The Rev. Dr. STORRS of Braintree made a prayer. The corner-stone was then laid by JOHN T. HEARD, of Boston, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts. The ceremonies were solemn and impressive. The procession was then reformed and marched to the tent, where a dinner was provided for 2,500 guests. At the table speeches were made by Governors BANKS of Mass., CHASE of Ohio, BUCKINGHAM of Conn., and TURNER of Rhode Island, and by JOHN P. HALE of New Hampshire, ANSON BURLINGAME, and others. In the evening there was a ball, illuminations and fire-works.

TURNED OUT.—The Sheriff of Franklin, who desires a re-election, but will be disappointed, finding that his principal deputy, Mr. EDWARD DAVIS, was not "prejudiced in his favor," summarily dismissed him on Monday. This was bad policy, and will cost Mr PARK many votes. We hardly think we shall vote for him after that. From every quarter we have heard Mr. EDWARD DAVIS spoken of as an efficient and gentlemanly officer. He is a sterling Democrat, too. But his chief recommendation has been the polite and gentlemanly manner in which he has discharged the disagreeable portions of his duties. He is very and deservedly popular on that account and has been quite as efficient in arranging and closing business, as if he had rendered himself obnoxious in the exercise of his "little brief authority." Well, "ED.," your vacation will be short. We expect to see you duly and honorably installed by PARK's successor.

INCIDENTS OF THE LATE ACCIDENT ON THE NORTHERN RAILROAD.—The Troy Times of Thursday has the following:

When the accident occurred, Mr. Cooley, the conductor, had just finished taking the tickets, and was about to join his companions in the forward car where they were. He saw them thrown from their seats and hurled down towards him. He seized his wife and child. The child remained in his grasp, but his wife was torn away from him, and carried down into the water with the others. Mr. Cooley was caught between two seats, and, though badly hurt, escaped with his life, and saved his child. Mrs. Cooley and Mrs. Cayler were both taken from the wreck dead; they had been carried in the water beneath the mass and drowned. Mr. Baker sustained a compound fracture of one leg. The wife and mother were fondly locked in each other's arms in the death embrace.

The mail agent, Mr. Plympton, was instantly killed. He sat in the mail car with his notebook and pencil in hand, a corpse—not having finished making up his way list, probably.

W. J. A. Fuller, Esq., of New York City, a lawyer and distinguished chess player—recently editor of the chess department of Frank Leslie's paper—was in the rear end of the last car. He was pitched the whole length of the car to the forward part of it, when he found himself struggling in the water, and wedged in by the mass of the material upon him. Mr. Fuller says his first sensation was of a concussion or obstruction on the track, then a momentary feeling of security, after which he has no recollection until he was resuscitated by the water. Mr. Fuller is badly hurt.

DAUGHTERS OF MALTA.—The lady editor of the Rockford (Ill.) Standard says: "The Daughters of Malta are becoming as distinguished, and seem to be quite as benevolent in their designs, as the Sons of Malta. Their object is said to be to relieve widowers, destitute bachelors, dandies, Hottentots, and orphan male children. By the time the Sons obtain the control of the Islands of Cuba, the Daughters confidently expect to subjugate the Isle of Man.' Mrs. Cooly, no doubt, speaks understandingly of the order."—[St. Louis Bulletin.

We advise our neighbor of the Columbus "Gazette," the G. R. J. A. of the order, to open a correspondence at once with the Rockford "Standard." He may get items.

TURTLE SOUP AT THE CAPITAL RESTAURANT.—In addition to the capital manner in which the Capital Saloon and Restaurant are kept, John O'Hara regales his numerous customers with real turtle soup on the first day of every week. Drop in on Sunday forenoon and take a bowl.

☞ That ingenious piece of Mechanism at the Museum, carved by a boy, is worth seeing, if one is not induced to look into the interior, where there is something really refreshing.

AN ASSASSINATION OR MURDER AT CLEVELAND.—We announced yesterday the death of ELISHA T. STERLING of Cleveland, who has been a prominent man of business there for a quarter of a century, and who was well known all over the country as the agent and manager of the Cuyahoga Steam Furnace Company. The Herald thus bears witness to his character:

As a correct, upright, honest, liberal business man the whole city bear witness; as a friend, guileless and self-sacrificing, as a public benefactor, as a neighbor, as a christian at heart and in his walk to the extent of human strength, as a man who never closed his ear against a tale of suffering, as one who for a friend would go as far as the farthest, Mr. STERLING was a rare instance.

The developments before the Coroner were, indeed, startling. It seems that he went away, and was last seen with KINGMAN SHERMAN, who testifies to a game of cards with deceased, and that the latter left his room just at day-dawn, very much inebriated; that hearing a noise he found deceased at the foot of his stair-way on the pavement, wounded from the fall and unable to speak. We have not time to analyze the testimony, but at this distance, it appears from what went before the Coroner, that STERLING was murdered with his own loaded cane that has not turned up, and that SHERMAN is principal or accessory in the murder, and perhaps BEACH. SHERMAN testified that he and deceased had been playing cards alone; but testimony is given that there were other voices, and must consequently have been other persons. The testimony of SHERMAN as to other persons on other occasions is denied peremptorily by them; and the natural conclusion is, that SHERMAN killed him in the heat of altercation over a game; or that he or somebody else struck the death blow at the foot of the stairs, either for money, which is thought deceased had, or to cancel a gambling debt. Such, at least, is the inference we draw from the testimony before the Coroner. The offender in so public a murder cannot escape; and it will be difficult for SHERMAN to clear his skirts of more knowledge of it than he has yet confessed.

The Crops in the British Islands.

The English journals give good accounts of the wheat and other crops. From Ireland and Scotland we have equally good reports. The Dublin Mercantile Advertiser says:

We have now passed the time when, in former years, accounts of appearances of blight in the potato crop usually began to appear. As yet, fortunately, there have not been even rumors of disease in the growing crop, unless from one or two Western districts, and the potatoes which are in very abundant supply at the Irish markets, are excellent in quality. Owing, however, to the severe frosts at the commencement of May, a considerable portion are small in size; and we fear that this complaint is rather general.

A late Scotch journal says:

We have had another week of charming weather. The land has been made soft with showers, and the springing thereof has been blessed. The pastures are covered with flocks, the valleys are covered with corn; and all nature rejoices in the munificence of its great Creator. The crops in this district are such as to leave no just cause for grumbling.

Another journal says:

The weather continues dry and warm, and the crops are being forced on at hot-house rate of growth. It is curious to observe the barley changing color already. Harvest will be commenced in the early districts in the first week of August if the heat continues. Observers profess to say that the yield will not be abundant, though the quality will be superior. So far as the eye can detect, all over the South of Scotland the country never looked more beautiful, and grumbling should be held in reserve till a more fitting occasion offers. We hear nothing of potato failure; the crop everywhere looks well.

RAREY IN ENGLAND—HE GETS AN OFFICE.—The report of a commission lately appointed by the Commander-in-Chief of the British army to investigate Mr. RAREY's system of horse-breaking has been published. The results of experiments upon a variety of horses, as witnessed by the Board, are related, and the conclusion is arrived, that the system is a good one. The Board is of opinion that it would be beneficially adopted and practised by the cavalry, and that, to ensure the proper system being carried out, it would be advisable that Mr. RAREY should be employed to teach the system to certain members of each regiment; for, though the system may be explained by words, or writing, they are also required to carry it into execution, a great degree of firmness and resolution, temper and patience, and a manipulation that requires to be seen by and taught to men to render it successful. In accordance with this recommendation, Mr. RAREY has been appointed by the Commander-in-Chief to commence the instruction of the officers, riding masters and rough riders in the cavalry regiments at the depots in England and Ireland, in the art of subduing horses to regimental purposes.

ATTEMPTED REVOLT AT SING SING STATE PRISON.—On Monday afternoon, of last week, a number of convicts at the State Prison attempted to escape by a preconcerted arrangement made among themselves. It appears that the convicts in the hat shop and stove foundry had formed a combination among themselves to run the keepers and guards when it came "lock-up time" on the afternoon of that day, and the signal was, that when the stove foundry men were marching around the corner of the hat shop, the hat shop men were to rush out and join them, and then a general stampede was to take place; a portion of the men in the two cabinet shops and the quarry were also to have quickly joined in, and a "good time generally" was put down on the convicts' programme.

But, luckily, information of this contemplated outbreak had reached the ears of the officers, and arrangements were accordingly made to meet the emergency—Colt's large revolvers and muskets well loaded with buck-shot, were placed in the hands of the officers, guards and others. Mr. Gleco, the hat shop-keeper, saw the foundry men advancing, drew his shooter, and told the men that their object was known—that the officers and the villagers were ready for them—and that, if they valued their lives, they would abandon their contemplated arrangement. When the foundry men saw that everything was quiet in the hat shop, (from which they expected to be joined,) they marched on, took up their buckets and their mush, and were locked up as usual.—Sing Sing Chronicle, Aug. 3.

The following are the Expenditures and Receipts of the County Treasury for the month of July:

EXPENDITURES.

Costs of Prosecutions	$ 347.20
[illegible]	236.41
Infirmary and Paupers	647.48
[illegible]	30.44
General Expenses	779.80
Bridge	4,094.08
County Commissioners	67.80
District Assessors	772.00
Common School Expenses	80.00
Lunacy	2.75
Petit Jurors	50.35
Roads and Highways	2.30
Refunded Taxes	2.88
Coroner's Inquests	62.18
City of Columbus Corporation Fund	10,000.00
Prairie Tp. School Funds—intermediate payment	132.88
Total	$17,307.86
Total receipts exclusive of current Duplicate	$7,613.84

ASSESSOR'S RETURNS.—Mr. B. G. KENNY, Assessor of Perry township, has made the following return to the County Auditor:

Number of acres of plow land	6,911
Number of acres of meadow land	3,370
Number of acres of woodland	9,816
Total number of acres in township	19,227
Value of land	$551,287
Value of buildings	14,338
Total value—land and buildings	$555,606
Total value as assessed in 1853	494,968
Increase	$60,638

WHEAT STATISTICS.—The wheat statistics published in the Commercial Express, Chicago, show the receipts of the year ending Aug. 1 to be five millions thirty-one thousand bushels, against thirteen millions nine hundred and fifty-six thousand in the previous year. The shipments were in about the same proportion.

☞ The canal tolls of the State of New York up to August 1st amount to $686,331 against $915,130 last year, being a falling off of $228,799.

☞ The ticket wagon of Van Amburgh's menagerie was robbed of $1,275, on the evening of the 2d inst., at Mooresville, Morgan county, Indiana.

☞ Some suppose that the present growing cotton crop of 165960 may reach four millions bales, or three hundred thousand in excess of the present crop.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FARTHER POINT, BELOW QUEBEC, Aug 7.—The Nova Scotian from Liverpool on the 27th, has passed this point bound for Quebec. Her advices, which are four days later, have been obtained.

England demands the disarmament of the recent belligerent powers, as a condition for taking part in the European Congress.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, July 26.—The weather continued favorable for the crops. The breadstuffs market generally has an advancing tendency, with the exception of corn. The circulars report flour dull, holders demanding an advance. Wheat quoted 3d higher. Corn dull, but there is no change in quotations. Flour is quoted at 10s@12s. Wheat 7s 6d@9s 6d for red and 8s@8s 6d for white. Yellow corn 7s@7s 3d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.—The provision market continues to have a declining tendency; beef hams quoted nominally unchanged. Bacon dull. Lard quiet.

LONDON MARKETS, July 26.—Wheat generally closed with an advancing tendency and prices are 2d higher. Sugar firm. Coffee firm. Rice steady at a slight advance for all qualities.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, July 26.—The money market is unchanged. American securities dull. Consols quoted at 95.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—It is reported that Count Walenski has submitted a plan for the confederation of Italy; it is to comprise seven States, and the Presidency is nominally given to the Pope, but in reality to the Kings of Sardinia and Naples alternately. The strong places to be garrisoned by the federal troops, are Gaeta, Mantua and Piacenza. The votes in federal Diet according to this proposition are to be divided as follows: Parma one, Modena one, the Pope two, Tuscany two, Sardinia three, and Naples three.

GREAT BRITAIN.—In the House of Lords Lord Lyndhurst defended himself from the charges of Mr. Bright on account of the warning voice he raised, and asked if the Admiralty were aware that the French were arming their fleets with rifled cannons.

The Duke of Somerset replied in the affirmative, and said that although England had improved the cannon in progress of manufacture, it could not be ready for some time.

In the House of Commons, Sir De Lacey Evans moved for the appointment of a commission to inquire into the National defences, and report what improvements were possible. It is understood that the government assented to the substance of the resolution. The government, however, would not assent to the motion, but were willing to the appointment of a committee to inquire what permanent fortifications were necessary for the defence of the dock yards and arsenals. Sir De Lacey Evans' resolution was negatived.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

Nothing of moment had transpired in regard to the conference at Zurich, nor is it known whether Sardinia would take a part.

A dispatch of the 25th from Rome, however, says, that the representatives of the three powers were expected to meet at the end of July.

It was vaguely rumored in Paris on the 26th that Napoleon would visit London.

The London Daily News believes that although the scheme of an Italian confederation may not have been formally struck off the programme, it is not now insisted upon by its author; that little more will we hear of it.

The French fleet had sailed from Sissaria, and it was reported that a portion of the French army had begun to leave Italy.

Count Persigny had arrived in Paris from London.

It is said that he took with him an assurance that England would give her adhesion to the Congress on condition of a general and immediate disarmament.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times is informed that the English Government has offered to send a representative to the Congress provided that France disarms; that the French Emperor agreed to do so on condition that England did the same; that England consented on condition of a general disarmament by land and sea, and that France will begin the movement, and that the English Government is very well satisfied with the conduct of the French Emperor.

The Independance Belge gives a report that the proposition for a disarmament proceeded in the first instance from Napoleon.

It is asserted that a Military Convention between France and Austria relative to Italy has been concluded, and that Lombardy is to take a fair share of the national debt.

The Paris Moniteur of the 26th ult. contains the following: "It is endeavored in England to attribute to France the causes of the English national burdens, but the English are deceived merely in order to further the national defences. The exaggeration of our armaments is to justify a considerable increase of the budget for the army and navy. A comparison of the budget of England and France will show that these considerations have been erroneous. Since 1815 the army expenses of England have been increased by two hundred million francs, making for 1859 a total of more than six hundred and fifty million francs, while the French army budget for 1860 does not exceed four hundred and sixty three million. One, therefore, asks whether it is to France and her extraordinary armaments that the navy which weigh on the English people are to be attributed, or whether these enormous expenses and taxes, which are the consequences of these burdens, must not be attributed to other reasons."

The Paris correspondent of the Herald says, that there is something like two hundred million pounds unexpended out of the late loan, and it is understood that the surplus will be applied to the navy.

The Paris Patrie, referring to the above article from the Moniteur, says, that France has done everything to free England from the nightmare of invasion in order to restore to her calmness and repose. If unsuccessful England can only blame herself for the fear which agitates her and which, if prolonged would be an affront to the sincerely friendly feelings and actions of France.

The London Post's Paris correspondent says, there is the same disposition as ever in official quarters to assure England that the Emperor and his advisers consider the Anglo-alliance now as ever necessary for the tranquility and prosperity of Europe.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says that it was reported that Count Walenski had drawn out a plan for the Conference and the confederation of Italy.

THE LATEST.

LONDON, July 27.—M. D'Ambrios, a very enlightened man, has been named as the Sardinian Plenipotentiary to the Conference at Zurich. Austria however refuses to meet any Sardinian representative, but will leave it open to Sardinia to accede to the treaty after its conclusion by Austria and France.

The Duke of Tuscany has expressed his willingness to abdicate in favor of his son who promises a constitution, but the Tuscans object altogether to the dynasty.

It is said that the Emperor Napoleon will make his entry into Paris on the 14th of August at the head of a part of the army of Italy.

The London Herald says, that the grand Duke Constantine will soon visit England.

The London News' city article of to-day says that the funds opened on Tuesday with increased firmness at a fresh advance of ⅛.

The Paris Moniteur's article taking exception to the military and naval expenditures of England, caused a fall of ⅛. The demand for money was steady and the leading discount houses are less inclined to take the best bills below 2½ per cent.

The London Times says, that the Paris Moniteur's article is in many respects deceptive and urges the immediate arming of the navy with the Armstrong gun.

The Duke of Malakoff has been appointed Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honor.

It is reported that about 200,000 men will be discharged from the army on renewable furlough, the advantage being that the government will have them still on hand while their cost will be diverted to other purposes.

The wine accounts are unfavorable, the grapes being injured by the excessive heat, and prices tended upward.

The Moniteur, the government organ, says, that Denmark has ceded the Island of St. Thomas to the United States.

SARDINIA.—Le Nord says, that one of the first acts of the new ministry will be to put an end to the present dictatorship and frame an electoral bill applicable to Lombardy. A dissolution will then take place in order to effect in the new chambers a complete fusion of Piedmont and Lombardy. The King will preside, and the parliament set in alternate years at Turin and Milan.

The Turin Journals say, that the army reinforced by recruitments in Lombardy is to be raised to 200,000 men.

General Garibaldi had a confidential interview with General Marmora at Brescia on the 15th ult. He stated that he had 12,000 men and his force continued to increase. He expressed confidence in the King of Sardinia not forsaking the Italian cause.

A Milan letter to the London Times says that Gen. Garibaldi is about to move to the Appenines.

There will be a gathering of 50,000 volunteers in the Romagna and Garibaldi's corps added to that of Mezzacapo will form an army capable to secure the independence of Central Italy, at least against any Roman or Neapolitan force.

It is rumored that the Duke of Modena proposed to arm 4,000 Austrian troops to enable him to enter his State, also that a division of the French army is to enter Parma and Tuscany, and another corps, the Roman legation, for the purpose of simply preserving order, and allowing the free expression of public opinion.

The municipality of Florence has formally expressed the desire of annexation to the Italian kingdom under Victor Emanuel, or that Tuscany be governed by a Prince of the House of Savoy.

The Pontifical government has issued a circular complaining bitterly of the action of Victor Emanuel, and asking the assistance and protection of foreign governments in vindication of its rights.

A great number of addresses are being signed in Romagna against the return of clerical government and in favor of an union with Sardinia. It is stated that the principle of the Italian Confederation will be accepted by the Pope, a majority of the Cardinals having voted in its favor.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

CINCINNATI, August 8.—The Cincinnati and Memphis packet Kate May, bound down, struck a snag last night at Midol, eighteen miles below this city, and sunk in six feet of water. Her freight (300 tons) is badly damaged, but the boat may be raised. The May was on her second trip, and is valued at $15,000, and is fully insured in the Firemen's Western Union, Buckeye and Washington offices, in this city.

NEW YORK, August 8.—By the arrival of the ship Sportsman and bark Down at this port last evening we have advices from Buenos Ayres to the 24th of June. Capt. Chase, of the Down, states that on the 24th of June 1,000 Buenos Ayres troops embarked on board the war steamers Camilla and Spree, which on the following day proceeded up the river followed by a Brazilian man-of-war steamer. The supposed destination of the troops was San Nicholas.

The government of Buenos Ayres was increasing its forces rapidly for the expected contest with Urquiza. All communication with Pasorio was closed, and the American mail steamer from there on her last trip was allowed to bring only a consular mail and no passengers. The United States steamer met the Comet sailed from Buenos Ayres, on the 21st of June, for Parana, having on board Capt. Stedman. The U. S. brig Perry had sailed for Montevideo. The Bainbridge and Dolphin were at Buenos Ayres on the 26th of June.

NEW YORK, August 6.—The British ship James Nep, from Newburyport, reports passing June 28th, in lat. 47° 30, long. 2:35, a steamship on fire and abandoned. The hull was burnt to the water's edge, and her name was gone. She had a serpent figure-head and appeared to be American built.

NEW ORLEANS, August 5.—The steamship Habana has arrived up with the California mails of the 20th ult. The money market at San Francisco was light. Flour was selling at $9 per barrel.

Advices from Minitilian to the 2nd inst. state that Miramon had issued a decree imposing a heavy tax on every citizen of Mexico favoring the priests. No other event of importance had transpired in Mexico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Michael A. Titus, formerly of the firm of Bimrod and Titus, flour dealers, of this city, died suddenly this morning, on one of the south ferry boats.

THOROLD, C. W., Aug. 6.—Two flouring mills were burnt in this village last night, together with the Niagara and Thorold Hotel, seven dwelling houses and several stables, &c. The total loss is about $40,000. The mills were partially insured.

ALBANY, August 6.—The inquest on the bodies of the killed by the recent Railroad disaster has been concluded, the Jury returning a verdict to the effect as the Schaghticoke bridge was known to be unsafe the Superintendent and Directors should be held responsible.

NEW YORK, August 6.—Montevideo advices furnished by an arrival at this port state that the British brig Earl of Derby was boarded by a Buenos Ayres war steamer and had 2,000 swords sent by Urquiza issued to a Commercial house at Rosario, taken from her.

PETERSBURG, Aug. 6.—The returns from North Carolina show the following results of the election held in that State yesterday: In the Fourth District, Hon. Lawrence O. B. Branch (Dem.) is certainly elected. In the First Congressional District, Mr. Smith (Opposition) is certainly elected by 400 majority, over Hon. Henry M. Shaw. In 1855 Shaw was elected by a majority of 32. No returns from the other districts have yet been received.

WASHINGTON, August 6.—By advices just received here it appears that Juarez declines signing the treaty without the approval of the Mexican Congress, and one cannot be called until the Liberals obtain the possession of the city of Mexico. This, however, is not the only difficulty, a conspiracy was discovered at the Capitol on the 11th of July. The plan was to assassinate the Governor and take possession of the government.

CAPE ISLAND, August 6.—The steamer Delaware brought down to-day over five hundred passengers, among whom were the Cincinnati excursionists. The party express themselves highly delighted with their visit to Philadelphia, and speak in the highest terms of their reception and treatment. They arrived here in fine health and spirits, and will be well provided for during their stay. On Monday they will indulge the luxury of a salt water bath! and on Monday evening, Mayor Bishop, President Eggleston, and the party leave for New York.

NEW ORLEANS, August 6.—Dates from the city Mexico to the 19th ult. have been received by Vera Cruz to the 28th.

Miramon had issued a manifesto, in which he promises to protect the clergy in power and wealth, and favors a dictatorial government.

He declares the traditional policy of Mexico a guard against the United States.

McLane sent only the skeleton of a treaty to Washington, unsigned. The Tehuantepec Company were annoyed by the authorities. The mails will probably be suspended soon.

Gen. Zuaxua was approaching San Luis Potosi with 5,000 of Miramon's troops, concentrating at Regenerator. There was a reported grand movement on foot.

WASHINGTON, August 6.—The receipts into the Treasury for the quarter ending with June exclusive of trust funds were twenty-three million one hundred and twenty-six thousand four hundred and fifty-two dollars, excluding $14,251,000 from customs, $442,876 from public lands and $8,500,200 from Treasury notes issued under the act of Congress of December, 1857. The expenditures during the same period were $26,212,000, including $10,016,000 in payment of Treasury notes, and $1,564,000 interest in the public debt, including Treasury notes.

The President has recognized G. Monnel Trevanio as Consul from Mexico at the port of Brownsville, Texas; also, Frederick Kuhne as Consul from the Grand Duchy of Mechlenburg Strelitz, at New York; Jose German Rebon, as Vice-Consul of the Grandanian Confederation at New York, and Schuyler Livingston, of New York, as Consul General of the kingdom of the Hawayan Islands for the United States.

LOUISVILLE, August 8th.—Advices from Memphis state that Moore, Halstead & Company's Planing Mill and Lumber yard with five adjoining Dwellings, were burned yesterday, supposed to be by an incendiary. The loss is estimated at $125,000, and is insured.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 8.—The body of Elisha T. Sterling, a well-known citizen of this city, was found early yesterday morning upon the sidewalk, with his skull fractured. He was probably murdered.

A reward of five hundred dollars has been offered for the detection of the murderer. The Coroner's verdict has not yet been rendered.

ST. LOUIS, August 7.—The Overland mail arrived last night. A fire occurred at Crescent City on the 9th of July. Loss $30,000.

New gold and silver mines were discovered in Washoe valley, which promise to pay well.

There have been three arrivals from Victoria within three weeks, bringing upwards of $130,000 in gold, and 300 passengers. The latest dates are to the 12th of July. Fraser river had fallen sufficiently to permit the resumption of mining on bars. The Victoria Gazette says the yield of mines within the year has been three millions of dollars.

The ship Euphrates, from London, and the United States steamer Shubrick Esquimaux arrived from Oregon on the morning of the departure of the mail and brought advices indicating the election of Logan, Republican Congressman, by twenty or thirty majority.

SALT LAKE, July 13.—A man named Brewer, was arrested at Camp Floyd, having in his possession eighty thousand dollars in counterfeit government checks, on the sub-treasury at St. Louis, most of which was ready to issue, excepting the signature Col. Crossman, engraver, was also arrested at Salt Lake City, in whose shop all the implements and materials used in preparing the checks, together with a large bundle of unfilled checks, were found.

Horace Greeley had arrived at Salt Lake City.

The Indians were committing depredations in Humboldt county. The Mormons are implicated with them.

PRICES CURRENT.

CORRECTED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY WALKER & SON.

COLUMBUS, August 10, 1859.

Wheat, red, ℔ bush.	90	Hams	12@13
do white do	1 10	Dried Beef	12@14
Flour, ℔ barrel	5 50@6 00	Pork, Mess	16 00
Corn, ℔ bushel	55	Hogs	4 50@4 00
Rye, ℔ bushel	75	Potatoes ℔ bushel	1 25@1 50
Oats, ℔ bushel	30	Turnips, ℔ bushel	20
Clover Seed ℔ bush	5 00	[illegible] ℔ bushel	60
Timothy do	2 50	Apples, ℔ bush	1 00@1 25
Beans ℔ bush	1 00	Apples, dried, ℔ bush.	2 00
Sugar ℔ lb	8@9	Peaches, pared, ℔ bu.	4 00
Molasses	45@50	Beeswax, ℔ lb	20
Butter, ℔ lb	10	[illegible] ℔ lb	30@35
Eggs, ℔ dozen	10	Feathers, ℔ lb	45
Cheese, ℔ lb	10	Chickens, alive, ℔ pair	25
Lard ℔ lb	14	Chickens, dressed, ℔ lb	8
Tallow, ℔ lb	10	Turkey, alive, each	50@60
Salt, ℔ bbl	1 75	Turkeys, dressed, ℔ lb	8
Rock salt	2 00	Whiskey, ℔ gallon	28@30
Hides, ℔ lb	5½	Hay, ℔ ton	10 00@12 00
White fish per bbl	10 00	Wood, ℔ cord	2 00@2 50
Mackerel No 1	19 00	Coal, ℔ bu.	4 75@5 00
No 2	17 00	Rio Coffee	12@14
No 3	12@14	Java	18@20
Tea	50, 75, 100

Markets.

CINCINNATI, August 9.—Wheat quiet and rather dull, prices unchanged, some inquiry for prime red but this quality is scarce just now, and brings full prices, sales 1,800 bushels prime white at $1 14@1 15, 600 good do at $1 12, 500 do $1 10 and 800 prime red at $1 08@1 10. Corn steady and firm at 60@62c. A fair demand for Rye and prices steady; sales of 300 bush at 80c and 200 prime old at 82c. Barley firm with brisk demand for prime old at 58@60c. Oats easier sales 100 bushel at 48c. Flour dull and prices easier 200 bbls superfine sold at $4 80, 150 extra at $5. Whisky, 330 bbls sold at 23@23½c. There is a moderate demand for bacon sides at 9c, but holders ask 9½c, 10 hhds bacon shoulders sold at 7c.

GROCERIES.—No change in market, demand moderate, prices unchanged. Sugar quoted at 7@8c. Molasses 38c. Coffee 11½@13½c.

NEW YORK, August 9.—Flour 10@15c lower; sales of 7,500 bbls at $4 40@4 65 for State and $4 80@5 25 for Ohio. Wheat dull and 2@3c lower, red $1 20@1 25, white $1 45, western white old $1 15. Corn quiet. Pork heavy at $14 06½@14 12½. Lard quiet. Whisky 28c.

PHILADELPHIA, August 9.—The transactions in flour are confined to the wants of the trade at $5@5 50 for old stock, and fresh ground, $5 50@6 75 for extra and extra family. Rye flour is dull at $3 75. Corn meal $3 62½. Wheat in demand, sales of 2,500 bushels at $1 25 for prime red and $1 40@1 45 for white. Rye quiet, 500 bushel old Penna sold at 78c. Corn firmer, 40,000 bushels yellow sold at 75c. New oats if here would command 32c, old are wanted at 37@37½c. Provisions firmer, sales 200 bbls mess pork at $16@16 50, 100 casks unpacked hams at 12c, 100 hhds sides at 8½@9½c, shoulders at 7½c. Lard sells slowly at 11c in bbls and 12c@12½c in kegs. Rice has declined to 4½@4¾c. Whisky in limited demand at 26@27c.

BALTIMORE, August 9.—Flour active; sales of 5,000 bbls at $5 87½@6 25 for City Mills, superfine and extra. Wheat firm; sales of 12,000 bu at $1 20@1 40 for white. Corn dull and declining, white and yellow at 75@76c. Provisions steady but unchanged. Whisky dull at 27c.

☞ Buy AYER'S AGUE CURE for Intermittents, AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for a Cough, and AYER'S PILLS for all the purposes of a Family Physic.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—CINCINNATI, July 1, 1858.—Dr. U. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir:—In reply to inquiries made of me, it gives me pleasure to say, that Mrs. N. Ayles, of the Society of Friends, and widow of the late Dr. AYLES of Cincinnati, previous to her going East, expressed her confidence in the efficacy of your Scandinavian Remedies, and the benefit she derived from using them. She had been suffering from general prostration at times, being over seventy-six years of age, and erysipelas and inflammation of the face. Various remedies were resorted to without relief, when some friends recommended a course of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills. They had the desired effect, and she was considered as restored to health.

I know many who have used your medicines, and speak decidedly of the benefits derived, thus testifying of their renovating influence in purifying the blood and giving vigor and energy to the system. They have my cordial approbation. Very respectfully your obedient servant, S. J. BROWNE.

Rev. Samuel J. Browne has been a devoted laborer in the cause of Christianity, in Cincinnati, for more than thirty years, as almost every old Cincinnatian knows. Such testimony, from such a source, is not to be passed over lightly. No other Proprietary Remedies ever presented to the public, ever received a tithe of the commendation from MEN OF STANDING, in every walk of life, that mine have done.—[See advertisement.

CITY NOTICES.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 23, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that yours surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

N. SHAFFER,

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the cards are. Morgan deserves the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. CHITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, unequaled.

☞ Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at RUNDELL'S if you want a superior article.

☞ FARMER'S Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made care for the last two or three years.

☞ ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if puffy is three bents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ CHARLEY BREYFOGLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

E. BASSETT LANGDON,
Attorney at Law,
CINCINNATI, OHIO.
☞ OFFICE 31 West Third street. jy7-tf

SPENCER HOUSE,
By Pratt and Metcalf,
COR. FRONT & BROADWAY,
jy21] CINCINNATI, O.

BUCKEYE HOUSE.
By A. W. DOLSON,
Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.
A first rate stable connected with the premises. Superior accommodations for travelers. Regular Boarders entertained at reasonable rates. The Saloon and Restaurant supplied with the best of every thing. June 3.

T. B. COOKE. JAMES TAYLOR.

COOKE & TAYLOR.
WOULD respectfully announce to the citizens of Columbus and vicinity that they have opened a CUSTOM SHOP, and are now prepared to do business in all branches of Tailoring. We earnestly solicit the patronage of our old Customers as well as new ones. TERMS LOW. No. 200 South High street. jy7-tf

LATEST BOOKS—
Mosaics. By the author of Salad for the Solitary.
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Hours with my Pupils. By Mrs. Phelps.
The Conversement. By B. P. Willis.
Life of Baron Steuben.
Napoleonic Ideas.
Caird's Prairie Farming in America.
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Farmers, Horsemen and Beekeepers!
FARM DRAINAGE.—The Principles, Processes and Effects of Draining Land with Stones, Wood, Plows and Open Ditches, and especially Tiles: including Tables of Rain fall. By Henry F. French.
A Practical Treatise on the Honey Bee. By L. L. Langstroth.
Hints to Horse-keepers. By Henry Wm. Herbert (Frank Forrester.)
For sale at the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Attention, Republicans!
THE EXPLOITS AND TRIUMPHS OF PAUL Morphy in Europe.
Agnel's Chess for Winter Evenings.
Kenny's Manual of Chess.
Science and Art of Chess. By J. Monroe.
[illegible]
At the New Book Store.
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

Sensation Books.
L'AMOUR. By Michelet.
The Roman Question. By E. About.
The Two Paths. By Ruskin.
At the New Book Store.
aug1 J. H. RILEY & CO.

M. SCHLESSINGER,
SALOON AND RESTAURANT,
No. 15 West State Street, Columbus, O.
CHOICE WINES AND THE BEST OF Lager Beer may always be found in this establishment. Free Lunch daily from 10 a. m., to 12 m. One of NUNNS & CLARK'S Celebrated Piano Fortes has been procured, and the services of a fine performer make the saloon one of the best in the city. march8-3m

THE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY
Cash Capital $200,000. Assets $301,000.
Offices 237 Broadway, 50 Wall Street N.Y.
This Company Insures Buildings, Merchandise, Ships and Cargoes in Port, Household Furniture, and Personal Property generally against Loss or Damage by Fire.
JOSIAH W. BAKER, President.
JOHN BODINE, Vice President.
WM. JAFFRAY, Secretary.
DWIGHT BANNISTER, Agent.
may28tf Columbus Ohio.

WM. DENNISON
-AND-
H. B. CARRINGTON,
Attorneys & Counsellors at Law,
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
☞ Office, Nos. 1 and 2 Odeon Building. Special attention given to the Law of Patents and Insurance. jy16

CAPITOL RESTAURANT.
In the basement of the Odeon Building,
By JOHN O'HARA,
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.
Every luxury brought in the market, constantly received, and prepared in the most acceptable manner.
He has a French Cook,
Who has had long experience and who has been engaged in his business.
The Capitol Saloon,
Connected with the Restaurant, is a perfect gem, where every variety of Wines and Liquors are kept of the very best quality.
The cigars have been selected with great care, and are of the choicest most expensive varieties.
June 22.

Cheap Dry Goods,
(High and Broad Streets.)
NEW AND VALUABLE STOCK!
SPRING AND SUMMER GOODS.
Embracing a Variety,
Not excelled in this market.
Silks, Chintz,
Fancy Goods, Barages,
Lawns, Calicoes,
Robes,
Shawls, Parasols, Fans and fancy articles,
Cloths, Cassimeres, &c.
Call at the Cheap and one price store, near the corner of High and Broad Streets.
J. C. CHITTENDEN.

NEW LAW BOOKS.
VOLUME 18 SMITH'S NEW YORK COUR. of Appeals.
Vol. 2 Blatchford's Circuit Court Reports.
Vol. 8 Gray's Massachusetts Reports.
Vol. 21 Howard's United States Court Reports.
Vols. 1, 2 and 3 English Bench Reports.
Vol. 8 Ohio Supreme Court Reports.
Parsons's Laws of Business, for Business men.
Matthews' Guardians' Guide.
Holmes & Disbrow's Code, Practice and Forms.
For sale at the New Book Store.
J. H. RILEY & Co.
☞ A full supply of Law Books of the latest editions always on hand. jy16

New and Good Books.
DIGEST OF OHIO STATE REPORTS JUST ready.
Burlamaqui's Natural and Politic Law, from the London Edition.
Webster and Voice of our American Forum to England, New Ed. with additions.
Poems by Wm. Cullen Bryant.
Diary of Lady Morgan.
Home Memories.
Querdo.
Sixty Years' Gleanings.
Peasant Brothers.
The Pillar of Fire.
Plan of Creation.
Mothers and Infants.
Trevelyan and Friends.
Douglas Jerrold.
Arago's Memoirs.
Life and Travels of Herodotus.
For sale at the New Book Store.
june16 J. H. RILEY & Co.

Important to the Ladies
-AND-
HEADS OF FAMILIES.
J. C. BAGNALL, on Hickory Alley, near North Fourth street, has invented a most effective and infallible
Hair Tonic,
For cleansing the hair and removing dandruff and dry scurf. It removes every particle of dirt with a gentle rubbing and leaves the surface clean and agreeable, with open pores and slightly but effectually stimulated. As a hair restorative, it possesses more virtue than high sounding cosmetics; and what is far better leaves the head cool, and the hair thoroughly cleansed and free to grow.
Also a mixture for cleansing silks and satins, and restoring their original lustre.
Also Impression or Transfer Paper of the best quality and of every color and of any size to suit the trade.
BAGNALL'S HAIR TONIC, for sale by the quart or gallon. au11tf

C. A. WAGNER,
DEALER IN FRUITS,
Preserves,
WINES, Liquors
AND CIGARS.
Also connected with the above, is Wagner's Restaurant, which, although closed at this season, will be again in full operation early in the Fall, and supplied with every variety of GAME and such delicacies as are to be secured by constant attention.—The Saloon is in "good condition," No. 21 East State Street.

CAPITOL
SALOON AND RESTAURANT
(Under the Goodale House.)
HAVING completely renovated the establishment, and recently received new supplies of LIQUORS AND CIGARS,
The Proprietor begs leave to announce to the public and his friends, that he is ready to wait upon them, and furnish anything in the line on the shortest notice.
His RESTAURANT is in full operation, with the best cook in the city.
The Bar will be attended in person, and with the same accommodations.
Turtle Soup Served up every Sunday.
aug4 JOHN O'HARA, Proprietor.

The Westport Border Star,
PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT WESTPORT, MO.
TERMS.—1 Copy 1 year $2; 1 copy 6 months $1; 10 Copies 1 year $15; 10 Copies 6 months $8.
FOR THE STATES AND TERRITORIES
Immediately on the Great Thoroughfare to Santa Fe.
This is the first point in the States that is reached by travelers from the Plains and from the Rocky Mountains, from Utah, from New Mexico, and FROM THE NEWLY FOUND GOLD MINES!
Our facilities for obtaining late and reliable intelligence from the great Western Territories are unsurpassed by any press on the borders. We have resident correspondents at Santa Fe, Albuquerque, Las Vegas, Conejos, Salt Lake, Omaha, Fort Scott, Leavenworth, and all the most important points of western commerce.
It is the determination of the proprietors to make the Border Star
A FIRST CLASS NEWSPAPER,
And to further this object they will spare neither labor nor expense.
THE EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT
Is under the control of H. M. MCCARTY, late of Kentucky, who has made the "STAR" not only one of the best NEWS JOURNALS in the West, but one that will take rank as A GAZETTE OF LITERATURE, COMMERCE AND POLITICS.
Orders for the "BORDER STAR" will be attended to at the office of the PEOPLE'S PRESS.

DESHLER ICE.
Charles G. Deshler is serving his customers with superior Ice. He intends that it shall be as good a one as can be procured. His carriage will go through the season.
June 22.

GIBSON HOUSE.
By GEFFROY & Co.
Walnut Street near Fifth,
CINCINNATI OHIO.

JOHN H WHEELER,
INSURANCE AGENT,
Notary Public
AND COLLECTOR.
Office 81 High Street, Savage's Block.
☞ First class Fire and Life Insurance Companies represented. All commissions attended to promptly. Tjy14

J. A. LESTER.] [DAVID S. SEE.
CLARENDON HOTEL,
CORNER OF SEVENTH & POPLAR STS.,
ST. LOUIS, MO.,
Opposite the Pacific Railroad Depot.
J. A. LESTER & CO., PROPRIETORS.
TERMS, - - $1 50 PER DAY.
☞ All Baggage taken to and from the Depot Free of Charge. All persons stopping at the Clarendon Hotel will be conveyed to all Railroad Depots in the city on the Railroad Lines of Omnibusses, FREE OF CHARGE. 1tf

FRESH MEATS! FRESH MEATS!!
D. W. HILL,
Columbus Meat Market,
North-East Cor. of Broad and Front Sts.
Has constantly choice fresh and salted Beef, Veal, Mutton, Lamb, &c., which his Ice chests enable him to keep sweet in the warmest weather.
Market attended regularly, where his customers will be served with the choicest meats to be procured in the country.
Thankful for the liberal custom he has enjoyed he endeavors will be to merit its continuance.
June 30.

COLUMBUS
Machine Manufacturing Company,
MANUFACTURERS OF
STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS,
CASTINGS,
MILL GEARING,
MACHINERY,
-ALSO-
RAILROAD WORK.
P. AMBOS, Treas. CHAS. AMBOS Supt.
June 29-1y

E. CORNELISON.
TUNER
AND REPAIRER OF
PIANO FORTES AND MELODEONS,
Columbus, Ohio.
PIANOS AND MELODEONS SENT TO ORDER AND WELL BOXED.
Also, particular attention paid to
TUNING AND REPAIRING ORGANS.
☞ Orders left at Seltzer & Webster's Music Store, we will give prompt attention.

1859.
Ohio White Sulphur Springs,
Open to visitors seeking health or pleasure, from June 1st to October 1st.
ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OVER 500 VISITORS.
The Ohio White Sulphur Springs are situated in Delaware County, 25 miles North of Columbus (the Capital of Ohio) on the Scioto river, 18 miles from Delaware, 5 miles from the White Sulphur Station on the Springfield, Mt Vernon and Pittsburgh Rail Road and 18 miles from Marion and Valley of the Plains, on the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Rail Road.
The medical qualities of these Springs are not surpassed by those of any other Mineral Water in the United States.
For Room or other information, address
ANDREW WILSON, Jr.
White Sulphur Springs, Ohio
june16

The Best Pianos
IN THE UNITED STATES ARE
MANUFACTURED BY WM. KNABE & Co
Of Baltimore, who have been awarded
THE "FIRST PREMIUM!"
Over "CHICKERING," and all other manufacturers.
No one doubts this, the facts are known.
THAT BASE FALSEHOOD
In J. C. Wood's advertisement is now kept before the public, though
WE HAVE CHALLENGED HIM!
and have the documents to confirm the fact, if the Chickering agent is unwilling to accept our challenge of A Trial of the Instruments!
and continues his untrue advertisement, we must continue to brand him as
A PERVERTER OF THE TRUTH!!
j.21] SELTZER & WEBSTER.

New Paint Shop.
THE SUBSCRIBERS ARE PREPARED TO DO
House, Sign, Carriage
AND
Ornamental Painting.
China White, Graining, Papering and Sash and Blinds for sale; Paints ready mixed, of all colors; Linseed Oil Turpentine, Varnishes of all kinds and Japan for sale.
☞ Shop in Kirk's New Building, rear of the Neil House.
jy14tf VANBUREN & PINKERTON.

H. Hoyt's

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE!
CARPENTER'S BUILDING, COLUMBUS, OHIO.
THE MOST THOROUGH AND PRACTICAL INSTITUTION FOR YOUNG MEN PREPARING FOR BUSINESS IN THE COUNTRY.
S. I. McCOY - - - - Principal.
S. I. McCoy, Teacher of Book-keeping and Practical and Ornamental Penmanship.
Dan'l. Webster, teacher of Book-keeping, Mathematics and English Grammar.
F. W. Ashburn, Esq., Lecturer on the Laws of Business and Political Economy.
TERMS—Payable in advance.
For a full and unlimited course in all the departments, with the privilege of review at the option of the student, Students taken for a special course by the session, as per agreement.
The Principal has received the first premium for specimens of Business and Ornamental Penmanship at many State and County Fairs, and at the U. S. Fair. [illegible]
[illegible]
Rooms Open Day and Evening.
Send for Circular and Specimens of Penmanship. Address, S. I. McCOY.
jy14-tf

THE NEW BOOKSTORE!
J. H. Riley & Co.
COLUMBUS, OHIO.
DEALERS IN
LAW, MEDICAL AND SCHOOL BOOKS
BLANK BOOKS,
of any size, style and pattern of ruling, or bound and made to order.
RAILROAD AND INSURANCE OFFICES
Banks, Brokers, and County Offices, supplied with any article in the line of Stationery, at the lowest rates and all Work made to order.
BLANK NOTES AND DRAFTS
JOB PRINTING, BOOK BINDING, &c.
Agents for the sale of Bancroft's [illegible] Maps and American Maps.
Agents for the [illegible] Mechanical and Scientific Works.
French, English and American Stationery
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
Also, Paper Hangings and Borders, the most extensive Stock West of Philadelphia.
[illegible]

New Books.
FRUITS, FLOWERS AND FARMING. By Henry Ward Beecher.
Views and Experiences of Religious Subjects. By Henry Ward Beecher.
ACADIA or a Month with the Blue Noses. By Frederic S. Cozzens.
SEASIDE, or the Mystery of the Vanished. By J. W. De Forest.
To Cuba and Back, a Vacation Voyage. By R. H. Dana, Jr.
Thoughts on Educational Topics and Institutions. By George S. Boutwell.
The Romance of a Poor Young Man. By Octave Feuillet.
The Empire of Austria. By John S. C. Abbott.
Wall Street to Cashmere, a Journey of Five Years in Asia, Africa and Europe. By John B. Ireland.
Lives of the Queens of England. By Agnes Strickland.
The Life of William von Steuben. By Friedrich Kapp.
Two Ways to Wedlock, a Novelette. Reprinted from the New York Home Journal.
The Rose and the Oak. By J. W. Palmer, M. D.
Sentiment to Flowers. By Mrs. [illegible]
The Vagabond. By Adam Badeau.
Memoirs of Michael De Montaigne. By W. Hazlitt.
Memoirs of Theophilus Parsons. By his Son.
Life of Samuel H. Hayden. [illegible]
The Gold Hunters of Gold Brothers. [illegible]
June 16, 1859. J. H. RILEY & CO.

THE TWO ROBES.

[Is not this beautiful? How musically the verse trips along, the words fairly tinkling like sweet and concordant bells as they successively are brought into tune.—[Ed. P. P.

They have sat and combed their beautiful hair,
Their long, bright tresses, one by one,
As they laughed and talked in the chamber there,
After the revel was done.

Idly they talked of waltz and quadrille,
Idly they laughed like other girls,
Who, over the fire, when all is still,
Comb out their braids and curls.

Robe of Satin and Brussels lace,
Knots of flowers and ribbons too,
[illegible]
[illegible]

And Maud and Madge in robes of white,
The prettiest night-gowns under the sun,
Stockingless, slipperless, sit in the night,
For the revel is done—

Sit and comb their beautiful hair,
Those wonderful waves of brown and gold,
Till the fire is out in the chamber there,
And the little bare feet are cold.

Then out of the gathering winter chill,
All out of bitter St. Agnes weather,
While the fire is out and the house is still,
[illegible]

Maud and Madge in robes of white,
The prettiest night-gowns under the sun,
Curtained away from the chilly night,
After the revel is done—

Float along in a splendid dream,
To a golden gittern's tinkling tune,
While a thousand lustres shimmering stream
In a palace's grand saloon.

Flashing of jewels and fluttering of laces,
Tropical odors sweeter than musk:
Men and women with beautiful faces
And eyes of tropical dusk—

And one face shining out like a star,
One face haunting the dream of each,
And one voice sweeter than others are,
Breaking into a silvery speech—

Telling, through lips of bearded bloom,
An old, old story over again,
As down the royal bannered room,
To the golden gittern's strain,

Two and two, they dreamily walk,
While an unseen spirit walks beside,
And, all unheard in the lover's talk,
He claimed one for . bride.

Oh, Maud and Madge, dream on together,
With never a pang of jealous fear!
For, ere the bitter St. Agnes weather
[illegible]

Robe for the bridal, and robe for the tomb,
Braided brown hair, and golden tress,
There'll be only one of you left for the bloom
Of the bearded lips to press;

Only one for the bridal pearls,
The robe of Satin and Brussels lace;
Only one to blush through her curls
At the sight of a lover's face.

Oh, beautiful Madge, in your bridal white,
For you the revel has just begun;
But for her who sleeps in your arms to-night
The revel of Life is done!

But robed and crowned in your saintly bliss,
Queen of heaven and bride of the sun,
Oh, beautiful Maud, you'll never miss
The kisses another has won!

JUNE.

BY A PRACTICAL MAN.

Keep closely buttoned your frigid gales—
O, shivering month of June,
Till I have made a thicker coat,
And warmer pantaloon.

[illegible]
Each crevice in the sky;
Though rain may benefit the crop,
I'm not a crop—not I.

I wouldn't tread your leaky courts
On pain of cold or chill,
Unless I had two good stout boots—
And patent umbrell.

Then closely bar your frigid gates,
O, shivering month of June,
Till I have made a thicker coat,
[illegible]

REVERSING THE FIGURES.

Mamma, just at twenty-seven,
That no man less than six feet four,
Should be her chosen one.
At thirty she is glad to fix
A spouse exactly four feet six,
As better far than none.

[From the Atlantic Monthly for August.]

THE RING FETTER.

(CONTINUED.)

In the meantime Hitty went on her way, all regardless of the seraphs at the gate. Abner Dimock was handsome, agreeable, gentlemanly to a certain lack-ered extent;—who had cared for Hitty, in all her life, enough to aid and counsel her as he had already done? At first she was half afraid of him; then she liked him; then he was "so good to me!" and then—she pitied him! for he told her, sitting on that hard old sofa, in the June twilight, how he had no mother, how he had been cast upon the charities of a cruel and evil world in his infancy;—reminded her of the old red school-house where they had been to school together, and the tyranny of the big boys over him,—a little curly, motherless boy. So he enlarged upon his life; talked a mildly bitter misanthropy; informed Miss Hyde by gradual insinuations that she was an angel sent on earth to console and reform a poor sinner like him; and before the last September rose had dropped, so far had Abner Dimock succeeded in his engineering, that his angel was astounded one night by the undeniably terrestrial visitation of an embrace and a respectfully fervid kiss.

Perhaps it would have been funny, perhaps pathetic, to analyse the mixed consternation and delight of Mehitable Hyde at such bona-fide evidence of a lover.—Poor woman's heart!—altogether solitary and desolate,—starved of its youth and its joy,—given over to the chilly reign of patience and resignation,—afraid of life,—without strength, or hope, or pleasure,—and all at once Paradise dawns!—her cold, innocent life bursts into fiery and odorous bloom; she has found her fate, and its face is keen with splendor, like a young angel's. Poor, deluded, blessed, rapture-smitten woman!

Blame her as you will, indignant maidens of Greenfield, Miss Flint, and Miss Sharp, and Miss Skinner! You may have had ten lovers and twenty flirtations apiece, and refused half-a-dozen good matches for the best of reasons; you, no doubt, would have known better than to marry a man who was a villain from his very physiognomy; but my heart must needs grow tender toward Miss Hyde; a great joy is as pathetic as a sorrow. Did you never cry over a doting old man?

But when Mrs. Smith's son John, a youth of ten, saw, by the light of an incautious lamp that illuminated a part of the south parlor, a good-night kiss bestowed upon the departing Abner by Miss Hitty Hyde and absolutely returned by said Abner, and when John told his mother, and his mother revealed it to Miss Flint, Miss Flint to Miss Skinner, and so forth, and so on, till it reached the minister's wife, great was the uproar in Greenfield; and the Reverend Mrs. Perkins put on her gray bonnet and went over to remonstrate with Hitty on the spot.

Whether people will ever learn the uselessness of such efforts is yet a matter for prophecy. Miss Hyde heard all that was said, and replied very quietly, "I don't believe it." And as Mrs. Perkins had no tangible proofs of Abner Dimock's unfitness to marry Judge Hyde's daughter, the lady in question got the better of her adviser, so far as any argument was concerned, and effectually put an end to remonstrance by declaring with extreme quiet and unblushing front,—

"I am going to marry him next week. Will you be so good as to notify Mr. Perkins?"

Mrs. Perkins held up both hands and cried. Words might have hardened Hitty; but what woman that was not half tigress ever withstood another woman's tears?

Hitty's heart melted directly; she sat down by Mrs. Perkins, and cried, too.

"Please, don't be vexed with me," sobbed she. "I love him, Mrs. Perkins, and I haven't got anybody else to love,—and—and—I never shall have. He's very good to love me,—I am so old and homely."

"Very good!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins, in great wrath, "good! to marry Judge Hyde's daughter, and—fifty thousand dollars," Mrs. Perkins bit off. She would not put such thoughts into Hitty's head, since her marriage was inevitable.

"At any rate," sighed Hitty, on the breath of a long-drawn sob, "nobody else ever loved me, if I am Judge Hyde's daughter."

So Mrs. Perkins went away, and declared that things had gone too far to be prevented; and Abner Dimock came on her retreating steps, and Hitty forgot everything but that he loved her; and the next week they were married.

Here, by every law of custom, ought my weary pen to fall flat and refuse its office; for it is here that the fate of every heroine culminates. For what are women born but to be married? Old maids are excrescences in the social system,—disagreeable utilities,—persons who have failed to fulfil their destiny,—and of whom it should have been said, rather than of ghosts, that they are always in the wrong. But life, with pertinacious facts, is too apt to transcend custom and the usage of novel-writers; and though the one brings a woman's legal existence to an end when she merges her independence in that of a man, and the other curtails her historic existence at the same point, because the novelist's catechism hath for its preface this creed,—"The chief end of woman is to get married;" still, neither law nor novelists altogether displace this same persistent fact, and a woman lives, in all capacities of suffering and happiness, not only her wonted, but a double life, when legally and religiously she binds herself with bond and vow to another soul.

Happy would it have been for Hitty Hyde, if with the legal action had chimed the actual existent fact!—happy indeed for Abner Dimock's wife to have laid her new joy down at the altar, and been carried to sleep by her mother under the mulleins and golden rods on Greenfield Hill! Scarce was the alotted period of rapture past half its term, scarce had she learned to phrase the tender words aloud that her heart beat and choked with, before Abner Dimock began to tire of his incumbrance, and to invent plans and excuses for absence; for he dared not openly declare as yet that he left his patient, innocent wife for such scenes of vice and reckless dissipation as she had not even dreamed could exist.

Yet for week after week he lingered away from Greenfield; even months rolled by, and, except for rare and brief visits home, Hitty saw no more of her husband than if he were not hers. She lapsed into her old solitude, varied only by the mutterings and grumblings of old Keery, who had lifted up her voice against Hitty's marriage with more noise and less effect than Mrs. Perkins, and, though she still staid by her old home and haunts, revenged herself on fate in general and her mistress in particular by a continual course of sulking, all the time hiding under this general quarrel with life a heart that ached with the purest tenderness and pity. So some people are made, like chestnuts; one gets so scratched and wounded in the mere attempt to get at the kernel within, that it becomes matter of question whether one does not suffer less from wanting their affection than from trying to obtain it. Yet Hitty Dimock had too little love given her to throw away even Keery's habit of kindness to her, and bore with her snaps and snarls as meekly as a saint,—sustained, it is true, by a hope that now began to solace and to occupy her, and to raise in her oppressed soul some glimmer of a bright possibility, a faint expectation that she might yet regain her husband's love, a passion which she began in her secret heart to fear had found its limit and died out. Still, Hitty, out of her meek, self-distrusting spirit, never blamed Abner Dimock for his absence or his coldness; rather, with the divine unselfishness that such women manifest, did she blame herself for having linked his handsome and athletic prime with her faded age, and struggle daily with the morbid conscience that accused her of having forgotten his best good in the indulgence of her own selfish ends of happiness. She still thought, "He is so good to me!" still idealized the villain to a hero, and, like her kind, predestined to be the prey and the accusing angel of such men, prayed for and adored her husband as if he had been the best and tenderest of gentlemen. Providence has its mysteries; but if there be one that taxes faith and staggers patience more than another, it is the long misery that makes a good woman cringe and writhe and agonise in silence under the utter rule and life-long sovereignty of a bad man. Perhaps such women do not suffer as we fancy; for after much trial every woman learns that it is possible to love where neither respect nor admiration can find foothold,—that it even becomes necessary to love some men, as the angels love us all, from an untroubled height of pity and tenderness, that, while it sees and condemns the sin and folly and uncleanness of its object, yet broods over it with an all-shielding devotion, laboring and beseeching; and, waiting for its regeneration, upheld above the depths of suffering and regret by the immortal power of a love so fervent, so pure, so self-forgetting, that it will be a millstone about the necks that disregard its tender clasping now, to sink them into a bottomless abyss in the day of the Lord.

Now, had one long and not unhappy autumn, a lingering winter, a desolate spring, a weary summer, passed away, and from an all-unconscious and protracted wrestling with death Hitty Dimock awoke to find her hope fulfilled,—a fair baby nestled on her arm, and her husband, not all-insensible, smiling beside her.

It is true, that, had she died then, Abner Dimock would have regretted her death; for, by certain provisions of her father's will, in case of her death, the real estate, otherwise at her own disposal, became a trust for a child or children, and such a contingency ill suited Mr. Dimock's plans. So long as Hitty held a rood of land or a coin of silver at her own disposal, it was also at his; but trustees are not women, happily for the world at large, and the contemplation of that fact brought Hitty Hyde's husband into a state of mind well fitted to give him real joy at her recovery.

So, for a little while, the sun shone on this bare New England hill side, into this grim old house. Care and kindness were lavished on the delicate woman, who would scarce have needed either in her present delight; every luxury that could add to her slowly increasing strength, every attention that could quiet her fluttering and unstrung nerves, was showered on her, and for a time her brightest hopes seemed all to have found fruition.

As she recovered and was restored to strength, of course these cares ceased.—But now the new instincts of motherhood absorbed her, and, brooding over the rosy child that was her own, caressing its waking, or hanging above its sleep, she scarce noted that her husband's absences from home grew more and more frequent, that home at midnight oftener than at dusk, strange visitors asked for him, that he came Nor was it till her child was near a year old that Hitty discovered her husband's old and rewakened propensity,—that Abner Dimock came home drunk,—not drunk as many men are, foolish and helpless, mere beasts of the field, who know nothing and care for nothing but the filling of their insatiable appetite;—this man's nature was too hard, too iron in its moulding, to give way to temporary imbecility; liquor made him savage, fierce, brutal, excited his fiendish temper to its height, nerved his muscular system, inflamed his brain, and gave him the aspect of a devil; and in such guise he entered his wife's peaceful Eden, where she brooded and cooed over her child's slumbers, with one gripe of his hard hand lifted her from her chair, kicked the cradle before him, and, with an awful though muttered oath, thrust mother and child into the entry, locked the door upon them, and fell upon the bed to sleep away his carouse.

Here was an undeniable fact before Hitty Dimock, one she could no way evade or gloss over; no gradual lesson, no shadow of foreboding, preluded the revelation; her husband was unmistakably, savagely drunk. She did not sit down and cry;—drearily she gathered her baby in her arms, hushed it to sleep with kisses, passed down into the kitchen, woke up the brands of the ash-hidden fire to a flame, laid on more wood, and, dragging old Keery's rush bottomed chair in front of the blaze, held her baby in her arms till morning broke, careless of anything without or within but her child's sleep and her husband's drunkenness. Long and sadly in that desolate night did she revolve this new misery in her mind; the fact was face to face, and must be provided for,—but how to do it? What could she do, poor weak woman, even to conceal this disgrace, much more to check it? Long since she had discovered that between her and her husband there was no community of tastes or interests; he never talked to her, he never read to her, she did not know that he read at all; the garden he disliked as a useless trouble; he would not drive, except such a gay horse that Hitty dared not risk her neck behind it, and felt a shudder of fear assail her whenever his gig left the door; neither did he care for his child. Nothing at home could keep him from his pursuits; that she well knew; and, hopeful as she tried to be, the future spread out far away in misty horror and dread. What might not become of her boy, with a father's influence? was her first thought;—nay, who could tell but in some fury of drink he might kill or maim him? A chill of horror crept over Hitty at the thought,—and then, what had not she to dread? Oh, for some loophole of escape, some way to fly, some refuge for her baby's innocent life! No,—no,—no! She was his wife; she had married him; she had vowed to love and honor and obey,—vow of fearful import now, though uttered in all pureness and truth, as to a man who owned her whole heart! Love him!—that was not the dread; love was as much her life as her breath was; she knew no interval of loving for the brute fiend who mocked her with the name of husband; no change or chance could alienate her divine tenderness,—even as the pitiful blue sky above hangs stainless over reeking battle-fields and post-smitten cities, piercing with its sad and holy star-eyes down into the hellish orgies of men, untouched and unchanged by just or unjust, forever shining and forever pure.—But honor him! could that be done?—What respect or trust was it possible to keep for a self-degraded man like that? And where honor goes down, obedience is sucked into the vortex, and the wreck flies far over the lonely sea, historic and prophetic to ship and shore.

No! there was nothing to do! her vow was taken, past the power of man to break; nothing now remained but endurance.—Perhaps another woman, with a strong will and vivid intellect, might have set herself to work, backed by that very vow that defied poor Hitty, and, by sheer resolution, have dragged her husband up from the gulf, and saved him, though as by fire; or a more buoyant and younger wife might have passed it by as a first offense, hopeful of its being also the only one. But an instinctive knowledge of the man bereft Hitty of any such hope; she knew it was not the first time; from his own revelations and penitent confessions while she was yet free, she knew he had sinned as well as suffered, and the past augured the future. Nothing was left her, she could not escape, she must shut her eyes and her mouth, and only keep out of his way as far as she could. So she clasped her child more tightly, and, closing her heavy eyes, rocked back and forth till the half-waked boy slept again; and there old Keery found her mistress, in the morning, white as the cold drifts without, and a depth of settled agony in her quiet eyes that dimmed the old woman's only to look at.

Neither spoke; nor when her husband strode into the breakfast-room and took his usual place, sober enough, but scarcely regretful of the over-night development, did any word of reproach or allusion pass the wife's white lips. A stranger would have thought her careless and cold. Abner Dimock knew that she was heart-broken; but what was that to him? Women live for years without that organ; and while she lived, so long as a cent remained of the Hyde estate, what was it to him if she pined away? She could not leave him; she was utterly in his power; she was his,—like his boots, his gun, his dog; and till he should tire of her and fling her into some lonely chamber to waste and die, she was bound to serve him; he was safe.

And she offered no sort of barrier to his full indulgence of his will to drink. Had she lifted one of her slender fingers in warning, or given him a look of reproachful meaning, or uttered one cry of entreaty, at least the conscience within him might have visited him with a temporary shame, and restrained the raging propensity for a longer interval; but seeing her apparent apathy, knowing how timid and unresisting was her nature,—that nothing on earth will lie still and be trodden on but a woman,—Abner Dimock rioted and revelled to his full pleasure, while all his pale and speechless wife could do was to watch with fearful eyes and straining ears for his coming, and slink out of the way with her child, lest both should be beaten as well as cursed; for faithful old Keery, once daring to face him with a volley of reproaches from her shrill tongue, was levelled to the floor by a blow from his rapid hand, and bore bruises for weeks that warned her from interference. Not long, however, was there danger of her meddling. When the baby was a year and a half old, Keery, in her out-doors labors,—now grown burdensome enough, since Mr. Dimock neither worked himself nor allowed a man on the premises,—Keery took a heavy cold, and, worn out with a life of hard work, sank into rest quickly, her last act of life being to draw Hitty's face down to her own, wrinkled and wan as it was, scarce so old in expression as her mistress's, and with one long kiss and sob speak the foreboding and anxious farewell she could not utter.

☞ Nearly all the judges on the Irish bench are now Catholics. The latest appointment was that of H. G. Hughes, who once held the office of Solicitor General.

Americanisms.

Mr. Mackay, in his new book about America, gives the following specimens of of words that have lost in America their original English meaning:

To exercise, means to agitate, vex, or trouble. Thus it is said of a Senator in Congress, that he is exercised by the great question he is about to bring forward, or that Mr. —— was much exercised by an attack upon him in a newspaper.

Bright means "clever." A clergyman, or a man of talent, would in America be called a "bright" man.

Clever means "amiable and courteous." A "clever" captain is one who is friendly, attentive, and polite to his passengers.—Among the recommendations sometimes advertised in the Mississippi and Ohio steamboats, is that the captain and clerk are the "cleverest" on the line, and for this reason agreeable to the ladies.

Amiable means "stupid." A member of the House of Representatives, and a most worthy man, was highly offended at hearing his friend called "amiable" by an Englishman. He thought the phrase implied a reproach or a sneer, and declared the word "amiable" was synonymous with what in English slang is called "spooney." "You may call a woman 'amiable,'" said he, "but not a man."

This is in obedience to the same law of character which has given among us the meaning of silliness to the words innocent or simple, and has disgraced the sense of the word silly itself, which once meant only blessed and innocent; as there are thousands who would still account it more reproach to say of a man that he was a "blessed innocent" than to call him a fool.

Among the pure Americanisms may be cited the following:

To honeyfugle, to gloze, flatter, bamboozle, or "take in."

High falutin or verlooten, signifies high-flown, exaggerated, and bombastic in speech or writing.

Splurge, a display, an outburst of expenditure, such as to create a sensation among the bystanders or witnesses.

To vamose, to decamp or vanish.

Pile, a fortune.

Swanger, a dandy or "swell."

Mung, sham, false, pretended.

Mung, news, a fabrication.

Bender, a spree.

To go on a bender, to go on a spree.

Grit, the real grit, the true grit. These words or phrases are used to signify a person of superior worth, solidity, and genuineness, as distinguished from another who is inferior, or merely "chaff." The miller is evidently the parent of this expression.

Declension. "I have been writing," said a lady, "several declensions to dinners and balls." The word is equivalent to refusal, but it seems to mean refusal for reasons assigned—a declinature.

Bogus, false or sham; said to be derived from the name of a man notorious for issuing counterfeit notes. Hence "bogus" news, a "bogus" meeting, a "bogus" baby, a "bogus" senator, a "bogus" convention.

Whole-souled, a very common expression in America to express a hearty, enthusiastic person. In Lloyd's Railway Guide, the Bradshaw of America, it is stated of one of the hotels in a principal city, that Colonel ——, the proprietor, is a whole-souled landlord.

Bim. Hit him bim in the eye—i. e., right in the eye.

Fizzle,* a slight quarrel or controversy.

A stampede, a rush, a multitudinous exit.

Sockdologer, a knock-down blow. There is a species of fish-hook of this name.

To overslaugh,† a word apparently derived from the German or old English, like onslaught, and signifying to strike over.

Rocks, money—a California phrase.

To squirm, to wriggle like a worm.

To tote, to carry.

Wilted, withered.

A dough-face, a man easily moved to change his opinion; a person to be wrought upon and modeled to any particular shape, like a piece of dough.

*Fizzle means more properly a failure—a blow up—disappointed expectation.

†Overslaugh means to overwhelm—to KNOCK OVER—KNOCK SHOD—to put HORS DU COMBAT—to crush.

This addition to the American vocabulary is pretty correct, and shows a good deal of aptness in Mr. Mackay in PICKING UP THINGS.

The next revised edition of Webster's should not overlook these emendations and sundry others that might be inserted in that work, without detriment.

A Lady.—We have noticed that some young ladies are never found engaged in domestic labor. Call at their homes at any time of the day, and you do not find them performing housework. They are frequently found embroidering, making a lace collar, practising on the piano, or doing nothing. We infer that they seldom or never attend to domestic labors, or else that they suddenly quit the kitchen when the door bell rings, lest they should be caught with a broom or a rolling-pin in their hands. It is well known that many young ladies detain visitors a half hour in the parlor before they emerge from their chambers, arrayed like Paris dolls. No person out of the families ever see them in a kitchen garb. The principal reason, is, they think it is not lady-like.

* * * * * * *

No girl can become a true lady without a knowledge of household duties. Whatever may be her literary proficiency and her social qualities, without the ability to do housework, if necessity demand, her education is defective. A young girl was presented to James I as a prodigy in literary attainments. The person who introduced her said that she understood the ancient languages. "I can assure your Majesty, said he, "that she can both speak and write Latin, Greek and Hebrew. "These are rare attainments for a damsel," said James, "but pray tell me, can she spin?" She might be familiar with the lore of ages, but without a knowledge of household duties she lacked an important acquisition. So we ask of the richly attired and accomplished young woman, who can read French, thumb the piano, and move bewitchingly in fashionable company, can she do housework? If she cannot, she is not a model lady.

"There is a spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest;
Here woman reigns; the mother, daughter, wife,
Strews with fresh flowers the narrow way of life;
Around her knees domestic duties meet,
And fireside pleasures gambol at her feet."

The True Woman.

☞ A correspondent of the Boston Journal says: "There is a fine display of 'teams' at Newport, and at nightfall South Truro street almost equals Hyde Park in the variety and elegance of the turnouts. The most accelerated team, driven by a Philadelphian, is valued at some five-and-twenty thousand, one of the pair being the noted 'Mac.' Mr. Robeson, of New Bedford, has a very well-appointed turn-out, and the greatest display is made by Mr. Augusta Belmont. Lower down in the scale of vehicles is a diminutive donkey gig, which was brought here for the G. R. J. A. of a mystic order, justly celebrated for deeds of charity and love."

☞ The furniture in the Mayor's Office at Brooklyn, N. Y., and also in the Common Council Chamber, and the portraits of the Ex-Mayors in the Governor's room, City Hall, were seized on Saturday, to satisfy two judgments obtained against the city—one by James Morrice and the other by Antoinette Brown, both amounting to about $3,500

AN ODE TO LAMB.

Hind quarter of the type of innocence,
Whether with peas and mint I must dispense,
Or go the twain—blaspheming the expense—
And thus enjoy thee in the fullest sense—
That is the question.

Rear section of young mutton—tender food—
Just in the dawn of grass-fed juicy-hood—
Dainties like thee should not be served up nude,
But graced with all the trimmings understood,
To help digestion.

Then boil the peas—the fragrant mint prepare
Be thou, prime joint! not overdone—nor rare—
Concoct the gravy with exceeding care—
When all is ready, serve—I shall be there—
I always am!

Incipient sheep's meat—when on thee I dine,
Hot be the plate, and icy cold the wine—
Three slices midway of the leg be mine—
Then put the rest away—for very fine—
Is cold roast lamb!

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

Boiled Pudding.—One quart of milk, nine eggs, seven spoonfuls of flour, a little salt. Put in a bag and boil three-quarters of an hour.

Cookies.—One cup of sugar; one of butter; two of eggs; flour sufficient; roll them in flour and sugar; add spice or nutmeg; bake quick.

Delicate Cake.—Beat to a cream 7 ozs. of sweet butter—beat to a stiff froth the whites of eight eggs, and mix gradually with it one pound of flour together the butter, half a nutmeg grated, and some essence of lemmon or bitter almonds, or rose-water. Bake in a pan lined with buttered paper. Almonds blanched and pounded may be substituted for the butter.

Baked Wheat Pudding.—Beat well three eggs, add one teacup of sugar, two cups of sour cream, flour to make a stiff batter, one teaspoonful saleratus, a little salt. Bake in a quick oven; eat with sugar and cream.

Light Puffs.—Mix two spoonfuls of flour, a little grated lemon-peel, some nutmeg, half a spoonful of brandy, a little loaf sugar, and one egg; then fry it, but not brown; beat in a mortar, with five eggs, whites and yolks; put a quantity of lard in a frying-pan, and when quite hot drop a desert spoonful of batter at a time; turn as they brown. Serve them immediately with sweet sauce.

Transparent Pudding.—Beat eight eggs very well; put them into a stew-pan with half a pound of sugar pounded fine, the same quantity of butter, and some nutmeg grated; set it on the fire, and keep stirring it till it thickens; put a rich puff paste around the edge of the dish; pour in the pudding when cool, and bake it in a moderate oven. It will cut light and clear. You may add candied orange and citron, if you like.

Milk Sickness.—There is nothing on the farm which should more interest the farmer than every thing that can be written or said about this terrible malady. We therefore transfer from the Ashland Times the following communication, merely premising that we have before heard the disease attributed to the white snake root. In Kentucky there is a standing reward of $1000 for the discovery of the cause, and numerous efforts have been made by the scientific and unscientific, but with no success, although some were very confident indeed.—Ed. P. P.

Friend Sprengle.—In your paper of July 21st, 1859, in an article headed "Milk Sickness," after stating the death of Mr. Fisher and his tenant near Marion, O., by said disease,—you mention my having discovered a weed which produces this disease, (which is true,) and also ask whether I have discovered an antidote for it. In answer to which I will state that I have by actual experiments found a safe and sure method of treating the disease, which I have heretofore published, and have also written to the medical faculty of the State, to the State Board of Agriculture, and our Governor and Legislature, asking for an investigation of the subject by a scientific committee, that it might go forth to the world, not as a quack medicine, but as a well authenticated fact, if I should prove before them what I claim—And that is, that I can produce the trembles on any creature that will eat the weed, and again, on any person that will eat their flesh, and that I can cure it at any stage of the disease before mortification has commenced. But it is supposed because many learned men have sought and not found its cause, that it must be past finding out, and least of all, that a plain, plodding farmer should discover it. I know that some claim it to be caused by certain waters; others by exhalations from the ground, Cobalt, &c. But I am positive that there never was a case of it where cattle had not had access to a plant called Eupatorium Agertoides or white snake root. If I am wrong, I would like to be corrected, but want actual experiments to convince me, not vague rumors.

W. J. VERMILYA.

Savannah, Ashland Co., O., July, 1859.

Summer Sours.—Physiological research has fully established the fact that acids promote the separation of the bile from the blood, which is then passed from the system, thus preventing fevers, the prevailing diseases of the summer. All fevers are "billious," that is, the bile is in the blood. Whatever is antagonistic to fever is "cooling." It is a common saying that fruits are "cooling," and also berries of every description; it is because the acidity which they contain aids in purifying the blood. Hence the great yearning for greens and lettuce, and salads, in the early spring, these being eaten with vinegar; hence also the taste for something sour, for lemonades, on an attack of fever. But this being the case, it is easy to see that we nullify the good effects of fruits and berries in proportion as we eat them with sugar, or even sweet milk, or cream. If we eat them in their natural state, fresh, ripe, perfect, it is almost impossible to eat enough to hurt us, especially if we eat them alone, not taking any liquid with them whatever. Hence also is buttermilk or even common sour milk promotive of health in the summer time.—Sweet milk tends to billiousness in sedentary people, sour milk is antagonistic.—The Greeks and Turks are passionately fond of sour milk. The shepherds use rennet, and the milk dealers alum to make it sour the sooner. Buttermilk acts like watermelons on the system.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Deep Ploughing.—Deep ploughing has, we are informed, been of great advantage to those farms that are hilly.—Hillsides, especially, are protected by deep ploughing. The soil will then absorb the rain that falls, keeps it moist, and it is not so likely to wash away as when the surface is merely loosened. Farmers tell us that the best way to raise corn on hillsides is to plough deep, and then keep it clear of weeds with a harrow and the hoe. This preserves an even surface and prevents the soil from being washed away, preserves its moisture in time of drouth, and the formation of gullies is stopped. During dry seasons the same plan has worked admirably on level land. When the land is ploughed and becomes mellow to the depth of fifteen inches, all that is wanted to keep the weeds and grass out. This may be done with the harrow and the hoe. The more the ground is disturbed or turned up to the sun, the drier it becomes, and the more the roots suffer for the want of moisture. Ground, when put in good order by the plough and harrow in the Spring, will remain so all summer. A "farmer who knows" says the drouth does his corn but little injury when he gets his ground in good order, and keeps it clear of weeds with the harrow and hoe. He says that ploughing deep furrows, without afterwards leveling it with the harrow, lets the water pass off as soon as it falls; and takes off with it the best soil. Now that corn is suffering greatly from the drouth this is worthy of consideration.—Dayton Empire.

According to our agricultural exchanges, the present month is a good time to make new beds of strawberries. The ground should be rich, finely pulverised, and the plants set out before or after a shower, or in the evening, if in that case watered. Rows, four feet apart, and one foot in the row, where a cultivator can be used most of the season in their culture; next year they will produce a fair crop.

The biggest mule ever produced, it is supposed, is now in Wayne county, Ind., owned by Charles Frost. The weight is given at 1,835 pounds, and height 19½ hands, which is 6 feet 6 inches.

☞ Michigan papers estimate that there will be a surplus of wheat in that State amounting to five millions of bushels, and Wisconsin papers say there will be a large surplus in that State.

☞ Among the suits decided at the recent term of the Midland Circuit, Mich., was a divorce case, wherein Hellen Wah-ye-quan-gashego-qua-na-be was defendant. A decree was granted.

☞ There have been mail depredations recently between Washington and Baltimore.

PROPOSED

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October State election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of this State, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January annually."

WM. B. WOODS,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER,
President of the Senate.

April 7, 1859.

Secretary of State's Office,
Columbus, O., April 7, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.

A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

Auditor's Office, Franklin County, Ohio,
Columbus, April 12, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.

june8-td

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a Dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope), FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

By order of the Directors,
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, [illegible]
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

may11-lv.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of them at hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States and Canada, where he has practiced.

He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are the next hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact.

Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, [illegible] continues was discovered.

Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S spent many years in the investigation of a malady, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost in [illegible] an excellent method, which [illegible] much for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!

Dr Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease.

Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.

DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.

Cases given up as curable solicited. He will forfeit $500 for any of the following he cannot cure:

Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 35,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 9 a. m., to 5 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

june9

DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,

AND

DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhœa proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

may5

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are every where approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the

Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter, by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they cure

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual Disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried with and also get that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice, and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents [illegible].

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Principal Office and Sales Rooms, No 6 East Fourth St. 2d building from Main street, Cincinnati, O. Laboratory in Hammond street.

FOR SALE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY, BY

Roberts & Samuel, Columbus
Aug. J Schueller, Columbus
G. Denig & Son, Columbus
A. Astro, Canal Winchester
Isaac Thompson, Worthington
E. M. Jobe on, Reynoldsburg
R. N. Beckley, Circleville
D. Gutter, Westerville
Henry Miller, Harrisburg
John Marotl, Grove City
Geo W Evans, Dublin.

And by Druggists and Merchants generally throughout the Union
[illegible]

[illegible]ER'S
[illegible] Cure.

FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Billious Headache, and Billious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in billious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.

So wide is the [illegible] of its usefulness, and so numerous are the [illegible] of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.

Roberts & Samuel, No. 34 North-High street, Columbus, O; Suire, Eckstine & Co., Cincinnati, O.; William Fiske, Cleveland, O.; W. A. Graham, Zanesville, O.; and by all Druggists and dealers in medicines.

Ohio White Sulphur Springs

VIA THE
CLEVELAND, COLUMBUS & CINCINNATI RAILROAD.
☞To Lewis' Centre Station.

PERSONS VISITING THE SPRINGS CAN leave Columbus at 4:20 A. M., and 1:10 P. M., daily (Sundays excepted) for Lewis' Centre Station, which is situated sixteen miles north of Columbus, on the C. C. & C. R. R. and six miles east of the Springs. For the accommodation of persons who desire to spend the Sabbath at the Springs, the night freight leaving Columbus at 6:20 P. M. on Saturday, will leave passengers at Lewis' Centre Station.

RETURNING:

Cincinnati Express will stop for passengers going south at Lewis' Centre Station, at [illegible] A. M., on MONDAY MORNINGS ONLY, arriving in Columbus at [illegible] A. M. The Mail train will stop daily at [illegible] P. M., arriving in Columbus at [illegible] P. M.

Messrs. LEWIS & WOOD will have carriages in readiness at all times to convey passengers between the depot and Springs. Passengers can rely upon being taken to the Springs promptly on arrival of trains.

The citizens of Columbus will find this the most convenient way to go to the springs.

Tickets for the round trip to the Station and back during the season, only SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

For further information and tickets inquire at the ticket office in the Depot.

JAMES PATTERSON, Agent.

Columbus, June 22, 1859—3m.

Summer Arrangement—Time Changed.

Great Northern & Eastern Route,

Cleveland, Columbus & Cincinnati

RAILROAD.

Connecting at Crestline with the

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad

For Pittsburgh, Philadelphia & Baltimore, Also for Fort Wayne and Chicago.

Connecting at Cleveland with the

Lake Shore Railroad.

For Dunkirk, Buffalo, Albany, Boston and New York.

THREE TRAINS DAILY (except Sunday) from Columbus, in connection with Trains on the Little Miami & Columbus & Xenia Railroads.

FIRST TRAIN.

NIGHT EXPRESS—Leaves [illegible] Will leave passengers at all stations [illegible] Delaware, Ashley, Cardington [illegible] Galion and Crestline [illegible]. [illegible] Pittsburgh arriving at [illegible] Cleveland at [illegible] with the [illegible] Express for Chicago, arriving at Chicago at [illegible] p. m. Also at Crestline with [illegible] Arrives at Cleveland at [illegible] a. m.

SECOND TRAIN

NEW YORK EXPRESS—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] a. m., stopping only at Delaware, North Crestline, Galion, Crestline [illegible] Express on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad for Pittsburgh, arriving at Pittsburgh at [illegible] and arriving at Cleveland 2:10 p. m., connecting at [illegible] p. m., with the 2nd Express on Lake Shore road for the East arriving at Erie at [illegible] p. m., Dunkirk [illegible] p. m., Buffalo [illegible] p. m., New York [illegible] p. m., next evening, Boston [illegible] p. m., eight hours quicker than any other line.

THIRD TRAIN

EXPRESS MAIL—Leaves Columbus at [illegible] p. m., stopping at all way stations between Columbus and Cleveland, arriving at Cleveland at [illegible] p. m. This train connects with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad [illegible] for Chicago arriving at Chicago at [illegible] a. m. At Cleveland with the Lake Shore Railroad for New York and Boston, arriving at [illegible] a. m., Dunkirk [illegible] a. m., Buffalo [illegible] a. m.

☞ Baggage Checked through to New York and Boston via Cleveland, also to Philadelphia and New York via Crestline.

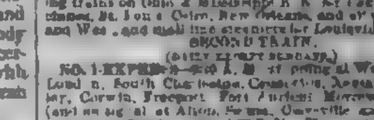
RETURNING:

Night Express, arrives at Columbus [illegible] a. m.
Cincinnati Express arrives at Columbus at [illegible] a. m.
Mail Express, arrives at Columbus at [illegible] p. m.



Fare as low as by any other Route.

For further information, and Through and Local Tickets apply to M. L. Doherty Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot of the C. C. & C. and to M. C. [illegible]

E. S. FLINT,
Superintendent, Cleveland, Ohio.
H. C. [illegible],
General Ticket Agent, Cleveland, Ohio.
JAMES PATTERSON, Agent,
Columbus, Ohio.

Columbus, May 19, 1859.

Little Miami & C. & X. Railroads.

To the South and West.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 21, 1859, Four Trains Daily, (Sundays excepted,) from Columbus, in connection with Trains from Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

FIRST TRAIN.
(MAIL.)

NIGHT EXPRESS—At [illegible] A. M., stopping at London, Xenia and all stations between Xenia and Cincinnati, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] A. M. This train connects at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Lafayette, Terre Haute, Chicago, &c., &c. At Loveland for Chillicothe, Athens and all points in an M. & C. R. R. and at Cincinnati with morning trains on Ohio & Mississippi R. R. for Louisville, Cairo, St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, and all points South and West, and mail line steamboats for Louisville.

SECOND TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY.)

NO. 1 EXPRESS—At [illegible] A. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, South Charleston, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Fort Ancient, Morrow, Loveland and at all stations [illegible] Milford, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, Springfield, Dayton, Indianapolis, &c., &c.

THIRD TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY.)

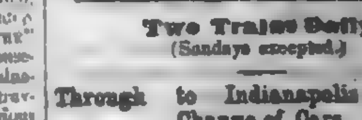
NO. 2 EXPRESS—At [illegible] P. M., stopping at West Jefferson, London, Xenia, Morrow, Deerfield, Foster's Crossing, Milford, and Plainville arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. connecting at Xenia for Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago, &c., and at Cincinnati with the [illegible] for St. Louis, Cairo, New Orleans, &c., &c.

FOURTH TRAIN.
(DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY.)

MAIL—At [illegible] P. M., stopping at Alton, Jefferson, London, Charleston, Selma, Cedarville, Xenia, Spring Valley, Corwin, Freeport, Morrow, Loveland, arriving at Cincinnati at [illegible] P. M. This train connects at Xenia for Yellow Springs, &c., &c.

RETURNING.

Trains arrive at Columbus as follows: Night Express [illegible] A. M.; No. 1 Express [illegible] A. M.; No. 2 Express [illegible] P. M.; Accommodation [illegible] P. M.



☞ For further information and Through Ticket apply to M. L. DOHERTY, Ticket Agent, in the Union Depot.

J. DURAND,
Superintendent, Cincinnati.
P. W. STRADER,
General Ticket Agent, Cincinnati.
THO. W. DOHERTY,
Agent, Columbus, O.

Columbus, May 12, 1859.

1859. 1859.
NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST

Columbus and Indianapolis Rail Road Line.

Two Trains Daily.
(Sundays excepted.)

Through to Indianapolis without Change of Cars.

ON AND AFTER MONDAY, APRIL 25th, Trains will leave Columbus as follows:

FIRST TRAIN.

Leaves at [illegible] a. m., on the arrival of trains from Wheeling, Pittsburgh and Cleveland. Arrives at Indianapolis at [illegible] p. m.

This train connects at Milford with trains for Marysville also, for Mechanicsburgh, Springfield, Dayton and Cincinnati, direct without change of Cars.

Also, connects at Urbana with trains north on the S. D. & C. R. R. for Bellefontaine, Sidney, Lima, Sandusky and Toledo. Connects at Union for Greenville, at Anderson for Kokomo and Peru.

At Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette & Chicago; also, with trains for Terre Haute, Cairo and St. Louis, connecting at St. Louis with Trains and Steamboat lines for the KANSAS AND NEBRASKA.

Also, connects at Indianapolis for Jeffersonville, Louisville, Madison and Peru.

SECOND TRAIN.

Leaves Columbus at [illegible] p. m., on the arrival of Trains from Pittsburgh and Wheeling. Arrives at Indianapolis at [illegible] p. m.

This Train connects at Milford for Mechanicsburgh and Springfield; at Urbana with trains north on S. D. & C. R. R. for Clyde, Sandusky and Toledo. At Piqua with trains for Sidney, Lima, Delphos, Fort Wayne and Chicago; and at Indianapolis with trains for Lafayette, Chicago, Terre Haute, and St. Louis.

THE WAY FREIGHT.

Leaving Columbus at [illegible] a. m., will carry a Passenger Train for the accommodation of Way Travel.

☞ Be sure to see that your Tickets read VIA THE COLUMBUS & INDIANAPOLIS R. R. LINE, and see that you do not have Tickets sold you by other and inferior Routes.

☞ Tickets for all Western Routes for sale at all the Principal Rail Road Stations in the East.

H. WALKER,
General Ticket Agent.
W. F. SLATER,
Superintendent.

Columbus Ohio May 12 1859
[illegible]

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.

By J. Birney Marshall,

At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a political [illegible] truly and solely to their interests, [illegible] would be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O. THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic doctrines and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty, its statements reliant on for their truth and veracity. [illegible] it will be conducted [illegible] consistently pursue the object for which it is established, that of promoting the maintenance of public morals, and thereby contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and print everything like address, or discussion with its will in [illegible] [illegible] so far as it can bring to its aid [illegible] [illegible] Democrats and not a mere tool [illegible] organ [illegible] ... [illegible] the best interests of the party. The [illegible] presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS to the Democracy as its first choice for the Presidency in 1860, yet it will give a hearty support to the nominee of the National Convention, consistent with fidelity to the Democratic Party and the country to promote its organization and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to do more than to indicate the general [illegible] and character of the paper proposed, [illegible] with confidence [illegible] the following remunerative patronage. [illegible]

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year ... $2 00

A discount of [illegible] per cent on clubs of five, [illegible] per cent on clubs of twenty, [illegible] per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards [illegible]

J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.

Columbus, March 30, 1859.

N. B.—Any friend of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, by giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

State Library

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS.

COLUMBUS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1859.

VOLUME 1. NUMBER 16.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL - - Editor.

TERMS - - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

RATES OF ADVERTISING.

We have established the following uniform rates of advertising to which we call attention.

Advertisements to insure insertion should be handed in each week by Tuesday at 4 o'clock P. M.

One Square, 10 lines or less, single insertion ... $1.00
Each additional insertion ... 30
One square 3 months ... 3 00
" " 6 " ... 5 00
" " 12 " ... [illegible]
One fourth of a column per year ... 20,00
" half " " ... [illegible]
" column " ... [illegible]

Displayed advertisements will be charged one half more than the above rates.

Advertisements leaded and placed in the column of special notices DOUBLE THE ABOVE RATES.

Professional and other cards not exceeding five lines, per year ... $5,00

Advertisements not accompanied with written directions will be inserted until forbid and charged accordingly.

All transient advertisements MUST BE PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

All notices required to be published by law, at the legal rate.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservation of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved in act—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, in allowing a fugitive slave from the [illegible] the right of suffrage [illegible] in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; in the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

Governor Wise's Letter.

Hon. Henry A. Wise confesses to have written the letter that recently came to light through base treachery. It is a strong illustration of the height, depth and breadth to which political scheming may be and is carried to head off Douglas, and head on somebody else. We never regarded Mr. Wise as having much chance, but this escapade has really put him hors de combat. The way in which the South is to be propitiated, and the potency Virginia is to have in President-making, will have struck the reader with some surprise, when he considers the respectable diminution of political power which the vote of Virginia shows. The letter not having been intended for the public, should have been held sacred, but it leaves the Governor of Virginia in an awful fix—almost as bad as Old Buck will be when Wendell's secrets shall have been properly introduced to the notice of the public and there are certain other revelations.

Poisoning With Poisonous [?].—A short time since a Mr. Conklin, residing in Dayton, took his wife, who was unwell at the time, to the residence of his father, at New Albany, in this county, and in a few days thereafter she died. Conklin in the meantime having returned to Dayton. Since the demise of Mrs. C., a little female relative of the Conklins, who resided with them in Dayton and went to New Albany with the invalid, says that there was living in the family a young and handsome woman as domestic, between whom and the husband an improper intimacy had existed, much to the mortification of Mrs. C. who had made the discovery. Soon after this the girl prepared some bread, a portion of which Mrs. C. ate, and the remainder was taken away and buried by the girl. Mr. C grew ill and the husband, took her to New Albany, as has been stated, returning immediately to his [illegible]. The physicians of the village were about to enter upon a post mortem examination, the result of which we have not learned.

☞ The German journals contain melancholy news concerning Prof. Karl Simrock, of Bonn, the eminent translator and interpreter of the masterpieces of old German poetic literature. His mind has been deranged by an excess of fear and anxiety, it is asserted, in consequence of the late political events, and his friends have removed him, accordingly, to a private asylum near Stuttgart, whence, it is hoped, judicious treatment may soon give him back to health to his family, and to his so suddenly and so sadly interrupted labors.

Mazzini and the Peace.

The peace of Villa Franca has verified the predictions of Mazzini, made at the commencement of the war, and has revived the influence of the Italian agitator and revolutionist. In a recent manifesto, Mazzini speaks in exulting tone of the speedy exposure of the delusion which Louis Napoleon practised upon the Italians. He sought and won their confidence only to betray them, and he has added insult to his abandonment and treason. "The King," says Mazzini, "whom he urged to join in his undertaking, from whom, by the inducement of a prospective empire, he tore away his daughter; for the support of whose cause he solemnly declared that he took the field as an ally; who was his friend and companion in arms—the King is thanked by a contemptuous silence and is excluded from the imperial conference, as if he were a mere corporal in the army."

The despot of France went to Italy, announcing himself as a liberator, but he "has contrived to unite for Italy the deceitful corruption of the politics of the Seventeenth Century with the brutal grasp and with the insolence of the Conqueror; he has united in his person the characters Mephistophiles and Brennus." In such strain of fierce invective does Mazzini write of the deception which Louis Napoleon has practised on a too confiding people. Nor has he much faith in Victor Emanuel excepting the insult and the treason. He is a king, and will shrink from appealing to the people to resist the wrong.

From neither King nor Pope, says Mazzini can Italy hope for salvation. In revolution only is their hope for national unity and liberty. The policy of the "moderates" has failed. They deprecated revolution; dissuaded the Italians from relying upon their own energies and resolutions, and thus facilitated the deception of which they are victims. Had the people rose throughout Italy upon the first rumors of war, and before the Austrians had concentrated there such masses of troops, the King of Piedmont must have gone with the wave of revolution, and the French usurper would, perhaps, have been foiled in his occult designs.

In conclusion, Mazzini appeals to the Italians to rally to the standard of revolution with the cry of "Liberty and National Unity." The timid and cowardly should no longer be listened to as counsellors. Now is the time for the Italians to strike for the honor and independence of Italy. Let them oblige Louis Napoleon completely to unmask himself, and descend another step in the road of infamy and treason by fighting by the side of Austria. That step will compel England and Germany to come into the field, and say to the despot—"Not one step further!" Even his army will become tired of being the butcher of Italy, and his generals may refuse to fight the populations that so recently embraced them as liberators.

English Naval Preparations.—According to the English Navy list for July, there are now eleven new ships of-the-line nearly ready for launching at the English dockyards. These are the Prince of Wales, 131 guns; the Victoria, 131; the Royal Frederick, 116; and the Duncan, 110—at Portsmouth. The Howe, 121; the De France [?], 91; and the Revenge, 91—at Pembroke. The Gibraltar, 101—at Devonport. The Atlas, 91; and the Irresistible, 80—at Chatham; and the Anson, 90—at Woolwich.

In addition to this new fleet of 1,133 guns in all, there are sixteen first-class new screw-steamers and nearly twenty new screw-sloops and corvettes now under weigh. Several sailing vessels are also near completion, among them the Aurora, of 51 guns, and the Narcissus, Immortalite, and Newcastle, of 50 guns each. With all his clamors and complaints, John Bull does not mean to be caught napping, if his see-saw can keep him aware of the ways of his neighbors.

Re Union of the Sons of Newport, R. I.—The civil authorities and citizens of Newport, R. I., have made arrangements to have a grand re-union of all the Sons of Newport on the 23d of the present month. Five thousand dollars have been appropriated by the Common Council toward meeting the expenses of the occasion. Circulars have been sent to every State and country where a native Son of Newport is known to reside. The citizens desire that every man born in Newport, wherever he may be, or whether he receive personal invitation or not, will meet them on that day in their native State.

Burning Fluids.—Mr. S. Meriam, of Brooklyn, states that he has kept a record of deaths, injuries, and conflagrations, resulting from the use of camphene and other burning fluids used for the purpose of illumination, since July 22, 1850. Since that date he has recorded the deaths of three hundred and seventy persons and the injuries of four hundred and seventy-seven persons, many of the latter of whom the accounts stated were not expected to survive the injuries they received. The losses by fire from these fluids he estimated at upwards of one million of dollars.

Republican Flaunters.—Describing the opening of Parliament, the London Times makes happy allusion to the United States minister: "All the space allowed to the diplomatic corps (it says) is full, and blazes at every point with ribbons, stars and orders of every kind. Conspicuous among them all, in his plain evening dress and snow white hair, is the American minister, Mr. Dallas, a striking type, if we may so call him, of the simple institutions of the great republic which he represents so well."

Hayti.—Port au Prince dates of July 28d state that a committee of the Legislative Chambers had waited on President Geffrard, and proposed that he should assume the title and office of Dictator of Hayti, on the ground that by such an extension of authority he would be able to render more effectual service to the country in the work of social reorganization. The President declined the honor. Le Republique advocates the dictatorship, and although Geffrard's conduct in refusing the increased powers offered him is recorded in his praise, it was thought that the republic would yet pass into a dictatorship.

☞ The Dental Convention at Niagara Falls adjourned on Friday last after a session of more than ordinary interest, in which topics pertinent to the profession were ably discussed by practical dentists.

The next meeting will be held at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., on the first Tuesday of August, 1860.

Slavers Fitting Out at Salem.—A special dispatch from Boston to the New York Times of yesterday says:

"There are at this time two vessels fitting out at Salem, in this State, for the slave-trade on the coast of Africa. The principals in the affair are a Spanish firm in New York; and the pecuniary equipment of the vessels has just been forwarded in the form of nearly $20,000 in hard specie. If the Government really wishes to stop this infamous trade it must look North as well as South, and to these small New England ports as well as to New York and New Orleans. There will be no difficulty in identifying the craft at Salem, and this is not the first instance in the last three months"

OHIO STATE NEWS.

—The town council of St. Clairsville, Belmont Co., has instituted a chain gang.

—The Democracy of Stark county, on Saturday last, nominated James B. Chase and S. D. McKee for Representatives, and Thomas W. Chapman for Senator.

—The late Mr. E. T. Sterling [?], who was so brutally murdered in Cleveland, on Saturday night, had a policy of insurance on his life in the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. for $5000, for the benefit of his wife.

—William Frank, a lad about 16, was so injured in Girard, O., a few days since, by a heated nail rod in the hands of a blacksmith, as to cause his death. The boy fell upon the hot rod, which entered his side.

—The Chillicothe Advertiser says that Susan Lyons, who stands indicted for assisting in the escape of Chas. Wallace, jr., from jail in April last, has been arrested and lodged in the Ross county jail. In obedience to the advice given her at the time of her escape, she "keeps her mouth shut."

—Dr. W. O. Reim [?], a homoeopathic physician of Springfield, was arrested and brought before the Mayor of that city, on Monday, charged with procuring an abortion on the person of Miss Elmira Benson. In consequence of the illness of Miss B. the case was continued until Friday, the defendant being in the meantime admitted to bail.

—The Democracy of Coshocton county in Convention, on the 1st inst., nominated James Gamble and Dr. Fellows as their candidates for Representatives. James P. Bonham, of Tuscarawas county, was recommended as the choice of the Convention for State Senator, which will insure his nomination, the Democrats of his own county having previously taken similar action.

—On Tuesday of last week, the anniversary of the defence of Fort Stephenson, was celebrated at Fremont. In the evening there was a display of fire-works, which came near proving fatal to a number of bystanders. There was a large number of rockets on the stand from which the exhibition took place. In the act of setting one off it ignited the pile, driving them in every direction through the crowd. One man had his leg severely bruised, and two lads, sons of Messrs. O'Connor and Dickenson, were badly bruised in the face.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ Carl Formes was reported in London en route for the Rhine.

☞ The Baltimore Clipper hoists the name of Hon. John M. Botts, of Virginia, as its favorite for the next Presidency.

☞ Mr. Casey, U. S. Treasurer, is quite ill at the residence of the Hon. John C. Rives, near Bladensburg, Md.

☞ The London Herald has the best authority for stating that the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia will soon visit England.

☞ The salary of the Mayor of Evansville, Ind., has been raised from $500 to $1,000. Two members were in favor of $1,500.

☞ One of the editors of Lafayette, Ind., is to make the ascension with Mr. Wise, from that city on the 16th.

☞ A Frenchman in New Orleans named Lefevre, drew a prize last week, in the Havana lottery, of $25,000.

☞ D. C. Branham, of Jefferson county, Indiana, is spoken of as the Republican candidate for Governor of that State.

☞ At Niagara Falls, on Friday night, a German, named Henry Hammer, shot an Irishman by the name of Bartlett Byrne, killing him instantly.

☞ The boiler in the paper mill of Randolph and Vanliew at Bloomfield, N. J., exploded on Thursday, badly injuring three men—one fatally, and doing great damage to the building.

☞ Ice was formed at Somerset, Pa., one night last week, and clothes hung out to dry were frozen quite stiff. The frost was very heavy, and did much damage.

☞ A fire recently took place in the London dockyard, when about fifty casks of brandy were destroyed, many persons were prostrated by the heat, but no lives were lost.

☞ It is said that Governor Wise is about issuing a book to be entitled the "Complete Political Letter Writer." He is entirely competent.

☞ There is now living near Ripley, Va., in perfect health, a good looking and intelligent young lady, 24 years of age, who weighs but 47 pounds. She is 3 feet 10 inches high and well proportioned.

☞ An Artesian well, bored at Jackson, Michigan, struck a fountain of pure water at the depth of 155 feet, which supplies an abundance for the uses of the State Prison located there.

☞ A colored lady was arrested in New York for stealing a parasol. She offered as an excuse to the magistrate, that the sun was spoiling her complexion. He took pity on her, and sent her to prison for six months to enable her to bleach.

☞ The dying request of Virginia Stewart recently shot by McDonald in New York, was that her mother would do all in her power to shield her murderer from punishment.

☞ Nancy Moore, up in Michigan, became sick of her helpmate Israel Jones [illegible] him with opium, and then ran away to Detroit to cross to Canada. She had $300 of Israel's money.

☞ Twenty-seven thousand bags of coffee, lately imported from the West Indies, are lying in the warehouses of Baltimore awaiting purchasers for the Western and other markets.

☞ It is reported in Washington that Postmaster General Holt insists upon the removal of Cook, Postmaster at Chicago, while the President says positively that he shall not be removed.

☞ No sooner was the suspension of hostilities announced than plans for pleasure excursions to the seat of war were organized at Paris. It is likely to be the favorite pleasure trip of the season.

☞ Mr. Geo. Loring, the absconding Grand Master of the Odd Fellows, in England, has turned up in Clifton, C. W. It will be recollected that, before leaving England, he stole $20,000 of the funds belonging to the Order.

☞ Late New Orleans papers received state that the yellow fever had broken out in Edinburgh and Reynosa, two small Mexican towns, and in three days two hundred and forty-three persons died.

☞ The jury in the case of the State vs. S. M. Booth for seduction, which has been on trial at Milwaukee, Wis., for the past two weeks, stood six to six after being out twenty-four hours.

☞ A colored man named A. Lee, formerly a servant of Col. Fremont, shot his wife with a pistol, in San Francisco, recently, inflicting a mortal wound in her head. He then shot himself in the left side, and is believed to be mortally wounded also.

☞ A New York correspondent says that ten millions of hooped skirts are manufactured in that city per year. Houses there make more than three thousand per day, and still cannot fill their orders. In the name of lost pins, where can such a world of emptiness go!

☞ Robert Ridgeway, of the Richmond (Va) Whig, has been tendered a complimentary dinner by the Whigs of Leesburg. Mr. R. has signified his acceptance, and designates Monday, the 14th of September, as the day on which it will take place.

☞ Alexander R. Hagner, Esq., of Annapolis, is announced as an independent Whig Anti-Administration candidate for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District, in opposition to Col. G. W. Hughes, lately nominated by the Democratic Convention.

☞ The St. Paul Pioneer says that upwards of two hundred carts have arrived this month in that city from the Selkirk settlement in British North America, and that the amount of trade which the St. Paul merchants will realize therefrom will not be far from $300,000.

☞ A despatch from Brussels announces the death of the Duke of Abrantes, (son of the famous Junot) who was wounded in the battle of Solferino. The thigh had to be amputated, and the patient did not long survive the operation. The Duke was chief of the staff of one of the divisions of the army of Italy.

☞ According to the London Post the late Mr. Choate had reached Liverpool safely. A message [?] to him is given to accompany the announcement. We presume the Post expected him, or found his name on the passenger list, but the lamented Choate was dead in America when the Post wrote his "welcome to England."

☞ It is probable that the office of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland will be abolished. It is an office for which Catholics are ineligible by the Emancipation bill.

☞ A severe rain storm, accompanied with thunder and lightning, visited New York on Thursday night. The mast of a ship in the river was struck by the lightning, shivering it to the deck and injuring a man who was standing by it seriously. One man was killed in the Park and the cellars in the lower part of the city were filled with water.

☞ The following are the names and ages of the Revolutionary soldiers, supposed to be alive, who are pensioned on the rolls of the State of Virginia—William Cunningham, 96 years; George Estes, 96½; Daniel Hicks, [illegible]; William Casey, 94½; Peter Hiler [?], 97; William Stewart, 96; Matthew Seay, 96; Henry Walloughby, 100.

☞ At the new hotel in New York, the boarders ascend from the first to the sixth story by means of steam elevators, continually moving on a revolving perpendicular screw shaft. The next improvement will be a mechanical locomotive waiter, to pass continually around the table, to carry the food to the boarders and take away the empty plates.

☞ A shocking accident occurred in Spruce street, New York, on Saturday evening. Jacob Ottinger, a lithographer, was accidentally shot by Policeman Dobbes. The officer was in the act of shooting a horse which lay fatally injured, when his weapon exploded, and the ball struck Mr. Ottinger in the head, killing him almost instantaneously.

☞ There are five hundred and eleven lodges of Odd Fellows in Pennsylvania, with forty-two thousand five hundred and forty-two contributing members. The receipts of the order for the year ending June 30 were $225,968; and the amount paid for relief $110,076.

☞ Hon. Elisha Litchfield died at Cazenovia, Madison Co., N. Y., on the 4th inst., in the 74th year of his age. Mr. L. in 1820, he was sent to Congress, and was a Member of the Assembly in 1831, '32, '33 and 1844, serving as a Speaker through the latter session.

☞ Hon. T. Butler King, who is running as an independent Democratic candidate for Congress in the First district of Georgia, in a card published in the Savannah Republican, denounces Wm. H. Stiles, the opposition candidate, as "a malicious slanderer and a coward."

☞ The Belgian pavement has been adopted in New York, as the cheapest and most durable, better than the Russ or iron pavement. It is to be introduced into all the streets requiring repaving. The cobble stone nuisance is not thought of in that city.

☞ The Helena (Arkansas) Democrat says that the five negroes of Arkansas, who are required by law to leave the State before 1860, seem generally to have selected Kansas as their future home, and intend removing there at an early day.

☞ A day or two ago, a can of oil of vitriol was traveling in the mail car on the New York Central railroad. It tipped over and its contents were spilled upon the mail bags, eating them so rapidly that they had to be stopped and remained short of their destination.

☞ It is positively stated, on the authority of a United States Marshal, that a cargo of six hundred Africans has recently been landed on the coast of Florida, near Tampa. The vessel in which they were imported was set on fire and abandoned.

☞ Wm. D. Phillips, accused of counterfeiting Senator Douglas's frank, has been acquitted by a jury at Washington—the reason of the acquittal being not that he did not do the deed, but that his object was not to defraud the government, but to use the Senator's name as a recommendation in his business.

☞ On Saturday afternoon a fire broke out in the depot of the South Berwick Railroad at Salem Falls, N. H., which was entirely destroyed. A westerly wind drove the flames across the river to South Berwick, Me., where 13 buildings were burned. The whole loss is about $20,000, insured for about $5,000.

☞ It is stated that Judge Douglas has written a letter to a gentleman in Virginia, in opposition to the re-opening of the African slave trade. He takes the ground that its prohibition, after a certain date, was one of the compromises of the Constitution, which secured the acceptance of that instrument, and therefore should be held sacred.

☞ Col. James Glover, of the California Overland Mail Company, informs the Galveston Examiner, of the existence of a remarkable spring 280 miles east of the El Paso, on the road leading to San Antonio. It is fully 150 feet in diameter, and has been sounded to the depth of 5,000 feet without finding bottom.

☞ Napoleon has determined upon the erection of a new arch of triumph at Paris, in honor of his Italian victories. It will cost several million, and will ostensibly be erected by subscription. The bas reliefs are already distributed for execution among the best sculptors in Paris.

☞ The money stolen from Van Amburgh's Menagerie, $1,275, at Mooresville, in Morgan county, on the evening of the exhibition there on the 3d, has been found, concealed beneath the surface of the ground, but a short distance from where the wagon stood when it was robbed. The money was all in coin, and the thief, it would seem got too heavy for the thieves, who left it where found.

☞ The Earl of Carlisle, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, recently made a speech in Dublin, in which he referred to the improved condition of Ireland. He said that the eye now meets on all sides with fields teeming with abundance, and that crime is diminishing throughout the country, the tide of emigration is checked, and prosperity is beginning to prevail.

☞ The August number of the Eclectic Magazine, in speaking of Edward Everett, gives an account of his labors in connection with the Mount Vernon Fund. His Washington Oration was first delivered Feb. 22, 1856, and has been given since then, one hundred and twenty nine times, yielding $55,783 62. For the "Mount Vernon Papers," in the New York Ledger, he received $10,000, and in other ways smaller sums, making a contribution to the Mount Vernon Fund of $68,162 56. In addition to his labors for this object, he has delivered lectures for other benevolent associations, making a total of more than $80,000 in little more than three years.

The Inexorable Creditor.—If the hottest place in Hell is ever tenanted, there will be found the inexorable creditor, the man whose only cry is "let me have judgment" against my debtor. We know, indeed, the "quality of mercy," but if human judgment is ever executed upon the Shylocks of the earth, by the Divine judge, each one will receive the just condemnation.

"One more damn'd inexorable dog."

A case of suicide, caused by the inexorable demands of a granite-hearted creditor, occurred at Chicago. The Press gives the particulars.

A man named E. L. Griffith, formerly of New York, was unfortunate in business and failed.—He had been a merchant in the interior of Illinois, and after his misfortunes went into the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad as Baggage Master, on a salary of $60 per month. Out of this salary he appropriated so much towards his old debts that his family suffered for necessaries of life. Yet while doing all this a creditor sued him for $30, got execution, and garnisheed—as the lawyers call it—Mr. G.'s month's wages, of course thus taking the daily bread out of the mouths of G.'s wife and children. Under the despair of such cruelty Mr. G. took laudanum and died.

May the widow's curse follow that creditor—Cleveland Herald.

Religious Liberty in Lombardy.—The Paris Presse says:—The Governor of Milan, representing Victor Emanuel, has proclaimed liberty of worship, reading and printing. This is no ordinary privilege. It will do more to prevent the return of Austrian domination and sacerdotal intolerance than treaty or army, or battlements.—It will give the people a taste of enjoyment which it will be almost impossible entirely to eradicate at any future time. because the longer it lasts the more extensively and firmly it will interlace and incorporate itself with the very life of the people. What is worthy of remark in this instance is the fact that this is not a Protestant insurrection against a Roman Catholic institution resting its right on sacred Scripture, and deriving its growth from the overthrow of Roman dogmas, but a purely civil right exacted by Roman Catholics for the use of Roman Catholics. These have demanded and vindicated it as a political necessity of national existence.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

New York, August 9.—The steamship Hammonia, from Southampton on the 26th ult., has arrived. She brings London papers of that morning.

The second edition of the London Times of the day gives the preliminaries of the peace of Villa Franca as follows: The two sovereigns of France and Austria will favor the creation of an Italian Confederation, that Confederation shall be under the honorary presidency of the Holy father the Pope. The Emperor of Austria cedes to the Emperor of France his rights to Lombardy, excepting the fortresses of Mantua and Peschiera, which rights the Emperor of France will hand over to the King of Sardinia.

Venetia forms part of the Italian Confederation but remains under the crown of Austria. The Dukes of Tuscany and Modena return under the condition of granting general amnesty. Both Emperors will ask the Pope to introduce indispensable reforms, full and complete amnesty to be granted to all people.

The ship Alma [?], from Calcutta for London, has been lost at sea; twenty of her crew and passengers were drowned.

The London Times of the 25th says that four notices are offered in the House of Commons on subjects connected with the military and naval defences of the British empire.

Sackville, N. B., Aug. 16.—The Horse Express has arrived here from Halifax with the European dispatches by the Arabia for the Associated Press. The following abstract is furnished:

The Emperor Napoleon has decided that the French army and navy shall be restored to a peace footing without the least possible delay. He is now generally regarded as sincere and his intentions pacific.

The Zurich Conference has not yet been held.

The English Cabinet has announced that the invitation to participate in the Congress of the Great Powers would not be accepted until the result of the Conference at Zurich has been ascertained.

The steamships Vanderbilt, City of [illegible] and Bavaria have arrived out.

The advices from Italy are peaceful.

The debates in the English Parliament indicate the intention of the Government to vigorously prosecute the works upon the national defenses.

The Sardinian plenipotentiary to the peace Conference had reached Paris.

The American horse Starke, entered by Mr. Ten Broeck for the Goodwood race, has won the stakes; the Goodwood cup was carried off by Promised Land; the American mare Prioress came in third.

London Money Market.—The money market is active and slightly more stringent. Consols are quoted at 94¼@95 for money, and 95½@95⅞ for account. The bullion in the Bank of England has decreased £236,000 during the week.

Liverpool, July 29.—Breadstuffs dull, corn has a declining tendency. Provisions also have a declining tendency.

Sackville, N.B., Aug. 16.—The Independence Belge says that the Austrian Provincial councils will be convoked soon, and will have liberty in their deliberations to make known openly to the Emperor the wishes of their population.

The first Austrian corps d'armee for the present will be maintained in Italy on a war footing, 200,000 strong. The other corps d'armee are to go to their former cantonments in Gallicia and Hungary.

The Piedmontese Gazette says that the new ministry will not produce any serious variation in the policy of Sardinia.

There will be a grand illumination at Milan on the arrival of the King.

The result of the deliberations of the annexation of Tuscany to Piedmont had been made known at 141 places, including Leghorn and Florence. There were 502 affirmative and only 15 negative votes. The French troops are to remain in the Duchies.

A Milan letter says that the extreme party is commencing agitation.

The date for the Zurich Conference was not fixed, but it was expected to meet in a few days. Count Colloredo, the representative of Austria, reached Marseilles on the 27th, and it is said proceeded direct to Zurich.

Great Britain.—The Parliamentary proceedings on the 27th ult. were unimportant. On the 28th, in the House of Commons, Lord C. Paget said that experiments were progressing to test the practicability of laying a Sub Marine Telegraph to Gibraltar.

Lord John Russell made his statement relative to foreign affairs. He would have postponed it if there had been any prospect of being able to announce a definite settlement of the affairs of the continent before the approaching close of the session. He was glad to see in the Moniteur that the Emperor of France had determined to place the army and navy on a peace footing.

After reviewing the grounds of peace, as proclaimed by the two European Emperors, he said as England did not interfere in the war, he did not think it was for her to interfere in the peace. The question of a province by Austria did not affect the state of affairs of Europe sufficient to warrant the interference of the neutral powers. The most important part of the treaty, however, related to the future of Italy, and the invitation of the Emperor Napoleon to England to enter the Congress, was to consult on the actual state of the affairs of Italy, irrespective of the terms of the treaty of Villa Franca.

England had not consented to join the Congress, and would not until they saw what was the result of the conference at Zurich. The treaty of Villa Franca did not lay down, absolutely any Italian confederation, but only that the Emperors would unite to promote one. He doubted the possibility or the benefit of a confederation at present, and pointed out the various obstacles to the consummation of such a project. Again England must know how it was proposed to carry out the treaty before joining the Congress, especially with respect to the restoration of the Dukes of Tuscany and Modena, as England could never be a party to forcing them on their own people without their free consent.

He rejoiced to say that the King of Naples was beginning to put an end to the system which prevailed under the late King, and sincerely desired to terminate it altogether. There was a treaty to be made at Vienna, whither a confidential agent of the French government had gone to arrange the basis. He believed that the Emperor of Austria desired that the Italians should have self government. He could not now say whether there would be a Congress, but he thought it would not become England now to say that she would withdraw from such an assembly, if there was a chance of promoting the liberty of Italy and establishing the peace of Europe.

Mr. D'Israeli expressed the wish that Lord John Russel had been more explicit, particularly as to any terms that may have been offered Austria by the neutral powers. He reiterated his objection to England having anything to do with the Conference, as she would be bound by the treaty of Villa Franca.

Lord Palmerston denied that England had submitted any terms to Austria, which were less honorable than those obtained from France. The government, at the request of the French Ambassador, had consented to be the channel of communication, and had submitted some terms to Austria, but at the same time distinctly stating that they were the views of the French government, and that England gave no advice or opinion in the matter. It would be impossible to join in the Congress, until the result of the Zurich conference is known.

Mr. Whiteside said that the Government had been made a cat's paw of, and by transmitting terms to Austria, virtually assented to [illegible].

Mr. Gladstone eulogized the conduct of Sardinia, and defended Lord Palmerston from the misrepresentations brought against him, and besought the house not to interfere between the executive, in whatever manner it might find itself able to adopt for the interest of State and the permanent welfare of Europe.

After speeches by other members, the subject was dropped.

In the House of Commons on the 29th sundry questions were put to the government on the subject of naval armament and national defenses. Lord Palmerston said that he did not think it possible for England to enter into any agreement with the other powers for the arithmetical reduction of her military and naval establishments—her position being totally different.

Mr. Horsman moved a resolution that the expenses of completing the work of defense be met by a fund especially provided for the purpose, independent of parliamentary vote. He urged continued armament; and suggested a law to complete defenses.

Mr. Sidney Herbert and Lord Palmerston objected to the proposition, but both said the Government was fully alive to the importance of completing the defenses of the country, and promised vigorous action in the matter.

Mr. Cobden deprecated this unnatural alarm as an actual incentive to war, and ridiculed the idea of invasion by France.

He hoped that explanations would be entered into between the two Governments. After such explanations had been made and tried, he would, if necessary, be ready to vote £200,000,000 to provide a navy superior to France although he showed that the English navy was greatly superior now.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

Albany, August 6.—It has leaked out here by what means the famous letter of Gov. Wise came to be published. It appears that the letter was written to a confidential friend of Gov. Wise, residing in New York. This gentleman on a recent visit to Albany, while in conversation with some members of the Regency, found these parties hostile to Mr. Wise on the grounds of his intimate relations with Fernando Wood, and the control the ex-Mayor was supposed to have over him.—The gentleman, who is a highly honorable man, and perhaps not smart enough for the intrigues of the Regency, incidentally stated in a spirit friendly to Gov. Wise, that he knew the imputations against him to be unfounded. But he will not be credited unless he produce the proof, whereupon, I am informed, he showed the letter to Mr. Cassiday, of the Argus, in strict confidence, who asked permission to lay it before Dean Richmond; this was consented to, except upon the solemn assurance that it should not appear in print.

It is now known that several copies of it were made. It may seem strange that the Albany Atlas and Argus, Mr. Cassiday's paper, should decline to publish the letter, on the assumption that it was a forgery, while it manifestly was made public by some members of the Albany regency, and probably with the knowledge of Mr. Cassiday himself.

New York, Aug. 8.—The Bank statement shows a decrease in loans of $409,000; in specie $680,000; in deposits $4,860,000; increase in circulation $408,000.

Washington, Aug. 8.—The following statement is made on the authority of U. S. Marshal Blackburn: A cargo of six hundred Africans have been landed on the Florida Coast, near Tyrna [?]. As soon as a landing was effected the vessel was fired and abandoned.

New York, Aug. 8.—Advices from Hayti to the 22d ult. stated that the Haytian legislature had offered to Geffrard the office and title of Dictator, which he had declined.

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—A special dispatch to the Bulletin says the overland express from Denver City, July 28th, arrived at Leavenworth last night.

There was great excitement in the mines in consequence of the discovery of rich diggings over the Divide, between the middle and South Park, near the head waters of the Colorado. Hundreds were leaving daily for the diggings.

Another express due to-day will probably bring details of the new discoveries.

The Leavenworth Times of to-day says a secret vigilance committee was organized there the past week for the purpose of breaking up extensive gangs of horse thieves and robbers, which infest the territory. One or two victims had suffered the death penalty, and others were punished till they confessed their crimes and exposed their associates. The committee disbanded after gaining sufficient knowledge to effect the destruction of the different gangs.

New York, Aug 9.—The following particulars are given regarding the great cricket match of 22 Americans versus the "All England Eleven" who will probably arrive in this country in the early part of next month, are as follows: Caffy, Carpenter, Diver, Grundy, Jackson, Lillywhite, Lockyer, Parr, Stephenson, Willsher and Wisden. The Americans have not yet decided upon the 22 who are to contend against these world-renowned players. The first of the series of matches will be the "All England Eleven" against 22 of Montreal at that city. The second match will be the "All England Eleven" against 22 selected by the St. George's Club, and will be played at Hoboken. The third match will be the "All England Eleven" against 22 of the Philadelphia Club, played at Philadelphia. The fourth match will be the "All England Eleven" selected by the Montreal Club and 11 selected by the St. George's Club of this city. The match will take place at Montreal.

Since the above arrangements have been made the necessity for a fifth match has been guaranteed; this match will, in all probability, be played at Hamilton, C. W., between the "All England Eleven" and 22 of Upper Canada, about the latter part of September.

New York, August 9.—The sugar market is heavy, but there is no change in prices. Coffee dull. Scott's Circular reports a decline of ¼c, quoting Rio at 10@11½c. There is a stock of 141,760 bags on hand.

New York, August 9.—A dispatch from Houston, Texas, via New Orleans on the 8th, says that Sam Houston is certainly elected Governor.

The earnings of the Central R. R., during the month of July, were nearly $50,000 in excess of last year. The 6 months dividend of 3 per cent. amounts to $620,000, after the payment of which there will be a balance of over $140,000 on hand.

Judge Mason, of the Supreme Court, has granted a motion for the appointment of a Receiver for the Erie road.

A private telegram from Memphis says that Emerson Etheridge is elected to Congress in the Ninth District.

An important omission occurred in the Nova Scotian's news in the account of the defeat of Count Walewski's plan for the Italian Confederation. The State of Venetia was omitted, for which it appears the Emperor of Austria is to have two seats in the Federal Diet.

Tyrone, Pa., August 9.—Col. L. W. Hall was to-day unanimously nominated by the People's party for the State Senate from this district.

Augusta, Ga., August 9.—The continued rains induce fears of injury to the growing cotton crop.

Washington, August 9.—It is stated that during the late term of the United States Circuit Court in Alabama, several indictments were found under the law of 1818, which provide for fines and imprisonment for engaging in, or aiding or abetting the importation of Africans, within the jurisdiction of the United States. As the law of 1820, which makes the offense piracy, to be visited with death, does not in express language repeal the former statute, a grave question has arisen involving the point whether there can be any choice of the above mentioned punishments; for while public sentiment at the South is against the greater, juries have, it is said, expressed a disposition to render verdicts, carrying with them the less severe punishment. The opinion is entertained here among distinguished gentlemen that in view of all the facts, notwithstanding the established rules of interpreting statutes, the question will probably be brought before the Supreme Court of the United States for its decision.

Washington, Aug. 12.—The National Teachers' Association, now in session here, have elected J. W. Bulkley, of Brooklyn, N.Y., as President for the ensuing year, and decided to publish a monthly periodical in the furtherance of the cause of education. This p. m. they are visiting President Buchanan.

The name of the U. S. steamer Erie Comet [?], now on the Brazil station, has been changed to Pulaski.

The delegates representing the Railroads on the southwestern or middle route between Washington and New Orleans, commenced their session here to-day. Their business is with reference to the transportation of the mail from Portland, Me., to New Orleans and to agree upon a joint bid for the performance of the service, as the Orange and Alexandria Railroad to Lynchburg, and the remaining part of the Mississippi Central Railroad will be finished by the first of January, at which time the new contract is to take effect. These delegates confidently say that they will be able to carry the mail between New Orleans and New York in three and a half days.

St. Louis, August 13.—A special package to the Republican contains dates from Denver city to the 3d inst. The Convention was in session with 166 delegates. They purpose taking the necessary steps to form the country adjacent to, the mines into a territory, to be called Jefferson. The intention is to apply to the next session of Congress for recognition and a territorial government.

[illegible], August 10.—The Enquirer has a letter from Gov. Wise, in which he explains that he wrote the famous letter which has caused so much talk, to [illegible] of New York. The Gov. also gives a letter from Mr. Donnelly explaining that the letter was published after the committal of an implied breach of trust—for the purpose of killing off the Governor. The Governor closes his epistle thus: "Now, this is all I know about the matter. It is no fault or impropriety of mine, which makes the whole public, and thus explaining itself I have no comments to make—nothing to palliate, excuse or justify. Who [illegible] defense for treachery and for a gross outrage upon all the confidence and good faith known among men in this, I leave the public to judge. I give Mr. Donnelly's plea, and [illegible] until the [illegible] appears, that he is innocent, whether now he will recoil, as I will [illegible] his name is not given in the address of the published copies, to create the impression falsely that I wrote this letter spontaneously to some member of the New York [illegible] committee. I [illegible] worse than forgery.

HENRY A. WISE.

St. Louis, Aug. 10.—A counterfeit check on the Sub-Treasury at St. Louis was received here yesterday. Its imitation of the genuine is admirably executed and calculated to deceive. Tools, materials, &c., seized by the U. S. Marshal, were found in the Church [illegible] office of Brigham Young. The parties arrested are said to be Mormons of high standing, and it is understood the profits of the transactions were to accrue to the benefit of the Church.

St. Louis, Aug. 10.—The river fell 10 inches in 24 hours ending last evening, and is now receding at about the same rate [illegible] to the channel to Cairo. All the upper rivers are represented falling. Weather cloudy and warm. Several brisk showers fell yesterday afternoon.

N. Y., Aug. 11.—The steamship North Star has arrived; she left Aspinwall on the 3rd inst., and brings California [illegible] to the 20th ult. which have been anticipated by the steamer Hammonia at New Orleans. The North Star brings nearly 200 passengers. The excitement on the Isthmus in relation to the golden [illegible] in the Indian mounds is dying out.

Advices from St. Thomas state that the English steamer Paramatta is still lying on the reef near that port. All her cargo has been thrown overboard, and divers are at work [illegible] the coral rock on which she is lying.

The sloop of war St. Marys sailed from Panama on the 26th for Realejo.

Advices had been received from the Revolutionary movement in Carthagena to the 13th of July, when the Liberal party had proclaimed against the authorities and [illegible] Juras [illegible] provisional ruler.

The California markets were dull, and there was but little prospect of immediate improvement. [illegible] and China products were declining in consequence of heavy stocks on hand.

Cincinnati, Aug. 11.—[illegible] morning a fire broke out in the wholesale liquor establishment of S. S. Boyle and Co., which was entirely destroyed. The fire extended to the warehouse of S. P. Pike, wholesale liquor merchant, which was partially destroyed; loss, $30,000—insured for $16,000. Crane, Breed, and Co., metallic burial case manufacturers, lost $40,000.

The Sickles Case.—The New York correspondent of the Charleston Mercury says that shortly after Sickles was acquitted, several wealthy political friends of his in this city started a subscription for a fund to pay his traveling expenses in Europe until the commencement of the next Congressional Session, by which time it was hoped that the very resentment attaching to the man would have greatly subsided, and that the [illegible] of travel would have repaired his shattered health and spirits.—The fund was to have been $15,000, and [illegible] was subscribed and the subscription was still going on, when the news of Sickles' reconciliation with his wife alarmed his friends and put an end to the movement. One Democratic politician had [illegible] done for $1,000.

Good Breeding.—A letter in the New York Tribune, dated Johnson, Trumbull county, Ohio, furnishes the most remarkable instance of breeding in a prolific family on record:

On the 2d of August Mrs. Timothy Bradley gave birth to eight children—three boys and five girls. They are all living, and are healthy, but quite small. Mr. B.'s family is increasing fast. He was married six years ago to Eunice Mowery, who weighed 273 pounds on the day of their marriage. She has given birth to two pair of twins, and now eight more making twelve children in six years. It seems strange, but nevertheless is true. Mrs. B. was a part of three, her mother and father both being twins, and her grandmother the mother of two pair of twins.

Excitement at Schaghticoke.—A gentleman who came down [illegible] morning informs us that the people at Schaghticoke are very indignant, and threaten bodily harm to Mr. White, the superintendent, if he shows himself in that vicinity. A party have [illegible] freight car belonging to the road, and will continue the work if they attempt to run the road again. The bridge at Schaghticoke is said to be in a very dangerous condition, and several other bridges along the line of the road. The villagers seem disposed to prevent the resumption of business on the road.—Albany Statesman.

Mysterious Disappearance.—The Troy Times says a young man named Ross [?], of Cincinnati, Ohio, 18 or 19 years old, left Brady's Hotel, New York, on Monday evening last, to visit Troy and Niagara Falls. The hackman conveyed him to the Troy steamer, and his trunks were placed on board. They were brought to Troy, and were found by his friends in the baggage-room of the steamer, but the young man is missing. It is feared he was either drowned or murdered.

☞ Judge Daly, of New York, has decided that a Judge of a Court of Common Pleas, under the act of 1847, may authorize any person of full age residing in that State to assume another name, provided the Judge is satisfied that the applicant will derive any pecuniary benefit from the change.

☞ At a recent boat race at Norwalk, each boat was required to start with three passengers, but it was not stipulated that they should be brought back. So two of these in one craft jumped overboard and swam ashore, immediately after getting under way, and thus enabled their boat to win the purse, which was $100.

Some Gal.—Says a country girl, describing her country house, "We raise our own fruit and vegetables, make our own pork, and lay our own eggs." That gal would make a capital wife for a poor man, especially in a city where eggs are scarce and dear.

The Pleas of Italy.—The Sons of Italy, says a correspondent, are an eager and a mundane [?] race. They monopolize, apparently, all the vigor and energy of the country; if the rest of its population were as active, as resolute, and as persevering as they, Italy never would have needed French allies for the achievement of her independence. No oppressor could have kept her foothold on her soil for a single season.

The late Dr. Physick, when appealed to by the frightened mother of a child, who had swallowed one of the old-fashioned coppers, coolly inquired if the coin was genuine. The mother, not comprehending the drift of the joke, replied earnestly "Yes, indeed, it was, Doctor." "Then," said he, "there is no danger—it will pass." and the prediction was verified.

Sure "For the Track!"—A Mississippi County Court Clerk having issued a marriage license for a young man, shortly after received the following note from him:

State of Miss July the 8 1859

Mr. Moody plee let This matter stand over until further orders the girl has Flu the track By her own Request and Release my cost of this Bond if you plee.

U. G. R. R.—Three negro boys, brothers, belonging to the estate of George Kirchner [?], deceased, ran away from their owners, [illegible] at Parker[illegible] Saturday night last. A reward of $1 000 [illegible] paid [illegible]—Wheeling Times, August 8.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL - - Editor

TERMS - $1 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.

AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.

TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.

COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES S. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar; and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible, as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unwavering, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

CHEAPEST IN THE STATE.

THE

CAMPAIGN PRESS,

PUBLISHED AT COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Will be sent to subscribers at the Low Rate of

25 Cents Each!!

until after the October Election, being the CHEAPEST CAMPAIGN PAPER in the State. This will enable the

CAMPAIGN PRESS

to reach all classes, and entitle it to

A Most Extensive Circulation.

20 Copies for $5!

☞ Our friends of the press in this State will please give this a few insertions or call attention to the fact.

J. SIDNEY MARSHALL.

July 21st, 1859.

Democratic Meetings.

At the recent meeting of the State Central Committee in this city, the following appointments were made, commencing the canvass in the North West and the Southern counties at the same time.

Hon. Geo. E. Pugh and Gen. Joseph H. Geiger will address the people as follows:

Batavia, Clermont Co., Monday, August 15
Georgetown, Brown Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16
Hillsboro, Highland Co., Thursday, Aug. 18
Washington, Fayette Co. Friday, Aug. 19
Wilmington, Clinton Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.

Wm. H. Safford, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Major D. W. Stambaugh, of Tuscarawas County, will address the people as follows:

Toledo, Lucas county, Saturday evening, Aug. 13th.
Bryan, Williams Co., Monday, Aug. 15
Defiance, Defiance Co., Tuesday, Aug. 16.
Paulding, Paulding Co., Wednesday, Aug. 17
Napoleon, Henry Co., Thursday, Aug. 18.
Ottawa, Putnam Co., Friday, Aug. 19.
Perrysburgh, Wood Co., Saturday, Aug. 20.
Port Clinton, Ottawa Co., Monday, Aug. 22d
Fremont, Sandusky Co., Tuesday, Aug. 23d
Tiffin, Seneca Co., Wednesday, Aug. 24th.
Findlay, Hancock Co., Thursday, Aug. 25th.
Kenton, Hardin Co., Friday, Aug. 26th.
Upper Sandusky, Wyandot Co., Saturday, Aug. 27th.

Morgan county, at McConnelsville, Wednesday, August 17th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, and W. C. Gaston, Esq.

Washington county, Marietta, Friday, August 19th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, and W. C. Gaston, Esq.

Athens county, Athens, Saturday, August 20th, speakers, R. P. Ranney, Hon. C. D. Martin and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Ross county, Chillicothe, Monday, August 22d, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Pike county, Piketon, Tuesday, August 23d, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Scioto county, Portsmouth, Wednesday, August 24th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Lawrence county, Ironton, Thursday, August 25th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Gallia county, Gallipolis, Saturday, August 27th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

Meigs county, Pomeroy, Monday, August 29th, speakers, R. P. Ranney and Gen. Geiger.

The people of Guernsey county will be addressed by the Hon. Geo. E Pugh, and J. O. Ranney, Esq., at Cambridge, on Wednesday, the 24th August.

The people of Monroe county will be addressed by the same gentlemen, at Woodsfield, on Thursday, the 25th of August.

Jacob Reinhard, Esq., Democratic candidate for Secretary of State, will attend the meeting at Woodsfield, and address his fellow citizens in the German language.

Madison county, at London, Saturday, August 27, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, and J. O. Ranney, Esq.

Shelby county, Sidney, Wednesday, August 31, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, and Dr. G. Volney Dorsey.

Logan county, Bellefontaine, Thursday, September 1, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, and Dr. G. Volney Dorsey.

Marion county, Marion, Friday September 2, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, and Dr. G. Volney Dorsey.

Morrow county, Mt. Gilead, Saturday, September 3, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, and Dr. G. Volney Dorsey.

Crawford county, Bucyrus, Monday, September 5, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, Dr. G. Volney Dorsey, and H. B. Wilson, Esq.

Wyandot county, Upper Sandusky, Wednesday, September 7, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, Dr. G. Volney Dorsey, and H. B. Wilson, Esq.

Auglaize county, Wapakonetta, Friday, September 9, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, H. B. Wilson, Esq., and A. S. Ramsey, Esq.

Van Wert county, Van Wert, Saturday, September 10, speakers, Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, H. B. Wilson, Esq., and A. S. Ramsey, Esq.

Tuscarawas county, New Philadelphia, Friday, September 2, speakers, Col. Geo. W. McCook, and Wm. C. Gaston, Esq.

Coshocton county, Coshocton, Saturday, September 3, speakers, Col. Geo. W. McCook, and W. C. Gaston, Esq.

Fairfield county, Lancaster, Tuesday, September 6, speakers, Col. Geo. W. McCook, Hon. C. D. Martin, and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Hocking county, Logan, Wednesday, September 7, speakers, Col. Geo. W. McCook, Hon. C. D. Martin, and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Delaware county, Delaware, Friday, September 9, speakers, Col. Geo. W. McCook and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Knox county, Mt. Vernon, Saturday, September 10, speakers, Col. Geo. W. McCook, and Hon. E. B. Olds.

Erie county, Sandusky City, Tuesday, August 30, speakers Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, and T. S. Woods, Esq.

Huron county, Norwalk, Wednesday, August 31, speakers, Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, and T. S. Woods, Esq.

Richland county, Mansfield, Thursday, September 1, speakers, Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, and T. S. Woods, Esq.

Ashland county, Ashland, Friday, September 2, speakers, Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, and T. S. Woods, Esq.

Holmes county, Millersburgh, Saturday, September 3, speakers, Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, and T. S. Woods, Esq.

By Order of the State Central Committee.

Mr. Douglas on Naturalization and the African Slave Trade.

The letter of Mr. Douglas, which will be found in our columns, is marked by the directness and prompt expression that distinguish every thing he does. There is no circumlocution, no evasion. In a few plain words he furnishes his opinions so that none may doubt.—He leaves nothing for his friends to explain—he indulges in no mystery. He takes the broad ground that the naturalized citizen cannot owe allegiance at the same time, and therefore is entitled to the protection of the Government to which he swears fealty. The re-opening of the African Slave Trade he emphatically rejects as that was one of the compromises upon which our nationality was established, and became a fundamental part of the basis of our Union. While epistolary communications have damaged the most of the distinguished politicians of our country, Mr. Douglas has been singularly fortunate in his. What he has had to say he has said without equivocation, and so that one who runs might read. In vain may adversaries attempt to misconstrue his position—the straight forwardness of every act of his turns aside the weapons aimed at him, and they pass harmless by. It was due to himself that his views upon these absorbing questions should be known, and he has expressed them at the right time in the right way.

Letter from Senator Douglas.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Aug. 2.

COLONEL JOHN L. PEYTON, STAUNTON, VA.:

MY DEAR SIR: You do me no more than justice in your kind letter, for which accept my thanks, in assuming that I do not concur with the Administration in their views respecting the rights of naturalized citizens, as defined in the Le Clerc letter, which, it is proper to observe, has been since materially modified. Under our Constitution there can be no just distinction between the rights of native born and naturalized citizens to claim the protection of our Government, at home and abroad. Unless naturalization releases the person naturalized from all obligations which he owed to the native country, by virtue of his allegiance, it leaves him in the sad predicament of owing allegiance to two countries, without receiving protection from either—a dilemma in which no American citizen should ever be placed.

Neither have you misapprehended my opinions in respect to the African slave-trade. That question seriously disturbed the harmony of the Convention which framed the Federal Constitution. Upon it the delegates divided into two parties under circumstances which, for a time, rendered harmonious action hopeless.

The one demanded the instant and unconditional prohibition of the African slave-trade, on moral and religious grounds; while the other insisted that it was a legitimate commerce involving no other considerations than a sound public policy, which each State ought to be permitted to determine for itself, so long as it was sanctioned by its own laws. Each party stood firmly and resolutely by its own position, until both became convinced that this vexed question would break up the Convention, destroy the Federal Union, blot out the glories of the Revolution, and throw away all its blessings, unless some fair and just compromise could be formed on the common ground of such mutual concessions as were indispensable to the preservation of their liberties and independence.

Such a compromise was effected and incorporated into the Constitution, by which it was agreed that the African slave-trade might continue as a legitimate commerce in those States whose laws sanctioned it, until the year 1808, from and after which time Congress might and would prohibit it forever throughout the dominions and limits of the United States, and pass all laws which might become necessary to make such prohibitions effectual. The harmony of the Convention was restored, and the Union saved by this compromise, without which the Constitution could never have been made. I stand firmly by this compromise, and by all the compromises of the Constitution, and shall use my best efforts to carry each and all of them into faithful execution in the sense and with the understanding in which they were originally adopted. In accordance with this compromise I am irreconcilably opposed to the revival of the African slave trade in any form and under any circumstances.

I am, with great respect, yours truly,

S. A. DOUGLAS.

Constitution of Kansas.

Governor MEDARY has been on a visit to his family for a few days, but has now gone to Washington. Although we had not the pleasure of meeting him, we are indebted to him for a copy of the Kansas Constitution, which we have read and find in some of its features is shaped a good deal like the Constitution of Ohio after which it was modeled. In the legislative department bills are required to originate in the House, and all after passing both Houses, be signed within two days by the presiding officers, and presented to the Governor, who, if he approve shall return it to the House with his objections, which shall be spread at large upon the journal. It is to be reconsidered, it may be passed by a vote of two-thirds of each House. If the Governor should not return a bill in three days after it shall have been presented to him for approval, it shall become a law as if he had signed it. This feature is a departure from the constitution of Ohio, which does not require the Executive to have lot or part in legislation. Suffrage is extended to citizens of the United States, and persons of foreign birth who have declared their intentions to become citizens, but in each case six months residence in Kansas and thirty days in the ward or township are required. No soldier, sailor or marine of the army or navy of the United States shall exercise or possess the right. No debt shall be contracted for more than one million of dollars, and shall first be submitted to a vote of the people. There are some peculiarities about this Constitution that will be found objectionable in being reduced to practice. That it will be acceptable to the people of Kansas, is by no means certain. We hear of considerable objections raised to it and in a future number shall point out several which struck us very forcibly on the cursory reading we were enabled to give the [illegible]

Negro Suffrage.

The Logan "Gazette" has an able article on this subject, which brings it home to those who have claimed that Republicanism never contemplated the admission of the negro race to the equal enjoyment of social and political position with the white race. In summing up its argument, the "Gazette" says:

Now let us mark our progress in the argument that Republicans are in favor of negro suffrage:

1. We have shown that in Massachusetts the Republicans allow the negro to vote;

2. We have shown that it is to the interest of the Republicans everywhere to allow negroes to vote;

3. We have shown that, by their construction of the Declaration of Independence the negro may justly demand the right to vote;

And now we propose to show, in the last place, that the Republicans of Ohio, in the platform adopted at their very last State Convention assert the negro's right to vote, and make demand for the negro's right to vote.

The Logan "Gazette" presents an irrefragable argument, and cites an extract from the 4th resolution of the Republican platform:

"We claim for all citizens, native and naturalized, liberty of conscience, equality of rights, and the free exercise of the right of suffrage."

Upon the Republican hypothesis that negroes are and ought to be citizens not only of Massachusetts and Ohio but of the United States, the position assumed by the "Gazette" has been proved beyond question.

County Nominations.

The following nominations have been made by the Democracy of the respective counties. We shall endeavor to give our readers the names of such as reach us from time to time, that they may form an idea of who will compose the next Legislature:

COSHOCTON.—Representatives, Dr. J. N. Fellows, James Gamble; Sheriff, Rodehaver; Treasurer, Samuel Lambert; Prosecuting Attorney, Charles Hoy.

LAKE.—Representative, John L. Winner; Auditor, John E. Marvin; Sheriff, Orver H. Long; Recorder, S. O. Ellington.

HIGHLAND.—For Representatives, John L. Hughes and Thomas L. Grey; Sheriff, Titus B. Ashen; Treasurer, Jas. J. Woodrow; Prosecuting Attorney, Charles A. Bowale; Commissioner, A. Lemon; Infirmary Director, Thomas Robinson; Coroner, David Lowman.

LAWRENCE.—Representative, Dr. Gray; Sheriff, James McMahon; Treasurer, Jno. Snyder; Prosecuting Attorney, Ralph Leete.

MUSKINGUM.—Representatives, Patterson Shirley, Isaac Ellis, Geo. W. Rankin; Treasurer, Eakle T. Coe; Prosecuting Attorney, John O'Neil; Recorder, Geo. W. Rice.

For the People's Press.

Naturalization and Suffrage—No. 2.

As the population in Ohio, of foreign born, naturalized and unnaturalized, has become important, and holds the balance of power between the political parties, I have had some curiosity to look into the congressional legislation on the subject of naturalization, and find the first law made by Congress was on the 26th of March 1790, a little more than two years after the adoption of the Federal Constitution. This law required a residence of the alien of two years, and was made when our country contained a population of a little over 3,000,000; at this time we have a population of 30,000,000. In 1790 there might have been danger of a great influx of aliens, but at this epoch in our history no such apprehension can be entertained for a moment. The law of 1790 was repealed Jan. 7, 1795, and the latter law required a residence of the alien of five years; and then again the law of 1795 was repealed by a law approved on the 18th June, 1798, which required a residence of the alien of fourteen years and to have declared his intent on five years before his admission; this law was repealed by the law of 14th April, 1802, which is now in force and requires a residence of five years and a declaration of intention two years before any alien shall be admitted to citizenship of the United States. No time is fixed when this declaration of intention shall be made; it may be made immediately on the alien's arrival in the country. The alien law of 1798 merely authorizes the President to order out of the country, such aliens as he should consider dangerous to its peace and safety, under severe penalties for disobedience, and yet it was immediately cried down and now forms a standing topic of opprobrium. If the immigrants in this country were protestants in religion, you would likely have no objections about the deleterious effects of the foreign population, and the apprehended danger of such to our country. Thank God our country is not governed by the Protestant Bishop or Priest, or by the Catholic Pope. Our government encourages all religions and prohibits none—"a fair field for all." The practice of naturalization prevailed among the Greeks and Romans; but no government ever existed yet which was parallel to ours. Our "imperium in imperio" is not to be classed under any ordinary description. The population of the United States is intermixed with the near relatives of almost all lands, but particularly with England, Ireland, Scotland and Germany. The "Penny Press" at Cincinnati of the 29th ult., says:

"THE LATEST AMERICAN IDEA OF NATURALIZATION.—New methods of admitting the naturalization laws are presented to the public. The people of Massachusetts require two years residence after obtaining the final papers of citizenship. Governor Chase of this State in prefer[ence] to an amendment of the Constitution in Ohio favored, in his letter of April 21st to a committee of German born voters, such a change in the law, as will provide for naturalization after three instead of five years residence, and for the issue, at that time, of certificates conferring all rights of citizens, except suffrage immediately; and that right, also, after two years' further residence, making five years residence in all, as before. The Cincinnati Conservative Convention of Tuesday last favored the withdrawing the subject altogether from the jurisdiction of the State and Federal Courts, and causing certificates of naturalization and citizenship, in all cases, to issue from a bureau at Washington City, upon such terms and conditions as are now provided by law, and to obviate any difficulties or unreasonable expense in obtaining such certificates, the Judges and Commissioners of the Courts of the United States should be empowered to take the proofs and administer the oaths now recognized by law, and transmit the same to the proper office, at Washington."

The "Cincinnati Conservative Convention" means the "Know Nothing party" and the resolution on naturalization is so very tame, that it almost omits the part of Hamlet from the play of Hamlet. It is a matter of very little importance how the naturalization laws may be, or how administered. The voting privilege of natives and aliens is fixed by the Several States, the general government has nothing to do with it.

HAMILTON COUNTY.

The West—The Presidency.

The Dover, N. H. Gazette, alluding to the probability that Republicans will take their candidate for the next Presidency from the West, says:—"We would remind these gentlemen that the Democratic party are equally well aware, with themselves, that there is a west—a Mississippi valley—and will govern themselves accordingly. We have within our ranks a true and noble representative of Western as well as eastern, Northern and Southern interests. Though born in Black Republican Vermont, he has been reared, and his mind has expanded to its present gigantic proportions, upon the broad prairies of Illinois. He is the man to marshal our gallant hosts and lead them on to victory.—Like Napoleon the great, he keeps his own counsels, and promulgates his principles, now dear to every true American heart with a genuine old hickory firmness and decision. He has been tried—weighed in the balance, and is wanting in no element which goes to make a great, a true, and a successful man. He possesses every element of availability, enjoying, as he does, the confidence of the American people to a larger extent than any other man now living. He is emphatically the champion of the people's cause. Unless the signs of the times are deceptive beyond all precedent, he is the 'coming man,' and will lead the great Democratic hosts of the Union to the proudest victory recorded in the annals of our history. The opposition may plot and counter plot to their hearts' content, their principles have no abiding place in the hearts of the people. Their is a game for spoil and plunder. They have no higher ambition than party success or personal aggrandizement, and the people fear to trust them in national affairs.

It would be an extremely dangerous experiment, and if the Democracy are true to themselves and the tried champions of their great cause, they have nothing to fear. The rock of ages is not more firm, than the constitutional principles for which we, as a party, have contended and have maintained for the past half score of years. Let us cling thereto and all is safe.

It is not necessary to say that STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS is the great champion of Democracy referred to.

THE ELECTION OF DR. PEYTON TO CONGRESS FROM KENTUCKY.—No Democratic candidate in Kentucky met the slave-code issue more squarely and denounced it more vigorously than Dr. Peyton in the Second District. He advocated Congressional non-intervention in the broadest sense, and declared that no Congressional intervention for slavery was necessary. The consequence was he was re-elected to Congress, by a large vote, from a close district. The New Albany (Ind.) "Ledger," in remarking this fact, says:

Instead of shrinking and dilly-dallying with this question, as did some other Democratic candidates for Congress in Kentucky, Dr. Peyton met it boldly on every stump—he, on, onset taking a strong protection ground—and the people have triumphantly sustained him. Some of those gentlemen who evaded this issue, and now find themselves defeated, may learn a useful lesson from these circumstances.

☞ The opposition elected four members to Congress from Ky., and the Democrats six. One of the Democratic candidates was beaten only 34 votes.—[Ohio Press.

Not quite right, friend HILL. The opposition elected five members of Congress, and one of them by only three votes.

☞ The latest "fashion" announced from Europe, is that of dressing very plainly when going to church. Some of the ladies "of the first circles" go up to worship in plain calico to thus sought to encourage the attendance of the very poor, who have hitherto withheld their presence for lack of "Sunday clothes."

The Battle to be Fair and Square.

We understand that THOS. SPARROW, Esq., has consented to be a candidate for County Commissioner. This will bring him fairly and squarely before the people of this county; and afford them an opportunity of confirming the appointment made by "our Democratic County Officials." We have not the slightest doubt that Mr. SPARROW will obtain the largest vote ever given for Commissioner in Franklin county. The convenience of county affairs renders it almost necessary that one of the Commissioners should reside in the city. There are two to elect, and one will be taken from the city, who will be Mr. SPARROW, beyond a doubt.

We shall see if a fair fight will be made against Mr. SPARROW, by those who thought "our Democratic County Officials" acted hastily and made a mistake in appointing him commissioner. There is no gentleman in the county who possesses every qualification in a more eminent degree. That he will be opposed by the "MILLER clique" is pretty certain. He is not a man to answer their purpose. He is too honest and conscientious a man. He will do his duty regardless of whom it affects, and that would not conform to "MILLER policy." With Mr. SPARROW as Commissioner, there would be no chance of cheating the county. He understands the responsibilities and duties of the office, and would discharge what he conceived to be his duty, to the last letter.

The consent of Mr. SPARROW to be a candidate for Commissioner, will no doubt be troublesome in the MILLER camp. Already have they determined to slaughter Mr. PHILLIPS, for having the temerity with Judge ALBERY and Mr. GALE, of appointing him, in defiance of "MILLER" authority; and now fury must be blazing, when they are defied by Mr. SPARROW coming before the people for the same office.

The result will be favorable to justice and integrity. The Democratic party can never throw off one of its most popular young men at the instance of one whom the people discarded. Mr. SPARROW, we think, will prove acceptable to the majority of the Democrats, for County Commissioner, however distasteful he may be to MILLER and COX, and his nomination and election may be set down as more than probable.

LETTER FROM SENATOR DOUGLAS.—Senator Douglas has written a letter to Maine, in which he declines the invitation of the State Central Committee to address the Democracy of that State before the election. His plea is the ill-health of his family. At the conclusion of his letter he says:

"I have read the resolutions adopted by your recent State Convention with the liveliest satisfaction. The Democracy of Maine have planted themselves firmly on the great principle of Popular Sovereignty, and if they fight the battle manfully as I am confident they will, success will crown their efforts. The odds are against them, I admit; but they can be and will be overcome by vigorous, energetic political action."

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.—The New Albany (Ind.) Ledger, in commenting upon the fact that the Opposition will elect the next President if the choice goes to the House of Representatives, says this renders it imperiously necessary that a man shall be nominated for the Presidency by the Charleston Convention who will be certain of carrying a number of the Northern States. No man with a tincture of slave-codeism about him can hope to get a vote north of Mason and Dixon's line. No man who is not thoroughly Popular Sovereignty in his antecedents and present position can touch bottom, and our Southern friends may as well be advised of that fact now as at Charleston.

☞ J. H. Hodder, of the Marion "Mirror" who spent last winter in Columbus, as correspondent to the Cincinnati "Enquirer," thus pu[ts] in an article noticing Mr James A. Connelly's ad[mi]ssion to practice as a lawyer, by the District Court of this County:

"Connelly is a gentleman of fine acquirements, a methodical mind, excellent business capacity, studious habits, and withal one of the most promising young men of the State—Higher honors await him if he shall by 'patience and continuance in well doing' earn them, as we know he will."

Mr. Connelly is recognized as one of our best and most worthy citizens, and he has the good will and wishes of everyone.—[Morrow County Democrat.

Mr. Connelly was second assistant Clerk of the last State Senate, the duties of which he discharged in the most satisfactory manner.—He is a sound Democrat, of sterling worth, and handsome talents. He is an accomplished clerk, and as a draftsman has no superior—a very important branch of the legal profession. He is sprightly and appreciative, has a soul of much larger dimensions than his person; and it is our sincere and earnest hope that the law will lead him to eminence, and secure the comforts and enjoyments of life.

☞ The "Border Star," which is a high toned spirited paper, published at Westport, Missouri, by H. MILBURN, McCARTY, who is an old line whig, but cannot be a Black Republican, and therefore acts with the Democracy, because he is a Democrat, has the following paragraph:

We may be mistaken, but in our humble judgment the nomination of a Lecompton democrat for delegate will be tantamount to yielding up the ghost. We have conversed with scores of as good democrats as there are in Southern Kansas, and they are firm if not bitter against what was known as Mr Buchanan's Kansas policy. In all other respects they are national democrats and good Administration men.

REPUBLICAN PLAINNESS.—Describing the opening of Parliament, the London Times makes happy allusion to the United States minister: "All the space allowed to the diplomatic corps (it says) is full, and blazed at every point with ribbons, stars and orders of every kind. Conspicuous among them all, in his plain evening dress and snow white hair is the American minister, Mr. DALLAS, a striking type, if we may so call him, of the simple institutions of the great republic which he represents so well."

HAYTI.—Port au Prince dates of July 23d state that a committee of the Legislative Chambers had waited on President GEFFRARD, and proposed that he should assume the title and office of Dictator of Hayti, on the ground that by such an extension of authority he would be able to render more effectual service to the country in his work of social reorganization. The President declined the honor. La Republique advocates the dictatorship, and although GEFFRARD's conduct in refusing the increased powers offered him is recorded in his praise, it was thought that the Republic would yet pass into a dictatorship.

DOUGLAS IN NEW YORK.—The Buffalo (N. Y.) Republic says it has every confidence that the vote, if taken in the State of New York to-morrow, would show a tremendous majority for DOUGLAS over any other candidate.

☞ The last steamer from Europe brings intelligence that Mr. G. P. R. James, the novelist, contemplates resigning the Consulate of Venice, with the view of returning to this country, and making Virginia his permanent residence.

Stephen A. Douglas and the Presidency.

[From the St. Paul Pioneer and Democrat.]

The letter which we publish to-day from Stephen A. Douglas in relation to the use of his name as a candidate for the Presidential nomination before the Charleston convention, will be read with interest in all quarters. The letter is characteristic of the man—single tongued in its near directness, and Napoleonic in its boldness, terseness, pith, and point.—Nothing so surely fixes the status of a man as the letters he writes. Pen, ink, and paper are the three most unconquerable enemies of the politician. Clay, Calhoun, Webster, and others, the greatest among our statesmen, might have used their political letters with great appropriateness as their political winding sheets. Later than these, a man of great ingenuity, Governor Wise, only the other day sent to the press a political letter which must certainly kill him, and out of which he will never be able to extract any better consolation than that it covers paper enough to embalm him. Douglas commits no such folly. He says what he has to say without ambiguity. Despising all the arts of the demagogue, he lays down doctrines the same for the South as for the North, and a language which bears no double interpretation. In these times of political humbug, it is gratifying to find a politician who is at the same time a statesman—one who appreciates honor and manhood, and who will sink neither to gain even that which is most coveted, and which rightly got most deserves to be.

We notice, by the telegraphic dispatch, that the Administration organ, the Constitution, criticises this letter of Judge Douglas as incendiary in its character, and intended as a declaration in advance that he will not support the nominee of the Charleston Convention. It is incomprehensible to us how any such interpretation can be given to it. It enunciates distinctly the adherence of its author to the principles on which Buchanan was elected, and which the President has himself most emphatically endorsed in words, however, traitorously he may have repudiated them in his acts. But it is one of the anomalies of human nature, that the apostate in politics as well as in religion, always opposes with the bitterest zeal the principles which he has deserted, and hates above all others those who recall to him his advocacy of the doctrines of his former faith. And so, Buchanan cannot be irritated so outrageously as by the reminder that, before his Lecompton treachery he stood upon the Cincinnati platform with the Douglas interpretation. Yet, in spite of the annoyance which the honesty of Douglas and his own inconsistency causes him, we doubt if he can succeed in the scheme to defeat the former, towards which all the influences of his administration have been, are now, and will continue to be, directed. Douglas will be nominated at Charleston, in spite of Buchanan; he will run upon a platform of principles to which he has consistently adhered, and which the latter has wilfully betrayed; and he will be elected by the enthusiasm of a people who admire political honesty as heartily as they despise political treachery.

Letter from Mr. Douglas.

[From the Maine Democrat.]

The brief letter from Mr. Douglas, in reply to those who make inquiries relative to the presentation of his name in the Charleston convention, is straightforward and explicit—just such as might be expected from a statesman of his integrity, firmness, self reliance, and devotion to popular Democratic principles. He will, in no case, consent to stand as a candidate for the presidential nomination except as the representative of the popular principles he has so long and so ably advocated as applicable to the government of the territories of the Union. It is daily becoming more and more apparent that the Democracy of the country must enter into one more presidential canvass for the vindication of those principles. Through untoward circumstances the territorial question is not yet set at rest, and some differences of opinion have arisen in the Democratic ranks relative to the matter. Another election must settle this question. Where can the Democracy find a champion to lead them in such a contest so able, so popular so fully endowed with the qualities of mind and heart which go to make the true statesman, as Mr. Douglas? He has from the first been identified with the Democratic policy for the territories, and his election to the Presidency would be a triumphant vindication of that policy, and a permanent settlement of the territorial question—and would moreover give the country a Chief Magistrate possessing more of the qualities of the best of our modern Presidents, Gen. Jackson, than can be found in any other man that can be named for the place.

The tide of popular sentiment throughout the country is already setting strongly in favor of DOUGLAS AND POPULAR SOVEREIGNTY, and, in our opinion, it will carry both in triumph through the Charleston convention at the succeeding Presidential canvass.

Democracy, North and South.

[From the Toledo Herald and Times.]

Is it not a perversion of language to call that strange compound of antagonistic factions the Republican organization, a party? It has absolutely no common ground of principle, occupied alike by all. Its doctrines vary with the boundaries of States; and in Ohio, it has almost as many different creeds as there are counties—ranging from the ultra nullifying, abolition fanaticism of the Reserve, to the singular amalgam of incongruities proclaimed as a creed by Tom Corwin. To this mongrel organization, what a contrast is presented by the consistent, solid front of principle presented by the Democratic hosts, North and South, East and West? For example, the State Conventions of the party, in Vermont and Georgia, were held on the same day; and each passed resolutions defining the position of the party upon the question of adherence to its old land marks laid down in the Cincinnati platform. The Georgia Convention resolved as follows:

"That the Democratic party of Georgia continue to adhere to the principles announced by the National Convention of Cincinnati in 1856, and its determination to insist upon their being carried out in the Administration of the Federal Government."

The resolution of the Vermont Convention reads thus:

"That the Democracy of Vermont, in the language of the Cincinnati National Democratic Convention of 1856, recognise and adopt the principles contained in the organic law establishing the territories of Kansas and Nebraska, as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the slavery question—non-interference by Congress with slavery in State or territory, or in the District of Columbia."

☞ The Huntsville (Ala.) Southern Advocate says: "The Mobile Register, the Montgomery Confederation and the Memphis Appeal—all old and leading Democratic papers, edited by men strongly Southern-Right in 1850—51—have recently come out in able articles in favor of non-intervention, as being the only doctrine that can preserve the unity of the Democratic party North and South, to which it is unmistakably committed by its past action."

Mr. Douglas and the Presidency.

[From the Boston Courier.]

We quoted yesterday from the Edgefield Advertiser (South Carolina) an article deliberately discussing the question—"Shall the South accept Douglas?"—In any point of view, we cannot but regard this article as one of no little consequence. Exactly to what extent the Edgefield Advertiser may represent Southern sentiment upon the point involved, it is impossible for us to say. But it is evident enough, that unless a pretty strong impression prevailed among the South Carolina Democrats that the nomination of Mr. Douglas might be their best policy no discussion whatever of the question would have taken place in one of their leading newspapers. And surely if the nomination of the Illinois Senator could be made acceptable to South Carolina, serious objections are not likely to be raised or insisted upon from other Southern States. The very fact, we remark, that the question is entertained at all, in that quarter, places South Carolina, and with her the whole sisterhood of congenial sentiment, in that condition of deliberation where the very debate is only a shadow of the foregone conclusion. The somewhat coquettish manner in which such plausible reasons as may seem to favor the measure are presented, by no means tends to invalidate the speculations to which the article referred to gives rise.

It is plain enough that the next general election is to be a decisive one to the democratic party. If successful, it will be impossible to dislodge them from power by means of any elements of opposition now organized against them. Whatever head republicanism may now be able to make, it can never again lift its head at all after another defeat—and other issues than those now presented, and wiser men in whom the people have more confidence, must be found, in order to form that efficient opposition to the national administration which always constitutes the most healthful condition of affairs in popular governments. On the other hand, if the democracy should be defeated, it will be very difficult for it to rally again for a long period to any effective purpose. It has not been, for some time past, in that united state, which enabled it formerly to present such an unterrified aspect to its foes. It has been sadly beaten in many of its most favorite strongholds. It could not have prevailed in 1852; except for the aid and countenance of whigs, who were displeased with the rejection of Mr Webster by the convention, and who attributed a tinge somewhat too sombre to the politics of Gen. Scott.

It would have been avowedly overthrown utterly in 1856, but for the secession, temporary or otherwise, of a still larger body of Whigs, who could not contemplate with comfort the incoming of Mr. Fremont, and for the powerful diversion afforded by the 800,000 and upwards who voted for Mr. Fillmore. How many of these latter would have united with the republicans, then, rather than with the democrats, it is impossible to conjecture. We think very few of them would do so now.

At all events, those are the elements, out of which the shrewd democracy are to form the plan of the campaign. They have the strongest possible base of operations, if they only know how to lay out their battle with judgment. Whoever may be nominated at Charleston will receive the votes of the slave States, and the preliminary question will be how to obtain the additional number, in order to secure the election. Now, it is the ways and means of solving this problem which has led the Edgefield Advertiser to scrutinise with tender carefulness the position of the Western Senator, since nothing is more evident, than that a candidate must be found, who will please a portion of the north, as well as satisfy the whole of the south.

That the nomination of Mr. Douglas would be the death-blow of the republican party, there can be no manner of question—because there can be no doubt he could carry Northern States enough to make his election sure. Without going into any careful scrutiny of his opinions, "Kansas" would be as good a cry for him at the North, as it was for the shriekers, who they dinned it so zealously into our ears. But the South, on their part, may take into consideration, whether his past history does not make him a very safe man, notwithstanding the little he found it necessary to concede at home, in order to secure his re-election to the Senate. Nor will the free trade notions of Mr. Douglas, which we hope he may see his way clear to correct, be likely at all to prejudice his prospects among our South Carolina friends. Upon the whole, there is a great deal more to be said upon this and other points kindred to it, which we prefer to reserve.

Non-Intervention.

Geo. F. Shepley, Esq., in a speech delivered before the Maine Democratic State Convention, defined the position of the Democracy on the slave code and Wilmot proviso as follows:

We will concede to our Southern brethren all the rights which they have, and all the guarantees which they have, by the terms of the federal compact. We will not invade their rights; we will not attack them in those rights which are secured and guaranteed to them; we will go there in the spirit of compromise under which our fathers formed the great federal constitution, and we will yield to them as our fathers yielded to them, all their just rights and all their just protections. But we will not yield to them the doctrine that Congress has the right to prohibit or the right to establish slavery in the Territories of the United States. (Loud applause, and cries of "good.") We will hold there, as we have held heretofore, and as we hold now, that the great settlement of this vexed question which was made by those Territorial bills, and especially by the Kansas-Nebraska bill, has removed it from the halls of Congress; and having once got it out, we will keep it out, and leave the people to fight this battle, upon their own soil, with regard to their own matters at home. (Applause.) And we will no longer have the whole North convulsed by this senseless agitation of the Black Republicans.

We will no longer have the Wilmot proviso men coming here to the North, and asserting the doctrine of Congressional intervention; nor will we have the slave code men of the South going into Congress, and asserting the doctrine of Congressional intervention there. (Applause.) We will repudiate Wilmot provisoism at the North in the same way that we repudiate slave codeism at the South, for it is just precisely the same doctrine, no matter whether you preach it in Maine or in Mississippi; and no man can stand up here, on the soil of Maine, and assert the doctrine that Congress has power to prohibit slavery in the Territories, without admitting the whole question of the power of Congress to legislation upon the subject. No man who believes in any such power in Congress has any right to call himself an advocate of Popular Sovereignty. He is its most dangerous and treacherous opponent. He believes in a doctrine that would give Congress the right and power to enact and establish a slave code over the Territories—the very doctrine which we deny with regard to establishment, and which we deny with regard to prohibition.

What the Democrats of Alabama and South Carolina Think of Congressional Intervention.

The Montgomery Confederation, the leading Democratic paper in Alabama, in an article on Congressional intervention, says:

"William H. Seward, Greeley & Company claim the intervention of Congress as well as Mr. Yancey and Governor Wise, though for a different purpose; and it does seem to us worse than folly, after our experience in the action of Congress upon this subject—and we allude particularly to the incorporation of the Wilmot Proviso in the bill organizing the Territorial government of Oregon, for which bill, with the restriction, even Mr. Yancey voted—we say after this, is it not worse than folly to appeal to Congress to intervene for the protection of slavery in the Territories? We would put it to Mr. Yancey, in all frankness, to say whether we would be more likely to procure the protection of slavery in the Territories by Congress now, than when the Oregon Bill passed in 1845 or 1846?"

The above is copied with editorial approval by the Columbia South Carolinian, the leading Democratic paper in South Carolina. That journal also copies a sharp article from the New Albany (Ind.) Ledger, denouncing the Louisville Courier and Journal for their advocacy of Congressional slave protection. It is a mistake to suppose that the Charleston Mercury and these school of politicians represent the sentiment of South Carolina. They are overwhelmingly in the minority.—Cin. Enq.

Things to be Remembered.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is opposed to extending the right of suffrage to negroes, believing that the white population alone should control the destinies of this nation, for whose benefit it was established.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is in favor of extending the elective franchise to all foreign born citizens, of whatever birth or religious belief, who take the oath of allegiance, and have become naturalized citizens.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is opposed to any interference with slavery where it now exists, believing that the agitation of this subject is dangerous to the peace, prosperity, and perpetuity of the Union.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is in favor of a rigid enforcement of the Independent Treasury Act, and the safe keeping of the people's money, thereby preventing office-holders from speculating with and squandering the public funds.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is in favor of low tariffs, and a low system of taxation.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic members of Congress, both from the North and South, voted, to a man, for the admission of free Oregon and free Minnesota.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is opposed to the interference of Congress, with slavery in the Territories, and are in favor of leaving it to the bona-fide citizens.

Let it be remembered that the Democratic party is in favor of every thing that is right and just, and opposed to every thing that is wrong and corrupt.—Ottawa Democrat.

DOUGLAS.—Some time since, the Richmond Whig predicted that the Illinois Senator will be compelled to fight with the opposition, and says that he is distrusted, hated and feared by the Southern Democrats. But an Eastern paper of much shrewdness has well said, it is not so evident that he is to be whipped in or out by his rivals or foes. Douglas occupies one of the proudest positions that ever a man held in this country. He has declared what he deems the truth, and his ground is conservative that the moderate men of the country will sustain it against any out-and-out Republican or any fire-eater. He entered the field at home and beat both parties—Republican and Administration; he throws himself upon the country and absolutely holds the destinies of both parties in his hands. He has felt his way cautiously; and by turns South, East and West, has sounded the opinions and consciences of the people.—If now he has the moral fortitude to stand bravely up to the work, he will mould the political sentiment of this country for the next quarter of a century. Jefferson gave tone to the Democratic party for twenty-five years, till all enemies disappeared. Then Jackson re-formed for another contest of twenty-five years, till the Whigs disappeared as the Federalists had; and now the old questions have gone—they were questions of political policy—and new questions not less important have been opened. If upon these Douglas succeeds, he will stand in the category with Jefferson and Jackson, winning a fame as wide as the world and stepping forward to the march of freedom and progress; if he fails and succumbs it will be not from opportunity to do, but from lack of moral power fitting him to guide.—St. Louis Herald.

"I HAD RATHER BE RIGHT THAN BE PRESIDENT."—This noble sentiment is attributed to Mr. Webster, and adds a new lustre even to his great name more ennobling than any honors which it was ever in the power of an admiring and appreciative constituency to confer upon him.—What was a sentiment with Mr. Webster is made a principle with Mr. Douglas—he not only declaims but does and dares for the right. Under circumstances which would appall a less determined will, awe a time-server into silence or drive a self-seeker from his purpose, he has boldly faced the storm which has threatened to overwhelm him, and manfully battled for the right against all odds, and apparently regardless of the personal consequences to himself. The history of the public men of this country does not present another instance of self-abnegation like that of Mr Douglas.

In the very flood-tide of success as a politician; the acknowledged leader of his party with scarcely a contestant; with the Presidency, the object of the highest ambition to the American statesman, full in view, and no apparent object between him and its attainment, he had but to float with the current—to ignore a principle upon which he disagreed with the then controlling powers, to insure ultimate success; "but he had rather be right than be President." Mr. Douglas may not be President, but while the popular heart responds to noble sentiments and heroic devotion, he will have a distinction among his countrymen more enviable than any which office can give.—Madison (Wis.) Patriot.

THE VALUE OF FOX HOUNDS.—We confess entire ignorance as to the value of an "established" pack of hounds, and could not, therefore, say whether such a pack would be cheap at £1,000 or £1,200. The Encyclopedia Britannica (new edition) puts the average price at something less than the highest of these sums. The renowned pack of Mr. Warde brought 2,000 guineas. When blindness compelled Mr Foljambe to lay aside the scarlet in 1845 his pack was sold for 3,000 guineas. The late Lord Middleton gave Mr. Osbaldistone 3,000 guineas for ten couples of hounds out of his kennel, and the Earl of Stamford gave 470 guineas for four couples of Mr. Ed. [illegible] hounds.—English paper.

Arrests at Venice.

The following letter from Venice, of the 6th, although written before the late great change in affairs in Italy, is of interest, as showing the state of feeling in that part of the Austrian possessions in Italy:

"I am much afraid that the people here will not have the sense to keep quiet, for yesterday an admiral's salute of twenty-one guns was fired by the French, and the gente bassa set up a shout all over the city; and had the firing continued I am sure there would have been a rising. We expect here that the bombardment will begin within forty-eight hours. The Lido is so crammed with soldiers that if any more be sent they must stand on each other's heads. The Austrians set fire to a house on the Lido yesterday, and another to-day, which is burning now. I do not know what this is done for. The number of arrests which have been made has had the effect of scattering the Italians like a flock of pigeons fired into by a double barrel. The Countess Contarini was seized in her palace and thrust into prison—the one in the Ducal Palace—with a lot of felons; refused permission to see her daughters, refused permission to see her servants, refused proper food, but had the felon's portion of beans and bacon served out to her. She is old and an invalid. It is said that the only charge against her is having had in her possession a proclamation of Garibaldi's, issued during the siege of Rome by the French. Owing to the influence of ——, she is now allowed two rooms, her maid, and permission to buy her proper food. The late Podesta, Signor Marcello, of one of the greatest families in Venice, has fled to Corfu.

A celebrated advocate, named Lumbardini, was arrested in the early part of February, on a charge of having in his possession a statue of Felice Orsini. He was tried by the military tribunal and acquitted. He was handed over to the civil tribunal, tried, and again acquitted, and was then told he would be liberated. Dinner was provided for him at home; the gondola waited at the prison door to take him there, when an order came from the military authorities to detain him still. He has since been sent to Josephstadt, and is confined in a cell with three thieves, the cell originally built to hold one prisoner.—There are eleven men in the prison next the Ducal Palace, arrested for smoking a pipe shaped like a boot; it was supposed to have some political meaning, because Italy is so shaped. They have already been there six months. I have seen the Government process against them, and they are charged with no other crime.—These pipes have been sold in Venice time immemorial. I forgot to tell you that I went into the prison and saw Lumbardini. He is a handsome, intellectual looking man, about 40. He told me he was full of hope, and he seemed calm and collected. The prison has made him weak, and he had fallen away much, but his eye was bright and full of intelligence. The arrests have been fearful—120 in one night, 80 in another, and so on. The city is patrolled day and night by bodies of 50 men, with bayonets fixed and guns loaded. The poor are suffering most severely, as all business is absolutely stopped. Many of the shops are closed. Some put a bill outside, stating that it is closed for the present. Mr. V. has conceived a brilliant idea of having a well pumped dry, and getting into it, as a cool and secure residence during the bombardment.

The London Times on the Disarmament of France.

The Moniteur, of yesterday, says the Times of the 23d ult., contains the most welcome announcement that could come to English ears from a foreign land. The French Emperor has issued his orders to disarm. With the least possible delay the Army and Navy of France are to be restored to their peace establishment. The people of England reading these good tidings will take a deep breath, such as a man takes when a crisis of apprehension is past; they will congratulate each other that the peril they dreaded has drifted away, and that they may turn back to peaceful pursuits, and to the pleasant paths of human existence. It was not in panic fear, but in grave and sad disquietude, that we in this island regarded that heavy cloud; so charged with electricity, which loomed upon the near horizon. We felt that it must burst or must disperse, and if it burst we had small choice in our conjectures as to where only the bolt must fall. Frankly, then, we acknowledge in this salutary determination of our neighbor and ally a proof of loyal adherence to the friendship which has united these two great nations, and gladly recognize in it a pledge of future peace to Europe. Undoubtedly, the resolution has been taken solely from consideration for the true interests of France. She has had her season of new glories, and the Emperor has gained his first crown of laurels. It is moderate and it is wise to stop while the appetite is still unsated. Bien gouter is a maxim of personal economy, which is true also in public and national concerns. Napoleon III. has done, perhaps, less than he might once have intended to do in Italy, but he has done all that he has chosen to attempt. We will not now stop to discuss the shortcomings or to anticipate what may be the ultimate result of the new system that must be there established. Having, however, determined to close this chapter of his history, the Emperor has most wisely consulted the financial exigencies and the material advantage of his kingdom in staying the heavy expenditure of men and money, and is giving France, as we hope, a long repose from the unprofitable toil of war. We have said upon former occasions that for a war to be popular in France it must be short, and it must be successful. The war which has just closed has fulfilled both these conditions. We recognise in this disarmament the sagacity of the Emperor in gauging the temper of his people, and, for our own part, we rejoice that we may now return to security and peace. We shall, of course, in due time follow the example of our neighbor. We are, however, much behind him in the completeness of our peace establishment. There are many specks of rust yet to be rubbed away, and many mouldering works yet to be repaired. But these are merely the ordinary matters of defence. Having no idea of aggression, and being too careless of remote possibilities, we have let many things run into disrepair. The careful householder paints and papers periodically, and we have been stimulated by recent events to survey our premises and make good dilapidations. Happily, there is now no further need that this should be done in haste. We have handed the consideration of these matters over to a commission, which is about to decide what is the peace or defensive establishment which these islands require in time of peace, as the basis whence upon an emergency a full war establishment might be quickly built up. By the report of that commission we shall be guided, and we congratulate ourselves and our readers that we may hereafter deal with these questions dispassionately as points of mere engineering or strategic science, and without fear that the fortifications which England, like all other Powers, must necessarily keep up, are in danger of being at an early day tested by an enemy.

ENGLISH INCOME TAX.—The grievance of which the malcontents complain in the matter is this—that the same per centage is extracted from the yearly income of a man who derives it from landed estates, or government securities, a species of property as sure as the ground he treads on, and in no way dependent upon his health, or his exertions, as from that of a man who earns his living day by day, and who knows it by sickness, and whose family are consigned to destitution by his death. In other words, a clerk with a salary of £300 a year, or a lawyer earning £300, is taxed at the same rate as a Marquis of Westminster who draws £100,000 from the ground rents of Belgravia. There is between the two cases the enormous difference of certainty and uncertainty; between the proportion levied in each, and the manner of levying it, there is no difference whatever. This has proved a standing ground of quarrel between the landed interests and the liberals. It is the middle and working classes, of course, who find reason to complain of the mode of raising the tax. The aristocracy have no fault to find with it, except that it is levied at all. The consequence is, that every time it comes up for discussion it complicates the old feud, which is already fed by so many traditions, animosities, as well as by so many real grievances.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1859.

The Talked of Invasion of England.

The intelligence by the last mail is of a pacific character. It shows that Louis Napoleon has had enough of the tented field, and that, although he has secured the victories at Magenta and Solferino, a few such triumphs would have ruined him altogether. The speedy termination of the war in Italy has very naturally led men to inquire what next? The difficulty seems to be in deciding between Prussia and Germany on the one hand, and England on the other; as the object of Napoleon's ire. As Lord Brougham lately stated in the House of Lords, there is not a man in France, from the peasant to the Peer, in whose mind it is not a settled conviction—a foregone conclusion—that perfide Albion is to be invaded and humiliated because of Waterloo! Nay, as his Lordship further stated, there is not a widow who would not give her last son, nor a peasant from the Mediterranean to the Channel, and from Lorraine to Poitou, who would not give his last son to aid in accomplishing the national destiny. Go where one will, it seems to be a very generally settled conclusion that the invasion of England, and the consequent subjugation of the "fast anchored isle," is among the things that must be. It is wonderful how vague generalities are circulated from mouth to mouth, and how few there are that pause to weigh the meaning of words when they themselves have not a material interest in the consequences which are to be arrived at in common speculations; but we strive to see what an invasion of England by France really means, that is, the invasion of one great Power by another.

Among the invasion-mongers in England and France, or in this country, it has never been proposed that less than 200,000 men, with a due proportion of cavalry, stores and commissariat, should be recognized as a force adequate to the successful invasion of Great Britain. Now, to transport such a force across the channel, at least two tons would be required of transport accommodation for each man; or in other words, 400,000 tons of transport service would be required in the transport of the undertaking. In all our great seaports we know the size of packet ships, which reach 1,000 tons; of these 400 would be required, but every one who is acquainted with France knows the impossibility of finding such a fleet in all the kingdom. Vessels of half the size are much more likely to be the only bottoms in which such an enormous armament could be stowed; that is, 800 ships would have to be brought from all parts of France to the port of debarkation, and time would be required to enable them successfully to receive their complements of men. Could these things be done in a corner? Then again, allowing on a small scale, a seaman for every fifteen tons, the fleet of transports would require from 26,000 to 27,000 sailors; is equal to one-fourth the number of all the manned of every grade in France.

Suppose the troops embarked and the stores on board, such a precious cargo would require not less than fifty sail of the line as a convoy or protecting force. This will demand 55,000 men; so that the men on board the transports and on the decks of the ships of war, would amount to the respectable number of 23,000, and this would leave only about 12,000 seamen unengaged in naval warfare in the whole Empire; for there was not more than 100,000 men in all the marine of France.

Now, as we are supposing, and not recording the stern facts of history, we can imagine the most favorable terms; let the fleets of Brest and Cherbourg move and meet the English navy—for it is undoubted that by the time France would have her force underweigh even John Bull's sea [illegible] would be stimulated to a certain amount of naval activity. Well then as the French are celebrated for their élan, that is in plain terms, dash, or in vulgar parlance, going right ahead, and as they are not likely to run into the jaws of the lion at Portsmouth or at any other naval station, and as the Prince of Orange made a very successful landing, in times gone by, at Torbay, in Devonshire, so we may take it for granted that in this quiet region, so convenient to the French naval fleet, the landing could be attempted.

Now let us pass for a moment from the domain of imagination and conjecture to the region of history. At the beginning of this century Great Britain dispatched to Egypt a force of 17,812 men and 478 horses. It required 200 ships to convey and convoy this armament. The force reached the Egyptian coast and with a powerful fleet as a protection, 5,500 men were landed. Had the French not been given over to delusion, they might have arrested the debarkation. They lay to the number of 2,000 men behind the sand hills on the coast, and there they waited until the English had sufficient troops ashore to rout them altogether.

To come down to later times, let us recall the facts of the Crimean warfare. It is not fresh in all our minds how the inhabitants of this country, who looked on the proceedings from afar, and the people of Great Britain and France wondered at the delay on the coast of Bulgaria, when it was determined to invade the Crimea. The ships of two powerful nations lay in multitudes in and around the harbor of Varna. All around the tricolor was blended with the cross of St. George, and the wondering Paynim lifted up their hands at the sight of such enormous preparations. The troops were at length on board, in consequence of the most perfect arrangements of French and English naval and military strategy. The stormy Euxine for once sunk into a calm, and looked in wonder at the mighty armament. At length the Crimean coast is reached, and, as if by special engagement, the sea is hushed into a calm. In two days, French and English Generals and Admirals succeed in landing 62,000 men, of which only 1,000 are cavalry. They land, it is true, but four days elapse before they are ready to take a step in advance; and even then they are unprovided with camp equipage. The men sleep under drenching rain; they have no knapsacks, and almost no commissariat. Surely Frenchmen are not accustomed to undervalue their military operations, and yet Pelissier said that, calm as the Black Sea was, had a few Russian cannon been present on the beach at Eupatoria, it would have been impossible for the combined fleet to have effected a landing. If France and England combined were able only to make such a demonstration, what would the one country be likely to accomplish when all the resources of the other would be combined in opposition? Until European complications assume a very different aspect from the present, we may rest assured that the coast of England is safe from the insults of the Gal[illegible].

☞ Sanders Shanks, Esq., commercial editor of the Louisville "Courier," died on the 10th inst., at Louisville, in the forty sixth year of his age. He has occupied a prominent place among the merchants and manufacturers of Louisville, and was for many years a member of the City Council. He was a kind and genial gentleman, of clear and vigorous mind.

☞ The Dental Convention at Niagara Falls adjourned on Friday last after a session of more than ordinary interest, in which topics pertinent to the profession were ably discussed by practical dentists.

The next meeting will be held at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., on the first Tuesday of August, 1860.

☞ The owner of a peach orchard near Jonesboro, Illinois, Col. Bainbridge, is now sending peaches to Chicago at the rate of fifty bushels a day, getting $4 a basket for them.

THE NEW ALBANY TRAGEDY—DEATH OF THE CHILD.—From parties who left New Albany yesterday, we learn additional particulars of the poisoning case in the Conklin family, one fatal result of which, viz., the death of Mrs. C., has already been reported. It appears that the first report erred in fixing the residence of the family in Dayton, the real place being Taylorsville, a village in Montgomery county, a few miles from Dayton. The deceased woman formerly resided in Sunbury, where she married a man named Koogler, the girl who first revealed the fact of poisoning, being the result of that union. Koogler died some years since and the widow in due time after was married to Conklin, and the parties removed to Taylorsville. Mrs. C. was delivered of a child about two months since, and while still unable to attend to her household duties the domestic, Sarah Kessler, was employed; the intimacy between Conklin and the girl commenced almost immediately after and attracting the attention of the wife she remonstrated with both parties. The poison was administered and the invalid rapidly grew worse and wishing to relieve himself of the burden Conklin leaving the girl in charge of the house brought his wife, his step daughter and the infant to this city, arriving on Saturday night July 30th. He left the woman and her children on a bench in the market space while he went to procure a conveyance, ailing to do which he returned and placing Mrs. C. and the oldest girl in a boarding house, he took the infant in his arms and walked to New Albany, where his father in law resides, arriving on Sunday morning. Leaving the child there with orders for some one to take a conveyance and bring the wife home, he departed the same day for Taylorsville. The father of Mrs. C. came to this city with a wagon and took her and her daughter home, where medical aid was called, and the fact of the poisoning alluded to which caused the girl to reveal all she knew about it. The woman died on Monday and the death of the infant occurring on the following morning the two were interred together. We have not yet heard of the arrest of Conklin and the girl Kessler, although they are both at Taylorsville where a strict watch is kept upon their movements to prevent their escape.

Napoleon's Diplomatic Irritability.

The stoical calmness of demeanor which once characterized the Emperor Napoleon seems to be giving place to a susceptibility too strong for concealment. Perhaps the consciousness of certain political faults likely to shake the confidence once reposed in his judgment and appreciation of his own interests may account for the change. Be this as it may, the irritation betrayed in the very first lines of his Majesty's reply to the very brief address of the diplomatic body through their spokesman, the Papal Nuncio, as given in this day's Moniteur, has excited general attention and regret. This time the reproach apparently is not addressed to one ambassador, as on the 1st January last, but to the representatives of almost all European States. The tone of voice was suited to the words, the manner was brief and hurried. The representative of one of the German States was impatiently asked whether his "fears were at last dissipated." On the whole the thing was gone through like a most unpleasant task, of which it might be said that the sooner it was over the better.

The Moniteur has, I am told, inserted a word which was not spoken by the Emperor. His Majesty said, "Europe has been so unjust," &c., and not "Europe in general"—the words "in general" were added for the sake of Russia; Prussia and England are believed to be the countries to which the reproach is specially addressed.—Paris (July 23) correspondence of Manchester Guardian.

RAREY FOUND HIS MASTER.—According to the Tuscarawas Advocate an old kicking mare has been found down in Tuscarawas that defies Rarey and all his horse charms. At New Philadelphia a few days ago he broke a colt in in the forenoon, and his afternoon performance is thus narrated by the Advocate:

The class then adjourned until the afternoon, when a kicking mare—a "Fire Eater" from Strasburg, was brought into the barn to Mr. Rarey, to subdue. She was a fine looking animal, but had such a propensity for kicking, that her owner got her for a cow. No one dared to approach her, unless they were in front, and then she would sometimes strike with her fore feet. Mr. R. appeared confident of success. He worked faithfully for several hours, but failed to subdue her. She would kick and squeal, and squeal and kick, and Mr. Rarey was compelled to admit that he could not stop her kicking propensities in the short time he remained here, and asked some of his pupils to experiment. The scholars became dissatisfied, some of them swore they were humbugged, and thought their money should be returned. A storm was brewing, and Rarey agreed to remain another day. He sent for the mare, worked again all day, but the mare still kicked as wickedly as ever. The great "American Horse Tamer" was headed for once. He owned up that he was beaten—purchased her for $40, and declared he would yet make her a safe family animal. The Rareys have a world-wide reputation—have practised their system before Kings and Nobles, subduing the most vicious horses—but they have to knock under to the old kicking mare in Tuscarawas!

REVOLUTIONARY HEROES SUPPOSED TO BE STILL LIVING IN OHIO AND MICHIGAN.—Ohio.—The following are the names of all the revolutionary soldiers in this State in 1859:—Amasa Crandall, Erie county, 98 years; Jared Farrand, Cuyahoga county, 95 years; William Jones, Clermont county, 98 years, Adam Link, Crawford county, 99 years; James McDermott, Richland county, 101 years; John Strait, Gallia county, 101 years; Samuel Sanford, Portage county, 93 years; Carey Toney, Preble county, 96 years.

MICHIGAN.—The following are on the roll of the State of Michigan, with their ages, in 1859: —Francis De Long, Van Buren county, 100 years; Cooper Bishop, Oakland county, 98 years; Abira Brooks, St. Joseph county, 98 years; Howard Brooks, Macomb county, 94 years; Giles Norton, Livingston county, 97 years.

How rapidly the list of revolutionary patriots is diminishing! The sight of one of them has become a rare thing. Soon it will become a novelty to hear a man say that he once saw a soldier of the Revolution. Of the generation now coming on the stage, thousands will never get a look at an old hero of '76.

A BRAVE YOUTH.—The Fredericksburg Recorder contains a letter from Brazil, giving an account of a most rash attempt on the part of a young Virginian of Spottsylvania county named Foster, to rescue a comrade employed on the Don Pedro Railroad, who had been imprisoned by the Brazilian authorities. The letter say that all alone, he dashed in the midst of the guard and fired the contents of two of his pistols into the flying foe, killing two and wounding another, receiving a shot in the leg himself.—He then wheeled and made his escape to the station to which he belonged, and requested me to write the facts to some paper in Spottsylvania county, as he never expected to reach the States again, for if taken he would be hung, therefore he would never be taken alive. He left on a fine horse for the interior of the country, well armed and with plenty of funds to reach the States, should he be so fortunate as to reach any sea port. His last words were, "Die brave men, rather than live cowards."

ANOTHER RAILROAD ACCIDENT—TWO KILLED—TWELVE WOUNDED.—On Wednesday afternoon a gravel train on the Alexandria, Hampshire and London Railroad was thrown off the track in consequence of running over a cow. The bridge over the Four-mile Run was broken down. Two persons killed, and twelve injured; three of them it is feared fatally.

AMERICAN HORSES ON THE ENGLISH TURF.—Advices by the Arabia state that at the Goodwood races, on the 29th ult., Mr. TEN BROECK'S American horse "Starke" won the Bentinck Memorial stakes of 1,000 sovereigns. "Prioress" came in third, fifteen horses running. Mr. TEN BROECK is said to have won £25,000 on the Goodwood stakes. His colt "Umpire," by "Lecompt," won the Nursery stakes also on Friday.

☞ Mr. MILLER, known in this city as the husband of Madame Bosco, lately deceased, is lecturing in Illinois on the Art Magique. He is said to be one of the smoothest performers in the world.

ANTIOCH COLLEGE.—A meeting of the Trustees of Antioch College is called to take place at Yellow Springs on Wednesday, the 17th inst., to make arrangements to fill the vacancy in the Presidency of that institution occasioned by the death of the Hon. HORACE MANN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ The Corn Exchange of Boston have appointed a committee to prepare a scale of grades and devise a uniform and reliable inspection of flour.

☞ John Forsyth, late U. S. Minister to Mexico, is among the members elected to the lower house of the Alabama Legislature; also Hon. Percy Walker, ex-member of Congress.

☞ A young man named William Grow was killed by his own mother, at Hamden, N. Y., a few days since. She assaulted him with a sling shot while asleep. There is little doubt of her insanity.

☞ The Memphis Avalanche says that a gentleman from Louisville, recently lost in that city $7,000 playing "high, low, Jack and the game," and won it again by virtue of a revolver.

☞ Clinton Edwards, formerly editor of the Ripley (O.) Telegraph and more recently of the Marengo Visitor, in Iowa, was drowned in the Iowa river, a few days since, while he was attempting to save the life of his son.

☞ Rev Thomas M'Gee, a Methodist Minister, attached to the Baltimore Conference, died suddenly, on Monday, in the cars, while he was on his way from Warrenton, Va., to Alexandria, intending to go to Baltimore. His remains were taken back to Warrenton.

☞ The Plymouth Rock proposes to publish the names of those people who did not belong in the late celebration, and who refused to purchase tickets for the dinner, though abundantly able, and then stole in to hear the speeches.

☞ It is stated that the wife of the Hon. Daniel E. Sickles, with the other members of the Bagioli family, are about to take up their residence in Italy, and in the event of Mr. S. losing his seat in Congress, he will immediately join them.

☞ The new wire bridge over the Ohio, at Wheeling, is composed of four cables each 1,380 feet long. Each cable is composed of 1,680 strands of wire, making a single strand 9,273,600 feet, or within a fraction of 1,757 miles in length.

☞ The Spiritual Telegraph takes an unfavorable view of the Broad Church movement, which it styles, "a new order of managing souls in the future." Dr. Bellows, in his discourse, had classed Spiritualism as one of the diseases of the age.

☞ At Havana, on the 24th ult., a patient in the Charity Hospital who was suffering from fever suddenly jumped from his bed, ran around the gallery and threw himself over the balustrade into the centre square, killing himself on the spot.

☞ A desperate fight came off some weeks since in Oregon, between a noted [illegible] named Aroom and an Indian "brave." They fought with knives, and were terribly cut up. The trapper at last grappled with and threw his antagonist and then cut his throat from ear to ear.

☞ On Monday last, as a train was passing through the first tunnel west of Washington, on the Hempfield R. R., a large stone and a quantity of the roofing of the tunnel fell in, doing considerable damage to one passenger car, and one or two freight cars. No person hurt.

☞ A petition for a horse railroad through the First, Seventh, and Third wards, of Milwaukee, from the North Point to Walker's Point Bridge, was presented to the common council of that city, and has been favorably reported upon by the local committees of the wards named.

☞ Steps are in progress for the organization of a land company in London, with a capital of £500,000 sterling, to be devoted to the purchase and settlement of lands in Illinois. The Prairie Land and Emigration Company state that a conditional purchase has been made of 260,000 acres of prairie land, from the Illinois Central Rail road Company.

☞ The London Times says that another French loan will be wanted before long. The same journal replies to the Moniteur's article on the armaments of the two countries, and says it is in many respects deceptive. The Times strongly urges the immediate arming of the navy with Armstrong guns, and increased expedition in the manufacture of guns by private contract.

☞ The "Black Swan" is in Fall River, Mass.

☞ The Pacific Railroad is now finished to Syracuse, 168 miles from St. Louis, and 90 miles from Kansas City.

☞ A shark, measuring thirty feet in length, is said to have been caught at Halifax a few days ago. He had just been making his dinner of two men and a small boy—in anticipation.

☞ The trustees of the town of Princeton Ind., have offered a reward of $45 for the extermination of the rats, which have appeared in that town in great numbers. The boys are hard at work trying to earn the reward.

☞ At a reaping machine match which recently took place on the Emperor Louis Napoleon's farm, near St. Cloud, an American machine took the second prize. Fifteen acres of wheat were cut in ten hours, by two horses.

☞ Professor Agassiz is expected to attend the next meeting of the British Association. The meeting will be held at Aberdeen, Scotland, in September. Prince Albert will be present.

☞ The Hon. Charles Whitehead, Agent of the British Bondholders in Mexico has arrived at New York. Mr Whitehead left Vera Cruz on the 6th inst., on his way to England, having been banished from the City of Mexico by the Miramon Government.

☞ A villain named Henry Chapman set on fire and destroyed no less than nine barns and one store on Monday, on the road from Preston City to North Stonington, Connecticut, and attempted to shoot a young man named Charles Wheeler.

☞ The project of establishing city railways in New Orleans meets with some opposition in that city. It appears that about sixty citizens have obtained an injunction and stopped the sale of the right of way, the object being to test the authority of the city to grant the privilege to any one.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

